Sect. 11. "That at any time or times hereafter, upon oath made by any credible person or persons, that he, she, or they have reason to suspect or believe that any printed, painted, stained, or dyed stuffs, wholly made of cotton, for which a duty ought to have been paid or charged as aforesaid, are or shall be in the custody or possession of any draper, or other person or persons trading or dealing therein, or of any person or persons for the use or account of such draper or other trader or dealer for sale, without having thereupon such marks or stamps as are by this act required to denote the payment, or charging, of the said duties thereupon, it shall and may be lawful to and for the commissioners who shall be appointed for the duties upon silk, calicoes, linens, or stuffs printed, stained, painted, or dyed in Great Britain, or the major part of them, within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, or any two justices of the peace in any other parts of the kingdom of Great Britain, from time to time, to issue their respective warrants or orders, thereby authorizing and requiring any officer or officers for the same duties (with the assistance of a constable, or other officer of the peace), in the day-time, to search for the same, and to open doors, trunks, chests, and package, and to seize such goods, and to bring them to the office for the said duties next to the place where they shall be so seized, in order to a further proceeding thereupon, according to this act; and that every such warrant and order shall and may be obeyed and executed accordingly."

Sect. 12. "That one moiety of the penalties and forfeitures which shall be incurred as aforesaid shall be to the use of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of such person or persons who shall inform or sue for the same, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland, wherein no essoin, protection, or wager in law, or more than one imparlance, shall be allowed; such information or informations to be entered, filed, and prosecuted in the name of His Majesty's attorney-general, or in the name or names of some officer or officers of His Majesty's revenue of the Customs or Excise, according to the true intent and meaning of an act, passed in the twelfth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the first, intituled, An act for the improvement of His Majesty's revenues of Customs, Excise, and inland duties."

Sect. 14. "That if any question shall arise, whether any of the said new-manufactured stuffs, wholly made of cotton, have been manufactured in Great Britain, the proof of their having been manufactured in Great Britain shall lie upon the owner or owners of such stuffs, and not upon the prosecutor; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

By 51 Geo. III., c. 33, the provisions in 14 Geo. III., c. 72, for weaving the three blue stripes, and the penalties relating to the same, and the provisions of 25 Geo. III., c. 72, relating to the same subject, are respectively repealed.

By 10 Anne, c. 19, s. 71. "That all and every person and persons whatsoever, who on or before the 20th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1712, shall print, stain, paint, or dye any of the said goods, so that a duty shall be payable by this act upon the printing, staining, painting, or dyeing the same as aforesaid, shall, on or before the said 20th day of July, 1712, give or leave notice in writing at the next office for the same duties of their respective names and places of abode, and of the place or places where every such person or persons do usually print, paint, stain, or dye as aforesaid any such silks, linens, calicoes, or stuffs, or dry the same; and that all and every such printer, painter, stainer, or dyer, as often as he, she, or they shall change their places of printing, painting, staining, or dyeing any the said goods, or for drying the same, and all

And by 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 7. "Provided always, that if any person or persons shall, after the 1st day of August, 1785, print, stain, paint, or dye any such linens or stuffs made of cotton mixed with other materials, stuffs wholly made of cotton wool, wove in Great Britain, British muslins or fustians, velvets or velverets, dimities, or other figured stuffs, made of cotton and other materials mixed, or wholly made of cotton wool, wove in Great Britain, foreign calicoes, and foreign muslins, without giving or leaving at the next office of Excise for the said duties such notice in writing as by the said act, in the tenth year of the reign of Queen Anne, is required, he, she, or they shall, for every neglect by not giving such notice, forfeit the sum of 50*l*."

And by 1 Geo. I., stat. 2, c. 36, s. 21. "That from and after the 1st day of June, 1716, where any person or persons shall take upon him, her, or them to print, paint, stain, or dye any silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs at any other place than the place of his, her, or their usual residence, or exercise of his, her, or their trade, all such persons shall, before he, she, or they print, paint, stain, or dye any such silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs, make a particular entry of all such silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs so by him, her, or them intended to be printed, painted, stained, or dyed, with the officer for the said duties of the division or place where he, she, or they shall so intend to print, paint, stain, or dye the same, and pay down to the said officer all the duties charged or which would be due for such goods so intended to be printed, painted, stained, or dyed. upon printing, painting, staining, or dyeing the same, before he, she, or they proceed to print, paint, stain, or dye such goods, or any part thereof; and if such person or persons shall print, paint, stain, or dye any such silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs, without making such entry, and paying down the duties thereof as aforesaid, the person or persons offending therein shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 50*l*., to be recovered and levied as aforesaid; and moreover all such silks, calicoes, linens, and stuffs so printed, painted, stained, or dyed, without such entry and payment of duty as aforesaid, shall be and may be seized immediately by such officer; one moiety of such penalties and forfeitures to be paid to His Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the person or persons that shall sue or inform for the same."

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 75. "That all and every the officers of the said duties on the said printed, painted, stained, or dyed goods shall at all times, by day or by night, and if in the night, then in the presence of a constable, or other lawful officer of the peace, be permitted, upon his or their request, to enter into the house, workhouse, drying-place, warehouse, field, or other place belonging to or used by any person or persons who, within or during the term of years last mentioned, shall print, paint, stain, or dye any silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs (except before excepted), and to take a just account of the kinds and quantities thereof which shall have been printed, painted, stained, or dyed by such person or persons, from time to time, and shall thereof make a report or return in writing to the respective commissioners for the duties last mentioned, or such as they respectively shall appoint to receive the same, leaving a true copy (if demanded) of such report in writing, under his hand, with or for the said printer, painter, stainer, or dyer respectively; and such report or return shall be a charge upon every such printer, painter, stainer, or dyer respectively: and if the said officer shall refuse or neglect to give or leave a true copy of his report at the time of taking such account, being demanded as aforesaid, every such officer, for every such offence, shall forfeit the sum of 40s. to every such printer, painter, stainer, or dyer respectively."

15. Linen Cloths, &c.

Sect. 78. "That if any person or persons, who shall print, paint, stain, or dye any the goods aforesaid, shall obstruct or hinder any the said officers in the execution of the powers given by this act for ascertaining and securing the duties thereupon, the offenders therein, for every such offence, shall forfeit the sum of 20/."

Obstructing officer to forfeit 20/.

By 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 8. "That if any person or persons, who shall print, stain, paint, or dye any such commodities aforesaid, shall obstruct or hinder any officer for the said duties in the execution of the powers given by this act for ascertaining and securing the said duties, the offender therein, for every such offence, shall forfeit the sum of 200/."

Penalty on persons obstructing officers in the execution of their duty.

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 72. "That from and after the said 20th day of July, 1712, during the continuance of this act, all and every person and persons who shall print, paint, stain, or dye in Great Britain, as aforesaid, any silks, calicoes, linens, and stuffs, upon the printing, painting, staining, or dyeing whereof a duty is chargeable by this act, shall once in every six weeks make a true entry in writing at the next office for the same duties of all such silks, calicoes, linens, and stuffs so by him, her, or them severally printed, painted, stained, or dyed within every such six weeks respectively; which entries shall contain the just kinds and quantities thereof: and if such printer, painter, stainer, or dyer be not the true owner of such goods or any of them, so printed, painted, stained, or dyed, then, and in every such case, he, she, or they, in every such entry, shall specify the names and places of abode of the persons who are the owners thereof, or for whose account they respectively do print, paint, stain, or dye the same, on pain to forfeit, for every neglect of such entry, the sum of 50/; which entry shall be made upon the oath of the printer, painter, stainer, or dyer, or of his, her, or their chief workman employed, to the best of their knowledge or belief, unless he, she, or they be a known quaker, and the solemn affirmation of a known quaker to the same effect shall be taken instead of such oath; and the said oaths and affirmations to verify such entries shall and may be administered by the proper collector or supervisor of the district or division within which such printer, painter, stainer, or dyer doth inhabit, without any fee or charge whatsoever to be demanded or taken for the same."

Such printers to make entries, &c. once in 6 weeks, on forfeiture of 50/.

Sect. 73. "That no person, for the making such entries, oaths, or affirmations as are last mentioned, shall be obliged to go or send further than the market-town where his or her silks, calicoes, linen, or stuffs are printed, painted, stained, or dyed, or the next market town to the place of printing, painting, staining, or dyeing the same."

Entries, &c. to be made at the next market town.

Sect. 77. "That all and every the officers of the said duties on such printed, painted, stained, or dyed goods, as aforesaid, shall also be permitted to take an account of the quantities of silks, calicoes, linens, and stuffs which shall, at any time or times, be in the custody or possession of any printer, painter, stainer, or dyer, to be printed, painted, stained, or dyed; and in case such officer or officers shall miss any quantity or quantities of such silk, calicoes, linen, or stuffs, whereof he had taken an account at his last survey, and shall not, upon reasonable demand, receive satisfaction what is become of the same, then, and in every such case, it shall and may be lawful for such officer to charge such printer, painter, stainer, or dyer with the duties of such silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs so missing, as if the same were printed, painted, stained, or dyed."

Officers to take an account of the quantities of silks, &c. in the printer's hands.

By 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 9. "That if any printer, stainer, painter, or dyer of any such commodities aforesaid, chargeable by this act, shall begin to print, stain, paint, or dye the same before the same shall have

Sect. 11. "That in case any printer, stainer, painter, or dyer of such commodities aforesaid shall wilfully cut out, obliterate, or deface, or wilfully suffer to be cut out, obliterated, or defaced, the frame-mark put by the officer on any piece of such commodities aforesaid to denote the measure thereof, every such printer, stainer, painter, or dyer shall forfeit the sum of 50% for every piece on which the said frame-mark shall be so wilfully cut out, obliterated, or defaced."

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 82. "That if any of the said printers, painters, stainers, or dyers shall fraudulently hide or conceal, or cause to be hid or concealed, any silk, calico, linen, or stuffs, before or after the same are printed, painted, stained, or dyed, with intent to deceive Her Majesty of her just duties by this act granted, then, and in every such case, the party so offending shall forfeit the sum of 20% for every such offence; and all the silks, calicoes, linens, and stuffs which shall be found in any private workhouse or other place, whereof no notice shall have been given as aforesaid, or the value thereof, shall and may be seized and recovered—to wit, one moiety thereof to the use of Her Majesty, and the other moiety to the use of the seizer or informer as aforesaid."

By 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 13. "That if any printer, stainer, painter, or dyer shall fraudulently hide or conceal, or cause to be hid or concealed, any such commodities aforesaid, before or after the same are printed, stained, painted, or dyed, with intent to deceive His Majesty of his just duties by this act granted, then, and in every such case, the party so offending shall forfeit the sum of 50% for every such offence; and all such commodities aforesaid, which shall be found in any private workhouse or other place, whereof no notice shall have been given to the officer of Excise, as by the said act, made in the 10th year of the reign of Queen Anne, is required, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 14. "That no printer, stainer, painter, or dyer shall keep any such commodities aforesaid, marked with a stamp or seal, or stamps or seals, denoting the charging the duties thereon, or unmarked, in any warehouse, room, or place whereof no notice shall have been given to the officer of Excise, as by the said act, made in the 10th year of the reign of Queen Anne, is required; and if any such commodities aforesaid, stamped or unstamped, shall be found in the possession of any printer, stainer, painter, or dyer, in any warehouse, room, or place whereof no notice shall have been given to the officer of Excise as aforesaid, then, and in every such case, the party so offending shall forfeit the sum of 50% for every such offence; and all the commodities aforesaid so found shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

By 10 Ann., c. 19, s. 74. "That all and every person and persons who shall print, paint, stain, or dye as aforesaid any silks, calicoes, linens, or such stuffs as aforesaid in Great Britain shall, from time to time, within six weeks after he, she, or they shall make or ought to have made such entry as aforesaid, clear off all the said duties which shall be then due or remain unpaid for all such silks, calicoes, linens, and stuffs as shall have been printed, painted, stained, or dyed by him, her, or them respectively as aforesaid, upon pain of forfeiting, for every default therein, double the sum of the same duties whereof the payment shall be so neglected; and that no such person, after such default in payment made, shall deliver or carry out, or cause to be delivered or carried out, any such printed, painted, stained, or dyed goods, until he hath paid and cleared off his duty, on pain to forfeit double the value of the goods so delivered or carried out."

By 59 Geo. III., c. 90, s. 11. "That from and after the 31st day of July, 1819, all and every person and persons who shall print, paint, stain, or dye any silks, muslin, calicoes, linen, or stuffs, in Great Britain, shall, by or at the end of every six weeks, clear off and pay all the duties which shall during such six weeks have been charged upon such person or persons respectively, or shall then remain unpaid, for all such silks, muslin, calicoes, linens, and stuffs respectively as shall have been printed, painted, stained, or dyed by him, her, or them respectively, upon pain of forfeiting, for every default therein, double the sum of the said duties whereof the payment shall be so neglected; and that no such person, after making default of such payment, shall deliver or carry out, or cause to be delivered or carried out, any such printed, painted, stained, or dyed goods, until he has paid and cleared off the whole of such duties, upon pain of forfeiting double the value of the goods so delivered or carried out."

By 10 Ann., c. 19, s. 79. "That no person or persons who shall print, paint, stain, or dye any silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs chargeable with the said duties by this act shall remove, carry, or send away, or suffer to be removed, carried, or sent away, any the silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs by him, her, or them printed, painted, stained, or dyed respectively, until such time as the proper officer shall have taken an account of every particular quantity of such goods so to be carried away, and until every particular piece and parcel or remnant of such goods be duly marked with a stamp or seal, denoting the charging of the duty as this act directs, upon pain of forfeiting the sum of 20*l.* for every such offence; and that all the printed, painted, stained, or dyed silks, calicoes, linen, and stuffs, so carried away, without being marked with a stamp or seal, denoting the charging of the said duties, and being found in the possession of any draper, or other trader or dealer therein, or any person for the use of such draper, trader, or dealer for sale, shall and may be seized, or the value thereof shall and may be recovered—to wit, one moiety thereof for the use of Her Majesty, and the other moiety to the use of the seizer or informer."

And by 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 10. "That no person or persons who shall print, stain, paint, or dye any of the commodities aforesaid, chargeable with the said duties by this act, shall remove, carry, or send away, or suffer to be removed, carried, or sent away, any of the commodities aforesaid, chargeable by this act, by him, her, or them printed, stained, painted, or dyed, until such time as the proper officer shall have taken an account of any particular quantity of such commodities aforesaid so to be carried away, and until every particular piece or parcel or remnant of the same respectively be duly marked at both ends thereof with a stamp or seal, or stamps or seals, denoting the charging the duty as this act directs, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 50*l.* for every such offence; and that all such commodities aforesaid, so carried away, without being marked with a stamp or seal, or stamps or seals, denoting the charging the said duties, and being found in the possession of any draper, or other trader or dealer therein, or of any person for the use of such draper, trader, or dealer, for sale, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

By 11 & 12 Wm. III., c. 10, s. 2. "That from and after the 29th day of September, 1701, all such wrought silks, bengalls, and stuffs mixed with silk or herba, of the manufacture of Persia, China, or East India as aforesaid, and all calicoes, painted, dyed, printed, or stained there, which are or shall be imported into this kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, or town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, shall, after entry thereof, be forthwith carried and put into such warehouse or warehouses as shall be for that purpose approved of by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs for the time being, so as none of them shall be taken or carried out thence upon any account whatsoever, other than in order for exportation, and not until sufficient security be first given to the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors (which the said commissioners are hereby required and empowered to take), that the same and every part thereof

By 10 Ann., c. 19, s. 81, and 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 12—24. Every printer, &c. is to keep the silks, calicoes, linens, and stuffs which have not been taken account of by the officer separate from those which have, on pain of forfeiting, by the former act 5*l.*, by the latter 50*l.*

And by 10 Ann., c. 19, s. 98, and 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 18. On oath of reasonable suspicion that any of the said goods are in possession of any draper or other person dealing therein, or of any other to his use, for sale unstamped, the commissioners within the bills, or any two justices elsewhere, may issue their warrants, requiring some officer of the said duties (with a constable) in the daytime to search for the same, and to open doors, chests, trunks, and packages, and to seize such goods, and bring them to the next office; and such commodities so found shall be forfeited.

By 5 Geo. I., c. 11, s. 15. "That from and after the first day of May, 1719, during the continuance of the said duties, in case any silks, calicoes, linens, or stuffs printed, painted, stained, or dyed in Great Britain shall be found in any place whatsoever, on land or water, without being marked or sealed with a stamp or seal, denoting that the duties have been duly paid or charged (except on board such ships or vessels on which such goods have

By 27 Geo. III., c. 31, s. 16. "That if any printed, stained, painted, or dyed calico, muslin, linen, stuff, fustian, velvet, velveret, dimity, or other figured stuff, which ought by this or any other act or acts of parliament now in force to be marked or sealed with a stamp or seal to denote any of the duties by the said act, made in this session of parliament, repealed, or thereby imposed for or in respect thereof, to have been duly paid or charged, shall be found in any place whatsoever, except on board ship for exportation, without being marked or sealed with a stamp or seal denoting that such duties have been duly paid or discharged, the same shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, and the person or persons in whose custody or possession the same shall be found shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l.*"

By 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 20. "That the owner or printer of any piece, or remnant of a piece, of any cossae or foreign muslins, and foreign calicoes, shall, before the same are presented to the officer appointed to take an account thereof, mark the same at both ends with a frame or mark, containing in words at length his name and place of abode, and also the name of the goods which they are commonly called or known by, on pain to forfeit the said goods, and the sum of 10*l.* for every piece or remnant of such goods that shall be printed, stained, painted, or dyed (except those that are dyed throughout of one colour only) without being so marked."

Sect. 21. "That the owner or printer of any piece or remnant of linens, or stuffs made of cotton mixed with other materials, or stuffs wholly made of cotton wool, wove in Great Britain, commonly called British manufactory, or muslins plain, chequered, striped, figured, or ornamented, that shall be wove in Great Britain, except fustians, velvets, velverets, dimities, and other figured stuffs made of cotton and other materials mixed, or wholly made of cotton wool, wove in Great Britain, which are by this act made subject to a duty of 1*½d.* per yard square, shall mark the same at both ends of every piece or remnant with a frame or mark, containing in words at length his or her name and place of abode, the name and quality of the goods, and the linen and stuffs made of cotton and other materials mixed, and stuffs wholly made of cotton wool, wove in Great Britain, commonly called British manufactory, with the ready money price or value thereof—(that is to say), if linens, whether the price is more than 16*d.* or more than 2*s.* 6*d.* by the yard in length, or if stuffs made of cotton and other materials mixed, or stuffs wholly made of cotton wool, wove in Great Britain, commonly called British manufactory, or British muslins, whether the ready money price or value thereof be more than 20*d.* and not more than 3*s.* by the yard square, or whether the ready money price or value thereof be more than 3*s.* by the yard square—before the same shall be presented to the officer appointed to take an account thereof, to be printed, stained, painted, or dyed; and in case the owner is not the printer, stainer, painter, or dyer, then he shall deliver a note in writing with the said linens or stuffs to the printer, stainer, painter, or dyer, expressing the number of pieces, their quality and value as aforesaid, and the time when delivered to the printer, stainer, painter, or dyer; which note the said printer, stainer, painter, or dyer shall deliver to the officer who is to take an account of the said linens and stuffs, before the same shall be printed, stained, painted, or dyed (except those that are to be dyed throughout of one colour only), on pain that every piece or remnant of such linens or stuffs, not so marked as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise, and the owner, or other person putting out or sending such piece not so marked, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l.*; and that every printer, stainer, painter, or dyer, being the owner, who shall print, stain, paint, or dye any of the said linens or stuffs (except such as shall be dyed throughout of one colour only), shall, before he begins to print, stain, paint, or dye the same, mark each piece, or remnant of a piece, at both ends thereof, with a frame or mark, containing in words at length his or her name and place of abode, and also the name of the goods which they are commonly called or known by, with the ready money price or value thereof—(that is to say), if linens, whether the price is more than 16*d.* or more than 2*s.* 6*d.* by the yard in length, or if stuffs made of cotton and other materials mixed, or stuffs wholly made of cotton wool, wove in Great Britain, commonly called British manufactory, or British muslins, whether the ready money price or value thereof be more than 20*d.* and not more than 3*s.* by the yard square, or whether the ready money price or value thereof be more than 3*s.* by the yard square—before he begins to print, stain, paint, or dye the same (except those that are dyed throughout of one colour only), on pain to forfeit the sum of 20*l.* for every neglect; and also the said linens and stuffs not so marked as aforesaid shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise: and in case such owner, or other person so putting out or sending any such linens or stuffs to be printed, stained, painted, or dyed, as aforesaid, or any such printer, stainer, painter, or dyer, shall mark any piece or remnant of such linens or stuffs at a price less than the real value, or ready money price, as hereinbefore directed, every such piece or remnant shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise, and the owner thereof shall forfeit the sum of 20*l.* for every such offence."

Sect. 22. "That when the said frame-marks shall become obliterated or defaced, the printer, stainer, painter, or dyer, who shall print, stain, paint, or dye the said commodities, shall give notice thereof to the officer of Excise under whose survey he is, and require the said officer to renew the said frame-mark, who shall renew the same accordingly."

By s. 23, and 27 Geo. III., c. 31, s. 22. If any person shall counterfeit or forge any frame-mark, to denote the measure, he forfeits 100*l.*

Sect. 17. If any person shall counterfeit the stamp, he shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 97; 13 Geo. III., c. 56; and 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 17. If any person shall knowingly sell any of the said goods with a counterfeit stamp, he shall forfeit 100*l.* and be set in the pillory. (Abolished as to pillory by 56 Geo. III., c. 138.)

Moreover, by 27 Geo. III., c. 31, s. 14. If any person shall knowingly sell any of the said goods with such counterfeit stamp, with intent to defraud His Majesty, he shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.

By 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 27, 28, 29, 30; and 25 Geo. III., c. 74, s. 17, 19, 20, 21. Every person who hath paid the duties, or bought goods which have paid the duties, may export the same, and shall be allowed drawback, as set forth in 43 Geo. III. c. 69, sched. (C), on conforming to the following conditions, viz.:—The person intending to export such goods shall give twelve hours' notice in writing, if within the limits of the chief office (elsewhere twenty-four hours'), of his intention to pack up the same, and of the time and place, to the officer appointed for that purpose, who shall measure the said goods, and see that the stamps and frame-marks be taken off; and every piece shall be packed up in the presence of such officer, and shall be sealed and marked as the commissioners shall direct ; and if any person shall open such package, or deface such seal or mark (except the officer at the port of exportation), he shall forfeit 20*l*. And the officer who saw the same packed up shall take an account of the kinds and qualities thereof, and make a return to the officer who shall be appointed to receive the said goods at the port of exportation. And such person shall also give six hours' notice in writing to such officer of the time and place of shipping the same ; and shall give bond that such goods shall not be unshipped or relanded, or put into any other vessel (unavoidable accident excepted). And if any person shall unship or reland, or put into any other ship (except as aforesaid), any such goods, the same shall be forfeited over and above the penalty of such bond.

By 25 Geo. III., c. 74, s. 18. If such person shall not begin to pack such goods within one hour after the time mentioned in such notice, the same shall be void, and he shall be obliged to give a fresh notice.

Sects. 22, 23. But nothing herein shall extend to authorize the exportation of any goods, other than such as might have been exported before, nor to alter the manner thereof, except as aforesaid.

The 4 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 17, 18 (which establishes the corporation of the English Linen Company for making cambricks and lawns), provides that the commissioners of Excise, where there shall be a manufactory of cambricks or lawns, or of goods known under that denomination, shall appoint the supervisor or other officer to seal the same ; for which they shall have such fee as the commissioners shall appoint.

Regulations concerning cambricks and lawns made in England.

Sect. 19. The manufacturer to give notice in writing to the officer of the finishing of every piece before it is taken out of the loom, who shall seal the same at both ends ; on pain that such manufacturer, taking the same out of the loom without having given such notice, and having the same sealed as aforesaid, shall forfeit 5*l*. ; and every such piece shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of the Customs or Excise.

Sect. 20. And the officer with convenient speed, after notice, shall mark and also number each piece before it is taken out of the loom ; and make entry, in writing, in books to be provided at the expense of the manufacturer, of the number set to each piece, the length thereof, and the number of threads in the warp ; on pain of 10*l*.

Sect. 21. If the officer shall mark any not made in England or Wales, or after the same has been taken out of the looms, he shall forfeit 50*l*. for each piece to him who shall sue, and lose his office, and be incapacitated to hold any other office of trust under the crown.

Sect. 22. If any person shall offer to the officer any bribe to fix the mark to any pieces not so made, he shall forfeit 50*l*. ; and if he shall, by bribery or otherwise, prevail upon the officer to commit such offence, he shall forfeit 100*l*. and stand in the pillory two hours. (The punishment of pillory is repealed by 56 Geo. III., c. 138.)

Sect. 23. And the officer shall yearly, in the month of June, transmit to the commissioners an account of all goods he shall have stamped, and a copy of the entries made, on pain of dismission ; and he, or his executors, shall deliver up the seals on demand from the commissioners, on pain of 200*l*.

Sect. 24. Cambricks and lawns made in England found unstamped shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of the Customs or Excise ; and after condemnation shall be sold. And every person who shall sell or expose to sale, or have in his custody for that purpose, any cambricks or lawns made in England, unmarked, shall forfeit 200*l*.

Sect. 25. But the said goods so seized, condemned, and sold shall not be worn in this kingdom, but exported, and not be sold but upon condition of exportation ; and shall not be delivered out of the warehouse until bond be given, to the satisfaction of the collector, in double penalty of the goods, that the same shall be exported and not relanded.

Sect. 26. To counterfeit the seal appointed by this act, or import any foreign cambricks or lawns having such counterfeit mark thereon, or expose the same to sale knowing the stamp thereon to be counterfeited, is felony without benefit of clergy.

15. *Linen

Sect. 28. All goods condemned, and all pecuniary forfeitures (not herein otherwise directed), shall be sued for and recovered in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster, in the name of the attorney-general, or of such officer as aforesaid; and be applied (after all charges deducted) half to the use of the king, and half to the officer or other person who, pursuant to the directions of this act, shall seize, inform, or sue.

Sect. 31. And if any question shall arise, where the goods were manufactured, the proof shall lie on the owner or claimer, and not on the officer.

The justices' power.

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 92; 24 Geo. II., c. 40, s. 29; and 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 33, 34, the penalties (except as is above mentioned in relation to calicoes) may be sued for, levied, and mitigated as by the laws of Excise, or in the Courts of Westminster; and shall be employed half to the king, and half to him that shall discover, inform, or sue. And see 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 56, ante, 226 to 310.

Utensils liable.

And by 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 83; 25 Geo. III., c. 72, s. 15; and 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 21, all the utensils and instruments for printing, painting, staining, or dyeing such goods, in custody of any the said persons, or any other to his use, shall be liable to all arrears of the duty, and to all penalties concerning the same, in like manner as if such person were the lawful owner. And, 20, the relief for malt destroyed or damaged, 9 Geo. I., c. 3, s. 35, 36, 37; and see, as to malt in general, Huie, 273 to 296.

The present principal regulating act is 11 Geo. IV., c. 17, which altered and amended the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 52.

Proof of malt not having required so long a space of time in working, and passing through the floors from the cistern to the kiln, as it had been entered as having taken for that purpose, will, in some cases, be considered prima facie evidence of fraud; and duties are recoverable for the amount of so much grain malted as would be commensurate with such excess of time, as if so much of the duty were in arrear.

The average number of days necessary for working the grain intended for malt between the steeping and drying is computed by the Excise at sixteen. Excise books transcribed from the maltster's specimen paper are admissible evidence against him, without calling the officers to substantiate them; and that although they should be charged to be fraudulent and collusive, without proof of their being so. If the jury find a verdict for a sum certain, according to a calculation which does not warrant the amount, it is a ground for a new trial. Rex v. Grimwood, 1 Price, 369.

After a laborious investigation and comparison of all the malt acts, it was held that the restrictive proviso in the 12th Anne, c. 2, limiting the right of the crown to proceed for arrears of duties on malt to a period of five years previous to the commencement of suit, was not then in effect, not having been re-enacted by any of the subsequent malt acts referring to that statute. And as a general rule, it was decided, that clauses limiting the right of the crown are to be considered as repealed by subsequent statutes, unless expressly re-enacted. Attorney-General v. Newman, 1 Price, 438.

The surety in a bond to the crown by a maltster, for securing the payment of duties on malt made by him, is not such a debtor to the crown as is entitled to prosecute an extent in aid, because by the special condition of such bonds the duties are not payable till four months after the maltster shall have made entry, according to the 48 Geo. III., c. 74, s. 23. It is not necessary that the bond on which the inquisition proceeds should be actually produced. The process of extent issues of common right, if well founded. Rex (in aid of Ricketts) v. Sly, 2 Price, 157.

In an action against Excise officers for the detention and negligent custody of certain malt, &c. taken under a distress upon a conviction under the malt act, 43 Geo. III., c. 74, it appeared that the plaintiff having been convicted in a penalty, a warrant issued directing the defendants to levy the same, and that they seized and removed the plaintiff's goods from his premises, and that afterwards he paid the penalty. The defendants, ten days after this payment, brought the goods back to the plaintiff's premises, but in a damaged state. It was held, that in order to make the detention unlawful, the plaintiff ought to have demanded the goods, and that there having been no demand, the detention was not unlawful. Hutchings v. Morris and others, 6 Bar. & Cress. 464.

New duties.

6 Geo. IV., c. 81.
Licences.

Sect. 2 imposes new duties, allowances, and drawbacks.

These duties were recoverable, according to the general regulations of the new Excise law, 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53 (ante, p. 229 to 310), and also by the new malt act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 52 (post).

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 1, (a) the former duties on Excise licences are repealed; and by s. 2 new duties are enacted; viz. (ante, 247)

For every Excise licence taken out by every maltster or maker of malt for sale, if the quantity of malt made by such maltster or maker of malt within the year ending the 5th of July in each year shall not exceed 50 quarters, 7s. 6d.

If exceeding 50 and not exceeding 100 quarters . . .	0	15	0
If exceeding 100 and not exceeding 150 . . .	1	2	6
If exceeding 150 and not exceeding 200 . . .	1	10	0
If exceeding 200 and not exceeding 250 . . .	1	17	6
If exceeding 250 and not exceeding 300 . . .	2	5	0
If exceeding 300 and not exceeding 350 . . .	2	12	6
If exceeding 350 and not exceeding 400 . . .	3	0	0
If exceeding 400 and not exceeding 450 . . .	3	7	6
If exceeding 450 and not exceeding 500 . . .	3	15	0
If exceeding 500 and not exceeding 550 . . .	4	2	6
If exceeding 550 . . .	4	10	0

And every person who shall first become a maltster or maker of malt for sale, on taking out such licence, shall pay 7s. 6d.; and within ten days after 5th July next, after taking out such licence, such further additional sum as with the 7s. 6d. shall amount to the duty before mentioned, according to the quantity of malt made in the preceding year, or period for which such licence was granted.

The enactments in this act respecting the licences, penalties, &c. are inserted at length ante, 247 to 262.

7 & 8 Geo. IV.,
c. 52.
From 10th Oct.
1827, every malt-ster shall make entry of all places and utensils used for making malt, under a penalty of 100l. and forfeiture of all malt found therein.

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 52, intituled An act to consolidate and amend certain laws relating to the revenue of Excise on malt made in the united kingdom; and for amending the laws relating to brewers in Ireland, and to the allowance in respect to the malt duty on spirits made in Scotland and Ireland from malt only; "that from and after the 10th day of October, 1827, every maltster or maker of malt shall make true and particular entry in writing of his or her name and place of abode, and of every building, place, cistern, couch frame, kiln, and other vessel and utensil, by such maltster or maker of malt intended to be used in or for the making or keeping of malt, or for the keeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, describing in such entry the particular use or purpose for which such building, place, cistern, couch frame, kiln, and other vessel and utensil respectively, is intended to be used, at the next office of Excise; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall use any building, place, cistern, couch frame, kiln, or other vessel or utensil, in or for the making or keeping of malt, or for the keeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, without having made a true and particular entry in writing thereof at the next office of Excise; or if any maltster or maker of malt shall, without due notice first given at such next office of Excise, use any building, place, cistern, couch frame, kiln, or other vessel or utensil for any other or different purpose in or for the making or keeping of malt, or for the keeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, than the particular use or purpose for which the same shall have been entered; every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100l. for every building, place, cistern, couch frame, kiln, and other vessel or utensil so used, and all the malt and corn or grain which shall be found in any such building, place, cistern, couch frame, kiln, or other vessel or utensil shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise. Provided always, that any entry made of any building, place, cistern, couch frame, kiln, or other vessel or utensil, for any more than one such particular use or purpose as aforesaid, shall be void to all intents and purposes."

Sect. 2. "That every cistern which shall be used by any maltster or maker of malt for the wetting or steeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, who shall wet or steep more than eight bushels of corn or grain to be made into malt at any one time, shall be permanently made and constructed with the sides and ends thereof straight and at right angles to each other, and of no greater depth in any part thereof than forty inches, and having an even bottom, with no more inclination for the drip than half an inch for every foot in length of such drip; and that every such cistern shall be placed in a situation where the officer gauging any corn therein shall have sufficient light, and shall have a clear open space of forty-eight inches at the least above every part of such cistern; and that every such maltster or maker of malt shall provide for the use of the officers of Excise full and sufficient means to enable such officers easily, safely, and conveniently to have access to and to gauge the corn or grain contained in such cistern, in every part thereof. Provided always, that every vessel, thing, or place used by any maltster or maker of malt to wet or steep corn or grain to be made into malt shall for the purposes of this act be deemed and taken to be a cistern."

Sect. 3. "That no cistern shall be used for the wetting or steeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, by any maltster or maker of malt who shall wet or steep more than eight bushels of corn or grain to be made into malt at any one time, which shall not be made or constructed, and placed in such a situation, and have such full and sufficient means provided as by this act before directed and required; and every such maltster or maker of malt, before any corn or grain shall by him or her be wet or steeped in any cistern to be made into malt, shall first obtain a certificate in writing from the supervisor of Excise of the district in which such cistern shall be situated, that he has surveyed and examined such cistern, and that the same is made or constructed, and placed in such a situation, and has such full and sufficient means provided as by this act before directed and required; and if any such maltster or maker of malt shall wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt in any cistern, without having first obtained and having such certificate as aforesaid, or in any cistern in which, or in the dimensions or situation whereof, or in the means provided as aforesaid, any change has been made after such certificate has been obtained, without notice thereof to such supervisor as aforesaid, and a new certificate obtained for the same in like manner as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending (and notwithstanding any entry by him or her made of such cistern) shall be deemed to have wet and steeped such corn or grain to be made into malt without notice, and shall be liable to be sued for and to pay for every such offence as aforesaid the penalty by this act imposed for wetting or steeping corn or grain to be made into malt without notice."

Sect. 4. "That if any such maltster or maker of malt, having obtained such certificate from the supervisor as by this act before directed, shall not maintain and at all times place and keep the means by him or her provided, as by this act before directed and required, and for which such certificate shall have been obtained, or shall not aid and assist to the utmost of his or her power, and with his or her servants, any officer of Excise in using such means, so that such officer may be thereby enabled easily, securely, and conveniently to gauge the whole of the corn or grain contained in any cistern by him or her used for the wetting or steeping of such corn or grain to be made into malt, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100/."

7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 52.

No penalty for using cisterns and couch frames in use before the passing of this act, if the same shall remain unaltered.

Officers may enter buildings used by maltsters, gauge vessels, &c. and take account of grain and malt, and make a return, which shall be a charge of duty, leaving a copy thereof if required.

Sect. 5. "That every couch frame which shall be used by any such maltster or maker of malt shall be made or constructed with the sides and bottoms thereof straight and at right angles to each other, and having three of such sides permanently made or constructed, and the other side thereof formed by moveable boards or planks of the substance of two inches at the least in thickness, such couch frame to be supported on the outside in every part thereof, so that the same and every part thereof may be of sufficient strength not to bend or curve, or fail to preserve, when filled with corn or grain, the same dimensions which such couch frame shall have had when empty, and so that the officer of Excise may be enabled easily and conveniently to gauge in every part of such couch frame the corn or grain contained therein; and if any such maltster or maker of malt shall use any couch frame in or for the making of malt, which shall not be made or constructed as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*, and all corn or grain which shall be found in any couch frame so made or constructed as aforesaid shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 6. "Provided always, that no such maltster or maker of malt who shall use any cistern for the wetting or steeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, or any couch frame in or for the making of malt, which shall have been so used and constructed at and immediately before the passing of this act, shall, so long as the same shall remain unaltered, and of the same form and dimensions as the same respectively were at and immediately before the passing of this act, be subject or liable to any penalty or forfeiture by this act imposed, for or by reason of such cistern or couch frame not being made or constructed in the form and dimensions by this act in that behalf directed and required, or for or by reason of such maltster laying any corn or grain in any such cistern of any greater depth in any part thereof than forty inches, or for or by reason of such maltster laying any corn or grain in any such couch frame of any greater depth in any part thereof than thirty inches, if such couch frame, as the same shall have been used and constructed at and immediately before the passing of this act, shall not be of sufficient size to contain the corn or grain emptied from the cistern, without the same being laid therein a greater depth than thirty inches, and such couch frame cannot, without enlarging such malt-house, or other cause shown to the satisfaction of the commissioners of Excise in England, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland or Ireland, be made of such sufficient size as aforesaid, (such cause and satisfaction being stated in the certificate of the supervisor hereinbefore mentioned); subject nevertheless, in all other respects, to the several rules, regulations, and provisions by this act imposed."

Sect. 7. "That it shall be lawful for any officer of Excise, and any person or persons in his aid or assistance, at any time, either by night or day, to enter into and remain so long as such officer may think fit, for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, in any building or place belonging to or used by any maltster or maker of malt for the making or keeping of malt, or for the keeping of corn or grain to be made or making into malt, and to gauge all vessels and utensils therein used by any such maltster or maker of malt for the wetting or steeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, and to examine, gauge, or measure and take account of all corn or grain in any such building or place, whether such corn or grain shall be in a state of operation for the making of malt or otherwise, and also of all malt that shall be in any such building or place; and it shall be lawful for such officer, and he is hereby authorized and required, to charge the duty imposed by any act or acts relating to the revenue of Excise on malt, upon all malt made, or corn or grain making into malt, by such maltster or maker of malt, found therein, and of such account and charge of duty to make a return or report in writing to the commissioners of Excise, or to the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland or Ireland, or to such person as the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, may direct; such officer, in all cases where the minutes of the entries made by him in taking such account shall not appear on the book or paper called the specimen left at the entered premises of such maltster or maker of malt, giving (if demand be made thereof in writing at the time of taking such account) a true copy of such charge, in writing under his hand, to such maltster or maker of malt; and any such return or report of such officer as aforesaid shall be and shall be taken to be a charge of such duty upon the maltster or maker of malt."

Sect. 8. "That the supervisor or surveyor of Excise in whose district or division any maltster or maker of malt shall be, or the officer of Excise under whose survey such maltster or maker of malt shall be, may leave and deposit in some conspicuous and open part of some building or place entered by such maltster or maker of malt a certain book or paper called a specimen, for recording therein minutes of the entries made by the officers respectively who survey the premises of such maltster or maker of malt, in the books of such officers, of the state of the manufactory, and of the accounts and particulars of the survey thereof at any time taken by such officers respectively, and the names and minutes of survey and observations of any other officer who may visit or inspect such entered premises; and every officer of Excise shall at all times have free access to such book or paper, with liberty and power to remove or take away the same, leaving a new book or paper, for the like purpose as aforesaid, in lieu thereof; and if any maltster or maker of malt, or other person, not being an officer of Excise, shall remove or take away or shall conceal or withhold any such book or paper, or shall damage or destroy the same, or alter, deface, or obliterate any entry therein, or shall make any entry therein, every such maltster or maker of malt, or other person, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

Specimen to be kept by the officers on the premises of maltsters, and not to be removed or destroyed, or the entries therein obliterated.

Sect. 9. "That if any maltster or maker of malt, or other person, shall resist, oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer of Excise, or any person employed in the revenue of Excise, or acting in the aid and assistance of any officer or person so employed, in the due execution of his office or duty, or in the execution of any of the powers or authorities by this act given or granted to such officer or person so employed, every maltster or maker of malt, or other person, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 300*l.*"

Penalty on obstructing officers of Excise, or persons acting in their aid.

Sect. 10. "That there shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every maltster or maker of malt a book, prepared for such purposes as hereinafter mentioned, called a barley book, to be kept by such maltster or maker of malt in some public and open part of his or her entered premises, for the inspection of the officers of Excise; and every maltster or maker of malt shall, on the same day on which any barley shall be taken or received into the custody or possession of such maltster or maker of malt, or into the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, enter in a book so delivered as aforesaid, and in the proper columns prepared for such purposes respectively, a true and particular account of the number of bushels of barley which shall be so taken or received into such custody or possession respectively as aforesaid, together with the christian and surname and place of abode of the person or persons from whom such barley shall have been so taken or received, and the day of its being so taken or received; and every maltster or maker of malt shall, within three hours after any corn or grain shall have been covered with water, for the purpose of wetting or steeping the same to be made into malt, enter in such book as aforesaid, and in the proper columns prepared for such purposes respectively, a true and particular account of the quantity of barley in bushels so wetted or steeped, and shall enter against and immediately opposite to every such entry the particular day and hour of the day on and at which such barley was so wetted or steeped; and every maltster or maker of malt, who shall sell, remove, or otherwise dispose of any barley, shall, on the same day on which any such barley shall be sold, removed, or otherwise disposed of, enter in such book as aforesaid, and in the proper columns prepared for such purposes respectively, a true and particular account of the quantity of barley in bushels so sold, removed, or otherwise disposed of, and the name and place of residence of the person or persons to whom any such barley shall have been so sold, removed, or otherwise disposed of; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to make any such entry as aforesaid, or shall not keep such book as aforesaid, or shall convey away or conceal the same, or shall destroy or tear out any leaf thereof, or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or alter any entry therein, or make any false entry therein, or shall refuse to permit any officer of Excise to inspect such book, or to make any minute therein, as to such officer shall seem meet, or to remove or take away such book, leaving a new book, for the like purpose as aforesaid, in lieu thereof, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*. Provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be deemed or construed to extend to barley in the straw and unthreshed, in the custody or possession of any maltster or maker of malt, or in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, so as such barley, when threshed, be thereupon entered in the barley book as barley then taken and received into the custody or possession of such maltster or maker of malt, and subject to the provisions of this act."

Sect. 11. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall lodge, store, or deposit any barley or malt in different buildings or places which shall not be under the same roof, or have any internal communication between them, the supervisor of Excise under whose survey such barley or malt shall be shall, if he shall deem it expedient so to do, take the same as separate and distinct stocks, and such stocks shall and may in such case be surveyed and kept account of by the officers of Excise accordingly, in the same manner as if the same had belonged to different persons."

Sect. 12. "That every maltster or maker of malt, within ten days after the 5th day of July in every year, shall deliver to the officer of Excise under whose survey such maltster or maker of malt shall then be, a true and particular account in writing of all barley which shall not at such time be in actual operation or process of making into malt, in the custody or possession of such maltster or maker of malt, or in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, describing in every such account the particular building or place in which such barley shall be lodged, stored, or deposited, and the number of bushels of such barley contained in each such building or place; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall, if required by any officer of Excise, show to such officer every such building or place, and all such barley which shall be therein respectively contained; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to deliver such account as aforesaid, or shall deliver any false or untrue account in such behalf as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to show to any such officer as aforesaid any such building or place, or any such barley as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 13. "That every maltster or maker of malt, when and so soon as he or she shall have finished or dried off all the malt which shall be or shall have been in operation or process of making into malt in any particular malthouse of and belonging to such maltster or maker of malt, and also within twenty-four hours at the least before such maltster or maker of malt shall again begin to wet or steep corn or grain to be made into malt in such malthouse, deliver to the officer of Excise under whose survey such maltster or maker of malt shall then be a true and particular account in writing of all the barley which shall then be in the custody or possession of such maltster or maker of malt, or in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, describing in every such account the particular building or place in which such barley shall be lodged, stored, or deposited, and the number of bushels of such barley contained in each such building or place; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall, if required by any officer of Excise, show to such officer every such building or place, and the barley therein respectively contained; and if any such maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to deliver such account as aforesaid, or shall deliver any false or untrue account in such behalf as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to show to any such officer as aforesaid any such building or place, or any such barley as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 14. "That every maltster or maker of malt shall, when and so often as he or she shall be thereunto required by any officer of Excise, level and cast or place the barley in the custody or possession of such maltster or maker of malt, or in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, which shall not then be in actual operation or process of making into malt, into such regular form as may enable the officer of Excise conveniently to gauge and ascertain the true quantity thereof; and if any maltster or maker of malt, being thereunto required as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse so to do, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 15. "That it shall be lawful for any officer of Excise to gauge and take an account of all barley in the stock, custody, or possession of any maltster or maker of malt, or in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall, before the taking of such account, be permitted to enter in the barley book all barley which shall have been taken or received into the custody or possession of such maltster or maker of malt, or into or in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, and all barley which shall have been sold, removed, or otherwise disposed of on the same day, and before the taking of such account, and all barley which shall have been wetted or steeped to be made into malt within three hours next before the taking of such account."

Sect. 16. "That if, upon gauging and taking such account as aforesaid, the quantity of barley (not in actual operation for the making of malt) shall be found to exceed the quantity which the maltster or maker of malt ought to have had in his or her stock, custody, or possession, and in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, according to the barley book, in the proportion of one bushel in every twenty bushels of barley, then and in every such case every such maltster or maker of malt shall be deemed and adjudged to have taken or received barley into his or her custody or possession, and to have neglected and refused to make such entry thereof as is by this act in that behalf directed and required."

Sect. 17. "That if, upon gauging and taking such account as aforesaid, the quantity of barley (not in actual operation for the making of malt) shall be found short of or less than the quantity which the maltster or maker of malt ought to have had in his or her stock, custody, or possession, and in the custody or possession of any person or persons in trust for or to the use of such maltster or maker of malt, according to the barley book, in the proportion of one bushel in every twenty bushels of barley, then and in every such case every such maltster or maker of malt shall be deemed and adjudged to have wetted and steeped barley to be made into Maltsters, when required, to place their barley not in operation in such form that the officer may conveniently gauge the same, under penalty of 100*l*.

Officers of Excise may gauge and take an account of all barley in the stock of any maltster, who shall be permitted to enter up his barley book to the time of taking such account.

If an excess be found above one in twenty, the maltster to be deemed to have received barley without entering it.

If deficiency exceed one in twenty, the maltster to be deemed to have wetted barley without entering it, and to be charged with duty in respect thereof, over and above the penalty.

malt, and to have neglected and refused to make such entry thereof as is by this act in that behalf directed and required; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall in every such case, over and above the penalty by this act imposed for such neglect and refusal as aforesaid, be charged with and be liable to pay the duty chargeable on malt for every bushel of barley so found deficient as aforesaid; and such duty shall and may be sued for, levied, and recovered by such and the like ways, means, and methods, and under such and the like penalties, as the duty on malt is or may be sued for, levied, and recovered by any law or laws in force relating to the duties of Excise."

Sect. 18. "That if, upon gauging or taking such account as aforesaid, any dispute shall arise between the maltster or maker of malt and the officer of Excise, respecting the true quantity of barley (not in actual operation for the maker of malt) as aforesaid, such maltster or maker of malt shall be allowed immediately, and with all due diligence and despatch, to measure the same in the presence of such officer, by a just and correct bushel measure, as prescribed by law, to be provided by such maltster or maker of malt, and the quantity ascertained by such admeasurement shall be taken to be the true quantity of such barley; any thing in this act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 19. "That upon the trial or hearing of any information for the recovery of any duty or penalty for or on account of any deficiency or excess in the quantity of barley in the stock or stocks of any maltster or maker of malt, according to this act, it shall be lawful for the defendant or defendants, upon such prosecution, to prove that such deficiency was actually and bonâ fide occasioned by barley having been stolen or privately conveyed away without the knowledge, privity, or consent of such defendant or defendants, or that such deficiency or excess respectively was occasioned by accidental or unintentional error or mistake in entering and keeping the barley book, without any design or intention of fraud or evasion of the provisions of this act; and in case the court and jury, or the commissioners of Excise, or justices of the peace, before whom any such information shall be tried or heard, shall be satisfied of the truth of such evidence, and that the same does account for such deficiency or excess, it shall be lawful for such court and jury, or commissioners of Excise, or justices of the peace, to acquit the defendant or defendants of such duty or penalty; any thing in this act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 20. "That every maltster or maker of malt, before beginning to wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt, shall give to the officer of Excise under whose survey such maltster or maker of malt shall then be twenty-four hours' notice at least, in writing, if the malthouse of such maltster or maker of malt shall be situated in any city, or in the suburbs of any city, or in any market town, and forty-eight hours' notice at least, in writing, if such malthouse shall not be so situated, of the day and particular hour of the day when such maltster or maker of malt intends to wet or steep corn or grain to be made into malt, and of the quantity of corn or grain in bushels to be then wet or steeped; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall begin to wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt, without giving such notice as aforesaid, or shall wet or steep any greater or less quantity of corn or grain (exceeding the proportion of one in twenty) than the quantity of corn or grain expressed in such notice, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100l.; and in case any maltster or maker of malt shall not, pursuant to any such notice as aforesaid, begin to wet or steep the corn or grain mentioned in such notice, and cover the whole thereof with water, at the day and hour mentioned in such notice, or within three hours next after the expiration of such hour, every such notice shall be and is hereby declared to be null and void; and every such maltster or maker of malt, before he shall begin to wet or steep such corn

"That it shall not be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt to empty or take any corn or grain from or out of the cistern at any other time than between the hours of seven of the clock in the morning and four of the clock in the afternoon; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall empty or take any corn or grain from or out of the cistern at any other time than aforesaid, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 28. "That it shall not be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt, who shall have given such further notice of his or her intention to continue the corn or grain by him or her wet or steeped covered with water for the space of sixty-five hours, as before mentioned, to empty or take such corn or grain, or any part thereof, from or out of the cistern at any other time than between the hours of one of the clock in the forenoon and four of the clock in the afternoon; and if any maltster or maker of malt, who shall have given such further notice as aforesaid, shall empty or take such corn or grain as aforesaid, or any part thereof, from or out of the cistern at any other time than aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 29. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall, in any building or place, or in any buildings or places, having the same roof or any internal communication between them, use more than one cistern at the same time for wetting or steeping any corn or grain to be made into malt, every such maltster or maker of malt shall empty or take all the corn or grain from and out of all such cisterns at one and the same time; and if any such maltster or maker of malt shall empty or take any corn or grain from or out of any such cisterns at different times, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.* Provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be deemed or construed to extend to subject any maltster or maker of malt to the said last-mentioned penalty for or by reason of his or her emptying or taking corn or grain from or out of any two or more cisterns at different times of the same day, if the emptying or taking of the corn or grain from or out of the last of such cisterns shall be finished within three hours from the time of beginning to empty or take the corn or grain from or out of the first of such cisterns."

Sect. 30. "That it shall not be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt to empty or take any corn or grain from or out of any cistern in any building or place, or in any buildings or places, having the same roof or any internal communication between them, until the expiration of ninety-six hours from the time of the last preceding emptying or taking of corn or grain from or out of any cistern therein; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall empty or take any corn or grain from or out of any such cistern until the expiration of such time as last aforesaid, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.* Provided always, that such maltster or maker of malt shall not be liable to any such penalty as last aforesaid for or by reason of his or her emptying or taking any corn or grain from or out of any such cistern as aforesaid before the expiration of such ninety-six hours, if such corn or grain be so emptied or taken out on the day on which such ninety-six hours shall expire, and not before seven of the clock of the morning of such day."

Penalty on taking corn out of any cistern within 96 hours of the last emptying of any cistern under the same roof, 200*l.*

Proviso.

Sect. 31. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall take or convey away from the cistern any corn or grain making into malt, so that no gauge thereof can be taken by the officer of Excise in the couch frame, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

Penalty on so conveying corn from cistern that it cannot be gauged in couch frame.

Sect. 32. "That every maltster or maker of malt who shall empty or take any corn or grain from or out of the cistern shall empty all such corn or grain into a couch frame or frames entered by such maltster or maker of malt; and that it shall be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt who shall use more than one cistern at the same time, for the wetting or steeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, in any building or place, or in any buildings or places, having the same roof or any internal communication between them, to empty the corn or grain from or out of any two or more of such cisterns into one and the same entered couch frame, to be taken an account of by the officer therein and thenceforth as one and the same wetting or steeping; and all corn or grain emptied into such couch frame or frames as aforesaid shall be laid flat and level therein by the maltster or maker of malt, and at no greater depth, except as in that behalf is in this act before excepted, in any such couch frame or frames than thirty inches in any part thereof; and when any corn or grain shall be so emptied between the first day of March and the first day of December in any year, such corn or grain shall be kept and continued so laid in the couch frame or frames into which such corn or grain shall have been emptied for the space of twenty-six hours from the time of being emptied or taken from or out of the cistern or cisterns; and when any corn or grain shall be so emptied at any other time of the year than as aforesaid, such corn or grain shall be kept and continued so laid in the couch frame or frames into which such corn or grain shall have been emptied for the space of thirty hours from the time of its being so emptied or taken from or out of the cistern or cisterns; and all corn or grain making into malt during such respective periods of time as aforesaid shall be deemed and taken to be in couch; and if any maltster or maker of malt, who shall empty or take any corn or grain from or out of any cistern or cisterns, shall not empty all such corn or grain into such couch frame or frames entered by such maltster or maker of malt, or shall not lay the same flat and level in such couch frame or frames as aforesaid, or shall lay the same therein to any greater depth than thirty inches in any part thereof, or shall not keep or continue all corn or grain in the couch frame or frames into which the

Penalty on treading or forcing together corn in the cistern or couch frame.

Officers suspecting corn or grain to have been forced together in the cistern or couch frame may turn it over and lay it level again therein.

What increase shall be conclusive

Sect. 33. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall tread or force together any corn or grain making into malt in the cistern or couch frame, or if any corn or grain making into malt shall be found in any cistern or couch frame so hard, close, and compact as it could not have been unless the same had by some means or other been trodden or forced together therein, every maltster or maker of malt who shall tread or force together such corn or grain as aforesaid, or in whose cistern or couch frame such corn or grain shall be found so hard, close, and compact as aforesaid, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 34. "That if any officer of Excise shall have reason to believe, or shall suspect, that the corn or grain making into malt in any cistern or couch frame has been trodden or forced together, it shall be lawful for such officer, and any person or persons in aid and assistance of such officer, in the presence of the maltster or maker of malt, or of his or her servant, if such maltster or servant shall think fit to be present, to turn over all such corn or grain, either by throwing all such corn or grain from and out of the cistern or couch frame, and returning the same into the cistern or couch frame from which it shall have been thrown, and laying the same level again therein, or by turning over all such corn or grain in such cistern or couch frame, and laying the same level again therein, or by throwing out any part of such corn or grain from such cistern or couch frame, and turning over so much thereof as shall be left remaining therein, and returning so much of such corn or grain as shall have been thrown out into the cistern or couch frame from which the same shall have been thrown, and laying the whole of such corn or grain level again in such cistern or couch frame, as to such officer shall seem fit; and every maltster or maker of malt, together with his or her servants, shall give such aid and assistance to such officer, and to such person or persons as aforesaid, in such behalf as aforesaid, as such officer or other person may request; and if any increase shall be found in the gauge or quantity of such corn or grain, after being turned over and laid level again in the cistern or couch frame in any such manner as aforesaid, over and above the former gauge, in any greater proportion than that of one bushel in every twenty bushels of such corn or grain, the increase so found as aforesaid shall be deemed conclusive evidence that such corn or grain had been trodden or forced together; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall refuse to aid and assist any officer of Excise, or any person or persons acting in aid and assistance of such officer as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*. Provided always nevertheless, that it shall be lawful to prove by any other or indifferent evidence than that above mentioned, that such corn or grain had been trodden or forced together."

Sect. 35. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall wet, water, or sprinkle any corn or grain making into malt, before the expiration of twelve days, or two hundred and eighty-eight hours, after the same shall have been emptied or taken from or out of the cistern, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

Sect. 36. "That it shall not be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt at one and the same time to have more than five floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt, in the couch frame, or on the floor or kiln, or all or any of them, wetted or steeped in and arising from, or pretended to have been wetted or steeped in and to have arisen from, or denoted by its place of deposit in the malthouse to have been wetted or steeped in and to have arisen from one and the same cistern, or one or more cisterns emptied into one and the same couch frame; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall at one and the same time have more than five floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt as aforesaid, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*. Provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to extend, to subject any maltster or maker of malt to the said last-mentioned penalty for or by reason of his or her separating or dividing any one or more of his or her floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt, either into two or more pieces, for the purpose of working such pieces separately and apart from each other, in the same malthouse in which such floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt respectively shall have been wet or steeped, or for or by reason of any such maltster or maker of malt separating or dividing the oldest of his or her floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt, for the sole purpose of removing the same to the kiln to be immediately dried thereon."

7 & 8 Geo. IV.,
c. 52.

Floors may be divided for working separately, or the oldest one for carrying to the kiln.

Sect. 37. "That every maltster or maker of malt shall deposit and leave all such floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt, so that the sides or outward edges thereof shall be in straight lines, and shall level and lay the same in regular succession one before the other, according to the seniority in age of such floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt upon the floor or floors of the malthouse of such maltster or maker of malt; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall not deposit and leave any such floor or quantity of corn or grain making into malt so as aforesaid, or if the maltster or maker of malt, or any of his servants, being present at the survey thereof by any officer, shall not, on the request of such officer, forthwith put the sides or outward edges of any floor or quantity of corn or grain making into malt in straight lines, or shall not level or lay the same as aforesaid, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Floors to be in regular forms, and levelled and laid in succession, according to seniority of age, under penalty of 100*l*.

Sect. 38. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall mix, either on the floor or on the kiln, any corn or grain of one wetting or steeping, with or amongst any corn or grain of another or different wetting or steeping, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

Penalty on mixing corn of different steepings.

Sect. 39. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall wet, water, sprinkle, or damp any malt after the same shall have been taken or thrown off the kiln, and before such malt shall be delivered into the custody or possession of the brewer or other person who shall have purchased the same, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Penalty on wetting or damping malt after taken from the kiln.

Sect. 40. "That if any maltster or maker of malt, or other person, shall fraudulently deposit, conceal, or convey away from the sight of the officers of Excise any malt, or corn or grain making into malt, every maltster or maker of malt, or other person, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*.; and all such malt, or corn or grain making into malt, so fraudulently deposited, concealed, or conveyed away as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Penalty on fraudulently depositing, concealing, or conveying away malt.

Sect. 41. "That if any maltster or maker of malt shall remove, carry, or send away any malt from the building or place where the same shall have been made, before such malt shall have been taken an account of and charged with duty by the proper officer of Excise, or if any person shall receive or have in his or her custody or possession any malt so removed, carried, or sent away as aforesaid, knowing the same to have been so removed, carried, or sent away, every maltster or maker of malt, or person, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*.; and all the malt so removed, carried, or sent away as aforesaid shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Penalty for removing or receiving malt before account taken and duties charged.

Sect. 42. "That whenever the duty upon malt shall be charged by gauge of the corn or grain taken while the same is in a state of operation, or in process of making into malt, such allowances shall be made upon such gauges as are hereinafter mentioned: upon every gauge thereof taken by the officer of Excise in the cistern wherein the corn or grain is wetting or steeping to be made into malt, or in the couch frame into which the corn or grain shall have been emptied, during the period respectively for which corn or grain is by this act before required to be kept and continued in such cistern and couch frame respectively, an allowance shall be made by such officer of one-fifth part of the whole quantity of the corn or grain so found by such gauge; and upon every gauge taken by the officer of Excise of such corn or grain on the floor, after the expiration of such periods of time respectively as aforesaid, and before the expiration of ninety-six hours from the time when such corn or grain was emptied or taken from or out of the cistern, an allowance shall be made by such officer of one-third part of the whole quantity of the corn or grain so found by such gauge as last aforesaid; and upon every gauge afterwards taken by the officer of Excise of such corn or grain before the same shall be dried off upon and removed from the kiln, an allowance shall be made by such officer of one half of the whole quantity of such corn or grain so found by such gauge as last aforesaid; and the duty of Excise upon malt, when charged upon the corn or grain in a state of operation, or in process of making into malt as aforesaid, shall be charged upon the best of the several gauges so taken as aforesaid, after such allowances shall have been so made thereon respectively as before mentioned. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for any officer of Excise to take an account of all the malt made by any maltster or maker of malt, after the same shall have been taken or thrown off from the kiln, and whilst the same shall remain in the custody or possession of the maltster or maker thereof; and if, upon taking such account as last aforesaid, such officer shall find the quantity of malt so taken account of to exceed the quantity before charged with duty, according to the best gauge thereof when taken in operation as aforesaid, such officer shall in every such case (making an allowance after the rate of eighteen bushels in every one hundred bushels of blown malt for porter) charge the duty upon all such excess; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 43. "Provided always, that whenever any officer of Excise shall propose to measure or take an account of malt, on the same being taken or thrown off from the kiln, and whilst the same is hot, and contains the commings or roots thereof, and is in the same state as the same has been taken or thrown off from the kiln, such officer shall in such account make an allowance of twelve per centum for the heat, commings, or roots, and unclean state of such malt, or shall, at the election of such officer, require such malt to be forthwith screened and cleaned for the purpose of being measured and taken account thereof without such allowance; and in case such maltster or maker of malt shall, on such request of the officer to screen such malt, desire time so to do, it shall be lawful for such officer to lock up all such malt in a safe and secure room, to be provided by such maltster or maker of malt; and no such maltster or maker of malt shall be entitled to any such allowance as aforesaid, or to screen such malt before the same is measured or taken account of as aforesaid, unless he shall forthwith remove and deposit all such malt in such room, and keep the same therein so locked by the officer of Excise, safely and securely, and unmixed with any other malt whatsoever, until such maltster or maker of malt shall give forty-eight hours' notice to the proper officer of Excise to unlock such room, and shall thereupon screen and clean such malt for the purpose of being measured and taken account of by the officer, without such allowance as aforesaid. Provided also, that on any officer taking an account of the malt in the stock, custody, or possession of any maltster or maker of malt, on or after the 10th day of October in every year, as hereinafter mentioned, every such officer shall make an allowance to such maltster or maker of malt, of one bushel in twenty bushels of such malt, for any variation having occurred therein whilst in stocks; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

month, make a true entry in writing of all the malt by him or her made within such period as aforesaid, at the office of Excise within the limits whereof such malt shall have been made; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to make entry as aforesaid, or shall make any false entry in that behalf, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 45. "That every maltster or maker of malt shall, within the space of fourteen days next after he or she shall have or ought to have made such entry as aforesaid, pay and clear off all the duties which shall have been charged upon, and which shall remain unpaid by, such maltster or maker of malt, for or in respect of any malt by him or her made, unless such maltster or maker of malt shall have given, and shall maintain and renew, upon the death or insolvency of any party thereto, security, approved of by the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland or Ireland respectively, or the person or persons who shall be appointed or employed by them respectively for that purpose, by bond in double the value of the duties which such commissioners of Excise, or commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise, or such person or persons as aforesaid, shall judge likely to arise or be charged upon and become due from such maltster or maker of malt within any five months, for the due payment at the end of every four months from the day on which such maltster or maker of malt shall or ought to have made such entry as aforesaid, of all such duties and sum and sums of money as shall arise or be charged on or become due from such maltster or maker of malt; and if any maltster or maker of malt, who shall not have given such security, or who shall not maintain and renew such security as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to pay and clear off such duties within the space of fourteen days as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt as last aforesaid, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose double the sum for which such duties so neglected or refused to be paid or cleared off as aforesaid shall amount to."

Sect. 46. "That if any workman, servant, or labourer employed by or in the service of any maltster or maker of malt, shall maliciously, and with intent to injure such maltster or maker of malt, begin to wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt at any other time than between the hours of eight of the clock in the morning and two of the clock in the afternoon; or if any workman, servant, or labourer shall maliciously, and with such intent as aforesaid, empty or take any corn or grain from or out of the cistern at any other time than between the hours of seven of the clock in the morning and four of the clock in the afternoon; or shall maliciously, and with such intent as aforesaid, wet, water, or sprinkle any corn or grain making into malt before the expiration of twelve days or two hundred and eighty-eight hours after the same shall have been emptied or taken from or out of the cistern, or mix, either on the floor or on the kiln, any corn or grain of one wetting or steeping with or amongst any corn or grain of another or different wetting or steeping; every such workman, servant, or labourer shall and may, for any such offence as aforesaid, be arrested and conveyed, by any constable or other lawful peace officer, before any one or more of His Majesty's justices of the peace for the county, shire, division, city, town, or place wherein such workman, servant, or labourer shall be found; and it shall be lawful for any such justice or justices of the peace, on the confession of the party, or by proof on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses made of any such offence, to convict every such workman, servant, or labourer so offending of such offence, and upon such conviction, by warrant or warrants under his or their hand or hands, to commit such workman, servant, or labourer to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, shire, division, city, town, or place in which such conviction shall take place, for any length of time not exceeding twelve and not less than three months from the day of such commitment; and such workman, servant, or labourer shall, for and during the whole time for which he or she shall be committed, be kept to hard labour in such gaol or house of correction, and shall not, under any pretence or by reason of any authority or order, be discharged therefrom until the expiration of the time for which such commitment shall have been made. Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend to repeal, alter, or affect any penalty or penalties on the maltster or maker of malt by whom or in whose service or premises any such workman, servant, or labourer as aforesaid shall be employed, by reason of any such offence or offences, but that every such maltster or maker of malt shall still remain and continue liable to all and singular such penalty or penalties, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding; unless such maltster or maker of malt shall forthwith prosecute such workman, servant, or labourer as aforesaid to conviction as aforesaid, and shall, before the recovery of any such penalty, produce to the commissioners of Excise if in England, or to the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise if in Scotland or Ireland, a certificate of such conviction, and of the workman, servant, or labourer so convicted having suffered or being in prison under such sentence, and suffering such punishment as aforesaid."

Sect. 47. "That a book, prepared with proper printed forms and titles for such purposes as hereinafter mentioned, shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every maltster or maker of malt; and that from and after the 10th day of October, 1827, no malt, in any quantity exceeding four bushels at one time, or if to a brewer of beer for sale, in any quantity whatsoever, shall be sold, sent out, or delivered by any maltster or maker of malt without a certificate, filled up and cut out progressively from the printed forms and titles contained in such book as aforesaid, signed by the maltster or maker of malt selling, sending out, or delivering the same, or by some person on his or her behalf, certifying the date, quantity, and quality of such malt (whether blown malt for porter or other malt), to whom sold or sent out, of what place, and that the duty had been duly charged thereon, and at what place and upon what maltster or maker of malt such charge had been made; and every such certificate shall be left with the person or persons to whom such malt shall be sold, sent out, or delivered; and every such maltster or maker of malt selling or sending out any such malt as aforesaid shall at the same time make a correspondent entry to such certificate, and containing the same particulars, in the book and part thereof from which such certificate shall have been cut; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall at all times keep such book as aforesaid, with all entries made therein, open and exposed in some entered building or place of and belonging to such maltster or maker of malt, for the perusal and inspection of the officers of Excise, and shall deliver up every such book as aforesaid to any officer of Excise demanding the same, and permit him to make any minute therein, as such officer shall think fit; and if any such maltster or maker of malt shall sell, send out, or deliver any malt in any quantity exceeding four bushels at one time, or if to a brewer of beer for sale, in any quantity whatsoever, without such certificate as aforesaid, or shall not so leave such certificate as aforesaid, or shall make use of the same a second time, or to accompany any other malt than the malt for which it was first cut out of such book as aforesaid, or shall not at the same time make a correspondent entry to such certificate as aforesaid, or shall not keep such book as aforesaid, or shall not deliver up any such book to any officer demanding the same, or permit him to make any minute therein, or shall convey away or conceal any such book, or shall destroy or tear out any leaf therefrom, or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or alter any entry therein, or make any false entry therein, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*; and all such malt, and the vessel or boat, cart, carriage, or other conveyance, horses or other cattle, removing or which shall have been used in the removal of such malt, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 48. "That every maltster or maker of malt shall daily enter in a book delivered to him or her by the officer of Excise for that purpose the total quantity of malt by such maltster or maker of malt sold or sent out during such day, in quantities not exceeding four bushels at one time, except to a brewer of beer for sale; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall at all times keep such book, with all entries made therein, open and exposed in some entered building or place of and belonging to such maltster or maker of malt, for the perusal and inspection of the officers of Excise, and shall deliver up every such book as aforesaid to any officer of Excise demanding the same, and permit him to make any minute therein, as such officer shall think fit; and if any such maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to make any such entry as aforesaid, or shall not keep such book as last aforesaid, or shall not deliver up any such book to any officer demanding the same, or permit him to make any minute therein, or shall convey away or conceal the same, or shall destroy or tear out any leaf thereof, or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or alter any entry therein, or make any false entry therein, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l*."

7 & 8 Geo. IV.,
c. 52.

Maltsters to make entry of the total quantity of malt sent out by them daily in quantities not exceeding four bushels at a time, under penalty of 50*l*.

Sect. 49. "That every factor or dealer in or seller of malt, and every brewer of beer for sale, and every distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, and every maker of vinegar or acetous acid for sale, and every trader subject to survey under the Excise laws, who shall receive into his or her custody or possession any malt with certificate, shall, within three days next after such malt shall have been so received as aforesaid, or when requested by any officer of Excise, deliver up every such certificate to the officer of Excise under whose survey such factor, dealer in or seller of malt, brewer of beer for sale, or distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, or maker of vinegar or acetous acid, or trader as aforesaid, shall then be, or to any officer requesting the same as aforesaid; and if any such factor, dealer in or seller of malt, brewer of beer, or distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, or maker of vinegar or acetous acid, or trader as aforesaid, who shall receive into his or her custody or possession any malt with certificate, shall not deliver up every such certificate as aforesaid, or if any person whosoever shall receive any malt from any maltster or maker of malt, exceeding at one time four bushels, or if a brewer of beer for sale shall receive from any maltster or maker of malt any quantity of malt, without such malt being accompanied by such certificate delivered therewith as aforesaid, every such factor, dealer in or seller of malt, brewer of beer, and distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, and makers of vinegar or acetous acid, and trader and person as aforesaid, so offending, shall for every such offence respectively forfeit and lose the sum of 40*s*. for every bushel of malt received with such certificate not so delivered up, or without certificate, or 100*l*., at the election of the attorney-general or person who shall inform or sue for the same."

Brewers, distillers, &c. receiving malt by certificate, to deliver up such certificate within three days to their surveying officer, or to any officer demanding the same, under penalty of 40*s*. for every bushel of malt, or 100*l*.

Sect. 50. "That every factor or dealer in or seller of malt shall make true and particular entry in writing of every building or place by him or her intended to be used for the storing or keeping of malt for sale, at the nearest office of Excise; and if any factor, dealer in or seller of malt, shall use any building or place for the storing or keeping of malt for sale, without having made such entry thereof as aforesaid, every factor, dealer in or seller of malt, so offending, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*. for every building or place so used without such entry thereof as aforesaid; and all malt which shall be found in any such building or place shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Factors to make entry of their places for keeping malt, under penalty of 100*l*. and forfeiture of malt found therein.

Sect. 51. "That a book, prepared with proper printed forms and titles for such purposes as hereinafter mentioned, shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every factor or dealer in or seller of malt; and that every factor or dealer in or seller of malt, when and so soon as he or she shall receive any malt into his or her custody or possession, shall enter in such book as aforesaid, and under the proper title prepared for such purpose, the quantity and quality (whether blown malt for porter or other malt) of such malt, the date when, and the person from whom, whether a maltster or maker of malt, dealer or factor, and of what place, the same shall have been received; and every such factor or dealer in or seller of malt shall at all times keep such book as aforesaid, with all entries made therein, open and exposed in some entered building or place of or belonging to such factor or dealer in or seller of malt, for the perusal and inspection of the officers of Excise, and shall deliver up every such book as aforesaid, and all certificates by him or her received with any malt, into his or her custody or possession, to any officer of Excise demanding the same, and permit any officer of Excise to make any minute in such book, as such officer shall think fit; and if any such factor or dealer in or seller of malt, when and so soon as he or she shall have received any malt into his or her custody or possession, neglect or refuse to enter the same in such book as aforesaid, or shall not keep such book as aforesaid, or shall not deliver up the same to, or permit the officer to make any minute therein, or shall not deliver up any certificate by him or her received with any malt into his or her custody or possession as aforesaid, or shall convey away or conceal any such book, or shall destroy or tear out any leaf therefrom, or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or alter any entry therein, or make any false entry therein, every such factor or dealer in or seller of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Books to be delivered to factors, and factors receiving malt without entering the same therein, or making false entries, &c., to forfeit 100*l*.

Maltsters, within ten days after 10th October yearly, to place all dry malt so that it may be conveniently gauged.

Sect. 52. "That every maltster or maker of malt, within ten days after the 10th day of October in every year, shall cast or place all the malt not then in operation or process of making into malt, in his or her custody or possession, into such level and regular form as may enable the officer of Excise conveniently to gauge and ascertain the true quantity thereof; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to cast or place all or any such malt as aforesaid, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Officers may demand the inspection of malt on its removal, with the certificate accompanying it.

Sect. 53. "That every person who shall at any time be found removing or attending and directing the removal of any malt from one part of the united kingdom to any other part thereof, shall, upon the demand of any officer of Excise, produce such malt, and the certificate accompanying, or which shall or ought to have accompanied, such malt on the removal thereof, to the officer demanding the same, to be by him examined and inspected, and compared with the quantity and quality of the malt so removing as aforesaid; and if any such person or persons shall, upon the demand of any officer of Excise, neglect or refuse to produce any such malt or certificate as aforesaid, or to suffer and permit such inspection, examination, and compare as aforesaid, or shall hinder or obstruct any officer of Excise therein, or in the due execution of his duty, or of any of the powers to such officer by this act granted, every such person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*; and in every such case all such malt, and the vessel or boat, cart, carriage, or other conveyance, horses or other cattle, removing or which shall have been used in the removal of such malt, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Penalty on refusal or obstruction, 200*l*.

Brewers in Ireland to make entry of all premises and utensils used for brewing or storing beer, under penalty of 100*l*.

Sect. 54. "That every brewer of beer for sale in Ireland shall make a true and particular entry in writing of every building, place, vessel, and utensil by him or her intended to be used in or for the brewing or keeping of worts or beer, at the nearest office of Excise, specifying in such entry the particular use or purpose for which such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall be intended to be used as aforesaid; and if any such brewer shall use any building, place, vessel, or utensil, without having made such entry thereof as aforesaid, or shall use any building, place, vessel, or utensil for any other or different use or purpose, in or for the brewing or keeping of worts or beer, than the particular use or purpose for which such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall have been entered, every such brewer so offending shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*. for every such building, place, vessel, or utensil as aforesaid; and all worts or beer which shall be found therein, and the casks or other vessels containing the same, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise. Provided always, that any entry made of any building, place, vessel, or utensil, for any more than one such particular use or purpose as aforesaid, shall be void to all intents and purposes."

Sect. 55. "That every such brewer shall, in the entry by him or her made of any building or place for the brewing of beer, specify and distinguish every building or place in which he or she shall intend to store or keep the malt to be used by him or her in the brewing of beer, and shall store and deposit all such malt in one or more of such entered buildings or places so specified and distinguished, and shall not use or employ any malt in the brewing of beer which shall not have been so stored and deposited in and taken from one or more of such buildings or places so specified and distinguished; and if any such brewer shall store or keep any malt to be used by him or her in the brewing of beer, in any building or place which shall not have been specified and distinguished in such entry as aforesaid, or shall use or employ any malt in the brewing of beer which shall not have been stored and deposited in and taken from an entered building or place so specified and distinguished as aforesaid, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200l.; and all malt which shall be found in any building or place entered or used for the brewing of beer, other than malt taken from one or more of such buildings or places so specified and distinguished, for the purpose of being employed in the brewing of beer, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 56. "That it shall be lawful for any officer of Excise, and any person in aid and assistance of such officer, at any time, either by night or day, to enter into, and remain so long as such officer may think fit, for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, in any building or place belonging to or used by any such brewer for the brewing or keeping of worts or beer, or for the storing or keeping of malt; and it shall be lawful for such officer of Excise, and any person in aid and assistance of such officer, to inspect any such building or place, and to take such account as such officer shall deem necessary of all worts, beer, and malt therein, and of all other matters and things, and of all vessels, utensils, goods, and materials belonging to or in anywise appertaining to the trade or business of such brewer; and if any such brewer shall oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer of Excise, or any person acting in the aid or assistance of such officer, in entering into or remaining in any such building or place as aforesaid, or in inspecting the same, or taking any account as aforesaid, or in the due execution of the duty of such officer, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200l."

Sect. 57. "That a book, prepared with proper and distinct columns for such purposes as hereinafter mentioned, shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every such brewer, and every such brewer shall, on the same day on which he or she shall store or deposit any malt in any building or place by him or her entered for the storing or keeping of malt to be used in the brewing of beer, write and enter in such book as aforesaid, and in the proper columns prepared for such purposes respectively, the day when and the number of bushels of malt which he or she shall have so stored or deposited as aforesaid, and the christian and surnames, and place or places of abode, of the person or persons, and whether maltsters or makers of malt, of whom he or she shall have received such malt as aforesaid; and every such brewer shall, on the same day on which he or she shall use any malt in the brewing of beer, and before the same shall be mashed, or any water or other liquor put thereto or mixed therewith, write and enter in such book as aforesaid, and in the proper columns prepared for such purposes respectively, the particular day and hour of the

Sect. 58. "That every such brewer shall, when and so often as he or she shall be thereunto required by any officer of Excise, level and cast all the malt in any building or place by him or her entered for the storing or keeping of malt to be used for the brewing of beer, in or into such regular form as may enable the officer of Excise easily and conveniently to gauge and ascertain the true quantity thereof; and if any such brewer, upon being thereunto required as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to level or cast any such malt in or into such form as aforesaid, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*; and if, upon taking an account of such malt as aforesaid, the quantity of such malt shall be found to exceed the quantity which such brewer ought to have had according to the entries contained in such book as aforesaid, in a greater proportion than one-twentieth part of the quantity of malt so found, every such brewer shall be deemed and taken to have received malt into the building or place by him or her entered for the storing or keeping of malt to be used for the brewing of beer, without having made such entry thereof in such book as aforesaid, and shall in such case be liable to the penalty by this act imposed for not making entry in that behalf in such book as aforesaid, and all such excess shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise; and if the quantity of such malt shall be found to be less than the quantity which such brewer ought to have had, according to the entries contained in such book as aforesaid, in such proportion as aforesaid, every such brewer shall be deemed and taken to have used malt in the brewing of beer without having made such entry thereof in such book as aforesaid, and shall in such last-mentioned case be liable to the penalty by this act imposed for not making entry in that behalf in such book as aforesaid."

Sect. 59. "That it shall be lawful for any such brewer, before any officer of Excise shall take an account of such malt as aforesaid, to enter up in such book as aforesaid all malt which he or she shall have received into any building or place by him or her entered for the storing or keeping of malt to be used for the brewing of beer, in the course of the day on which such account shall be proposed or intended to be taken; and if any dispute shall arise between any such brewer and the officer of Excise, respecting the true quantity of malt so taken an account of as aforesaid, such brewer shall be allowed immediately, and with all due diligence and despatch, to measure the same in the presence of such officer, by a just and correct bushel measure of the dimensions prescribed by law, to be provided by such brewer; and the quantity so ascertained shall be taken to be the true quantity of such malt, any thing in this act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 60. "That if any such brewer as aforesaid shall not use or consume in the brewing of beer the whole of the malt received into any building or place by him or her entered for the storing or keeping of malt intended to be used for the brewing of beer, or shall sell, send out, or deliver any such malt, or any worts by him or her brewed for the making of beer, to any person or persons whatsoever, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*; and all malt and worts so sold, sent out, or delivered as aforesaid shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise. Provided always, that if, upon application made by any such brewer to the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Ireland, it shall appear to them to be reasonable to allow such brewer, under the circumstances stated, to sell any malt received into any building or place by him or her entered for the storing or keeping of malt to be used for the brewing of beer, it shall be lawful for such commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise to grant an order under their hands to such brewer so to do; and every such order shall be sufficient authority to such brewer to sell, send out, or deliver such malt as shall be therein expressed, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 61. "That every such brewer shall, before he or she shall begin to mash any malt to be used for the brewing of beer, and before any water or other liquor shall be added thereto or be mixed therewith, give twenty-four hours' notice thereof in writing to the officer of Excise under whose survey such brewer shall then be (if the brewhouse of such brewer of beer shall be situated in a city or market town, or in the suburbs thereof, and forty-eight hours' notice thereof if not so situated), in which notice shall be expressed the day and particular hour of the day when, and the quantity of malt which such brewer shall intend to use for the brewing of beer as aforesaid; and if any such brewer shall begin to mash any malt to be used for the brewing of beer, or shall add to or mix with any malt any water or other liquor, without having given such notice as aforesaid, or if any such brewer shall mash any greater or less quantity of malt than the quantity of malt expressed in such notice, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 62. "That no malt which shall have been mashed by any such brewer shall be removed from the vessel or utensil in which the same shall have been mashed until the proper officer of Excise shall have gauged and taken an account thereof; and if any such brewer shall remove any such malt, or any part thereof, before the proper officer of Excise shall have gauged and taken an account thereof, or shall use any means, art, or contrivance, whereby the officer of Excise shall be deceived, or which shall be calculated to deceive such officer in gauging and taking an account thereof, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.* Provided always, that no such brewer shall incur the said last-mentioned penalty for or by reason of his having removed any such malt as aforesaid, after all the worts shall have been drawn off from the same, and without any officer of Excise having gauged and taken an account thereof, if such brewer shall, at the time of making entry in such book as aforesaid of the malt to be mashed, have specified in such book and entry as aforesaid the time for such officer to attend to take such gauge and account as aforesaid, and such officer shall not have attended for that purpose within an hour after the time so specified."

Sect. 63. "That every such brewer shall, before he or she shall cleanse or remove any beer from any fermenting tun, make a declaration in writing in such book so delivered to him or her as aforesaid, and opposite the quantity of malt therein entered as having been used by him or her for the brewing of beer, of the whole strength or quantity and quality of the beer brewed by such brewer from such malt, which declaration shall at the same time be signed by such brewer, or by his principal servant under whose direction or inspection such beer shall have been brewed; and if any such brewer shall cleanse or remove any beer from any fermenting tun without having made such declaration in writing as aforesaid, or shall

Sect. 64. "That if any such brewer shall receive into or have in his or her custody or possession, or use in brewing, or mix with or put into any worts or beer, any ingredients, preparation, or material whatsoever, in addition to or for or as a substitute for malt or hops, or for the purpose of diluting or darkening the colour of worts or beer, other than brown malt, ground or unground, as commonly used in brewing, every such brewer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*; and all such ingredients, preparations, and materials, and all worts or beer brewed therefrom, or with or into which the same shall have been mixed or put, and all vessels and utensils containing any such worts or beer, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 65. "That if any person shall sell or deliver to any such brewer as aforesaid, knowing him or her to be such brewer, or to any other person or persons for or on account of or for the use of such brewer, any ingredient, preparation, or material to be used in worts or beer, in addition to or as a substitute for malt or hops, or for the purpose of darkening the colour of worts or beer, other than brown malt, ground or unground, as commonly used in brewing, every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 66. "And whereas by a certain act of Parliament passed in the sixth year of the reign of His present Majesty, for providing equivalent rates of Excise duties, allowances, and drawbacks on beer and malt, and on spirits made in Scotland or Ireland, according to the measure of the new imperial standard gallon, a certain allowance is made of the duty charged upon spirits distilled from malt only; and it is expedient to make some further regulations in respect thereof, in order to prevent frauds being practised for the purpose of unduly obtaining such allowance; be it enacted, that from and after the 10th day of October, 1827, no such allowance as aforesaid shall be made in respect of any spirits made after the 10th day of October, 1827, from malt only, in Scotland or Ireland, unless the distiller or maker thereof claiming such allowance shall have distilled all such spirits from such malt only as shall have been made for the sole purpose of being consumed in distilling low wines and spirits from malt only, under the several rules, regulations, and provisions hereinbefore contained respecting maltsters or makers of malt, and under such further rules, regulations, and provisions as are hereinafter contained in that behalf."

Sect. 67. "That every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits who shall make malt shall make entry as a maltster or maker of malt for the sole purpose of being consumed in distilling low wines or spirits made from malt only, and shall provide and keep a proper and secure building or place at the premises by him or her entered as aforesaid for the purpose of making malt, and also at every distillery by him or her used for distilling low wines or spirits made from malt only, to be approved of in writing by and under the hands of the collector and supervisor of Excise of the collection and district in which any such building or place shall be situated, for securing therein the malt by him or her made, to be used and consumed in his or her distillery or distilleries as aforesaid; and the said collector or supervisor shall provide and affix proper locks and fastenings thereto, at the expense of such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits making entry as aforesaid, who shall be permitted, if he or she shall think proper so to do, to provide and affix other locks and fastenings thereto, the keys of such last-mentioned locks and fastenings to be kept by him or her; and if any such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits making any such entry as aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to pay for any lock, key, or fastening previded and affixed by such collector or supervisor to any such building or place entered by such distiller for the purpose aforesaid, or shall wilfully destroy, damage, or injure any such lock, key, or fastening, or shall by any art, device, or contrivance open, take off, or remove any such lock or fastening, or make any way or entrance into any such building or place, every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, making any such entry, as aforesaid, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 68. "That every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits making entry as and for the purpose aforesaid shall give twelve hours' notice in writing to the officer of Excise under whose survey such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits shall then be of the day and particular hour of the day when he or she shall intend to take any malt off the kiln; and if any such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits shall take any malt off the kiln without having given such notice as aforesaid, every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of fifty pounds; and all malt taken off the kiln without such notice as aforesaid shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 69. "That when and so soon as any malt made by such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits making entry as and for the purpose aforesaid shall be fully dried, the same (screened or unscreened, as such maltster or maker of malt may think fit,) shall, in the presence of an officer of Excise, forthwith be measured; and if any quantity be found by such admeasurement over and above the quantity found by the last gauge taken of the corn or grain of which such malt shall have been made whilst in operation or process of making into malt, such excess shall be charged with duty; and all such malt shall be carried by such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, in the presence of the officer, into and locked up and secured in one or more of such buildings or places by him or her provided as aforesaid, at the premises by him or her entered as aforesaid for the purpose of making malt; and if any such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits shall neglect or refuse to cause all such malt as aforesaid to be measured, and carried or locked up or secured as aforesaid, every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 70. "That books, prepared with proper columns for such purposes as hereinafter mentioned, shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits making entry as and for the purpose aforesaid, to be kept by him or her at the building or place by him or her provided as aforesaid, at the premises by him or her entered as aforesaid for making malt for the purpose aforesaid, and at every distillery by him or her used for distilling low wines or spirits made from malt only; and every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits shall, whenever he or she shall receive any malt into any such building or place by him or her provided as aforesaid, or shall remove or take away any malt out of any such building or place to any other building or place, to be used or consumed in his or her distillery, forthwith write and enter in such book as aforesaid, and in the proper columns prepared for that purpose, the particular day and hour of the day when, and the quantity of malt in bushels which he or she shall have received into or taken or removed out of such building or place as aforesaid; and if any such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits shall receive any malt into or shall take or remove any malt out of any such building or place so provided as aforesaid, and shall not write and make entry thereof in such book as aforesaid, or shall not so keep such book as aforesaid, or shall not deliver up any such book to any officer of Excise demanding the same, or permit the officer to make any minute therein, or shall conceal or convey away the same, or destroy or tear out any leaf therefrom, or cancel, hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. to be less than the quantity which such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits ought to have had in such building or place, according to the entries contained in such book as aforesaid, in such proportion as aforesaid, every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits shall be deemed and taken to have removed and taken away malt out of such building or place without having made such entry in such book as aforesaid, and shall in every such case of excess or deficiency be liable to the penalty by this act before imposed for not making entry in such book as aforesaid."

Sect. 73. "That if any such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits making entry as and for the purpose aforesaid shall take or remove any malt out of any such building or place so by him or her provided as aforesaid, without the knowledge or presence of the proper officer of Excise, or shall not use all the barley by him other received at any malthouse or premises entered for such purpose as aforesaid, by making the same into malt for the purpose aforesaid, and consume all such malt by him or her made as aforesaid in his or her distillery or distilleries in distilling low wines or spirits made from malt only, or shall sell, send out, or deliver any barley or any of such malt from any such malthouse, or any malt from such distillery, or building or place there, or convey away, hide, or conceal the same, every such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and all such barley or malt so taken or removed, and all such barley or malt so sold or sent out or delivered, or hid or concealed as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 74. "That no such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits shall, from and after the said 10th day of October, 1827, be allowed or entitled to claim any part of the allowance granted by the said recited act passed in the sixth year of the reign of His present Majesty, for or in respect of any spirits by him or her distilled or made after that day from malt, except for spirits distilled from such malt only as shall have been made at malting premises entered for the purpose only aforesaid, and which shall have been charged with duty, and which shall have been stored and entered at such distillery in such book as aforesaid, and afterwards taken from such building or place so provided as aforesaid at such distillery, to be used in the distillery of such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, and at the time of being so taken from such building or place shall have been entered in such book as aforesaid, and shall have been actually used in making wort or wash distilled in such distillery from such malt only; and that every such distiller shall deliver such account and make such declaration as are provided by an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of His present Majesty, for granting certain duties of Excise upon spirits distilled from corn or grain in Scotland and Ireland, save and except as to mashing permits, which, from the day and year above mentioned, shall be no longer required, and shall be subject to all other the regulations and provisions contained or referred to in the said last-recited act as to malt used by distillers or makers of low wines or spirits for the distillation of spirits from malt only, in Scotland or Ireland, and as to the payment of such allowance, except so far as is altered by or shall be inconsistent with the regulations of this act."

Sect. 75. "That it shall and may be lawful for any person in the united kingdom, other than such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits, to make entry, as a maltster or maker of malt, of premises for the purpose of making malt to be used and consumed only by distillers or makers of low wines or spirits in Scotland or Ireland, in distilling low wines or spirits made from malt only, under and subject to the same rules, regulations, and provisions to which such distillers of low wines or spirits themselves, making entry as and for the purpose aforesaid, are subjected; and it shall and may be lawful for any such distiller or maker of low wines or spirits to obtain and use such malt in distilling low wines or spirits made from malt only, and to claim and be entitled to and have the allowance aforesaid in respect of such spirits, any thing

By 9 Geo. IV., c. 45, s. 1, intituled An act to amend and to make perpetual, and to extend to the whole of the united kingdom, certain provisions contained in several acts for regulating the rectification, compounding, dealing in, or retailing of spirits, and for preventing private distillation in Scotland, and to provide for the payment of the duty on malt used in making of spirits from malt only; "That from and after the 10th day of October, 1828, so much and such part of the said hereinbefore recited act of the sixth year aforesaid, intituled An act to repeal the duties payable in respect of spirits distilled in England, and of licences for distilling, rectifying, or compounding such spirits, and for the sale of spirits, and to impose other duties in lieu thereof, and to provide other regulations for the collection of the said duties, and for the sale of spirits, and for the warehousing of such spirits, without payment of duty of exportation, and of the several enactments, regulations, provisions, penalties, and forfeitures in the said act contained, as are in force in respect of or in relation to the rectification and compounding of spirits, and to the rectifiers and compounders of and to the dealers in and retailers of spirits, except as to the amount of licence duties payable by such traders respectively, shall extend and be applied to, and shall be established, observed, executed, and put in force in and throughout Scotland and Ireland respectively, and in and throughout the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in such and the like manner to all intents and purposes as if the said recited act had in such respects been originally extended to the whole of the united kingdom; any thing in the said act, or in any other act or acts, to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

Sect. 2. "That so much of the hereinbefore recited act of the third year of His Majesty as shall be in force at the time of the passing of this act shall be and the same is hereby continued and shall be and remain in full force until the 10th day of October, 1828; and that from and after the said 10th day of October, 1828, so much of the said act of the said third year, and the several regulations, provisions, penalties, and forfeitures therein contained, as relate to the prevention of private distillation in Scotland, shall be and the same is and are hereby made perpetual; and that so much of the said act as shall be in force as aforesaid, relating to the rectifying and compounding and to the rectifiers and compounders of spirits, not inconsistent with or repugnant to any of the provisions of the said first-recited act of the sixth year aforesaid, shall be and the same is and are hereby made perpetual, and shall be and the same are hereby extended and applied to, and shall be established, observed, executed, and put in force in and throughout England and Ireland, and in and throughout the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the same manner to all intents and purposes as if the said act of the said third year had in such respects been originally extended to the whole of the united kingdom; any thing in the said act or in any other act or acts to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 3. Duty on malt to be paid within fourteen days after entry made.

Sect. 5. "That this act, or any of the provisions thereof, may be amended, altered, or repealed by any act or acts to be passed in this present session of parliament."

Act may be altered this session.

By 11 Geo. IV., c. 17, intituled "An act to alter and amend an act of the seventh and eighth years of His present Majesty, for consolidating and amending the laws of Excise on malt made in the united kingdom, and for amending the laws relating to brewers in Ireland, and the malt allowance on spirits in Scotland and Ireland, and passed 29th May, 1830, after reciting the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 52, and that it was expedient to alter and amend the said act; it was therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt, who shall have made or who shall make entry in manner by the said recited act required of any room or place for the keeping of malt therein, or for the keeping of corn or grain to be made into malt, to make use of any such room or place so entered for keeping malt, and to store and keep therein corn or grain to be made into malt, and to make use of such room or place which shall be so entered for keeping corn or grain, and to keep and store therein malt or any other corn, grain, or seeds; any thing in the said act to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided always, that all malt, corn, grain, and seeds be kept separate and apart, so as to prevent the mixing of any such corn, barley, or other grain or seeds with malt: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend to authorize or allow any distiller or maltster in Scotland or Ireland, who shall have made or who shall make entry as a maker of malt for the sole purpose of being consumed in distilling low wines or spirits from malt only, to keep any corn or grain in any room or place entered for keeping, depositing, or storing malt, or to keep or deposit any malt in any room or place entered for storing corn or grain."

11 Geo. 4, c. 17.

One room may be used for keeping malt and for keeping grain, if separated by a partition.

Sect. 3. "That it shall be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt, with the approbation of the commissioners of Excise, and under such regulations as the said commissioners shall order and direct, to make use of any cistern which shall have been made and constructed and in use before the passing of the said recited act, notwithstanding such cistern shall not have a clear open space of forty-eight inches at the least above every part of such cistern, so that there be sufficient head-room and light and means to enable the officers of Excise safely and conveniently to have access to and to gauge the corn and grain contained in every part of such cistern; and the certificate in and by the said act required shall, with such approbation as aforesaid, be granted for the use of such cistern, and for any maltster or maker of malt, under such approbation and regulations as aforesaid, to make use of any couch frame made and constructed before the passing of the said recited act, notwithstanding such couch frame shall not have three sides thereof permanently made or constructed, provided that the moveable sides of such couch shall be made with boards or planks of the substance of two inches in thickness at the least, and supported on the outside in every part thereof, so that the frame retain the same dimensions in every part when filled with grain as when empty."

Sect. 4. "That every officer of the Excise who shall take an account of and charge the duty of Excise on any corn or grain making into malt at the malthouse or premises of any maltster or maker of malt, and make a return thereof to the commissioners of Excise, under the powers and directions of the said recited act, shall in all cases when the minutes of the entries made by him in taking such account shall not appear on the book or paper called the specimen paper, left at the premises of the maltster or maker of malt, give a true copy of such charge in writing under his hand to the maltster whose corn or grain making into malt shall be so charged, if such copy shall be demanded in writing by or on behalf of such maltster or maker of malt, notwithstanding such demand may not be made at the time of taking such account."

Sect. 5. "That so much of the said recited act as directs, that there shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every maltster or maker of malt a book prepared for such purposes as thereafter mentioned, called a barley book, to be kept in some public and open part of his or her entered premises, for the inspection of the officers of Excise, together with so much and all such parts of the said recited act, and all clauses, provisions, regulations, and enactments in the said act contained, which direct or require entries of barley received, wetted, or sent out by any maltster or maker of malt, or any other entries, to be made in such book, or which direct or require any maltster or maker of malt to deliver to the officer or officers of Excise any account or accounts of his or her stock of barley, or to level or place the barley in the custody or possession of any maltster or maker of malt in such form as may enable the officers of Excise to gauge and ascertain the quantity thereof, and which direct, authorize, or require any officer of Excise to take an account of the barley in the stock, custody, or possession of any maltster or maker of malt, and all penalties and forfeitures in and by the said act imposed, for any breach or neglect of any of the said clauses, provisions, regulations, or enactments, or for any excess or deficiency in any quantity of barley in the stock, custody, or possession of any maltster or maker of malt, shall be and the same is and are hereby repealed."

§ ct. 6. “ That so much of the said recited act as enacts, that every maltster or maker of malt, before beginning to wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt, shall give to the officer of Excise under whose survey such maltster or maker of malt shall then be twenty-four hours’ notice at least in writing, if the malthouse of such maltster or maker of malt shall be situated in any city, or in the suburbs of any city, or in any market-town, and forty-eight hours’ notice at least in writing, if such malthouse shall not be so situated, of the day and particular hour of the day when such maltster or maker of malt intends to wet or steep corn or grain to be made into malt, and of the quantity of corn or grain in bushels to be then wet or steeped; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall begin to wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt, without giving such notice as aforesaid, or shall wet or steep any greater or less quantity of corn or grain (exceeding the proportion of one in twenty) than the quantity of corn or grain expressed in such notice, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and in case any maltster or maker of malt shall not, pursuant to any such notice as aforesaid, begin to wet or steep the corn or grain mentioned in such notice, and cover the whole thereof with water, at the day and hour mentioned in such notice, or within three hours next after the expiration of such hour, every such notice shall be and is hereby declared to be null and void; and every such maltster or maker of malt, before he shall begin to wet or steep such corn or grain, shall give fresh notice thereof according to the provisions of this act, under pain of such penalty as last aforesaid. Provided always, that no maltster or maker of malt shall be subject to the said last-mentioned penalty for or by reason of his or her wetting or steeping any less quantity of corn or grain than the quantity of corn or grain expressed in such notice as aforesaid, if such maltster or maker of malt shall be prevented from wetting or steeping the quantity of corn or grain expressed in such notice by want of barley, and shall give notice thereof to the proper officer of Excise, by entering, with such wetting or steeping, in the barley book, the cause and extent of such prevention as aforesaid. Provided also, that no maltster or maker of malt shall be subject to the said last-mentioned penalty for or by reason of his or her wetting or steeping any greater or less quantity of corn or grain exceeding the proportion aforesaid than the quantity of corn or grain expressed in such notice as aforesaid, if such maltster or maker of malt shall show to the satisfaction of the commissioners of Excise, or commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, that the same occurred by accident or oversight, and without intentional disregard of any of the provisions of this act in that behalf contained,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

Sect. 7. “ That every maltster or maker of malt, before beginning to wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt, shall give to the officer of Excise under whose survey such maltster or maker of malt shall then be twenty-four hours’ notice at least in writing, if the malthouse of such maltster or maker of malt shall be situated in any city, or any market town, or in the suburbs thereof, and if such malthouse shall not be so situated, forty-eight hours’ notice at least in writing of the day and particular hour of the day when such maltster or maker of malt intends to wet or steep corn or grain to be made into malt; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall begin to wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt without giving such notice as aforesaid, or shall wet or steep any corn or grain to be made into malt before the particular hour specified in such notice, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and in case any maltster or maker of malt shall not, pursuant to any such notice as aforesaid, begin to wet or steep the corn or grain mentioned in such notice, and cover the whole thereof with water, at the day and hour mentioned in such notice, or before the expiration of three hours from the hour mentioned in such

"That there shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise, to every maltster or maker of malt, a book prepared for such purposes as hereinafter mentioned, to be kept by such maltster or maker of malt in some public and open part of his or her entered premises, for the inspection of the officers of Excise; and every maltster and maker of malt shall, on the same day on which he shall steep any corn or grain to be made into malt, and within three hours after any corn or grain shall have been covered with water for the purpose of wetting or steeping the same to be made into malt, enter in such book, and in the proper columns, to be prepared for such purposes respectively, a true and particular account of the quantity in bushels of the corn or grain so wetted or steeped, and shall enter against and immediately opposite to every such entry the particular day and hour of the day on and at which such corn or grain was so wetted or steeped and covered with water, and shall on the next survey of the officer of Excise produce to such officer the said book, with the said entries therein, for his information; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall not keep such book, or shall neglect or refuse to make any such entry as aforesaid, or to produce such book with such entries therein to the officer of Excise on his next survey, or shall convey away or conceal the same, or shall destroy or tear out any leaf thereof, or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or alter any entry therein, or make any false entry therein, or shall refuse to permit any officer of Excise at any time to inspect such book, or to make any minute therein, or to take any extract therefrom, as to such officer shall seem meet, or to remove or take away such book, leaving a new book for the like purpose in lieu thereof, or if any maltster or maker of malt shall have wetted or steeped any greater or less quantity of corn or grain than shall be stated in the entry thereof in the said book, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.*: provided that no maltster or maker of malt shall be subject to the said penalty for or by reason of his having steeped or wetted any greater or less quantity of corn or grain than shall be stated in the entry thereof, if the quantity wetted shall not be greater or less than the quantity entered in the proportion of one bushel in twenty."

Provision that maltsters giving notice to steep for sixty-five hours shall begin to wet between eight in the evening and eleven at night repealed.

Sect. 9. "That so much of the said recited act as enacts, that it shall be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt, who shall give such further notice of his or her intention to continue the corn or grain by him or her to be wet or steeped covered with water for the space of sixty-five hours, as hereafter mentioned, to begin to wet or steep such corn or grain to be made into malt at any time between the hours of eight of the clock in the evening and eleven of the clock at night, and if any maltster or maker of malt, who shall have given such further notice as aforesaid, shall begin to wet or steep any such corn or grain as aforesaid, to be made into malt, at any other time than as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Provision that corn shall be kept in the cistern not exceeding fifty-five nor less than forty hours repealed.

Sect. 10. "That so much of the said recited act as enacts, that every maltster or maker of malt shall continue the corn or grain by him or her wet or steeped in the cistern to be made into malt covered with water for a space of time not exceeding fifty-five and not less than forty hours from the time of such corn or grain being first wet or steeped, and if any maltster or maker of malt shall continue such corn or grain, or any part thereof, covered with water for any space of time exceeding fifty-five hours, or shall drain or draw off the water from any such corn or grain before the expiration of forty hours from the time of such corn or grain being first wet or steeped, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 11. "That so much of the said recited act as enacts, that where any maltster or maker of malt shall intend to continue the corn or grain to be wet or steeped covered with water for the space of sixty-five hours every such maltster or maker of malt shall, in the notice in writing by him or her required to be given to the officer of Excise under whose survey such maltster or maker of malt shall then be, of the day and particular hour of the day when such maltster or maker of malt shall intend to wet or steep corn or grain to be made into malt, and of the quantity of corn or grain in bushels to be then wet or steeped, give further notice that it is his or her intention to continue the same covered with water for the space of sixty-five hours from the time of such corn or grain being first wet or steeped; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall in such case continue such corn or grain covered with water for and until the expiration of sixty-five hours as aforesaid; and if any maltster or maker of malt, who shall have given such further notice as aforesaid, shall not continue such corn or grain covered with water for and until the expiration of sixty-five hours as aforesaid, or shall continue the same covered with water for any time after the expiration of sixty-five hours as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 12. "That so much of the said recited act as provides and enacts, that it shall be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt, between the 1st day of March and the 1st day of November in every year, to drain or draw off the water once from any corn or grain by him or her wet or steeped in the cistern to be made into malt, before the expiration of the time for which corn or grain is by this act required to be kept covered with water, without incurring any penalty for so doing, provided such maltster or maker of malt shall, in the notice by him or her given of his or her intention to wet or steep such corn or grain to be made into malt by this act before required, express his or her intention to drain or draw off the water from such corn or grain as aforesaid, and the particular day and hour of the day, between the hours of eight of the clock in the morning and two of the clock in the afternoon, when such maltster or maker of malt shall intend so to do, provided always that such corn or grain be again completely covered with water before the expiration of one hour from the time of the water being begun to be drained or drawn off as aforesaid, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 13. "That every maltster or maker of malt shall continue the corn or grain by him or her wet or steeped in the cistern, to be made into malt, covered with water for a space of time not less than forty hours from the time of such corn or grain being first wet or steeped; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall drain or draw off the water from any such corn or grain before the expiration of forty hours from the time of such corn or grain being first wet or steeped, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 14. "Provided always, that it shall be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt to draw off the water from any corn or grain by him or her wet or steeped in the cistern, to be made into malt, once during the time such corn or grain shall be continued in steep, although the same shall not then have been covered with water for the space of forty hours, without any penalty being incurred for so doing, provided such maltster or maker of malt shall, in the notice by him or her given of his or her intention to wet or steep corn or grain to be made into malt, by this act required, express his or her intention to drain or draw off the water from such corn or grain as aforesaid, and the particular day and hour of the day, between the hours of eight of the clock in the morning and two of the clock in the afternoon, when such maltster or maker of malt shall intend so to do; provided always, that such corn or grain be again completely covered with

11 Geo. IV., c. 17.

Provision that maltsters, having given notice to steep for sixty-five hours, shall empty their cistern only between one in the forenoon and four in the afternoon, repealed.

Corn may be emptied from the couch frame at the expiration of twenty-six hours, but to be deemed in couch for thirty hours.

When any increase shall be found on turning out any grain from the couch, such increase not to be deemed conclusive of treading, unless it shall amount to six bushels and one quarter in every one hundred bushels.

water before the expiration of one hour from the time of the water being begun to be drained or drawn off as aforesaid; any thing in the said recited act or this act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 15. "That so much of the said recited act as enacts, that it shall not be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt, who shall have given such further notice of his or her intention to continue the corn or grain by him or her wet or steeped covered with water for the space of sixty-five hours, as before mentioned, to empty or take such corn or grain, or any part thereof, from or out of the cistern at any other time than between the hours of one of the clock in the forenoon and four of the clock in the afternoon; and if any maltster or maker of malt, who shall have given such further notice as aforesaid, shall empty or take such corn or grain as aforesaid, or any part thereof, from or out of the cistern at any other time than aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 16. "That no maltster or maker of malt shall be liable to any penalty or forfeiture by the said recited act imposed, for or by reason of any corn or grain not being at any time of the year kept and continued laid in the couch frame or frames into which such corn or grain shall have been emptied for the space of thirty hours or any longer period than twenty-six hours from the time of its being emptied from or out of the cistern or cisterns in which the same shall have been wetted or steeped, but all such corn or grain shall nevertheless in all cases where the same shall not have been gauged and taken account of by the proper officer of Excise within twenty-six hours from the time of such corn or grain being emptied out of the cistern or cisterns, and whilst the same was kept in the couch frame, at all times of the year, be taken and deemed to be in couch, and shall be gauged and taken account of by the officer of Excise as in couch for the space of thirty hours from the time of its being emptied from or out of the cistern or cisterns, whether such corn or grain shall be continued in the couch frame or frames into which the same shall have been emptied, or shall be removed after the expiration of the said twenty-six hours and before the expiration of thirty hours, from such couch frame or frames, to the floor."

Sect. 17. "And whereas in and by the said recited act it is lawful for any officer of Excise who shall have reason to believe or who shall suspect that the corn or grain making into malt in any cistern or couch frame has been trodden or forced together, and for any person or persons in aid and assistance of such officer, in the presence of such maltster or maker of malt, or of his servant, if such maltster or servant shall think fit to be present, to turn over all such corn or grain, either by throwing all such corn or grain from and out of the cistern or couch frame, and returning the same into the cistern or couch frame from which it shall have been thrown, and laying the same level again therein, or by turning over all such corn or grain in such cistern or couch frame, and laying the same level again therein, or by throwing out any part of such corn or grain from such cistern or couch frame, and turning over so much thereof as shall be left remaining therein, and returning so much of such corn or grain as shall have been thrown out into the cistern or couch frame from which the same shall have been thrown, and laying the whole of such corn or grain level again in such cistern or couch frame, as to such officer shall seem fit; and if any increase shall be found in the gauge or quantity of such corn or grain after being turned over and laid level again in the cistern or couch frame in any such manner as aforesaid, over and above the former gauge in any greater proportion than that of one bushel in every twenty bushels of such corn or grain, the increase so found is in and by the said recited act to be deemed conclusive evidence that such corn or grain had been trodden or forced together: and whereas it may happen that when corn or grain has been emptied from the cistern into the couch frame more than twelve hours the increase thereof from the swell may amount to one bushel in twenty without fraud ; and it is expedient to alter such proportion, so far as respects such corn or grain in the couch frame ; be it therefore enacted, that when any officer of Excise shall in manner authorized by the said recited act turn over and level again in any couch frame any corn or grain after the expiration of twelve hours from the time when such corn or grain shall have been emptied from the cistern or cisterns into such couch frame, and any increase shall be found in the gauge or quantity of such corn or grain after being turned over and laid level again in the couch frame in any such manner as aforesaid, over and above the former gauge, no such increase shall be deemed conclusive evidence that such corn or grain had been trodden or forced together, unless such increase shall be in any greater proportion than six bushels and one quarter of a bushel in every one hundred bushels of such corn or grain."

Sect. 18. " And whereas in and by the recited act every maltster and maker of malt is restricted from wetting, watering, or sprinkling any corn or grain making into malt, before the expiration of twelve days or two hundred and eighty-eight hours after the same shall have been emptied or taken from or out of the cistern : and whereas it is expedient to allow, under certain regulations, maltsters and makers of malt to water and sprinkle corn or grain making into malt, before the expiration of twelve days or two hundred and eighty-eight hours ; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any maltster or maker of malt who shall have kept and continued any corn or grain making into malt covered with water in the cistern for the full space of fifty hours from the time of such corn or grain being first wetted or steeped, and who shall not at the same time have in the same malthouse any other corn or grain on the floor which shall been* kept and covered with water for any less space than fifty hours from the time of the same being first wet or steeped, to wet, water, or sprinkle any such corn or grain at any time after the expiration of eight days or one hundred and ninety-two hours after the same shall have been emptied or taken out of the cistern. Provided always, that every maltster or maker of malt who shall wet, water, or sprinkle any corn or grain making into malt contrary to the regulations aforesaid shall be subject and liable to the penalty in and by the said recited act imposed for wetting, watering, or sprinkling corn or grain before the expiration of twelve days or two hundred and eighty-eight hours."

Sect. 19. " That nothing in the said act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to render liable any maltster or maker of malt to any penalty by the said act imposed for not putting or placing the sides or outward edges of any floor, or any quantity of corn or grain making into malt, in straight lines, as required by the said recited act, so that all such floors or quantities of corn or grain making into malt shall be deposited and left and placed in such form that they may be conveniently gauged, and that they be levelled as required by the said recited act."

Sect. 20. " And that so much of the said recited act as enacts, that whenever the duty upon malt shall be charged by gauge of the corn or grain taken while the same is in a state of operation, or in process of making into malt, such allowances shall be made upon such gauges as are hereinafter mentioned : upon every gauge thereof taken by the officer of Excise (a) in the cistern wherein the corn or grain is wetting or steeping to be made into malt, or in the couch frame into which the corn or grain shall have been emptied, during the period respectively for which corn or grain is by this act before required to be kept and continued in such cistern and couch frame respectively, an allowance shall be made by such officer of one-fifth part of the whole quantity of the corn or grain so found by such gauge ; and upon every gauge taken by the officer of Excise of such corn or grain on the floor, after the expiration of such periods of time respectively as aforesaid, and before the expiration of ninety-six hours from the time when such corn or grain was emptied or taken from or out of the cistern, an allowance shall be made by such officer of one-third part of the whole quantity of the corn or grain so found by such gauge as last aforesaid; and upon every gauge afterwards taken by the officer of Excise of such corn or grain before the same shall be dried off upon and removed from the kiln, an allowance shall be made by such officer of one-half of the whole quantity of such corn or grain so found by such gauge as last aforesaid; and the duty of Excise upon malt, when charged upon the corn or grain in a state of operation, or in process of making into malt as aforesaid, shall be charged upon the best of the several gauges so taken as aforesaid, after such allowances shall have been so made thereon respectively as before mentioned. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for any officer of Excise to take an account of all the malt made by any maltster or maker of malt, after the same shall have been taken or thrown off from the kiln, and whilst the same shall remain in the custody or possession of the maltster or maker thereof; and if, upon taking such account as last aforesaid, such officer shall find the quantity of malt so taken account of to exceed the quantity before charged with duty, according to the best gauge thereof when taken in operation as aforesaid, such officer shall in every such case (making an allowance after the rate of eighteen bushels in every one hundred bushels of blown malt for porter) charge the duty upon all such excess; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

Grain which has been steeped fifty hours, if there be no other grain in the house which has been steeped for any less time, may be sprinkled.

Allowances to be made on charging malt by gauge.

Sect. 21. “That whenever the duty upon malt shall be charged by gauge of the corn or grain taken whilst the same is in a state of operation, or in process of making into malt, such allowances shall be made upon such gauges as are hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, upon every gauge thereof taken by the officer of Excise in the cistern wherein the corn or grain is wetting or steeping to be made into malt, during the time which such corn or grain shall be kept and continued in such cistern, or in the couch frame into which such corn or grain shall be emptied, or on the floor, during the period for which such corn or grain is by this act before required to be kept and continued in such couch frame, and directed to be deemed in couch, and gauged and taken account of as in such couch, an allowance shall be made by such officer of seventeen bushels and one half bushel in every one hundred bushels of the whole quantity of the corn or grain so found by such gauge; and upon every gauge taken by the officer of Excise of such corn or grain on the floor after the expiration of twenty-six hours, if such corn or grain shall have been previously gauged and taken account of in the couch frame, and if such corn or grain shall not have been so previously gauged, then after the expiration of thirty hours, and before the expiration of seventy-two hours from the time when such corn or grain was emptied or taken from or out of the cistern, an allowance shall be made of one-third of the whole quantity of the corn or grain so found by such gauge as last aforesaid; and upon every gauge afterwards taken by the officer of Excise of such corn or grain before the same shall be dried, an allowance shall be made by such officer of one-half of the whole quantity of such corn or grain so found by such gauge as last aforesaid; and the duty of Excise on malt, when charged upon the corn or grain in a state of operation, or in process of making into malt, as aforesaid, shall be charged on the best of the several gauges so taken as aforesaid after such allowances shall have been so made thereon respectively as aforesaid.”

Sect. 22. “And that so much of the said act as provides and enacts, that whenever any officer of Excise shall propose to measure or take an account of malt, on the same being taken or thrown off from the kiln, and whilst the same is hot, and contains the commings or roots thereof, and is in the same state as the same has been taken or thrown off from the kiln, such officer shall in such account make an allowance of twelve per centum for the heat, commings, or roots, and unclean state of such malt, or shall, at the election of such officer, require such malt to be forthwith screened and cleaned for the purpose of being measured and taken account thereof without such allowance; and in case such maltster or maker of malt shall, on such request of the officer to screen such malt, desire time so to do, it shall be lawful for such officer to lock up all such malt in a safe and secure room, to be provided by such maltster or maker of malt; and no such maltster or maker of malt shall be entitled to any such allowance as aforesaid, or to screen such malt before the same is measured or taken account of as aforesaid, unless he shall forthwith remove and deposit all such malt in such room, and keep the same therein so locked up by the officer of Excise, safely and securely, and unmixed with any other malt whatsoever, until such maltster or maker of malt shall give forty-eight hours' notice to the proper officer of Excise to unlock such room, and shall thereupon screen and clean such malt for the purpose of being measured and taken account of by the officer, without such allowance as aforesaid. Provided also, that on any officer taking an account of the malt in the stock, custody, or possession of any maltster or maker of malt, on or after the 10th day of October in every year, as hereinafter mentioned, every such officer shall make an allowance to such maltster or maker of malt of one bushel in twenty bushels of such malt, for any variation having occurred therein whilst in stocks; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

Sect. 23. “ And that so much of the said act as enacts, that every maltster or maker of malt shall, monthly and every month, make a true entry in writing of all the malt by him or her made within such period as aforesaid, at the office of Excise within the limits whereof such malt shall have been made; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to make entry as aforesaid, or shall make any false entry in that behalf, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

Entry required to be made monthly repealed.

Sect. 24. “ And that so much of the said recited act as enacts, that every maltster and maker of malt shall, within the space of fourteen days next after he or she shall have or ought to have made such entry as aforesaid, pay and clear off all the duties which shall have been charged upon and which shall remain unpaid by such maltster or maker of malt, for or in respect of any malt by him or her made, unless such maltster or maker of malt shall have given, and shall maintain and renew, upon the death or insolvency of any party thereto, security, approved of by the commissioners of Excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise in Scotland or Ireland respectively, or the person or persons who shall be appointed or employed by them respectively for that purpose, by bond in double the value of the duties which such commissioners of Excise, or commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of Excise, or such person or persons as aforesaid, shall judge likely to arise or be charged upon and become due from such maltster or maker of malt within any five months, for the due payment at the end of every four months from the day on which such maltster or maker of malt shall or ought to have made such entry as aforesaid, of all such duties and sum and sums of money as shall arise or be charged on or become due from such maltster or maker of malt; and if any maltster or maker of malt who shall not have given such security, or who shall not maintain and renew such security as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to pay and clear off such duties within the space of fourteen days as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt as last aforesaid, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose double the sum for which such duties so neglected or refused to be paid or cleared off as aforesaid shall amount to,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

reign of His present Majesty, intituled An act to amend and to make perpetual, and to extend to the whole of the united kingdom, certain provisions contained in several acts for regulating the rectification, compounding, dealing in, or retailing of spirits, and for preventing private distillation, in Scotland, and to provide for the payment of the duty on malt used in making of spirits from malt only, as enacts, that all duty charged upon or in respect of any malt which shall be made to be used and consumed only by distillers or makers of low wines or spirits in Scotland or Ireland, in distilling low wines or spirits made from malt only, shall be paid and cleared off by the maltster or maker of such malt within the space of fourteen days next after such maltster or maker of malt shall have or ought to have made such entry, as in the said therein-recited act is mentioned, whether any bond or security for the payment of such duties shall or shall not have been given pursuant to the said recited act, on pain that every such maltster or maker of malt shall forfeit double the amount or sum of such duties so neglected or refused to be paid within the said space of fourteen days, any thing in the said recited act to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 26. "And that the officer of Excise under whose survey any maltster or maker of malt shall be, or any other officer appointed so to do, shall and he is hereby required, from time to time, at the expiration of every six weeks, or at such other times as the commissioners of Excise shall direct, to make out and deliver to the collector of Excise, or to such person or persons as the commissioners of Excise shall appoint to receive the same, an account or return in writing of the quantity of malt made by such maltster or maker of malt, and for which he shall have become chargeable with duty, in such preceding six weeks or period, and of the duty payable thereon; and the return or account of such officer shall be a charge on every such maltster or maker of malt; and such maltster or maker of malt shall pay and clear off the duty appearing by such return or account to have become due and payable within six days after such return or account shall have been made, unless such maltster or maker of malt shall have given and shall maintain, and shall renew from time to time as he may be by the commissioners of Excise required, or persons appointed by them for that purpose, to renew the same, security, approved by the commissioners of Excise, or the person or persons who shall be appointed by them for that purpose, by bond in double the value of the duties which such commissioners of Excise, or such person or persons as aforesaid, shall judge likely to arise or be charged on and become due from such maltster or maker of malt within any eighteen weeks, for the due payment at the end of every eighteen weeks after such account or return as aforesaid shall be made of all such duties and sum and sums of money as shall arise or be charged on or become due from such maltster or maker of malt; and if any maltster or maker of malt who shall not have given such security, or who shall not maintain, and renew when required so to do, such security, shall neglect or refuse to pay and clear off such duties within six days as aforesaid, every such maltster or maker of malt shall for every such offence forfeit and lose double the sum which such duties so neglected or refused to be paid or cleared off shall amount to."

Sect. 27. "Provided always, that all duty charged upon or in respect of any malt which shall be made to be used and consumed only by distillers or makers of low wines and spirits in Scotland or Ireland, in distilling low wines or spirits from malt only, shall be paid and cleared off within the space of six days next after such account or return shall have been made as aforesaid, whether any bond or security for the payment of such duties shall or shall not have been given, on pain that every such maltster or maker of malt shall forfeit double the amount or sum of such duties so neglected or refused to be paid within the said space of six days."

Sect. 28. "And that so much of the said recited act as directs and requires that a book, with proper printed forms and titles for such purposes as thereinafter mentioned, shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every maltster or maker of malt, and that from and after the 10th day of October, 1827, no malt exceeding four bushels at one time, or if to a brewer of beer for sale, in any quantity whatsoever, shall be sold, sent out, or delivered without a certificate, filled up and cut out progressively from the printed forms and titles contained in such book as aforesaid, signed by the maltster or maker of malt selling, sending out, or delivering the same, or by some person on his behalf, certifying the particulars in and by the said recited act required, together with all other regulations, provisions, clauses, and enactments in the said recited act contained, relating to such books, and to the issuing, delivering, or sending out such certificates, filling up any counterparts thereof, or to any trader or other person, or delivering such certificates to any officer of Excise, or to the removal of any malt under or by virtue of any such certificate, and all penalties and forfeitures in and by the act imposed for any breach or neglect of any of the said provisions, regulations, clauses, or enactments relating to the said book and to such certificates, shall be and the same is and are hereby repealed."

Sect. 29. "And that so much of the said recited act as enacts, that every maltster or maker of malt shall daily enter in a book delivered to him or her by the officer of Excise for that purpose the total quantity of malt by such maltster or maker of malt sold or sent out during such day, in quantities not exceeding four bushels at one time, except to a brewer of beer for sale; and every such maltster or maker of malt shall at all times keep such book, with all entries made therein, open and exposed in some entered building or place of and belonging to such maltster or maker of malt, for the perusal and inspection of the officers of Excise, and shall deliver up every such book as aforesaid to any officer of Excise demanding the same, and permit him to make any minute therein, as such officer shall think fit; and if any such maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to make such entry as aforesaid, or shall not keep such book as last aforesaid, or shall not deliver up any such book to any officer demanding the same, or permit him to make any minute therein, or shall convey away or conceal the same, or shall destroy or tear out any leaf thereof, or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or alter any entry therein, or make any false entry therein, every such maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.*,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Provision as to daily entries of malt sent out repealed.

Sect. 30. "And that so much of the said recited act as enacts, that every factor or dealer in or seller of malt shall make true and particular entry in writing of every building or place by him or her intended to be used for the storing or keeping of malt for sale at the nearest office of Excise; and if any factor, dealer in or seller of malt, shall use any building or place for the storing or keeping of malt for sale, without having made such entry thereof as aforesaid, every factor, dealer in or seller of malt, so offending, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.* for every building or place so used without such entry thereof as aforesaid; and all malt which shall be found in any such building or place shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Provision that entry shall be made of every building used by malt factors repealed.

Sect. 31. "And that so much of the said recited act as directs and requires that a book, prepared with proper printed forms and titles for such purposes as thereinafter mentioned shall be delivered by the proper officer of Excise to every factor or dealer in or seller of malt, and that every factor or dealer in or seller of malt shall make entries in such book of all malt received into his or her custody, and all regulations, directions, and provisions in the said recited act relating to such book or such entries, shall be and the same is and are hereby repealed."

making into malt, in his or her custody or possession, into such level and regular form as may enable the officer of Excise conveniently to gauge and ascertain the true quantity thereof; and if any maltster or maker of malt shall neglect or refuse to cast or place all or any such malt as aforesaid, every maltster or maker of malt so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

Sect. 33. “And that so much of the said recited act as enacts, that every person who shall at any time be found removing or attending and directing the removal of any malt from one part of the united kingdom to any other part thereof shall, upon the demand of any officer of Excise, produce such malt, and the certificate accompanying or which shall or ought to have accompanied such malt on the removal thereof, to the officer demanding the same, to be by him examined and inspected, and compared with the quantity and quality of the malt so removing as aforesaid; and if any such person or persons shall, upon the demand of any officer of Excise, neglect or refuse to produce any such malt or certificate as aforesaid or to suffer or permit such inspection, examination, and compare as aforesaid, or shall hinder or obstruct any officer of Excise therein, or in the due execution of his duty, or of any of the powers to such officer by this act granted, every such person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*; and in every such case all such malt, and the vessel or boat, cart, carriage, or other conveyance, horses or other cattle, removing or which shall have been used in the removal of such malt, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise,—shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

Repeal of provisions of recited act shall not revive the provisions of any former act.

Sect. 34. “Provided always, that the repeal of any of the provisions of the said recited act by this act shall not extend or be construed to extend to revive or put in force any provision contained in any former act or acts; but that all such enactments, clauses, and provisions, in any former act or acts contained, as are by the said recited act directly or indirectly repealed, shall and the same are hereby declared to continue repealed and of no effect.”

Punishment of servants offending.

Sect. 35. “That if any workman, servant, or labourer employed by or in the service of any maltster or maker of malt shall maliciously, and with intent to injure such maltster or maker of malt, omit to give any notice, or to do any act, matter, or thing required by the said recited act or this act to be given or done, or shall do any act, matter, or thing prohibited to be done by the said recited act or this act, or commit any offence against any of the provisions of the said recited act or this act, whereby such maltster or maker of malt shall be injured or damnified, or subjected to any penalty imposed by the said recited act or this act, every such workman, servant, and labourer so offending shall and may be arrested and conveyed before any one justice of the peace, and convicted by and before such justice, and committed to gaol, and kept to hard labour, in the manner directed by and for the time specified in the said provision of the said recited act; and the said provision is hereby extended to the other offences against the recited act and this act, and made part of this act, as fully and effectually as if the same was hereby repeated and re-enacted. Provided always, that no such arrest and conviction shall take place or be made for any offence committed by any such workman, servant, or labourer against any provision of the said recited act or this act, after the expiration of one month from the discovery of the offence.”

Provision that no person shall be entitled to relief for malt destroyed, unless notices be given in manner therein specified, repealed. (a)

Sect. 36. “And that so much of the said recited act as provides and enacts, that no person or persons shall be entitled to any relief in such case as aforesaid, unless a notice in writing, describing the nature, cause, and extent of such accident as aforesaid, shall be delivered to the commissioners of Excise, or to the supervisor of Excise of the district in which such loss shall have taken place or shall have been first discovered, within three days next after the same shall have taken place or been so discovered; or unless the person or persons by whom such loss shall have been sustained, or the agent of such person or persons, shall give or leave notice in writing of his, her, or their intention to apply for such relief, with the collector or supervisor of Excise of the collection or district where the quarter-sessions are to be held at which he, she, or they there intend to apply for such relief, or to the solicitor of Excise for the summary jurisdiction of the commissioners of Excise in London, where such application shall be intended to be made to such commissioners, fourteen days at the least before the beginning of such quarter-sessions, or before such application to such commissioners; and unless such person or persons shall apply for such relief within one month after such accident shall have taken place or have been first discovered, or at the next general quarter-sessions of such justices which shall take place after the expiration of such month; any thing in this act, or in any other act or acts, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding, —shall be and the same is hereby repealed.”

(a) See 9 Geo. I., c. 3, s. 35, 36, 37, and Ex-parte Calvert, 1 Anst. 270.

Sect. 37. “ Provided always, that no person or persons shall be entitled to any relief under the said recited act for any malt destroyed or damaged by fire or inevitable accident, unless a notice in writing, describing the nature, cause, and extent of such accident as aforesaid, shall be delivered to the commissioners of Excise, or to the supervisor of Excise of the district in which such loss shall have taken place or shall have been first discovered, within fourteen days next after the same shall have come to the knowledge of the person or persons claiming such relief; nor unless such person or persons, or the agent of such person or persons, shall also give or leave notice in writing of his, her, or their intention to apply for such relief with the collector or supervisor of Excise of the collection or district where the quarter-sessions are to be held at which he, she, or they intend to apply for such relief, or to the solicitor of Excise for England, where such application shall be intended to be made to such commissioners, ten days at the least before the beginning of such quarter-sessions, or before such application to such commissioners; nor unless such person or persons shall also apply for such relief within four calendar months after such accident shall have come to his, her, or their knowledge; any thing in this act, or in any other act or acts, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.”

Notice to be given on application for relief in case of malt destroyed or damaged.

Sect. 38. “ And that all clauses, enactments, provisions, restrictions, regulations, matters, and things in the said recited act contained, not hereby repealed, shall be and remain in full force and effect.”

Recited act to remain in force where not repealed.

Sect. 39. That all the enactments, clauses, powers, and provisions contained in an act made and passed in the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 58, except as the same are hereby expressly altered or repealed, shall extend and be deemed and construed to extend to this act, and this act to commence from the passing hereof.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 58, extended to this act.

By 12 Geo. I., c. 4, s. 48, and 38 Geo. II., c. 7, s. 14. No malt entered and made for exportation only shall be liable to the duties; and no drawbacks shall be allowed for any malt exported.

Making malt for exportation.

By 1 Geo. III., c. 3, s. 9, and 59 Geo. III., c. 3, s. 8. There shall be allowed to every maker of malt for exportation, for every 20 quarters of grain made into malt, in 30 quarters when dried and made into malt, and no more, though by the steeping or watering thereof it may be run out into a greater quantity than 30 quarters.

Allowance to maltsters for grain made into malt.

By 12 Geo. I., c. 4., s. 49, 58. Every maker of malt, before he shall begin to wet or steep any grain to be made into malt for exportation, shall leave notice in writing with the officer of the quantity of grain intended to be contained in each steeping, on pain of 50*l.*; and the same shall be kept separate from all other corn to be made into malt for home consumption, on pain of 5*s.* a bushel.

Sect. 50. No maker of malt shall begin to wet or steep any corn to make into malt for exportation above six days before all the corn he may have working on his floors for home consumption shall be dried off; nor shall he begin to wet corn for home consumption above six days before all the corn on his floors for exportation be dried and locked up, on pain of 5s. for every bushel.

By 3 Geo. IV., c. 18, s. 12. Every maker of malt shall keep each steeping or wetting of grain making into malt for exportation, when the same shall be on the kiln, or after it shall be taken off, separate from any former steepings until the same shall be measured, on pain of forfeiting 50/.

By 3 Geo. II., c. 7, s. 16. The maker shall keep the whole quantity of his corn making into malt for exportation of one steeping or wetting, when the same shall be on the kiln, or after it shall be taken off the kiln, separate from any former steeping or wetting until it hath been measured in presence of the officer, on pain of 50/.

By 12 Geo. I., c. 4, s. 52. The officers during the steeping of the corn so intended for exportation, and till it be dried and locked up, may gauge and take an account thereof in all its operations, as in case the duties were to be charged thereon.

Sect. 58. And persons opposing the officers in the execution of this act shall forfeit 50/.

Notice of taking malt off the kilns.

Such malt to be exported or stored.

By 12 Geo. I., c. 4, s. 51, 58, and 3 Geo. II., c. 7, s. 17. The maker shall give notice in writing to the officer, or leave notice at the next Excise office, of the hour when he intends to take any malt off the kiln, that the officer may attend the measuring; and after it has been measured, it shall (on pain of 50/.) be immediately carried on ship-board, or else into storehouses, to be provided by such maker, to be there kept apart from all other malt under two locks, one to be provided by the proprietor, and the other by the officer at the expense of the proprietor, whereof one key to be kept by the proprietor, and the other by the officer, till the same be delivered out for exportation.

And by 3 Geo. II., c. 7, s. 18. If the maker of malt, or any person with his privity or direction, shall open such lock, or make any way or kind of entrance into the storehouse, or carry any of it away, without knowledge or consent of the officer, or notice given to some officer, he shall forfeit 100/.

Notice to be given of the hour when malt for exportation is to be taken off the kiln.

Such malt to be carried immediately on ship-board, or secured, on penalty of 50/.

By 3 Geo. IV., c. 18, s. 13. All makers of malt for exportation shall give notice in writing to some officer of the duties upon malt, or leave notice in writing at the next office of Excise where the journal is kept, of the hour when he, she, or they shall intend to take any malt off the kiln or kilns, that such officer may attend the measuring of such malt; and after such malt has been measured, the same shall be immediately carried on ship-board, if intended to be then exported, or else shall be immediately locked up and secured in some storehouse or other place belonging to such maltsters or makers of malt, in the presence of the said officer or officers, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 50/.

Storehouse where such malt is secured not to be opened, or entrance made, without giving notice to the officer, on penalty of 100/.

Sect. 14. If any such maker of malt, or any other person by his order, privity, or direction, after any steeping or making of malt shall have been locked up and secured in any storehouse or other place, in manner as aforesaid, shall open any of the locks or doors, or shall make any way or kind of entrance into such storehouse or other place, or shall remove any part whatsoever of the partition between any such storehouse or place and any other place whatsoever next thereunto adjoining, or shall remove out of the said storehouse or other place any quantity whatsoever of the malt that has been so locked up and secured, without the knowledge and consent of, or without first having given notice to, some officer or officers for the said duties, he, she, or they shall respectively forfeit and lose the sum of 100/.

By 12 Geo. I., c. 4, s. 53. When any maker or proprietor shall be desirous to take away any of the malt for exportation, and shall thereof give notice in writing to the officer forty hours before the time he shall desire to take out the same, expressing in such notice the quantity of the malt, and the port to which it is to be removed, the officer shall attend at the place where the malt is locked up, and see it measured and delivered out.

Sect. 54. The officer shall keep an account of the malt so delivered out, and of the person to whom it belongs, and shall give such person a certificate to the officer of the division to which it is intended to be removed, expressing the quantity, the name of the maker or proprietor, and the place whence delivered, who shall file the same, and make an entry thereof; and if the maker or proprietor shall neglect to deliver such certificate, he shall forfeit 50l.

Sect. 57. Persons intending to ship malt for exportation shall give at least forty-eight hours' notice before they begin to put it on board to the officer of the port, in writing, of the hour when such shipping is intended to be begun, and the name of the ship, on pain of 5s. a bushel.

Sect. 57. If the malt so entered and made for exportation shall not, within nine months next after the making and drying, and carrying into such room, and there locked up as aforesaid, be exported, the proprietor shall, for every bushel, forfeit 5s.

Sect. 56. During the shipping, at all such times as the proprietor shall not be actually shipping merchandises, the hatches of the ship shall be kept locked with two locks at each hatch, one to be provided and the key kept by the proprietor, and the other by the officer; and the hatches shall be so kept locked from the time the ship shall be fully loaded till it be ready to sail.

Sect. 58. And persons breaking open the hatches of any ship so locked down shall forfeit 50l.

Sect. 55. The officer may not only attend the measuring of such malt, but continue on board the ship till it be cleared of the port.

By 3 Geo. IV., c. 18, s. 15, it is enacted, that all and every maltster or maker of malt who shall at any time have any quantity of malt locked up and secured in any storehouse or any other place, as is before directed, to be exported, shall, within fifteen months next after the 5th day of July preceding, remove and clear out of his storehouse or other place all and every part and parcel thereof that at any time after the said 5th day of July shall be locked up and secured in such storehouse or other place, in order to be exported, and shall always from time to time, in every fifteen months after the 5th day of July, remove and clear out of such storehouse or other place, in order to be exported, all and every part or parcel of malt that at any time within the fifteen months next after the 5th day of July preceding shall be locked up and secured in any storehouse, or in any other place that shall be made use of by him, her, or them for the keeping of malt for exportation, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 50l.

Storehouses used for securing malt for exportation to be cleared out every 18 months after the 5th of July, on penalty of 50l.

Sect. 16. If after the shipping of any malt made to be exported, the malt so shipped to be exported, or any part thereof, shall be relanded in any part of Great Britain, then, and in every such case, all the malt which shall be relanded, and treble the value thereof, shall be forfeited; (that is to say), one moiety thereof to the king, and the other moiety thereof to the person or persons who shall seize, inform, or sue for the same; and such malt so relanded shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Customs or Excise.

Malt relanded after being shipped shall be forfeited, and penalty of treble its value.

Sect. 18. All fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed or created by this act shall be sued for, recovered, levied, or mitigated by such ways, means, or methods as any penalty may be sued for by any law of Excise, or by action of debt or information in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland; and one moiety shall be to His Majesty, and the other moiety to him who shall inform, discover, or sue for the same.

Recovery and application of penalties.

Sect. 19. All powers in 12 C. II., c. 24, and any other law relating to Excise, shall be used and put in execution for the purpose of this act, &c.

By 6 Geo. I., c. 21, s. 4. If any unmalted oats or barley be found mixed among malt shipped for exportation, the person shipping shall forfeit 5s. for every bushel.

By 12 Ann., st. 1, c. 2, s. 30. If ground malt shall be exported, it shall be computed at so many bushels as it contained before it was ground.

Sect. 9. The penalties, &c., to be sued for, &c. as by the laws of Excise, Power of the justices.

16. Malt.

Justices may summon evidence.

Persons may appeal to the quarter-sessions on all convictions relating to malt or malt duties.

or in the Courts at Westminster; and be employed half to the use of the king, and half to him that shall sue.

By 48 Geo. III., c. 74., s. 11. It shall be lawful for any justice or justices before whom any information shall be exhibited against any maker of malt for any offence against the laws of Excise respecting the duties on malt, to summon any farmer, maltster, or dealer in or seller of barley or malt, or other person, and to examine such person upon oath, touching the sale or delivery or the purchase or receipt of any barley sold, sent out, delivered, or received by any such farmer, &c. except as to the price or value of such barley or malt; and if any farmer, &c. shall neglect to obey such summons, or refuse to give evidence when required, shall forfeit 50*l*.

Sect. 15. And whereas doubts have arisen whether any appeal lay, in certain cases, concerning the making of malt, or the duties on malt, or any penalty or forfeiture relating to the same, from any judgment, order, or determination, or any conviction of justices, to the justices assembled at the quarter-sessions of the peace—for obviating which doubts, be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any person who shall find himself aggrieved by any judgment, &c. of any justice of the peace, in any case relating to or concerning the making of malt, or any of the duties on malt, or any penalty or forfeiture relating to the same, to appeal from such judgment, &c. to the justices assembled at the next general quarter-sessions of the peace to be holden for the county, riding, shire, stewartry, city, or place in which such judgment shall have been given, or order, &c. made; which said justices, or the major part of them, so assembled, are thereby empowered to hear and finally determine of and concerning the truth of the facts and merits of the case in question between the parties to such judgment, &c. respectively: and if at such quarter-sessions any defect of form shall be found in such proceedings before the justice who gave such original judgment, &c., such defect shall or may be rectified and amended by the order or orders of such justices, or the major part of them, so assembled at such quarter-sessions; and no writ of certiorari shall be allowed to set aside any determination or order of the said justices, or the major part of them, so assembled at such quarter-sessions. Provided always, that upon every such appeal the said justices so assembled at such quarter-sessions shall and do proceed to re-hear, re-examine, and re-consider the truth of the facts and the merits of the case in question between the parties to such original judgment, &c., and to re-examine thereto upon oath the same witnesses, or any of them, and no other, who shall have been before examined upon oath as witnesses before the justice or justices of the peace at the original hearing. (a)

By sect. 22. Every conviction by or before any justices of the peace for any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, fines, penalties, or forfeitures, by this or any other act of parliament relating to the duties of Excise on malt imposed, may be made in the form following; to wit,

By 43 Geo. III., c. 69. Sched. (A.) (B.) certain Excise duties were imposed upon papers of different kinds, not being sheathing paper, or button-papers or button-board; and by 47 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 30, s. 14, this exception is repealed, and they are made subject to the same duties as millboard, and subject to the same regulations, &c.

Duties.
Excise.

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 21. Scaleboard is to be charged as millboard, and scaleboard-makers are liable to the regulations imposed by law on paper-makers: and the several duties upon paper to be under the management of the commissioners of Excise.

Scaleboard.

See table to 6 Geo. IV., c. 111, for the duties of Customs payable upon papers and books imported. Ante, p. 123. 138.

Customs.

By 11 Geo. I., c. 7, s. 16. Old rags, old ropes, or junks, or old fishing-nets, may be imported duty free.

By 32 Geo. III., c. 54, s. 1. The officers of the Customs, where any printed, painted, or stained paper shall be imported, shall cause the same to be marked, and the commissioners shall provide for them proper frames and stamps, and such numbers or marks as they shall think fit to denote the measure; which officers are required to measure every such piece of paper, and to mark the same with such frame-mark and stamp as follows:—every piece of less than half a yard in length to be marked and stamped at one end only; and every piece of half a yard in length or upwards to be marked and stamped at both ends of such piece; which frames, &c. may be from time to time altered as the commissioners shall think fit: and if any person shall counterfeit or forge any frame, number, or mark, or the impression of the same, upon any such paper, he shall forfeit 100*l.*; or if he shall counterfeit or forge or resemble any stamp or seal so provided, or counterfeit or resemble the impression of the same, thereby to defraud His Majesty, he shall forfeit 500*l.*: and if any person shall sell any printed, painted, or stained paper with such counterfeit stamp, knowing he same, he shall forfeit 50*l.*

Importing printed, painted, or stained paper.

Sect. 2. If any person shall wilfully cut out, obliterate, or deface any such frame-mark, number, or mark, or suffer the same to be done, he shall forfeit 50*l.* for every piece so cut, &c.

Sect. 3. If any person shall fraudulently affix upon any such piece of paper any frame-mark or stamp or seal which hath been before used, he shall forfeit 50*l.*, and also every such piece of paper.

Sect. 4. If any person shall make oath before two commissioners within their limits, or elsewhere before one justice, that he hath reason to suspect that any foreign imported printed, painted, or stained paper, for which a duty ought to have been paid; is or shall be in the custody of any printer, painter, or stainer of paper, or person dealing therein, or other person for his use, without having such stamps or seals as aforesaid, they may authorize any officer of the Customs or Excise, with the assistance of a constable, in the daytime, to search for the same, and to open doors, chests, trunks, and packages; and the paper so found unstamped shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of the Customs or Excise. Provided always, that no remnant or piece of such paper, being of less length than shall be expressed by such frame-mark, so found, having such stamp or seal as aforesaid at one end thereof, shall be forfeited by reason of not having such stamp or seal at both ends thereof; and if any person shall obstruct any of the said officers in the execution of their duty herein, he shall forfeit 50*l*.

Sect. 5. To prevent frauds in adding to any piece or remnant of such paper, after the same hath been stamped or sealed, and also to prevent the importation of any such paper without being stamped or sealed as aforesaid, if any piece or remnant of such foreign imported paper, not having such frame-mark and stamp thereon as aforesaid, (or having the same at one end or both ends thereof, and being of a greater length by half a yard or more than by such mark is expressed,) shall be found in the possession of any printer, painter, or stainer of paper, or dealer therein, the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized in manner aforesaid, and the person in whose possession the same shall be found shall also forfeit 50*l*.

Sect. 6. All penalties and forfeitures by this act imposed may be sued for, recovered, levied, or mitigated as by the laws of Excise, or in the Courts at Westminster, half to the king, and half to him who shall sue.

Licences.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 2. An Excise licence is required to be taken out annually by every maker of paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, and by every printer, painter, or stainer of paper; and a duty is payable thereon: viz.—

By every maker of paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard	4	0	0
By every printer, painter, or stainer of paper	4	0	0

The several enactments in 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, relative to licences, penalties, &c. are inserted at length, ante, 247.

Two classes of paper.

By 42 Geo. III., c. 94, s. 10. All brown paper made of old ropes or cordage only, without separating or extracting the pitch or tar therefrom, and without any mixture of other materials therewith, shall be deemed and taken to be paper of the second class or denomination, and shall be charged with the duty accordingly; and all other paper whatever (glazed paper for clothiers and hotpressers excepted) shall be deemed and taken to be of the first class or denomination, and chargeable accordingly.

Paper of the first class pressed together without paste liable to the duties imposed on that class.

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 20. That if any maker of paper shall couch or press together, without the use of paste, any paper of the first class or denomination, or the materials thereof, with any sheet of paper of the same or any other class or materials, all such paper so couched or pressed together shall be liable to the duties imposed upon paper of the first class.

Paper to be distinguished by first and second class: millboard, button-board, &c. by their different denominations.

Sect. 15. Whenever paper, &c. are required to be distinguished by the different classes and kinds, the same shall not be required to be otherwise distinguished than into paper of the first and second class respectively; and millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard, into their aforesaid several denominations; and no penalty shall be incurred by not distinguishing or separating the same into their several sorts.

Scaleboard-makers liable to the regulations, penalties, &c. imposed on paper-makers.

Sect. 21, after reciting that scaleboard is an article made from the shaving or cutting of wood, and is used and employed in the manufacture of various articles as and for or as a substitute for millboard and pasteboard, and has been included in the laws and regulations of Excise, and doubts have arisen whether the makers of scaleboard are subject and liable to the regulations imposed on makers of paper, enacts, that every maker of scaleboard shall be subject and liable to the regulations, penalties, and forfeitures in force in respect to makers of paper, and shall take out a licence as a maker of paper; and all scaleboard shall be tied up, labelled, charged with duty, and removed as millboard, and subject to such laws, regulations, and penalties as aforesaid.

By 41 Geo. III., (U. K.) c. 8, s. 6. No person shall print, paint, or stain any paper to serve for hangings or other uses, except such in respect whereof the duty chargeable on paper of the first class hath been charged, nor unless such paper have been previously produced to the officer enclosed in the original wrapper in which it was charged, and with the impression of the stamp denoting such charge, and the name of the officer and date of the charge, and the class of such paper marked and remaining visibly thereon; and such printer, painter, or stainer shall open every ream and bundle of such paper in the presence of such officer, who shall thereupon take an account of the quantities and dimensions thereof, and stamp the same according to law.

No paper to be painted for hangings but of the first class.

Sect. 7. If any maker shall cut or diminish any paper before the same shall be taken account of, weighed, and charged, he shall forfeit 50*l.* and also such paper, which shall also be seized.

Maker not to diminish paper before it be charged.

By 42 Geo. III., c. 94, s. 11. No pasteboard shall be made of any material except paper which has been charged with the full duties of Excise, and has not been used for any purpose, on pain of forfeiture of the pasteboard and all implements, utensils, materials, and preparations used in making such pasteboard (all which shall also be seizable), and also of 100*l.*

Pasteboard to be made of paper charged and unused, on pain of 100*l.*

Sect. 12. Before any maker shall begin to make any paper into pasteboard, he shall produce to the officers all such paper as he shall intend to make into pasteboard in the original wrappers in which the same was charged, and having the Excise duty stamp legible on each ream thereof, and shall take the said wrappers from the said paper in presence of such officer, who shall take account of such paper, its quantity and weight, and destroy such duty stamp; and that such officer may be enabled to take such account, every such maker of pasteboard shall give twenty-four hours' notice in writing of his intention to produce such paper, and shall specify the quantity thereof, and the day and hour when he intends to produce the same; and for neglect of giving such notice, or using any paper for pasteboard before producing the same, and such account being taken, such maker of pasteboard shall for every offence forfeit 100*l.*

Makers thereof to produce the paper, &c. on pain of 100*l.*

Sect. 13. No maker of pasteboard shall carry on the business of a maker of paper; nor shall any maker of pasteboard set up or carry on the business of making pasteboard within one quarter of a mile of any mill or manufactory for the making of paper, on pain of forfeiting 100*l.*

No maker of pasteboard shall be a paper-maker, nor make within one quarter of a mile, on pain of 100*l.*

By 56 Geo. III., c. 103, s. 13. "That from and after the 10th day of October, 1816, the said recited provisions shall extend and apply to such maker or makers only of pasteboard as is not nor are or shall be a maker or makers or concerned or interested in the trade or business of a maker of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper; and it shall and may be lawful for all and every maker and makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper, to make at his, her, or their entered paper-mill any pasteboard, subject and liable to the payment of the duties respectively herein-after mentioned, according to the quality thereof, from or with paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper made by him, her, or them at such mill, before the same shall have been charged with the duty imposed on such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper respectively, any thing in any other act or acts to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Respecting materials from which pasteboard is to be made to apply only to makers of pasteboard.

Makers of paper, &c. may make pasteboard at their mills subject to duties after mentioned.

paid and allowed to all and every maker and makers of pasteboard, not being a maker or makers or interested or concerned in the trade or business of a maker of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper, who shall make any pasteboard, and be charged with the aforesaid duties thereon respectively, from or with paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper for which the duties shall have been charged and paid thereon respectively, and which shall have been produced and taken account of by the officer as aforesaid before the making thereof into such pasteboard, so much of the duties charged and paid in respect of such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper respectively, as shall be equal to and not more than the amount of the duty charged and paid by such maker or makers of such pasteboard, upon oath being first made by such maker or makers, or his, her, or their principal workman engaged in the said manufactory, which oath the several collectors and supervisors of Excise are hereby respectively authorized to administer, that such pasteboard had been wholly made from such duty-paid paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, or sheathing paper respectively, so previously produced to and taken account of by the officer as aforesaid."

And by 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 5. Every maker of paper, pasteboard, millboard, scaleboard, or glazed paper, before he shall begin, shall make entry in writing at the next Excise office of every mill, workhouse, and other place by him intended to be used for making, drying, or keeping paper, &c. or materials proper to be made into paper, &c., and of all vats, presses, utensils, and vessels intended to be used in making the same, on pain of forfeiture thereof, and also 50*l*.

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 17. "That from and after the 5th day of January, 1821, the same shall be and is hereby repealed; and that from and after the 5th day of January, 1821, no person or persons whatever shall carry on or be concerned in the trade or business of a retail stationer or dealer in paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard at any paper or pasteboard mill respectively, nor shall any maker or makers of paper carry on or be concerned in the business of a retail stationer or dealer in paper in or on any premises within the distance of one mile of any mill or manufactory for the making of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively, wherein he or she is concerned or interested, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 200*l*."

By 42 Geo. III., c. 94, s. 15. All paper, pasteboard, millboard, scaleboard, and glazed paper made in Great Britain or in Ireland, and imported from thence, shall be made up by the maker thereof in this manner; (that is to say), all such paper, as soon as made, shall be made up into quires, each quire to consist of 24 sheets, and such quires shall be forthwith made up into reams of 20 quires each; and all such pasteboard, millboard, scaleboard, and glazed paper respectively shall, when made, be forthwith made up in regular parcels, each parcel containing even dozens of sheets of one and the same denomination and of equal dimensions, and not less than 24 nor more than 72 such sheets in each parcel; and every maker shall by himself or servant cause all such paper, pasteboard, &c. to be immediately tied up in wrappers conformably to the directions of 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 7, &c. [see post, p. 239], and shall without delay mark on each wrapper, in large legible characters and words at length, the class of the paper enclosed, distinguishing in which of the two classes the duty in respect of such paper is chargeable, together with the number of the ream according to the number of such reams of each such class made by such maker at such mill during the current quarter, to be computed from January 5, April 5, July 5, and October 10, as the case may require, in such year, such number to be taken progressively, beginning 1, 2, and so onwards, according to the number of reams of each class made at such mill in each such quarter; and on each such parcel of pasteboard, &c. there shall in like manner, as soon as tied up as before directed, be marked in like manner the true description of such parcel, and whether the same be pasteboard, millboard, scaleboard, or glazed paper, and the number of sheets in each parcel, together with the progressive number of such parcel of pasteboard, &c., made by such maker at his mill or manufacture during the then current quarter, commencing as aforesaid; and if any maker of paper, pasteboard, &c. shall neglect or refuse so to make and tie up, and denominate for 24 hours after such paper, pasteboard, &c. shall be made; or after the same is tied up and marked, and before it is charged, shall untie or take the same out of the wrapper, or otherwise alter any reams or parcels, or the denominations or numbers marked thereon or on the wrappers; or shall conceal or remove any such paper, pasteboard, &c. from the mill-room or other place entered for making, laying, or keeping the same; every such maker shall for each offence forfeit 200*l.*, together with all such paper, pasteboard, &c. which shall be seizable. Provided, that every maker may make his paper into quires without folding the same, such quires, when made up into reams, being separated by a slip of coloured paper placed between each quire, and visible on the outside of the ream: and provided also, that the outside quires of each ream consist of not less than 20 nor more than 24 sheets, at the option of the maker.

Sect. 16. Any maker of paper may divide with a knife or other instrument, before such paper shall be put up in reams, provided that the quantity upon which the duty is chargeable be diminished thereby, and that all paper so divided shall, on the outside of the wrapper, be distinguished by the words "cut paper" being written or printed thereon in large legible characters.

By 56 Geo. III., c. 103, s. 3. "That from and after the said 10th day of October it shall and may be lawful to and for any maker and makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard to cut the edges of such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard before the same is tied up in reams or parcels respectively in the manner hereinafter mentioned. Provided always, that if any paper be divided with a knife or other instrument before such paper shall be tied up in reams or parcels (except by cutting the edges of such paper), each separate piece into which such paper shall be so divided shall be deemed a sheet of the ream into which it shall or is to be tied up; and that all and every maker and makers of paper shall distinguish each and every ream of such divided paper by marking, writing, or printing in large legible characters and words at length on the label thereof, hereinafter mentioned, the words 'cut paper,' and the number of pieces into which each original sheet has been divided, and shall place and keep such paper separate and apart from all uncut paper, and from all millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard; and if any maker or makers of paper shall neglect or refuse to distinguish such paper so divided as aforesaid by the words 'cut paper,' and by the number of pieces into which each original sheet has been divided as aforesaid, being so marked, written, or printed thereon by him, her, or them respectively as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to keep all such paper separate and apart from all uncut paper, and from all millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard, he, she, or they so offending shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.*"

By 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 7. Every maker of paper, &c. whose mill or workhouse is situate in any city or market-town, who shall have any paper, &c. to be weighed and charged with the duty, shall give twenty-four hours' (elsewhere forty-eight hours') previous notice in writing of the time and hour of day to the officer of Excise, who shall attend; and such maker or his servant shall produce to such officer, so soon as he shall attend, the whole thereof, tied up in the manner following; (viz.) all such further make oath that no other paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard respectively, than is mentioned therein, has been within such period of six weeks (except such as may have been previously taken an account of and charged with duty) by him, her, or them removed, carried or sent, or caused, suffered or known to be removed, carried or sent, from his, her, or their premises, (which oaths the several collectors or supervisors of Excise are hereby respectively authorized to administer), on pain of forfeiting for each and every refusal or neglect to keep or make such entry or such oath as aforesaid the sum of 100*l*. Provided that no such maker or makers shall be obliged to go further than the market town next to the place where such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard respectively shall have been made for the making of such entries as aforesaid."

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 1. "That from and after the 5th day of January, 1821, so much of the said act as is hereinbefore recited shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and that from and after the said 5th day of January, 1821, all and every maker and makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard in Great Britain shall from day to day enter or cause to be entered in a book or books or on a paper or papers to be delivered to him, her, or them for that purpose by the proper officer of Excise, and kept by such maker or makers in some public or open part of his, her, or their entered premises, of the number of reams and quires of paper, and of the number of dozens of sheets of millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively, distinguishing the class of the paper and the denomination of millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard, made daily, with their respective estimated weight, reckoning twenty-six of such sheets of paper (two of them being allowed for waste or damaged paper) for a quire consisting of twenty-four sheets when dried and finished, and thirteen of such sheets (one being allowed for waste) for a dozen sheets of millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, and sheathing paper respectively, when dried and finished, and shall make or cause such entries of each day's work at his, her, or their mills or manufactories to be made and completed before the hour of twelve at noon of the following day; which entries shall, at or after the end of every six weeks or forty-two days, be delivered to the proper officer by and verified by the signature of the christian and surname of such maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively, or his, her, or their chief workman or foreman employed in the manufactory; and if any maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard shall neglect or refuse to make any such entry as aforesaid, or shall knowingly make, or cause or permit or suffer to be made, in any such book or paper as aforesaid, any false entry, or shall remove, conceal, or destroy any such book or paper so delivered to him, her, or them as aforesaid, or fail to keep the same in some open and public part of his, her, or their entered premises, or withhold or keep the same from the inspection of any officer or officers of Excise surveying his, her, or their manufactory, or by any means hinder, obstruct, or prevent such officer or officers from freely examining the same, and comparing the entries therein with his, her, or their stock, or shall erase, deface, or alter any of the entries therein or thereon, or shall, upon demand, refuse or neglect to deliver in a perfect state any such book or paper in which any such entry shall have been made or ought to have been made as aforesaid, at or after the end of the six weeks, or other time or period for which such book or paper shall have been delivered to him, her, or them as aforesaid, or to verify the same by such signature as aforesaid, every such maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, so offending, shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 4; 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 12, and 56 Geo. III., c. 103, s. 8, no such maker shall be obliged to go farther than the market town next to the place where the paper, &c. shall have been made, for the making of such entries, and see 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53.

By 56 Geo. III., c. 103, s. 9. "Provided always, that if the quantity of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard contained and inserted in such entries, added to the uncharged stock of such maker or makers respectively, shall at any time from and after the 10th day of October be found to be less than five per cent. under and below the account entered and kept of the quantity of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard which shall have been daily made, and of which an account is so to be kept as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the proper officer or officers of Excise to charge such maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard respectively with the duties on such deficiency of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard respectively as shall be below five per cent. as aforesaid, according to the average weight of the paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard so missing and uncharged."

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 19. "That no maker of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard shall, on comparing the quantity thereof respectively contained and inserted in the entries required by the said recited act, added to the uncharged stock of such maker, shall be charged with duties on any deficiency of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively, unless the deficiency of such quantity contained and inserted in such entries, added to the uncharged stock of such maker, shall be found to be more than ten per centum under and below the account entered and kept of the paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively which shall have been daily made by such maker, and of which no account is to be so kept as aforesaid, any thing in the said act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding; and every such maker as aforesaid shall, at the time of making such annual balance as provided and required by the said recited act, make out and deliver to the proper officer, at his request, a just and true account according to the best of his or her knowledge, information, and belief, and signed by him or her, or his or her foreman or manager, of the whole of his or her uncharged stock of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively, distinguishing the class and denomination and quantity of each, and the respective rooms and places and state and condition in which the same are deposited; and if any such maker shall knowingly or wilfully or negligently make out or deliver an untrue account thereof as aforesaid, or any such maker shall not make out, and upon request as aforesaid deliver such account as aforesaid, every such maker shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

And by 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 13. Every maker shall, within six weeks after he shall make or ought to have made such entry, pay the duties, on pain of forfeiting double duty.

By 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 14, and 42 Geo. III., c. 94, s. 15. No maker shall remove or suffer to be removed from the mill where the same shall be made any paper, &c. until such officer shall have taken an account thereof; nor shall remove any paper in any less quantity than a ream or bundle, nor without having thereon the cover in which the same was charged with the duty; nor shall remove any such pasteboard, &c. in any less quantity than the entire parcel in which the duty was charged, nor Penalty 200*l*.

If quantity contained in such entries added to uncharged stock be five per cent. under account kept daily, deficiency charged with duty.

No charge of duty for deficiency shall be made, unless the deficiency of the quantities contained in the entries added to the uncharged stock shall be found more than ten per cent. below the account kept.

Account of uncharged stock to be delivered to officer at his request.

Penalty 200*l*.

Within six weeks after such entry made, the duty to be paid, on penalty of double the amount.

No paper, &c. to be removed until an account shall be taken by the officer, &c.

19. Paper.

Penalty for default.

No paper, &c. to be removed till twenty-four hours after weighing.

Paper, &c. weighed to be kept separate from other parcels, that the supervisor may re-weigh it.

Penalty for default.

On forty-eight hours' previous notice, paper, &c. may be removed from one mill to another to be finished, on certificate from the officer, &c.

Makers on receiving paper, &c. which has been made at any other mill, or which has been returned, shall distinguish and keep same separate.

Penalty.

Paper, &c. returned to be marked with the number or letter by which the mill is distinguished, or with the word 'returned;'

and be kept separate, and notice given to the officer, who shall take an account thereof;

until weighed and charged, and stamped, marked, or labelled as aforesaid, nor the paper without having thereon the cover, nor the paper, pasteboard, &c. without the stamp or label, nor without the officer's name, together with the day and year when the duty was charged, and the several matters hereinbefore prescribed, marked or fixed on such cover, or on such pasteboard, &c., on pain of forfeiting the same, and also 50% for every such offence, together with the package containing the same, and the horses, cattle, carriages, boats, barges, or other vessels used in removing thereof, which may be seized by any officer of Excise.

By 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 15. No maker shall remove any paper, &c. from the mill or other place where the same shall have been weighed and the duty charged, in less than twenty-four hours; and every maker shall keep such paper, &c. which shall have been so weighed separate from other paper, &c. for twenty-four hours, unless sooner reweighed by the surveyor or supervisor, on pain of forfeiting 50%. If, upon reweighing, any additional weight shall be found, the same shall be charged with the duty according to such weight.

Sect. 16. Nothing in this act shall prevent any maker from sending paper from the mill where made, upon giving forty-eight hours' notice in writing to the officer, to any other mill to be sized or finished, in order that such officer may attend and take an account thereof; and provided that the same be removed with a proper certificate from such officer; and that when so removed to such mill, the same shall be under the like directions, as to stamping and other matters, as if it had been finished and sized at the mill where made; and such maker shall, for the breach of any of the directions aforesaid, be subject to the like penalty as he would have been if such paper had not been removed.

By 56 Geo. III., c. 103, s. 7. "That all and every maker and makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard shall, when and so often as he, she, or they shall receive or have delivered at or on his, her, or their entered premises any paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard which has been made or charged with duty at any other mill or manufactory, or which has been returned to him, her, or them from any customer or customers, or other person or persons, mark, write, or print on and distinguish every such ream or parcel of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard respectively with the number or letter by which the mill is distinguished as aforesaid, and at which the same was manufactured, and from whence received, or with the words 'returned paper,' respectively, as the case may happen to be, and shall keep all such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard separate and apart from each other, and from all other paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard, on pain of forfeiting for each and every such offence the sum of 50%."

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 9. "That when and so often as any such maker as aforesaid shall receive into his or her possession, or have delivered at or on his or her entered premises, any paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard which has been made or charged with duty at any other mill or manufactory, or which has been sent out by such maker and has been returned to him or her from any customer or customers, or other person or persons, every such maker shall mark, write, or print on and distinguish every such ream or parcel of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively with the number or letter by which the mill or manufactory is distinguished at which the same was made or manufactured, or with the word 'returned,' respectively, as the case may happen to be; and shall keep all such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively separate and apart from each other, and from all other paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard; and shall, on the next succeeding visit or survey of his or her surveying officer of Excise, give such officer notice in writing thereof, specifying in such notice the progressive number and weight of each such ream or parcel, the number of the mill or manufactory where made, the date of charge, the date of the departure stamp (if any), and the person from whom and place from whence and day when received by such maker; and shall, upon such visit or survey, produce to such officer all such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively, and assist such officer in taking a true and particular account thereof; and every such maker shall, before he, she, or they shall send out, remove, or deliver from his or her mill or manufactory any such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, write or print on the label of the wrapper or cover thereof the distinguishing number of his or her mill or manufactory, and put and fix as hereinbefore directed such impressions of the departure stamp as are hereinbefore directed in respect of paper made at such mill and sent out as aforesaid; and if any such maker as aforesaid shall neglect to give such notice as aforesaid, or shall give as aforesaid a false or untrue notice, or shall refuse or neglect to produce all such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard as aforesaid to such officer, or to assist such officer in taking a true and particular account thereof, or shall neglect to write or print upon the label of any such ream or parcel as aforesaid the distinguishing number of his or her mill or manufactory, or to fix such impressions of the departure stamp on the label and wrappers or covers of every such ream of paper or parcel of millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard when again sent out from such mill or manufactory, every such maker shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.* for every such ream or parcel in respect whereof the provisions and directions of this act are not complied with as aforesaid, and every such ream and parcel respectively shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Officers may search for paper, &c. so concealed, on warrant for so doing.

sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively, and of the quantities of each, in the custody or possession of such maker and makers as aforesaid; and all and every such maker and makers shall and is and are hereby required at all times to place and keep his, her, or their stock of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively, which has been charged with duty, distinct and separate from that which has not been charged with duty, and also distinct and separate according to its respective class or denomination, and shall place and keep such stock charged with duty in such manner that any officer or officers surveying the mill or manufactory of such maker or makers may at all times correctly, and without difficulty, see and distinguish on the side of each ream and parcel respectively the end of the label hereinafter mentioned, on which the impression is or ought to be or ought to have been or has been made of the stamp hereinafter mentioned called the departure stamp, and to take a just and true account of the number of reams of each class of paper, and of the number of parcels of each denomination of millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively, whether charged or uncharged respectively with duty, and of the weight of any such ream or parcel, with the assistance of such maker or makers, or a sufficient number of his, her, or their servants, which assistance they the said maker and makers are hereby respectively required, on the request of such officer or officers, to give to the utmost of his, her, or their power; and if any maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, or any other person or persons whatsoever, shall oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in inspecting or taking such account as aforesaid, or shall at any time refuse or neglect, when required, to give to any officer or officers such assistance as aforesaid, or shall at any time neglect or refuse to keep his, her, or their stock of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively in such manner as aforesaid, or hide or conceal any part thereof, all and every such maker and makers, or person and persons so offending, shall for every such offence severally forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

By 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 19. Every maker shall keep sufficient and just scales and weights, and shall permit such officer to use the same; and if he shall not keep such, or shall not so permit, or shall use any false or insufficient scales or weights, or practise any device to prevent such officer from taking the true weight, he shall for every such offence forfeit 100*l*., together with such insufficient scales and weights, which may be seized by any officer of Excise.

Sect. 20. And every maker, when required by such officer, shall, with a sufficient number of his servants, assist in weighing and taking an account, and in reweighing, on pain of forfeiting 50*l*.

Sect. 21, 22. In weighing, the turn of the scale shall be in favour of the crown, and in lieu thereof there shall be allowed to the maker 2*lb*s. upon every 100*lbs*., and so in proportion for a greater or a lesser quantity. Provided that no weight less than 1*lb*. shall be used, on pain of forfeiting such allowance.

Sect. 23. In case any paper, pasteboard, &c. shall be fraudulently hid or concealed, the same shall be forfeited, together with the packages containing the same, which may be seized by any officer of Excise; and if any such officer shall suspect that any such paper, &c. is hid or concealed in any place within the limits of the chief office in London, upon oath made before two commissioners or one justice for the county, city, or liberty where such place shall be, or if in any other part of Great Britain, then before one justice of the county or place where such officer shall suspect the same to be deposited or concealed. such commissioners or justice may, if they judge it reasonable, by special warrant, empower such officer, by day or night (but if in the night in the presence of a constable), to enter such suspected place, and to seize and carry away all such paper, &c. as they shall there find so forfeited, together with the package containing the same; and the person in whose custody the same shall be found shall forfeit 50*l.*

Sect. 24. No stationer or dealer in paper shall receive into his possession any paper made in Great Britain which shall not, at the time of receiving it, be an entire ream or bundle [ream by stat. 42 Geo. III., c. 94, s. 15], and enclosed in a wrapper stamped or labelled as aforesaid, together with the officer's name, and day and year when the duty was charged, and the class marked thereon, on pain of forfeiting 50*l.* together with such paper, which may be seized by any officer of Excise.

Sect. 25, and 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 11. "That no stationer or stationers, or dealer or dealers in paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, nor any other person or persons whatsoever, shall restore, return, redeliver, or send, or procure, permit, or suffer to be restored, returned, redelivered, or sent, to any maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, nor to any mill, workhouse, storehouse, room, or other place to any such maker or makers belonging, nor to any other place or places whatever to or for the use of any maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, any wrapper, cover, or label which has been before used as a wrapper, cover, or label to any paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, and marked or stamped with the marks, stamps, or impressions directed by this act to be used; but that all and every stationer and stationers, or dealer and dealers in paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, and other person and persons, shall, and they are hereby respectively required, upon opening any ream of paper, or parcel of millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, forthwith to permanently cancel, deface, and obliterate the label, and the several stamps and impressions of stamps thereon, and on the wrappers and covers of every such ream or parcel, and every part of such label, stamps, and impressions respectively, without separating, detaching, or taking such label from off such cover or wrapper; nor shall any maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard receive, or cause, procure, permit, or suffer to be received, restored, returned, redelivered, or sent to him, her, or them, or to be kept or deposited at any mill, workhouse, storehouse, room, or other place to him, her, or them belonging, or at any other place to or for his, her, or their use, any wrapper, cover, or label which has been before used as a wrapper, cover, or label to any quantity of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, or in or with which any paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard has been removed, carried, or sent out by any maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard; on pain that every such stationer or dealer, or maker or makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard, or other person and persons offending therein contrary to the directions and provisions of this act, shall, for every such offence, severally forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.* in respect of every such wrapper, cover, or label, and every such wrapper, cover, or label shall be forfeited, and the same shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise. Provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend to inflict the said penalty of 200*l.* for or on account of the not destroying or returning any wrapper or cover which hath been opened, containing therein the same identical paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard which was removed, carried, or sent away by the maker or makers thereof, and which is returned to him, her, or them on account of the same being disliked and refused by the person or persons to whom the same was sent, for or on account of the not destroying or returning any label affixed to such wrapper or cover; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

By 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 26, and 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 11. Nothing herein shall extend to inflict the said penalty of (100*l.* by 34 Geo. III., 200*l.* by 1 Geo. IV.), for not destroying or returning any wrapper which hath been opened, containing therein the same paper, &c. which was removed by the maker, and which is returned to him as disliked, or for not destroying or returning any label affixed to such wrapper.

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 16. "That every retailer, stationer, or dealer in paper, or other person, who shall have bought, received, or agreed for any paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively which may be forfeited or liable to seizure by this or by any other act or acts, and shall discover to and inform any officer or officers of Excise of the same, shall, on the condemnation thereof, and on conviction of the offender in the penalty or penalties incurred by such offence, be paid (by the officer seizing the same) the value of all such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively which shall be so seized and condemned, and for which such retailer, stationer, dealer, or other person shall have actually paid or be liable to pay and shall pay, and such payment shall be deemed a part of the expenses attending such seizure."

By 56 Geo. III., c. 103, s. 20. "That from and after the 10th day of October, so much of the said act as is lastly hereinbefore recited shall be and the same is hereby repealed, save and except as to any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, fines, penalties, or forfeitures, incurred by any person or persons whatsoever in respect thereof, or relating thereto, before or on the day last aforesaid."

By 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 27. All paper, pasteboard, &c., and all materials and utensils for the making thereof, in the custody of the maker, or other person in trust for him, shall be chargeable with all debts and duties for paper in arrear and owing by such maker, and shall also be subject to all penalties and forfeitures incurred for any offence against this act. See also 28 Geo. III., c. 27, s. 21; 7 & 8 Geo. III., c. 53.

Sect. 35. If any question shall arise whether any paper is belonging to the class marked on the cover or wrapper (although such paper shall appear to have been entered in the officer's books as belonging to such class), the proof thereof shall lie on the owner or claimant, and be decided by the oaths of two skilful and experienced persons.

powers, or authorities therein contained, are repealed, altered, or controlled by this present act, or are repugnant to any of the provisions thereof; but that all and singular the said former acts, and the several provisions, rules, regulations, powers, and authorities therein contained or granted, and the pains, penalties, and forfeitures incurred or thereby imposed or provided for any breach or non-observance of the same, except as aforesaid, shall remain and continue in as full force and effect as if this act had not been made; any thing herein contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

By 34 Geo. III., c. 20, s. 50. The person who shall sustain such loss shall, three days before such sessions, give or leave notice in writing thereof with the collector of Excise of the district, and of his intention of applying to such sessions for such allowance.

And all the duties are allowed for such glazed or other press-papers for clothiers and hotpressers as shall be bond fide used and consumed in the pressing of woollen cloths and stuffs in Great Britain, 43 Geo. III., c. 69, sched. (C.)

By 42 Geo. III., c. 94, s. 6. Every person intending to claim any such drawback or allowance for glazed paper or press-paper shall, before he shall begin to make use thereof, produce the same to the officer of Excise in the original cover or wrapper in which it was charged with the duty, and give to such officer a note in writing, specifying the day and hour on which he intends to produce such glazed or press-paper, and also the quantity thereof, and the name and residence of the maker or person from whom and the time when it was received; and such person shall untie and open the same in the presence of such officer, who shall take account thereof, and destroy the duty-stamp on the covers or wrappers; and as soon as such paper shall have been so long used as to be incapable of being again employed for any purpose, upon application to the proper collector (such application not to be oftener than twice in each year), stating in writing the actual quantity of such glazed paper and press-paper so used as aforesaid, and making oath before such collector (who is empowered to administer the same) of the real quantity thereof so used, that the same has been actually employed in the pressing of woollen cloths or stuffs by the party applying for such allowance, and for no other purpose whatsoever, and that all such paper, and every part thereof, is by such use become unfit for any other purpose, and that no drawback has been before received for such paper or any part thereof, then such collector shall allow a drawback of the duties charged or paid for such glazed paper or press-paper, without any fee or deduction.

Sect. 17. Any person convicted of wilfully taking a false oath, in order to obtain a drawback or allowance, shall be liable to the pains and penalties of perjury.

And by 43 Geo. III., c. 69. For every yard square of paper which shall be printed, painted, or stained in Great Britain to serve for hangings or other uses (over and above the duties payable for such paper before the printing thereof), shall be paid by the printer, painter, or stainer, 1*½d*.

By 10 Ann., c. 19, s. 43. All persons who shall make any paper, pasteboard, &c., or print, paint, or stain any paper for sale, or not for sale, shall leave notice in writing at the next Excise office of his name and place of abode, and of the places usually made use of in making, printing, &c. the same, on pain of forfeiting 30*l*.

Sect. 44. No person shall use any drying-place, or other place for making the same fit for use, other than such of which he hath first given notice in writing to the officer, on the penalty of 20*l*.

By 42 Geo. III., c. 94, s. 11 & 12, certain regulations are enacted for regulating the making of pasteboard.

By sect. 13. No maker of pasteboard shall carry on the business of a maker of paper, nor carry on the business of making pasteboard, within one quarter of a mile of any mill or manufactory for making paper, on pain of forfeiting 100/.

19. Paper.

Sect. 14. Pasteboard made in Great Britain of paper that has been duly charged with the duties shall not be charged with any further duties.

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 18. "That every maker and manufacturer of pasteboard (not made at any mill) from paper of the first class and denomination only, for being cut into and sold by him or her as cards not exceeding the size of sixty-four square inches, or playing cards, and every maker of bottle-stands, spectacle-cases, tea-trays, or any other wares or articles of merchandise made from or with paper, pasted or united together, and moulded into such articles, shall be deemed a pasteboard-maker, and shall be subject and liable to take out and pay for a licence as a pasteboard-maker, and to make entry of his or her premises as such at the proper office of Excise; and that every such maker and manufacturer shall from time to time give notice as a pasteboard-maker, and as required by law of pasteboard-makers, of opening any reams of paper for the purpose of the sheets thereof being pasted or united together as aforesaid, and shall, at the end of every such quarter of a year as aforesaid, make and render to the proper officer of Excise an entry in writing, signed by such maker or his foreman with his christian and surname, of the whole weight of the paper, distinguishing the class or denomination thereof, used and employed by him or her in such quarter as aforesaid, and that he and she respectively have not in such quarter used or employed, or permitted to be used or employed as aforesaid, any other than such paper as was opened in the presence of the proper officer, and is mentioned and entered in such quarterly account as aforesaid; and if any such maker or manufacturer as aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to take out and pay for such licence as aforesaid, or to make such entry at the proper office of Excise as aforesaid, or to make or render such quarterly entry or account as aforesaid, or shall not make true and faithful entries and accounts as aforesaid, or any such pasteboard-maker for cards as aforesaid shall use or employ any other than first class paper for that purpose, or shall make or sell any pasteboard, except cut into cards not exceeding the size of sixty-four square inches, or playing cards, every such maker or manufacturer shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100/.; and no such maker or manufacturer as aforesaid, who shall take out and pay for such licence and make such entry at the next office of Excise, and make and render such quarterly account as aforesaid, and observe, fulfil, and keep the conditions hereinbefore mentioned, shall be subject or liable to any other of the rules or regulations relating to makers of pasteboard; any thing to the contrary thereof in any other act or acts notwithstanding."

Who shall be deemed pasteboard-makers.

Pasteboard-maker to take out a licence and make entry of his premises.
Notice to be given of opening reams, and an account rendered of the quantity used quarterly.

Penalty on neglect. 100/.

By 56 Geo. III., c. 103, s. 19. "That for the purpose of enabling the proper officer or officers of Excise to make an annual balance of the whole quantity of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard respectively made by any maker or makers of paper in the preceding year, and of the quantity thereof respectively charged with duty, every such maker or makers shall, on the 5th day of July, in each year, or at such time or times as any such maker or makers shall decline or leave off business, or assign or transfer such business to any other person or persons not being a partner with such maker or makers, on notice being for that purpose given by the proper officer or officers of Excise to such maker or makers, seven days at the least before such account as is hereinafter mentioned shall be taken, and such balance made, lay and place the whole of his, her, or their uncharged stock and loose paper reduced into reams and odd quires as first hereinbefore mentioned, and millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard, in dozens and odd sheets, in such manner or order that the same may be conveniently numbered, weighed, or otherwise taken account of by such officer or officers of Excise; and all and every such maker or makers shall and are hereby required, with his, her, or their servants or workmen, to give all needful and requisite aid and assistance to such officer or officers in numbering, weighing, or otherwise taking account of such uncharged or loose paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard respectively, as by such officer or officers may be found necessary for making such balance as aforesaid; and that such account of the quantity of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard respectively, and of the kinds, sorts, and quantities of each in the custody or possession of all and every such maker or makers as aforesaid, shall, upon such notice as aforesaid, be first taken account of by such officer or officers as aforesaid on the 10th day of October, 1816; and if any such maker or makers, or any other person or persons whatsoever, shall oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in taking such account as aforesaid, or shall refuse or neglect to lay, place, and keep his quantity of uncharged or loose paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, and pasteboard in such manner or order as aforesaid, or shall refuse or neglect, when thereto required, to give to any such officer or officers such aid or assistance, or shall hide or conceal any such paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, or pasteboard from the sight and inspection of such officer or officers, or shall use any art, means, or contrivance to prevent any such officer or officers from taking a just and true account thereof, every such maker or makers shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 58, s. 19. "That no maker of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard shall, on comparing the quantity thereof respectively contained and inserted in the entries required by the said recited act, added to the uncharged stock of such maker, shall be charged with duties on any deficiency of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively, unless the deficiency of such quantity contained and inserted in such entries, added to the uncharged stock of such maker, shall be found to be more than ten per centum under and below the account entered and kept of the paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard respectively which shall have been daily made by such maker, and of which no account is to be so kept as aforesaid, any thing in the said act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding; and every such maker as aforesaid shall, at the time of making such annual balance as provided and required by the said recited act, make out and deliver to the proper officer, at his request, a just and true account according to the best of his or her knowledge, information, and belief, and signed by him or her, or his or her foreman or manager, of the whole of his or her uncharged stock of paper, millboard, button-board, button-paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard respectively, distinguishing the class, and denomination, and quantity of each, and the respective rooms and places and state and condition in which the same are deposited; and if any such maker shall knowingly, or wilfully, or negligently make out or deliver an untrue account thereof as aforesaid, or any such maker shall not make out and upon request as aforesaid deliver such account as aforesaid, every such maker shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

By 1 Geo. I., stat. 2, c. 36, s. 17. Before any paper shall be printed, painted, or stained, the officer shall be permitted to take an account of the quantities and dimensions of all paper in the possession of any such printer, &c.; and shall mark every sheet and piece with a stamp, to denote that such account has been taken.

By stat. 26 Geo. III., c. 78, s. 2. Every paper printer, painter, or stainer shall once in every fortnight make entry in writing upon oath, or on the oath of his chief workman, at the next office for the said duties, of all paper by him printed, painted, or stained within that time, and such entry shall contain the kinds and quantities thereof respectively, on pain of 50*l*.

Sect. 3. And every stainer shall, within a fortnight after, pay the duties for all such paper, on pain of forfeiting double duty; and no person, after default in payment, shall sell or deliver out any paper until he hath paid the duty, on pain of forfeiting double the value thereof.

Sect. 5. Before any paper shall be printed, painted, or stained, the officer shall be permitted to take account of the dimensions, and shall stamp or seal every sheet and piece, to denote that such account hath been taken; and where a single sheet shall be painted, the same shall be produced to the officer, who shall take an account thereof; and if he finds that every sheet is marked or stamped, he shall measure the same, and mark such piece or sheet at both ends with a frame-mark, denoting the measure thereof, and with such other number or mark as the commissioners shall direct; and if any printer, &c. shall begin to print, paint, or stain any sheet of paper before it is so measured and marked, he shall forfeit 20*l*. and also such paper, which may be seized.

Sect. 9. As soon as any paper shall have been printed, painted, or stained with any colour or figure, the officer shall take an account and charge the duties, and shall stamp every piece, where a single sheet, at both ends; and if any such stainer shall remove or send away, or suffer to be removed or sent away, any piece or sheet of such paper before the same has been and 50*l.* penalty to be incurred for every piece of paper removed before stamped, with forfeiture of the paper. Officers to charge for paper missing. Pieces cut for samples must be marked by the officer on every sample. Paper removed before stamping forfeits 20*l.* &c.

Paper not charged with the duties to be kept separate, on penalty of 50*l.*

Persons fraudulently concealing paper to forfeit 100*l.*

Persons keeping paper in any place, of which notice has not been given to the officer, to forfeit 50*l.* and the paper.

Warrants may be granted to search for paper suspected not to be duly stamped, which may be seized.

Persons obstructing officers, &c. forfeit 50*l.* But no remnant of a piece of less length than the frame-mark to be forfeited, for not having stamps at both ends. Paper not having the frame-mark, or being marked at one end only, &c. to be forfeited, and also 50*l.*

Commissioners to provide proper marks, &c.; and the officers in using them to do the least possible damage to the paper. Penalty on forging marks, &c.

taken account of and stamped as aforesaid, he shall forfeit 50*l.*; and also such paper may be seized if found in the possession of any dealer in printed, painted, or stained paper.

By 1 Geo. I., stat. 2, c. 36, s. 17, and 26 Geo. III., c. 78, s. 10. If any officer shall miss any quantity of paper, whereof he had so taken an account, and shall not, on reasonable demand, receive satisfaction what is become of it, he may charge the duties for it.

By 26 Geo. III., c. 78, s. 8. Pieces cut into samples or remnants shall be stamped by the officer, to whom six hours' notice shall be given by such stainer of the time he intends to cut the same.

By 1 Geo. I., st. 2, c. 36, s. 18. No person shall remove any such painted paper until the officer hath taken an account of the quantity thereof, and until every piece or parcel shall be marked or stamped, on pain of 20*l.*; and the said paper being found in the possession of any stationer or other dealer, or other persons for his use, shall also be forfeited.

By 26 Geo. III., c. 78, s. 11. Every stainer shall keep all paper by him printed, painted, or stained, and which hath not been stamped and charged with the duties, separate from the paper that hath been charged, on pain of 50*l.*

Sect. 12. If any printer, &c. shall fraudulently hide or conceal any printed, painted, or stained paper, with intent to defraud His Majesty, he shall forfeit 100*l.*

Sect. 16. No stainer, &c. shall keep any paper which hath been marked and stamped, in any unentered place; and if any paper which hath been printed, painted, or stained, whether marked or stamped or not, shall be found in the possession of any stainer in such unentered place, he shall forfeit 50*l.* and also the paper, which may be seized.

Sect. 17. Upon oath made before two commissioners within their limits, or one justice, by any person, that he hath reason to suspect or believe that any such paper is in the custody of any stainer, or other person trading therein, without having thereupon such stamp as by this act is directed, the said commissioners or justice may issue their warrant or order, authorizing any officer of the said duties, with the assistance of a constable or other peace-officer, in the daytime, to search for the same, and to open doors, chests, trunks, and packages, and to seize such paper, and to bring the same to the next Excise office, which shall be forfeited; and if any person shall obstruct any officer from entering any such place, and in seizing or carrying away such paper, he shall forfeit 50*l.* Provided, that no remnant, being of less length than shall be expressed by the frame-mark thereon, so found having the stamp at one end thereof, shall be forfeited by reason of not having the stamp at both ends thereof.

Sect. 18. To prevent fraud by adding to the length of any piece of stained paper, after the same hath been stamped at both ends, if any piece or remnant of stained paper, not having such stamp and frame-mark thereon, or at one end thereof only, and being of as great or greater length than shall be expressed by such frame-mark, or having such marks at both ends thereof, shall be of a greater length by half a yard or more than expressed by such frame-mark, the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized, and the stainer, &c. or dealer in whose possession the same is found shall forfeit 50*l.*

Sect. 13. The commissioners of the duties shall provide numbers or marks to denote the measure, and stamps or seals to denote the charging the duties; and if any person shall counterfeit or forge any frame, number, or mark used by the officers, or the impression of the same, upon any paper to be printed, painted, or stained, he shall forfeit 100*l.*; or if he shall counterfeit or forge any stamp or seal to resemble those provided in pursuance of this act, or the impression of the same, upon any paper, in order to defraud His Majesty, he shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy; and if any person shall sell any paper with such counterfeit stamp knowing the same, with like intent, he shall forfeit 100*l.* But see stat. 52 Geo. III., c. 143, ante, p. 546, 547.

19. Paper.

Sect. 14, 15. If any stainer, &c. shall wilfully cut out, obliterate, or deface the frame-mark, number, or mark, or wilfully suffer the same to be done, or shall affix upon any piece or sheet of paper any frame-mark, or stamp, or seal which shall have been before affixed on any other piece or sheet of paper, with intent to defraud His Majesty, he shall forfeit 50*l.* and such piece or sheet.

Defacing marks.

Sect. 19. Printed, painted, or stained paper may be exported on certain conditions specified in the act; but the same shall not be permitted to be packed up in order to be exported, not having the stamps by this act directed, and also the frame-marks plain at both ends of every piece, where a single sheet; and the officer who shall attend to see such paper packed up shall measure the same, and see that the said stamps and frame-marks are cut off from both ends of every piece or single sheet.

If paper stained before Sept. 1, 1786, is exported, oath to be made of the fact.

No paper stained after Sept. 1, 1786, to be permitted to be packed for exportation, unless legally marked, &c.

Sect. 20. All penalties, fines, and forfeitures shall be sued for, recovered, levied, and mitigated as by the laws of Excise, (a) or in the courts at Westminster, half to the king and half to him who shall inform or sue.

Officer to measure paper exported, and cut off the marks, &c.

And by 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 55, and 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 21, all paper, materials, and utensils in custody of the maker, or of any to his use, or in trust for him, shall be liable to all duties in arrear, and to all forfeitures relating to the said duties, in the same manner as if the offender or debtor were the lawful owner.

How fines are to be recovered and applied. Utensils liable.

We have seen that the general licensing act, 6 Geo. IV., c. 81, s. 35, which repeals all prior acts relating to licences, expressly except licences to persons trading in, vending, or selling gold and silver plate in Great Britain and Ireland; ante, 262.

Licence.

By 31 Geo. II., c. 32, s. 2, 3. Each person trading in, selling, or vending gold or silver plate, is compellable to take out a licence.

And by 43 Geo. III., c. 69, sch. (A.) Every person trading in, vending, or selling (c) any gold or silver plate, or any goods

(b) The 6 Geo. IV., c. 118, s. 2, places the duties on licences for trading in, vending, or selling any gold or silver plate, under the management of the commissioners of stamps, and they are to be deemed and taken to be stamp duties. However, it is deemed expedient to retain this head of revenue in this place.

(c) The statute 43 Geo. III., c. 69, described the persons who are to take out licences as persons using the trade of selling gold or silver plate, or any goods or wares composed of gold or silver, or in which any gold or silver shall be manufactured, and persons employed to sell any gold or silver plate, or any such goods or wares as aforesaid, at any auction or public sale, or by commission: but a person who sold one piece of old plate to an innkeeper, at a price set upon it by a silversmith, as what it was worth for use, was held not to be liable to a penalty for selling plate without taking out a licence, this being only a singular and isolated instance. *The King v. ## 21. Plate.

Persons selling silver or gold watches in which are contained a certain quantity of those metals not liable to the licence duty of 2*l.* 6*s.* granted by recited act.

Gold or silver goods offered for sale, &c. to be deemed as such, according to 55 Geo. III., c. 30, and 43 Geo. III., c. 69.

In copartnerships, where trade is carried on in one house only, one licence is sufficient.

Executors, &c. of persons having licences may carry on trade till licences expire.

in which any quantity of gold exceeding two pennyweights, and under two ounces in weight, or any quantity of silver exceeding five pennyweights and under thirty ounces' weight, in one distinct ware, is manufactured, shall pay for every such licence

And by 55 Geo. III., c. 30, an additional sum of

But by 59 Geo. III., c. 32, s. 2. "That from and after the passing of this act, no person trading in, vending, or selling silver or gold watches, and who shall not trade in, vend, or sell, or offer or expose to sale, any other gold or silver plate, or any other goods or wares in which any quantity of gold exceeding two pennyweights and under two ounces in weight, or any quantity of silver exceeding five pennyweights and under thirty ounces in weight, in any one separate and distinct ware or piece of goods, is or are or shall be manufactured, shall be required or liable to pay for or upon any such licence as aforesaid the said sum of 2*l.* 6*s.* by the said recited act granted and imposed, any thing in the said recited act or this act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 3. "That all goods, wares, and merchandise which shall be sold or offered for sale, or taken in pawn, or delivered out as and for gold or silver respectively, shall be deemed and taken to be gold or silver respectively within the intent and meaning of the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year aforesaid, and of this act, and also of an act made in the forty-third year of His present Majesty's reign, for repealing the duties of Excise payable in Great Britain, and granting other duties in lieu thereof, and of all other acts now or which shall hereafter be in force relating to His Majesty's revenue of Excise."

And by 43 Geo. III., c. 69, sch. (A.) Every person trading in, vending, or selling any gold or silver plate, or any goods in which any quantity of gold of the weight of two ounces or upwards, or any quantity of silver of the weight of thirty ounces or upwards, in one distinct ware, is manufactured; and every pawnbroker trading in, vending, or selling gold or silver plate, or goods or wares in which any quantity of gold or silver is manufactured, or taking in or delivering out pawns of such plate, goods, or wares; and every refiner, for every such licence

By the 43 Geo. III., c. 69, these duties were imposed without limitation of time; those by the 55 Geo. III., c. 30, were granted till 5th April, 1819, but 3 Geo. IV., c. 27, extended them to 5th July, 1826; and see 9 Geo. IV., c. 49, post, 565.

By 31 Geo. II., c. 32, s. 4, and 32 Geo. II., c. 24, s. 3. The said licences are to be renewed annually ten days before the end of the year, on pain of forfeiting 20*l.*

But by 31 Geo. II., c. 32, s. 7. Persons in partnership, carrying on their trade in one house or shop only, shall not be obliged to take out more than one licence for one year.

By 53 Geo. III., c. 103. "That, upon the death of any person or persons so licensed, or upon the removal of any person or persons so licensed from the house or premises in which such his, her, or their licence shall authorize him, her, or them to make or manufacture, trade, deal in, vend, or sell any of the commodities aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful to and for the commissioners of Excise in England and Scotland respectively for the time being, or any one or more of them, and to and for the several collectors and supervisors of Excise in England and Scotland respectively within their respective collections and districts, to authorize and empower the executors, administrators, or the wife or child of such deceased person, or the assignee or assigns of such person or persons so removing, who shall be possessed of such house or premises, in like manner to make or manufacture, trade, deal in, vend, or sell the several sorts of commodities mentioned in such licence in the same house or premises where such person or persons so licensed by virtue of such licence carried on such trade, during the residue of the term for which such licence was originally granted, without taking out a new licence during the residue of the said term."

By 32 Geo. II., c. 24, s. 1. No person shall be liable to take out any licence for trading in, vending, or selling any quantity of gold not exceeding two pennyweights, or of silver not exceeding five pennyweights, in any one separate and distinct ware or piece of goods.

By 31 Geo. II., c. 32, s. 6. All persons using the trade of selling gold or silver plate, or any goods or wares composed of gold or silver, or in which any gold or silver shall be manufactured, and also all persons employed to sell any gold or silver plate, or any such goods or wares aforesaid, at any auction or public sale, shall respectively be deemed traders in, sellers, or venders of gold or silver plate, and shall take out a licence for the same.

By 32 Geo. II., c. 24, s. 4. No pawnbroker shall (either publicly or privately) trade in or sell any gold or silver plate, or any goods or wares in which any gold or silver shall be manufactured, nor shall any person use the trade of a refiner of gold or silver, without taking out and renewing yearly such a licence.

Sect. 4. And every such pawnbroker and refiner shall be deemed to use the trade of selling or vending gold or silver plate.

Sect. 4. If any pawnbroker shall trade in or sell any gold or silver plate, or any goods or wares in which any gold or silver shall be manufactured, or shall practise the business of a refiner, without such licence, or shall not have renewed the same yearly, and made such payment as aforesaid, he shall forfeit 20*l*.

By 31 Geo. II., c. 32, s. 7. No licence shall authorize any person to whom the same may be granted, and who shall sell such gold or silver plate in shops, to trade in or sell such gold or silver plate in any other shop or place, except in such houses or places thereunto belonging, wherein he shall inhabit and dwell at the time of granting such licence, or in booths or stalls at fairs or markets.

Sect. 11. Prosecutions for offences may be in the courts at Westminster, or otherwise: if within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London, the same may be before three commissioners of Excise; and, in case of appeal, before the commissioners of appeal; and elsewhere, before two justices residing near to the place where the offence was committed: and if either informers or defendants shall think themselves aggrieved by the judgment of such justices, it shall be lawful for them to appeal to the next quarter-sessions, who shall hear and determine the same, and whose judgment shall be final. See 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, ante, p. 286.

Sect. 11. The said commissioners of Excise and commissioners for appeals (in case of appeal) and justices respectively shall, upon complaint or information on oath, summon the party accused; and upon his appearance or contempt shall proceed to the examination of the fact; and on due proof made thereof by confession or oath of one witness shall give judgment, and issue warrants under their hands for levying the penalties by distress, and to cause sale of the goods levied upon (if not redeemed in 14 days), and for want of sufficient distress shall imprison the offender till satisfaction be made.

By 32 Geo. II., c. 24, s. 8. They may mitigate the said penalty of 20*l*. as by the laws of Excise.

Sect. 12. All forfeitures (the necessary charges for the recovery thereof being first deducted) shall be distributed half to the king, and half to him who shall inform or sue.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 118, s. 2. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, the duties and sums of money granted and made payable by any act or acts now in force upon or in respect of licences to persons trading in, vending, or selling in Great Britain any gold or silver plate, and also upon Traders in or venders of small gold and silver wares exempted from taking out a licence for the same.

Persons deemed traders in and venders of plate within the act, and liable to take out licences.

Pawnbrokers and refiners deemed traders in and venders of gold and silver wares, and liable to take a licence, and renew the same yearly; on penalty of forfeiting 20*l*.

Licence to serve for the house, &c. only for which it was granted.

Prosecutions for recovery of penalties, when to be heard and determined by two justices; and in cases of appeal, by the justices at their quarter-session.

Summoning offenders; and proceeding to the examination of the matter of fact, and giving judgment, and awarding execution thereupon, and for want of distress to commit the party.

Application of penalties.

how sued for.

or in respect of licences to pawnbrokers trading in, vending, or selling gold and silver plate, or taking in or delivering out pawns of such plate, and also the duty upon or in respect of licences to refiners of gold or silver in Great Britain, shall continue in force, and shall be paid and payable to and shall be under the management of the commissioners of the stamps in Great Britain for the time being, and shall be denominated and be deemed and taken to be stamp duties."

Sect. 3. "That all goods or wares which shall be sold or offered for sale, or taken in pawn, or delivered out as and for gold or silver respectively in any part of Great Britain, shall be deemed and taken to be gold or silver respectively within the intent and meaning of this act, or any other act or acts. Provided always, that gold or silver lace, or gold or silver wire, thread, or fringe, shall not be deemed gold or silver plate within the meaning of this act or any other act or acts, and that it shall not be necessary for any person or persons trading in or selling or vending gold and silver lace or gold or silver wire, and thread, or fringe, in Great Britain, to take out any licence for trading in or selling gold or silver plate in Great Britain."

Sect. 4. "That all and singular the powers and authorities, rules, regulations, and directions in any wise relating to the said duties upon gold and silver plate, or to the granting any such licences as aforesaid, or to the duties upon or in respect of all or any of such licences respectively contained in the said hereinbefore recited acts or any of them, or in any other act or acts relating to such duties or licences respectively in force on or immediately before the passing of this act (except so far as the same shall be inconsistent with the express provisions of this act), shall be used, executed, exercised, and put in force for the securing and collecting of any such duties as aforesaid, and for the granting of any such licences respectively by the commissioners of stamps in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if all and singular such powers and authorities, rules, regulations, and directions had been originally given and granted to such commissioners of stamp duties respectively, and as if the same were repeated and re-enacted in this act; and it shall be lawful for such commissioners of stamps respectively to grant all such licences, and to manage all such duties respectively, in like manner as the commissioners of Excise respectively might have done before the said 5th day of July, 1825, under and by virtue of any of the said acts; and that all fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by any such act or acts in respect of any matter or thing to be done, or refused or neglected to be done, by any person or persons in any wise relating to such duties or any of them respectively, shall be incurred and forfeited, and shall and may be sued for, recovered, levied, mitigated, and applied upon or in respect of the doing or neglecting or refusing to do any acts, matters, or things relating to the said duties and licences respectively, by this act placed under the management of the said commissioners of stamps."

Sect. 5. "That all powers, provisions, clauses, regulations, and directions, and all fines, forfeitures, pains, and penalties contained in and imposed by any act or acts in force in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, immediately before the passing of this act, in relation to any of the duties under the management of the commissioners of stamps in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, so far as the said acts or any of them can be made applicable to the said duties on gold and silver plate, and to the duties on such licences as aforesaid respectively, shall be of full force and effect, and shall be observed, applied, enforced, and put in execution with respect to the duties by this act placed under the management of the said commissioners of stamps in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, and for the stamping and marking such plate, and the vellum, parchment, and paper on which any such licences shall be granted, and for preventing, detecting, and punishing all frauds, forgeries, and other offences relating to the said duties, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if all such powers and authorities, rules, regulations, and directions, provisions, fines, pains, penalties, and forfeitures had been repeated and specially enacted in this present act, and had been applied to the duties by this act continued in force, and placed under the management of the said commissioners of stamps respectively."

Sect. 6. "That from and after the said 5th day of July, 1825, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps in Ireland to stay the proceedings in any prosecution commenced by their direction for the recovery of any penalty or penalties incurred by any person or persons under this act, or under any other act or acts in force immediately before the passing of this act, relating to any of the duties under the management of the said commissioners of stamps, on payment of part only of any such penalty or penalties, with or without costs, or on payment only of the costs incurred in such prosecution, or any part thereof, as the said commissioners shall judge proper and expedient; and that it shall also be lawful for the said commissioners at their discretion to give all or any part of the sums paid by way of penalty in any such prosecution as aforesaid to or among the person or persons informing them of the offences in respect of which any such penalty shall be incurred or paid; any thing in any former act or acts contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Commissioners of stamps in Ireland may stay proceedings for the recovery of penalties, &c.

By 9 Geo. IV., c. 49, s. 12. "That every licence which shall have been granted at any time before the passing of this act, or which shall be granted at any time before the 31st day of July, 1828, to any person trading in, vending, or selling any gold or silver plate, or any gold or silver goods or wares, or to any pawnbroker trading in, vending, or selling any gold or silver plate, or taking or delivering out pawns of such plate, goods, or wares, or to any refiner of gold or silver, in Great Britain, or to any person for using or exercising the trade or business of a pawnbroker in Great Britain, shall cease and determine from the said 31st day of July, 1828; and that every licence which at any time after the 31st day of July, and before the 1st day of September, 1828, or in any subsequent year, shall be granted by the commissioners of stamps, or their proper officer, to any person for any of the purposes aforesaid, shall bear date on the 1st day of August in such year respectively; and that every such licence which shall be granted at any other time in the year 1828, or in any subsequent year, shall be dated on the day on which such licence shall be actually granted; and every such licence, whatever may be the date thereof, shall have effect and be in force from the day of the date thereof until and upon the 31st day of July then next following, and shall then cease and determine."

Plate and pawn-brokers' licences to expire annually on 31st July.

Sect. 13. "That it shall be lawful for the commissioners of stamps, and they are hereby authorized and required, to make and pay, in such manner and under such regulations as they shall direct, to any and every person who shall have obtained and be in possession of any certificate or licence which under the provisions of this act shall cease and determine before the expiration of the full term for which such certificate or licence shall have been originally granted, an allowance of a proportionate part of the stamp duty originally paid on such certificate or licence, according to the term or period then to come or unexpired thereon."

Proportionate allowance to be made upon certificates and licences unexpired.

Sect. 14. "That no such allowance shall in any case be made to any person who shall not take out a new certificate or licence under the provisions of this act, nor unless the certificate or licence in respect of which such allowance shall be claimed shall be delivered up to the said commissioners of stamps, or their proper officer, on or before the 5th day of April, 1829; and the said commissioners of stamps, or their officer, shall cancel all certificates or licences so delivered up, and on which such allowance shall be made."

Allowance not to be made in certain cases.

6 Geo. IV., c. 111, imposes certain duties of Customs upon plate imported, and which are stated ante, 139.

Duties of Customs.

By 1 Geo. IV., c. 14, s. 1. "That no drawback or allowance shall be paid, nor any debenture given, on the exportation to foreign parts of any plate of gold wrought or manufactured in Great Britain into rings; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

26. Soap.

Place of making
to be entered.

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 6, and 47 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 30, s. 6. No maker of soap shall set up, alter, enlarge, or use any boiling-house, workhouse, warehouse, storehouse, shop, room, or other place for the making or keeping of soap, or for the boiling or keeping any oil, tallow, potash, lime, or other materials proper to be made into soap, or use any copper, kettle, furnace, fat, cistern, trough, or other vessel for the boiling or making of soap, without first giving notice thereof in writing at the next office for the said duties, on pain of 200*l*. See also stat. 58 Geo. III., c. 65, s. 7.

By 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 19. All soap, oil, tallow, and other materials for making soap which shall be found in any private boiling-house, workhouse, warehouse, or other place, and all private coppers, kettles, furnaces, troughs, and other vessels, for which no entry shall be made or notice given, shall be forfeited, and the value thereof, and shall be seized by the officers for the duties on soap.

offenders.

And by 5 Geo. III. c. 43, s. 19. Whereas offenders frequently withdraw themselves to avoid the aforesaid penalty of clandestine making of soap, it is enacted, that a summons left at the place where discovery shall be made of such offence, directed to the person who shall be prosecuted for keeping or having made use of any place for the making or keeping of soap, or the boiling or keeping any oil, tallow, potash, lime, or other materials proper to be made into soap, or for using or having used any copper or other vessel for the boiling or making of soap, without notice given by his right or assumed name, shall be as effectual as if delivered personally, and directed to him by his proper name.

to be provided.

By 5 Geo. III., c. 43, s. 15, and 12 Geo. III., c. 46, s. 7. Every person who shall make any hard soap [and by 32 Geo. III., c. 21, the same is extended to every maker of soap] shall at his own expense provide sufficient wooden covers (to be approved of in writing by the surveyor or supervisor) to every copper, pan, or other utensil wherein he shall boil or make any hard soap; which vessels, &c. and also the pipes that convey the waste or salt lees therefrom, shall be locked and sealed down by the officer as soon as the fire is withdrawn, whenever any soap or any thing of a soapy quality shall be left therein; which said locks and keys, and all other necessary fastenings for securing the said vessels and pipes, shall be provided by the surveyor or supervisor at the expense of the maker. And if any person shall make any soap before he shall have affixed such covers, or shall refuse to pay for the locks and keys and other fastenings, or shall wilfully break or damage any such lock or seal or other fastening, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

Furnace doors,
&c. to be locked.

By 17 Geo. III., c. 52, s. 8; 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 48, s. 9; 32 Geo. III., c. 21. The cover and furnace door and ash-hole door of every copper, pan, or other utensil used by any maker of hard soap shall be securely locked and sealed down by the officer at all times except when the same shall be at work, or shall be opened for repairing the same, or for the inspection of an officer; and proper locks and keys and other necessary fastenings for securing the said covers and doors shall be provided by the surveyors and supervisors at the expense of such maker. And whenever such maker shall be desirous of opening such copper, pan, or other utensil, or the furnace or ash-hole door, he shall give, if in London, 12 hours', elsewhere 24 hours', notice thereof to the officer, who shall attend to open such doors; and if by any device any person shall open such copper, pan, or other utensil, or the furnace or ash-hole door thereof, after the same shall have been so locked and secured, or shall wilfully damage or hurt any such lock or other fastening, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

and survey.

By 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 48, s. 7. 10. The officers shall at all times, by day or by night, and without waiting for a constable, be permitted, on request, to enter the house, boiling-house, warehouse, or other place used by any maker of soap, and by gauging, weighing, or otherwise, take an account of the quantity of soap, and also of all materials for the making thereof, in the possession of such maker, and shall be permitted to stay in such house or other place so long as he shall think fit; and shall make a return thereof in writing to the commissioners, or whom they shall appoint, leaving a true copy, if demanded, with the maker; and if such officer shall refuse or neglect to leave such copy (after demand in writing), he shall forfeit 40s.; and if any maker shall obstruct such officer, he shall forfeit 50l.

By 17 Geo. III., c. 52, s. 9. When any copper, pan, or other utensil used for the making of soap, or the furnace doors thereof, shall be secured as in this act, and by stat. 5 Geo. III., c. 48, is directed, the surveyor and supervisor or other superior officer shall, between the hours of five in the morning and eleven in the evening, be permitted, on demand, to enter every workhouse of such maker, and after entry to unlock and examine every such copper, pan, or utensil, and the doors thereof, and after such examination shall again lock and secure the same; and if any person shall obstruct the officer herein, he shall forfeit 100l.

Sect. 10, 11, 12. No maker shall have any private pipe or conveyance, by which any soap or materials making into soap may be conveyed from his copper, &c. into any place whatever, on pain of 200l. for every pipe or conveyance; and the officer, in the daytime, and in presence of a constable, on request made and cause declared, may break up the ground in any soap-house, or the ground near adjoining, or any wall, partition, or other place, to search; and if he finds any such pipe or other conveyance, he may break up the house, wall, partition, or place through which the pipe shall lead, and break up or cut the same; and if any person shall obstruct the officer in such search, he shall forfeit 100l.

Sect. 12. Provided, that if upon search no such pipe shall be found, the officer shall make good the ground, wall, or other place, or make satisfaction to the owner, to be adjudged by the two next justices; or such owner may bring his action for the damages.

Sect. 14. The maker shall once in every lunar month perfectly cleanse every copper, pan, or other utensil by him used in the boiling or making of soap, and shall give three days' notice thereof to the officer; and when cleansed, the officer shall make search, and if he find any hole not before known, such hole shall be deemed wilfully made for the purpose of conveying away soap from the sight of the officer before an account had been taken of the same; and the owner shall be liable to the penalties for concealing soap (that is, he shall forfeit 500l., stat. 1 Geo. I., st. 2, c. 36, s. 14, 15) unless he shall prove that it was made by bursting or other accident since the last survey, and that he had given notice thereof to the officer who first came on survey after such accident happened. And if such maker shall neglect perfectly to cleanse his copper, pan, or other utensil so used, or to give such notice as aforesaid, or shall obstruct the officer in searching and examining, he shall forfeit 50l.

Coppers, &c. to be cleaned.

By 59 Geo. III., c. 90, s. 1. "That from and after the 31st day of July, 1819, all and every maker and makers of white, yellow, brown, or soft soap shall, before he, she, or they shall begin to cleanse or take any such soap from or out of any copper, pan, or vessel by him, her, or them used for the boiling or making of such soap, give to the officer of the division or place where such soap is intended to be cleansed notice in writing of the particular time and hour when such maker of soap intends to cleanse or take such soap from or out of such copper, pan, or vessel, as hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say), if such soap is intended to be cleansed at any place within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London, then such notice shall be so given six hours next before the time of beginning to cleanse or take such soap from or out of such copper, pan, or vessel; and if such soap is intended to be cleansed at any place out of the limits aforesaid, then such notice shall be so given twelve hours next before the time of beginning to cleanse or take such soap from or out of such copper, pan, or vessel; and if any such maker or makers of soap shall begin to cleanse as aforesaid any white, yellow, brown, or soft soap, without giving such notice as aforesaid, he, she, or they shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100l.; and if any such maker or makers shall not begin to cleanse and take such soap from and out of the copper, pan, or vessel as aforesaid within the space of three hours next after the particular time or hour mentioned in any such notice, then such notice shall be void and of none effect; and every maker of soap who, after the expiration of the said space of three hours, shall begin to cleanse or take any soap from or out of any copper, pan, or vessel, without having first given a new and other like notice as aforesaid, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100l."

Notice to be given to the officer of the time intended to cleanse or take soap out of the copper, &c.

By 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 48, s. 8. No maker shall have any pipe or other conveyance from or to any copper or pan made use of in boiling or making soap, except one moveable pump for taking out salt or spent lees, which pump shall be taken out of such copper or pan before locked down by the officer; and no maker shall have any cock or hole in the side, or curb, or bottom, or cover of such boiler or copper (except small holes not exceeding one-eighth of an inch in diameter on the cover to let the steam through), nor shall have any part of the curb moveable, nor shall use any syphon, crane, or trinket, but shall take out all lees, soap, or other ingredients by a pump or ladle only, on pain of forfeiting 500l.

By 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 33. 35. Every maker of soap, before he shall charge his copper with any materials for making of soap, shall give to the officer notice in writing of the time and hour each making of soap is intended to be begun, if within the limits of the bills of mortality, 12 hours, and if in any other place, 24 hours, before the beginning of such making, on pain of forfeiting 50l.; and if such making shall not be begun in six hours within the bills of mortality, and in 12 hours in any other place, after the time mentioned in such notice, the same shall be void; and every maker who shall begin after the expiration of such times, without having given a new notice, shall incur the like penalty as if he had not given notice.

Sect. 34. Putting lees or lye into the copper, or other utenail used for making of soap, shall be deemed a beginning to work.

By 59 Geo. III., c. 90, s. 4. "That from and after the said 31st day of July, 1819, no person or persons whatsoever shall make or manufacture for sale or sell any lees, ley or lye, fit or proper for the making or manufacture of soap, or shall grind or pound for sale any barilla, or sell any ground or pounded barilla exceeding 28lbs. weight of such barilla at any one time; and if any person or persons shall make or manufacture for sale or sell any lees, ley or lye, fit or proper for the making or manufacture of soap, or shall grind or pound for sale any barilla, or sell any ground or pounded barilla exceeding 28lbs. weight of such barilla at any one time, every person so offending shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100l., and all such lees, ley and lye, and ground or pounded barilla respectively, shall be forfeited, together with all vessels or packages containing the same, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 7. "That from and after the said 31st day of July, every melter of tallow, fat, grease, or kitchen-stuff, not being an entered maker of candles, shall give notice in writing at the office of Excise of every house, workhouse, room, and place made use of by him or them for the melting, rendering, or keeping of any tallow, fat, grease, or kitchen-stuff, within the compass or limits whereof such house, workhouse, room, or place respectively shall be situate, before he, she, or they shall so make use of any such house, workhouse, room, or place; and it shall and may be lawful for any officer or officers of Excise to enter every house, workhouse, room, and place entered or made use of by any melter or melters of tallow, fat, or grease for the melting, rendering, or keeping of tallow, fat, grease, and kitchen-stuff, or any or either of them, and to inspect and survey and take an account of all tallow, fat, grease, and kitchen-stuff, and other materials, in the custody or possession of any melter or melters thereof, and to take any sample thereof respectively, or of any part thereof, not exceeding 1lb. for each such sample, paying for the same at the current value thereof; and if any melter of tallow, fat, grease, or kitchen-stuff shall make use of any house, workhouse, room, or place for the melting, rendering, or keeping of any tallow, fat, grease, or kitchen-stuff, without having first made entry of such house, workhouse, room, and place respectively at the office of Excise within the compass and limits whereof the same shall be situated; or if any such person or persons, not being an entered soap maker or makers, shall have in his, her, or their custody or possession any barilla, kelp, black ashes, or any lees, ley or lye; or if any such person or persons shall at any time obstruct or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in or from entering any house, workhouse, room, or place entered or made use of by any melter or melters of tallow, fat, grease, or kitchen-stuff for the melting, rendering, or keeping of any tallow, fat, grease, or kitchen-stuff, or in or from inspecting, surveying, or taking an account or sample aforesaid of any tallow, fat, grease, or kitchen-stuff, or other materials, barilla, kelp, black ashes, lees, ley or lye, in the custody or possession of any melter or melters thereof; such melter or melters and person and persons respectively so offending shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200l.; and all barilla, kelp, black ashes, lees, ley or lye, found in the possession of any such person or persons, not being an entered soap maker or makers, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Barilla, &c. not allowed unless in a soapmaker's premises.
Officer not to be obstructed.

By 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 48, s. 12. Every maker of soap shall give to the officer of the division notice in writing of the particular hour when he intends to charge his copper or boiler with any materials for making soap, if within the limits of the head office of Excise in London, 12 hours; and if at any other place out of the limits, 24 hours, before the time of charging, on pain of forfeiting 100l.; and if he shall not begin to charge within three hours after the time mentioned in the notice, it shall be void; and every maker who, after the expiration of the said hour, shall begin to charge without having given a new notice, shall forfeit 100l.

Notice to officer before charging copper.

By 5 Geo. III., c. 48, s. 15. If by any device or contrivance any maker of soap shall open any copper, pan, utensil, or pipe, before the same shall have been unlocked or opened by the officer, he shall forfeit 20l.

Sect. 16. No maker of hard soap shall light a fire under any copper, pan, or other utensil used in boiling of soap, or for cleansing his foul goods, or in preparing any materials for the making of soap, without first giving notice, if within the limits of the head office, 12 hours, if elsewhere, 24 hours, of his intention, on pain of 20l.

Sect. 17. Every maker of hard soap shall make use of regular square or oblong frames only for the cleansing or putting his soap (whether perfect or not) into when taken out of the vessel where it was boiled and prepared; and the bottom, sides, and ends of every such frame shall be two inches thick at the least; and such frame shall not exceed 45 inches in length, nor 15 inches in breadth; and if any maker of hard soap shall make use of any other than such frames, he shall forfeit 20l.

Frame to be made use of in working.

By 47 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 30, s. 9. No maker of hard soap shall, for cleansing or putting his soap (whether perfect or not perfect) into, when taken out of the utensil where the same was boiled, make use of any frame the sides and ends of each and every of the lifts whereof shall not be permanently mortised and nailed, or permanently dove-tailed and nailed together, nor make use of any frame of a less depth or height than that of forty-five inches, nor shall cleanse or put his soap, when taken out of the utensil where the same shall have been boiled, into any frame in any less quantity than to the depth in such frame of forty-five inches at the least; and if any maker shall, for the purpose aforesaid, make use of any other kind of frame, or shall, cleanse otherwise than as above in this section mentioned, he shall for every such offence forfeit 50l. Provided, that every such maker shall be at liberty to cleanse and put into one such soap-frame as is hereinbefore directed to be used the residue of any making of soap which shall remain after filling his other soap frame or frames to the depth of forty-five inches at the least, though such residue of soap should be of any less quantity than sufficient to fill such one soap-frame to the depth of forty-five inches.

And by s. 10. No maker shall cleanse or take, or begin to cleanse or take, his soap from or out of any copper, &c. by him used for the boiling or making of soap, at any other time than between the hours of seven in the morning and six in the afternoon. The remainder of this section is repealed by 59 Geo. III., c. 90, s. 2; which enacts that every maker and makers of soap who shall begin to cleanse or take any soap from or out of any copper, boiler, or vessel by him used for the boiling or making of soap shall cleanse and take the whole of the soap boiled or made in any such copper or vessel, from and out of the same within the times hereafter mentioned, viz. if any maker of hard soap shall begin to cleanse or take any hard soap out of any pan or vessel, and shall cleanse or put the same into six frames, or more than six frames, and shall not cleanse and take the whole of the soap boiled and made in such pan or vessel, out of the same within the space of three hours from the time of his having first begun to cleanse or take such soap out of such pan or vessel; and if any maker of hard soap shall begin to cleanse or take any hard soap out of any pan or vessel, and shall cleanse or put the same into three frames, or less than six frames, and shall not cleanse and take the whole of the soap boiled and made in such pan or vessel out of the same within the space of two hours from the time of his having first begun to cleanse or take such soap out of such pan or vessel, and if any maker of hard soap shall begin to cleanse or take any hard soap from or out of any pan or vessel, and shall cleanse or put the same into two frames, or less than two frames, and shall not cleanse and take the whole of the soap boiled and made in such pan or vessel out of the same within the space of one hour from the time of his having first begun to cleanse or take such soap from or out of such pan or vessel; and if any maker of soft soap shall begin to cleanse or take any soft soap out of any pan or vessel, which shall contain 20 barrels or 5120lbs. of soft soap, or more, and shall not cleanse and take the whole of the soap boiled and made in such pan or vessel out of the same within the space of three hours from the time of his having first begun to cleanse or take such soft soap out of such pan or vessel, and that if any maker of soft soap shall begin to cleanse or take any soft soap out of any pan or vessel, which shall contain 10 barrels, or 2560lbs., and less than 5120lbs. of soft soap, and shall not cleanse and take the whole of the soap boiled and made in such pan or vessel out of the same within the space of two hours from the time of his having first begun to cleanse or take such soft soap out of such pan or vessel; and that if any maker of soft soap shall begin to cleanse or take any soft soap out of any pan or vessel, which shall contain any such soft soap, and less than 10 barrels or 2560lbs. of soft soap, and shall not cleanse and take the whole of the soap boiled and made in such pan or vessel out of the same within one hour from the time of his having first begun to cleanse or take such soft soap out of such pan or vessel, all and every such maker of soap shall, for every such offence, forfeit 50*l*.

Penalty 50*l*.

Regulations as to
or mottled soap.

Sect. 3. Every maker of hard soap, who shall make any yellow or mottled soap, shall, when and so soon as such yellow or mottled soap shall have been cleansed and taken from and out of the pan or vessel, in which the same has been boiled and made, add and put into such pan or vessel all the fob and skimmings which have been taken out of such pan or vessel, and also grease, in the proportion of at least one hundred weight of grease for every ton of yellow or mottled soap respectively, which such copper, pan, or vessel shall be computed by the officer to boil and make, and shall immediately re-melt such grease in such pan or vessel, in the presence of the proper officer of Excise; and if any maker of soap shall make any yellow or mottled soap, and shall not, within the space of half an hour after such yellow or mottled soap shall have been cleansed and taken out of the pan or vessel, in which the same has been boiled or made, add and put into such pan or vessel, &c. all the fob and skimmings which have been taken out of such copper, pan, or vessel, and also add fresh grease in the proportion aforesaid, or shall not immediately melt such grease in such pan or vessel, in the presence of the proper officer of Excise, every maker of soap so offending shall for every such offence forfeit 200/.

By 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 48, s. 11. It shall be lawful for any officer of Excise to take an account as often as he shall think fit, by gauging, weighing, or otherwise, of all tallow, oil, rosin, and grease of every kind, and of all materials for making soap, which any maker of soap shall have in his possession; and such maker shall provide proper scales and weights, and assist the officer in weighing and taking such account, on pain of 20/. And in case such officer shall find any decrease in any materials for making soap, and shall not receive a satisfactory account thereof, he shall charge the maker with the duties for such decrease, according to the rates following; (that is to say,) for every 14 cwt. or 210 gallons of oil so missing, 20 cwt. of hard soap.

Officer to charge for materials missing.

For every 13 cwt. of rendered tallow so missing, 20 cwt. of hard soap.

For every 13½ cwt. of kitchen-stuff and tallow so missing, 20 cwt. of hard soap.

For every 14 cwt. of tallow, rosin, and oil missing, 20 cwt. of yellow, brown, or rosin soap.

Sect. 13. Every soapmaker shall, before he begins to charge his boiler or copper, weigh in the presence of the officer all the materials with which he intends to charge the boiler or copper, and all such materials shall be put into the copper or boiler in the presence of the officer; and in case the quantity of hard soap afterwards produced therefrom shall be found by the gauge in the frames to be less than ought to have been produced according to the rates aforesaid, such deficiency shall be charged with the duties thereupon, according to the rates before mentioned. Provided that if such boiler or copper shall have been charged with rough fat or rough kitchen grease, then 8lb. of rough fat shall be deemed equal to 7lb. of tallow, and 5lb. of rough kitchen grease to 4lb. of clean kitchen grease.

And by 27 Geo. III., c. 31, s. 19. Every maker of soap shall, when and as often as required by any officer, before he charge his copper or boiler with any materials for making soap, weigh such materials (except lye) in the presence of the officer, and put the same into such copper or boiler, on pain of forfeiting 50/.

Materials to be weighed.

By 10 Anne, c. 19, s. 16. No maker shall (on pain of 20/) remove any soap of which no account hath been taken by the officer from where it was made, without giving the officer within the bills 24 hours' notice, and in other parts two days' notice, of his intention to remove the same.

Removing soap without notice.

Sect. 17. Makers shall keep all the soap made by them, and which shall not have been taken an account of by the officer, separate from that which hath been taken an account of for 24 hours after making, if within the bills, or two days in any other place, unless it shall have been sooner taken an account of, on pain of forfeiting 5/.

Soap unsurveyed to be kept separate.

By 1 Geo. I., stat. 2, c. 36, s. 14, 15. If any maker shall conceal any soap or materials, he shall forfeit the same, and also 500/. (a)

Concealing.

(a) A concealment of soap, in violation of the 1 Geo. I., stat. 2, c. 36, s. 31, may be in an entered place, and by mixing with other soap, and although done with the privity of the inferior attending officer. Attorney-General v. Brewster, 2 Anstr. 560. But the statute 1 Geo. I., stat. 2, c. 36, enacts, that if any maker shall fraudulently conceal soap chargeable with duty under the statutes of Anne, or any of the materials for making it, with intent to defraud his majesty, he shall forfeit 500/. besides the article concealed. (1 Geo. I., stat. 2, c. 36, s. 14.) An offence may be committed against this statute by fraudulently concealing soap, even in an entered place, and by mixing it with other soap, although the act be done with the privity of the inferior attending officer. ## 26. Soap.

Privately making soap.

Penalty on persons assisting in making soap privately.

First offence, 20l.

Officers may arrest them and carry them before a justice, who may convict and commit.

Second offence, 40l. or four months' imprisonment.

Owners or renters of houses where soap shall be privately made to forfeit 200l.;

And by 5 Geo. III., c. 43, s. 20. If the officer shall have cause to suspect that soap is privately making in any place, or that any soap is concealed with intent to avoid the duty; in such case, on oath made by such officer before a commissioner or one justice residing near to the place, setting forth the ground of his suspicion, such commissioner or justice may, if he shall judge it reasonable, by special warrant authorize such officer, by day or night, (but if in the night, in presence of a constable,) to enter into every such place suspected, and to seize and carry away as forfeited all such soap as he shall there find so privately making, together with all materials then ready or preparing for making of soap, and likewise all such soap as they shall find so concealed, together with the boxes or other package; and the person that shall be found privately making soap, or in whose possession such soap shall be found, shall forfeit 100l.

By 47 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 30, s. 7. When any officer of Excise shall discover that the making of soap is carried on in any boiling-house, work-house, storehouse, warehouse, shop, room, or other place whereof no notice in writing shall have been given at the office for the duties on soap next to the place where such soap shall be made, and shall at the same time discover in such boiling-house, &c. any person knowingly concerned in carrying on the making of such soap, the person so discovered shall forfeit 20l. over and above all penalties and forfeitures that the proprietor or maker of such soap, or the owner, renter, occupier, or possessor of such boiling-house, &c. shall be liable to; and the officer and all other persons acting in his aid may stop and detain every person so discovered, and convey him before one justice of the peace for the county, &c. wherein so discovered; and such justice shall on confession, or on proof by the oath of one witness, convict the person so discovered, and he shall immediately on such conviction pay the said sum of 20l. into the hands of the officer who shall have conveyed such offender before such justice, to be applied as hereinafter directed; and on such offender refusing to pay the same, the justice so convicting shall by warrant commit him to the house of correction for the said county, &c. there to be kept to hard labour for two months, to be reckoned from the day of such commitment, or until he shall have paid the said twenty pounds, or until the expiration of the said two months. And in case the person so convicted shall be again discovered in any boiling-house, &c. whereof no such notice as aforesaid shall have been given, and where the making of soap shall be so carried on, in anywise concerned in carrying on such making of soap, he shall upon the like conviction forfeit for such second offence 40l., and in default thereof shall be committed to the house of correction as aforesaid, there to remain during the term of four months, or until the said 40l. shall be paid.

And by s. 8. Every owner or renter of any house, outhouse, or other place in which any boiling-house, &c. for the making or keeping of soap, or for the boiling or keeping any oil, tallow, potash, lime, or other materials proper to be made into soap, or any copper, furnace, or other vessel for the boiling or making of soap, shall, with his permission or knowledge, be erected or used, without notice given thereof, shall forfeit 200*l*.; and every other person in whose occupation any house, &c. in which, &c. or any copper, &c. for the boiling, &c. shall be erected, &c. without such notice, shall be found, shall forfeit 200*l*.

And by s. 11. So often as any maker shall have cleansed his soap into any frame wherein such soap shall be of the depth of fifty inches or under, every such maker shall, within 120 hours after such soap shall have been so cleansed into such frame, cut or divide such soap into cakes or bars, and remove every part thereof out of such frame; and when any maker of hard soap shall have cleansed his soap into any frame wherein such soap shall be of the depth of upwards of fifty inches, he shall, within 168 hours after such soap shall have been so cleansed into such frame, cut such soap into cakes or bars, and remove every part thereof out of such frame, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence respectively 50*l*.

Soapmakers not cutting up their soap into cakes or bars within a certain time to forfeit 50*l*.

By 10 Anne, c. 19, s. 8. Every barrel of soap shall contain 256*lbs*., avoirdupois; half-barrel, 128*lbs*.; firkin, 64*lbs*.; half-firkin, 32*lbs*., besides the weight or tare of the cask. And all soap (except hard cake-soap and ball-soap, 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 111) shall upon making thereof be put by the maker into such cask and none other.

Measure of soap.

And by 12 Anne, stat. 2, c. 9, s. 19. All soft soap that shall be filled in any other cask less than barrels, half-barrels, firkins, and half-firkins shall be forfeited, and also 5*l*.

By 24 Geo. III., sess. 2, c. 48, s. 14. No maker shall sell any hard soap but in the form of cakes or bars, or what is called ball-soap; and shall return all scraps and parings into the boiler in the presence of the officer immediately after the soap that has been put into the frames shall have been cut up for sale, on the penalty of 100*l*.

Hard soap to be sold in cakes, and the scraps returned.

By 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 14. If any scraps or parings of hard soap shall be sold or sent out by any maker, or shall be found removing or removed by land or water, the same shall be forfeited, together with the casks and packages, and shall be seized by any officer of Excise; and the maker who shall send out or sell the same shall for every such offence forfeit 100*l*.

By 17 Geo. III., c. 52, s. 3. The maker shall weekly make entry in writing at the next office of all the soap by him made within each week, setting forth the weight and what quantity was made at each boiling in that week, on pain of 50*l*. for every neglect; which entries shall be on oath (or if a quaker, affirmation) of the maker or chief workman, according to the best of his knowledge and belief. The said entry and oath, within the bills, to be at the chief office of Excise; and elsewhere with the collector and supervisor.

Entry and payment of the duties.

Sect. 4. And within one week after entry the maker shall pay and clear off the duties, on pain of double duty; and after such default in payment, he shall not sell or deliver out any soap until he hath paid off his duty, on pain of double value.

Sect. 5. No maker shall be obliged to go or send further than the market-town where the soap is made, or the next market-town, to make such entry or payment.

By 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 10, 11; 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 53, ante. Any person who shall knowingly receive, buy, or have in his possession any soap after the same shall have been removed from the place where it was made, and ought to have been charged with the duty, before the said duty hath been charged (except such as hath been condemned as forfeited), whether he claim any property or interest therein or not, shall forfeit the same, and treble the value thereof, to be estimated at the best price the like sort shall then bear in London.

Persons having soap in their possession which hath not been charged with the duty.

By 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 29, cocquets granted for shipping soap, to be landed in any other part of the kingdom, shall express the quality, quantity, and weight, the mark of the package, and by whom made and sold, and where consigned; and if shipped without such cocquet, the same shall be forfeited and seized, together with the package.

Sect. 27. No soap shall be imported otherwise than in some package, containing at least 224 pounds of neat soap, and stowed openly in the hold, on pain of being seized and forfeited, together with the package, and the master or person taking charge of the vessel to forfeit 50*l*.

But by stat. 26 Geo. II., c. 32, s. 8. On information brought against any such master, he may detain the wages of the mariners till it be determined; and if it shall appear that the soap was put on board by any mariner without the master's knowledge, the master may apply the wages of such mariner in payment of the forfeiture.

By 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 28. The officers of Excise (in like manner as the officers of the Customs) may go on board any vessel, and search for and seize all soap forfeited, together with the package; and they may likewise seize such as, before entry and payment of duties, shall be found unshipping or unshipped.

Sect. 30, 31. The officers of Excise or Customs may seize any soap with the package that shall be found in any vessel, or shall be carrying in any cart or other carriage, where they shall have good reason to believe that the same was made in some private workhouse or other place, or clandestinely imported without payment of duty, or that the same has been exported and re-landed after repayment of the duty; and if the party in whose possession the same shall be found shall not at the hearing of the information make it appear that the duty hath been paid or secured, he shall forfeit 5*l*. for every 100 pounds weight, and so in proportion for any greater or lesser weight; and also the goods and package shall be forfeited.

Sect. 32. If any person shall knowingly harbour or conceal any soap unlawfully imported, or re-landed after shipping for exportation upon debenture, he shall, whether he claim any property therein or not, forfeit 50*l*. for every hundred pounds weight, together with the goods and package.

Sect. 33. Where any such soap shall be seized as forfeited, and no person shall claim the same in 20 days, if it is within the limits of the chief office of Excise in London, the officer who made seizure may cause notice, signed by the solicitor of Excise, to be affixed at the Royal Exchange, of the time of proceeding to trial and condemnation of the same by the commissioners of Excise; and if it is out of the said limits, then public notice shall be given by proclamation at the next market-town on the next market-day after the said 20 days, of the day and place where the justices will proceed to trial and condemnation thereof. And the judgment thereon shall not be liable to any appeal, or be removed by certiorari.

weights.

By 10 Anne, c. 19, s. 13. The maker shall keep just scales and weights where he makes his soap, and permit and assist the officer to use them, on pain of 10*l*.

And by 10 Geo. III., c. 44. If he shall use insufficient scales or weights, he shall forfeit 100*l*.; but not to be prosecuted both on this and the former act. And by 28 Geo. III., c. 33, s. 15, the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer.

Power of the justices.

By 10 Ann., c. 19, s. 26; 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 39; 24 Geo. II., c. 40, s. 29; 48 Geo. III., c. 69, s. 4; 59 Geo. III., c. 90, s. 12, 13. The Excise laws shall be in force for managing these duties; and the penalties, except where it is otherwise directed, shall be recovered and mitigated as by the laws of Excise, or in the courts at Westminster; and distributed half to the king, and half to him that shall sue.

claimer.

By 23 Geo. II., c. 21, s. 35. Where any soap shall be seized for non-payment of duties, or non-entry, and it shall be disputed whether such payment or entry were made or not, the proof shall lie on claimer, and not on the officer.

Appeal.

Sect. 37. If the party is not satisfied with any judgment of the justices on the act of 23 Geo. II., c. 21, above mentioned, he may appeal to the next quarter-sessions (except in the case before mentioned, where no person shall claim the goods seized).

26. Soap.

Sect. 38. On information on 23 Geo. II., c. 21, the mitigation shall not reduce the penalty to less than a fourth part, over and above the costs to be allowed.

Mitigation.

And by 10 Ann., c. 19, s. 20; 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 21. All soap, materials, and utensils in the custody of the maker, or of any in trust for him, shall be liable to the duties and penalties, as if the debtor or offender were the lawful owner.

Utensils liable.

And whereas doubts have arisen whether the provisions of the aforesaid act, 5 Geo. III., c. 43, extend to the makers of ball-soap, it is declared by 28 Geo. III., c. 37, s. 13, that the provisions of the said act do extend to the makers of ball-soap.

5 Geo. III., c. 43, extended to makers of ball-soap.

By 59 Geo. III., c. 90, s. 6. "That from and after the said 31st day of July, when any soap exceeding the quantity of 28lbs. weight shall be removed or carried by land or by water, the word 'soap' shall be painted or marked in large and legible letters, of at least two inches in length, on every chest, basket, box, cask, and package wherein such soap shall be contained; and further, that when any soap exceeding the quantity of 28lbs. weight shall be removed or carried in any cart, waggon, or other carriage, by any person not being a known and public or common carrier of goods and merchandise from one part of Great Britain to another, the word 'soap' shall be painted or marked in large and legible letters, of at least three inches in length, on some conspicuous and uncovered part of every such cart, waggon, or other carriage; and all soap exceeding the quantity of 28lbs. weight, which after the said 31st day of July shall be removed or carried, or removing or carrying, in any chest, basket, box, cask, or package not having the word 'soap' painted or marked thereon in large and legible letters of at least two inches in length, or which shall be removed or carried, or removing or carrying, by any person not being a known and public or common carrier of goods and merchandise from one part of Great Britain to another, in any cart, waggon, or other carriage not having the word 'soap' painted or marked in large and legible letters, of at least three inches in length, on some conspicuous and uncovered part of such cart, waggon, or other carriage, shall be forfeited, together with the chest, basket, box, cask, or other package containing the same, and the boat or vessel, horse or horses, or other cattle, waggon, cart, or other carriage made use of in the removal or carriage of the same, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and the person or persons in whose custody or possession such soap shall be found, or who shall be or shall have been employed or concerned in the removal or carriage thereof, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

In the removal of soap exceeding 28lbs. the word "soap" shall be put on the package, on penalty of 100*l*. and forfeiture.

Sect. 8. "That from and after the said 31st day of July, all and every maker and makers of soap, shall upon demand, receive from the proper officer of Excise a book or books, to be prepared with proper printed forms and titles for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, and to be kept by every such maker of soap in some public and open part of his, her, or their entered premises; and that from and after the said 31st day of July, no soap exceeding 28lbs. weight shall be sold, sent out, or delivered by any such maker of soap to any person or persons whatsoever, without being accompanied by a certificate filled up and cut out progressively from the printed forms of such certificates contained in such book as aforesaid, signed by such maker of soap selling, sending out, or delivering the same, or some person or persons on his, her, or their behalf, certifying the date thereof, the quantity, quality, sort, or kind of such soap, to whom sold, from whose stock delivered, and that the duty has been paid or secured to be paid thereon; and that the maker of soap selling, sending out, or delivering any soap exceeding 28lbs. weight as aforesaid shall at the same time make a correspondent entry thereof, containing the same particulars, in such book as aforesaid; and that such book, with such entries so made thereon as aforesaid, shall at all times from the hour of six of the clock in the morning until the hour of seven of the clock in the evening lie open and exposed in the entered premises of such maker of soap as aforesaid to the perusal of any officer or officers of Excise, and shall be delivered and given up by such maker of soap as aforesaid to any officer or officers of Excise upon demand; and if any maker of soap shall sell, send out, or deliver any quantity of soap exceeding 28lbs. weight at any one time, unaccompanied by such certificate as aforesaid, or without making such entry in such book as aforesaid, or shall convey away or conceal any such book or books as aforesaid; or cancel, obliterate, destroy, or tear out any leaf or leaves therefrom, or entry or entries therein, or shall make any false entry or entries therein, or shall oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in inspecting any such book or books, or any such entry or entries therein as aforesaid, or shall at any time neglect or refuse, when required, to deliver or give up to any officer or officers such book or books as aforesaid, all and every such maker of soap so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*; and all soap exceeding 28lbs. weight, removing or removed without being accompanied by a true and lawful certificate, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, and the person or persons removing, carrying, or conveying the same, or who shall be or shall have been employed or concerned or aiding or assisting therein, or in whose custody the same shall be found, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 9. "That all and every person and persons who shall at any time be found removing or attending and directing the removal of any soap from one part of Great Britain to any other part thereof, or shall have received any soap so removed for sale, shall, upon the demand of any officer or officers of Excise, produce the same, and such certificate as aforesaid, to such officer or officers, to be by him or them examined and inspected, and to compare such quantity and quality of soap with such certificate accompanying or which accompanied the same on such removal; and if any such person or persons shall refuse or neglect, upon such demand, to produce any such soap or certificate as aforesaid, or to suffer and permit such inspection, examination, and compare as aforesaid, or shall hinder or obstruct any officer or officers of Excise therein, or in executing any of the powers of this act, every such person and persons shall for every such offence severally forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*; and in every such case all such soap shall be forfeited, together with the boat, vessel, cart, waggon, and other carriage, horse, horses, and other cattle conveying or removing the same, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 10. "And whereas it is usual for the officers of Excise to leave on the premises of the traders and manufacturers under their survey certain books or papers commonly called specimens, for recording therein the entries in the books of such officers of the state of the manufactory, and the accounts and particulars of survey taken by them from time to time at such traders' or manufacturers'; and whereas such practice has been found beneficial to the revenue, and it is expedient to prevent the removal, obliteration, or destruction of such Excise specimens; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful for any officer or officers of Excise to leave and deposit in any house, workhouse, room, or place entered or made use of by any trader or traders, manufacturer or manufacturers, under or subject to the survey of any officer or officers of Excise, a certain book or paper commonly called a specimen, and at all times to have free access to such book or paper as last aforesaid; and if any person or persons, not being an Excise officer, shall remove, convey away, or conceal any book or paper commonly called a specimen, or shall injure, damage, or destroy the same, or deface or obliterate any entry or entries therein, or shall oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer or officers of Excise in or from having free access to, or in or from inspecting any such book or paper commonly called a specimen, or in making any entry or entries therein, or in removing or taking away any such book or paper as last aforesaid, as to such officer and officers respectively shall seem meet, the person or persons so offending shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

The general regulations of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 68, ante, 227 to 310, apply to this subject.

1. As to Foreign Spirits imported.

1. Foreign spirits.

By 6 Geo. IV., c. 111, the subsisting duties of Customs upon spirits imported were imposed, the amount of which we have before stated, ante, 144.

Duties of Customs on importation.

The 1 W. IV., c. 48, imposes an additional duty of 6*d*. per gallon to be paid on spirits, the produce of the British possessions in America, imported after 14th June, 1830.

And we have arranged the several provisions of the regulating-act, 6 Geo. IV., c. 107, and of the smuggling-act, 6 Geo. IV., c. 108, relative to the importing or attempting to import foreign spirits without payment of the duties, ante, 174 to 224.

The Excise duties granted by 43 Geo. III., c. 69, on the importation of rum, the produce of the British colonies in America, were reduced by 5 Geo. IV., c. 34, s. 1; but that act was repealed by the express terms of 6 Geo. IV., c. 105, and by 7 Geo. IV., c. 48, s. 52, ante, 111, 112, so that the amount of the duties on importation of rum are now regulated by 6 Geo. IV., c. 111, ante, 144.

By 32 Geo. II., c. 29, s. 1. It shall be lawful for the gaugers or other officers of Excise, at any time before the gauging, to take a sample, not exceeding half a pint in the whole, out of each cask or other package containing such spirituous liquors imported, without paying any thing for the same; and it shall be lawful for the importer or proprietor, or their agent, in the presence of the officers of Excise, and whilst the spirits are on shipboard, to take the like samples without paying any duty for the same.

And by 26 Geo. III., c. 78, s. 36. Any officer may take samples of foreign spirits in the custody of any distiller, rectifier, compounder, or dealer, not exceeding four gallons, paying for the same at the rate of 18s. per gallon; and if any person shall obstruct such officer, he shall forfeit for every offence 100l.

By 1 Ann., sess. 2, c. 14, s. 2. If any person shall land or deliver out of any vessel or boat any French brandy before the duty be paid or secured, or without licence from the proper officer so to do, he and every person aiding therein, or concealing the same when landed, shall not only forfeit the same, but also double value; and if any officer of the Customs or Excise shall connive thereat, or shall be concerned therein, or conceal the same, or not give notice thereof, he shall be incapable to hold any office in the revenue, and forfeit 500l.

By 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 1. The officers of Excise may go on board and enter any ship or vessel, and search, in like manner as the officers of the Customs may do, for any exciseable liquors, and seize all such as shall be forfeited, and such as shall be unshipped before entry and payment of the duties, together with the casks and other package.

Sect. 2. If any officer of the Excise have cause to suspect that any foreign brandy, rum, arrack, spirits, or strong water shall be fraudulently concealed in any place, entered or not entered, if within the bills of mortality, on oath made before two commissioners; if elsewhere, before one justice, where he suspects them to be concealed, setting forth the ground of his suspicion, he or they may by special warrant authorize such officer by day or night, but if in the night in presence of a constable, to enter, seize, and carry away the same as forfeited, together with the casks or vessels; and if any person shall obstruct such officer, he shall forfeit 100l.

By 8 Geo. I., c. 18, s. 24. All brandy, arrack, rum, spirits, and strong

(a) And see 11 Geo. I., c. 30, s. 16, under which it was held that a conviction of justices for knowingly harbouring and concealing smuggled spirits cannot be supported by evidence of finding the smuggled spirits concealed in the house of the party convicted, unless he was present at the time of finding, or some other direct proof be given of a guilty knowledge. Ex parte George Ransley, 3 Dowl. & Ry. 572.

But the term "found" in the 11 & 12 W. III., c. 10, s. 2, is, as there used, a word equivalent in import to having been seen or discovered, and held not to be confined to a finding by officers, or other persons seeking the thing for the purpose of seizure, or with intent to institute proceedings for the recovery of penalties, or other hostile motive. A charge of the thing being "found in the custody of the defendant," in an information by the attorney-general on that statute, was held to be supported by proof of its having been seen in his possession knowingly and illegally, and exhibited by him as his property at any time and under any circumstances. *Attorney-General v. By 5 Geo. III., c. 43, s. 27. If any foreign brandy, arrack, rum, strong waters, or spirits of any kind shall be imported in any ship, vessel, or boat of 100 tons' burden or under, (except only for the use of the seamen, not exceeding two gallons each,) such vessel, with her tackle, &c., and also the brandy, &c., shall be forfeited.—6 Geo. III., c. 46, s. 9. Except rum or other spirits of the growth and manufacture of the British sugar plantations, which may be imported in vessels not being of less burden than 70 tons.

In what ships to be imported.

By 6 Geo. I., c. 21, s. 32. If the master, purser, or other person having charge of the vessel shall suffer any brandy (or other uncustomed goods) to be put out of the ship into any hoy, lighter, boat, or bottom, to be laid on land, he shall, besides the other penalties, suffer six months' imprisonment.

Unshipping into boats in order to be landed.

By 4 W. III., c. 5, s. 8. No brandy shall be imported in any vessel not containing sixty gallons at the least, on pain of forfeiting the same or the value.

In what casks to be imported.

By 1 & 2 Geo. IV., c. 94, it is enacted, "That it shall not be lawful to export or to enter for exportation from any part of Great Britain to the said islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, or Sark, or to any or either of them, under the penalty of the forfeiture thereof, to be seized by any officer or officers of the Customs or Excise, any rum of the production and manufacture of the British colonies or plantations, unless permission be first given for that purpose by the commissioners of His Majesty's Customs in England, or any four or more of them, by licence under their hands; and the said commissioners, or any four or more of them, are hereby authorized and required, on application to them in writing for that purpose, to grant their licence from time to time under their hands (such licence to continue in force thirty days from the date thereof and no longer) to any of His Majesty's subjects, to export from any port in England, in British-built ships, owned, registered, and navigated according to law, and not of less burden than seventy tons (according to the rules for admeasurement prescribed by law), to the said islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark, any rum of the production or manufacture of the British colonies or plantations, in such quantities to the said islands, as shall be approved of and directed from time to time by the commissioners of His Majesty's treasury, or any three of them."

No rum of the British colonies shall be imported from G. B. to Jersey, &c. on pain of forfeiture, unless permission be given by the commissioners of Customs, who may grant licence to export rum under the conditions herein mentioned.

By 26 Geo. III., c. 73, s. 59. No foreign spirituous liquors (except rum of the growth or produce of the British plantations, and arrack,) shall be imported in any vessel or cask which shall contain less than 100 gallons (excepting for the use of the seamen then belonging to and on board the ship in which the same shall be imported, not exceeding two gallons for each seaman), upon pain of forfeiting the same, and also the ship or vessel in which imported, of whatever burden, with all her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel.

In what casks to be imported.

Sect. 60. No person shall import any foreign brandy, arrack, rum, spirits, or strong waters of a greater degree of strength than that of one to nine over hydrometer proof; and if any foreign brandy, &c. shall be imported of any greater degree of strength, the same shall be forfeited, with the casks and packages containing the same, and may be seized by any officer of Customs or Excise; but nothing herein shall extend to the forfeiture of any rum or spirits of the growth, produce, and manufacture of the British sugar plantations, for being imported of any greater degree.

I. Foreign.
Places of keeping to be entered.

By 23 Geo. III., c. 70, s. 1. No seller of or dealer in foreign spirituous liquors residing within the limits of the head office of Excise in London (not being a retailer thereof, duly licensed) shall be permitted to make entry of any warehouse, storehouse, room, shop, cellar, vault, or other place for keeping any foreign brandy, arrack, rum, spirits, or strong waters, unless he shall inhabit in a tenement of 12*l.* a year or upwards, and for which he shall be assessed in his own name, and also pay to the parish rates; and no such dealer residing in any other part of the kingdom, unless he be assessed and pay to church and poor; otherwise he shall be liable to forfeit as dealing therein without entry.

Sect. 2. Where any entry shall be made of any warehouse, shop, &c., no other seller or dealer (not being a joint trader or partner with such seller or dealer), however qualified, shall make entry of the same or of any other warehouse, &c. within the same house, on pain of being subject to the like penalties as dealers without entry. See also 58 Geo. III., c. 65, s. 7.

Officers may enter and survey and take samples.

By 26 Geo. III., c. 77, s. 15. Any officer of Excise may, by day or by night, (if in the night, in presence of a constable or other peace-officer,) upon previous notice of one hour or more having been given to any importer or proprietor of rum or spirits of the growth or manufacture of the British sugar plantations, or left at his dwelling-house, or with his agent or servant, to enter his warehouses, and by tasting, gauging, or otherwise, to take an account of all rum or other liquors found therein, and to take samples thereof not exceeding half a pint out of each cask, paying (if demanded) after the rate of 3*s.* a gallon. And if any such proprietor, his agent or servant, shall refuse to permit such officer to enter any such warehouse to take such account, or refuse to permit him samples, he shall forfeit 200*l.*

Sect. 16. Upon oath made by any person that he hath reason to suspect or believe that such proprietor or importer of rum or other spirits lodged as aforesaid doth intend, without the privity or knowledge of the officer, in the night-time, to go into such warehouse, or that such proprietor or importer, or other person, shall at any time actually be in such warehouse, without the privity or consent of such officer, one commissioner of Excise within the bills, or one justice in any other part of Great Britain, may issue his warrant requiring any officer of Excise, (with the assistance of a constable or other peace-officer) to enter such warehouse by force or otherwise; and if such proprietor or importer, or other person whatsoever, shall hinder or refuse the said officer or his assistant from entering such warehouse or executing such warrant, he shall forfeit 200*l.*

any unfair increase or decrease of stock.

Sect. 17. If any officer shall find in such warehouse any increase or decrease in the stock of rum or spirits, such increase or decrease shall be deemed to have been made by the proprietor or importer having by some contrivance opened such warehouse not in the presence of the proper officer of Excise; and such proprietor or importer shall forfeit 500*l.*

By 17 Geo. III., c. 52, s. 15. If any proprietor or importer shall, by any device or contrivance, open the warehouse, except in the presence of the proper warehouse-keeper or Excise officer, he shall forfeit 500*l.*

Some of the provisions of 6 Geo. IV., c. 80, apply to foreign spirits, and will be found in that act, which is printed at length under the next division.

All penalties and forfeitures prosecuted by order of commissioners of Excise shall be prosecuted and recovered according to 7 & 8 Geo.
IV., c. 52.

By 9 Geo. IV., c. 44, s. 2. "That all penalties and forfeitures imposed by any act or acts relating to the revenue of Customs or Excise respectively, which by law the officers of Excise are authorized to prosecute, and which the commissioners of Excise shall order to be prosecuted, shall and may be so prosecuted, sued for, recovered, levied, mitigated, and applied, and in and by such ways, means, and methods, and in, under, and before such jurisdiction respectively, as penalties and forfeitures incurred or forfeited by reason of offences committed against any law or laws of Excise, are or may be sued for, recovered, levied, mitigated, and applied by an act passed in the last session of parliament, for consolidating and amending the laws relating to the collection and management of the revenue of Excise throughout Great Britain and Ireland; any thing in any other act or acts to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 4. "That all and every act and acts now in force, or hereby declared to be in force as aforesaid, in England, relating to the revenue of Excise on tea, and relating to coffee, cocoa, pepper, foreign and colonial spirits and wine, shall be established, observed, executed, and put in force in and throughout the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the same manner, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as heretofore in England; any thing in any act or acts to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

The general regulations of Customs, ante, 174 to 224, and many of the regulations of Excise, ante, 224 to 310, will be found applicable.

2. Relating to Spirits made in England, and to Distillers, Compounders, and Rectifiers.

The 6 Geo. IV., c. 80, intituled An act to repeal the duties payable in respect of spirits distilled in England, and of licences for distilling, rectifying, or compounding such spirits, and for the sale of spirits, and to impose other duties in lieu thereof; and to provide other regulations for the collection of the said duties, and for the sale of spirits, and for the warehousing of such spirits, without payment of duty, for exportation; is the principal act affecting British spirits, and contains regulations, properly arranged under this head, and also under the next two divisions. It is considered necessary to state the whole act in this place.

6 Geo. IV., c. 80.

Sect. 1. "That from and after the 5th day of January, 1826, so much and such parts of the several acts in force at and immediately before the commencement of this act, as grant any duty on wort or wash brewed or made for extracting spirits in England, or upon spirits extracted in England for home consumption, or extracted in Scotland or Ireland respectively, and imported into England, or duty on any licence for distilling, rectifying, or compounding British spirits, or for the sale of spirits, or as regulate or relate to the distillation of such spirits by persons licensed to make or distil such spirits in England, or the mode of charging the duty thereon, or on wort or wash brewed or made to extract such spirits, or as regulate or relate to the rectification or compounding of such spirits in England by persons duly licensed for that purpose, or the strength at which it is lawful to keep in stock or send out spirits, or as regulate or relate to the intercourse or removal of British spirits made in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, or as relate to the distillation of spirits in England for exportation to Scotland, or in Scotland for exportation to England, or to the several other matters and things expressly provided for this act, but not otherwise, and so much and such parts only as aforesaid of the said several acts shall be and are hereby repealed accordingly; save and except so far as the said acts or any of them repeal or repeals any former act or acts, or any part or parts of any former act or acts, and except also so far as the said acts or any of them relate or relates to the charging, recovering, prosecuting, suing for, levying, paying, accounting for, allowing, abating, or mitigating of any duty, or any arrear thereof, which shall have been or shall be chargeable or payable on any such spirits, or on any wort or wash, under the said acts or any of them, or of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture for any offence against the said acts or any of them, which shall have been or shall be committed at any time on or before the 5th day of January, 1826, all which suits or other proceedings, matters, and things shall and may be had and proceeded on, and shall remain, and be to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if the said acts had not been repealed in manner aforesaid. Provided always, that it shall not be lawful to make or distil any spirits under the aforesaid laws and regulations hereby repealed from or after the 10th day of October, 1825, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 500*l.*, or 20*s.* per gallon for every gallon of the spirit so made or distilled, at the election of the commissioners of Excise, or person who shall inform or sue for the same."

Sect. 2. "That from and after the 5th day of January, 1826, there shall be granted, raised, levied, collected, paid, and satisfied unto and to the use of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, the several duties of Excise following; (that is to say.)

For and upon every one hundred gallons, imperial standard gallon measure, of spirits of the strength of hydrometer proof, as denoted by the hydrometer called Sikes' hydrometer, which shall be made or distilled in England by any person or persons whomsoever, the sum of 35*l.*, and so in proportion for any greater or less degree of strength, and for any greater or less quantity, to be paid by the first maker or distiller of such spirits:

For and upon every one hundred such gallons of spirits, of such strength as aforesaid, which shall have been or shall be made and extracted in Scotland or Ireland respectively, and warehoused there without payment of duty, and which shall be taken out of warehouse there for the purpose of being brought or imported into England for consumption, the sum of 35*l.*, and so in proportion for any greater or less degree of strength, or any greater or less quantity, to be paid by the distiller or proprietor thereof at the time of the delivery of such spirits from the warehouse in Scotland or Ireland respectively for the purpose of being brought or imported into England."

Sect. 3. "Provided always, that on all sweetened or compounded spirits imported into England from Scotland or Ireland, or into Scotland or Ireland from England, the duties aforesaid, according to the proportions aforesaid respectively, shall be computed upon the highest degree of strength at which spirits can be made.

For every licence to be taken out by any distiller or maker of low wines or spirits in England, the sum of 10*l.*:

For every licence to be taken out by any rectifier or compounder of spirits in England, the sum of 10*l.*:

For every licence to be taken out by any dealer in spirits in England, not being a retailer thereof, the sum of 10*l.*

For every licence to be taken out by any retailer of spirits in England, if the dwelling-house in which such retailer shall reside or retail such spirits at the time of taking out such licence shall not, together with the offices, courts, yards, and gardens therewith occupied, be of the value, or rated under the authority of any act or acts for granting duties on inhabited houses, at a rent of 10*l.* per annum, 2*l.*:

If at 10*l.* per annum or upwards, and under 20*l.*, 4*l.* 4*s.*:

If at 20*l.* per annum or upwards, and under 25*l.*, 6*l.* 6*s.*:

If at 25*l.* per annum or upwards, and under 30*l.*, 7*l.* 7*s.*:

If at 30*l.* per annum or upwards, and under 40*l.*, 8*l.* 8*s.*:

If at 40*l.* per annum, and under 50*l.*, 9*l.* 9*s.*:

And if at 50*l.* per annum or upwards, 10*l.*:

The said duties for licences to be paid by the respective distillers, rectifiers, compounders, dealers, and retailers taking out such licences respectively."

(a) When spirits distilled and made in Ireland are imported from thence into England, they become British spirits, and are entitled, as such, to all the advantages of British spirits existing at the time of the act of union; as, for instance, to the provisions of the 26th of Geo. III., c. 73. Attorney-Gen. v. M'Kenzie, 11 Price, 284.

(b) It was held that a person who sells spirituous liquors by retail without a licence from two justices of the peace is liable to the penalties of the 5 Geo. III., c. 46, though he has a licence from the commissioners of the Excise to retail spirituous liquors. Reg. v. Downs, 3 T. R. 560.

Sect. 4. "That all moneys arising from the duties by this act imposed, the necessary charges of raising and accounting for the same excepted, shall from time to time be paid into the receipt of His Majesty's Exchequer, and shall be carried to and made part of the consolidated fund of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

Sect. 5. "That the several duties and the drawback by this act imposed and granted shall be under the management of the commissioners of Excise, and shall be raised, levied, collected, recovered, secured, and paid by such persons, at such times, and in such manner, and by such ways and means as are hereinafter directed and set forth, and under such management, and under and subject to such rules, regulations, conditions, penalties, and forfeitures, and with such powers of adjudging and mitigating penalties and forfeitures, and with and subject to such powers, and to the like rules and directions, and by such methods, and in such manner and form, and in or by any of the general or special means, ways, or methods by which other duties and drawbacks of Excise may be raised, levied, collected, recovered, and paid, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same, and every of them were particularly repeated and re-enacted in the body of this act, except only so far as the same are expressly altered or repealed by this act."

Sect. 6. "That from and after the commencement of this act it shall not be lawful for any person or persons in England to have or keep any still whatever, for the purpose of making or distilling or rectifying or compounding spirits, without having first obtained a licence for that purpose, under the provisions of this act, signed by the commissioners of Excise, or any two of them, or by some person or persons directed or employed by them to grant such licence, by a collector and supervisor of Excise within their respective collection and district, according to the law or laws of Excise for granting licences; and every such licence shall and may be according to such form and shall contain such particulars as the said commissioners of Excise shall and may from time to time direct; and every such licence to be granted under the provisions of this act shall continue in force until and upon the 10th day of October next after the date thereof, and no longer. Provided always, that persons in partnership, carrying on any one such trade or business in one house or place only, shall not be obliged to take out more than one such licence in any one year; and that no one licence which shall be granted by virtue of this act shall authorize or empower any person or persons to whom the same shall be granted to have, keep, or make use of any still, or to prepare or make any wort or wash, or to distil any wash, low wines, or spirits, or rectify or compound any spirits, in any other house or premises than the house or premises mentioned in such licence."

Sect. 7. "That it shall not be lawful for any person, at any time after the 10th day of October next, after the date of any such licence for keeping a still, which shall be granted to such person under this act, to continue to keep or work or to use any still, or to brew or make any wort or wash, or to distil any low wines, spirits, or feints, or to rectify or compound any spirits, until such person shall have obtained a new licence for that purpose, and shall have performed all such requisites as are required and directed by this act to be done, either previously or subsequently to obtaining the first or original licence, and so in every year, so long as such person shall continue the business of a distiller or rectifier or compounder of spirits; and if any person shall continue to keep or work or shall use any still, or shall make or brew any wort or wash, or shall distil any low wines, spirits, or feints, or rectify or compound any spirits con-

Sect. 10. "That no licence to be granted under the provisions of this act shall authorize any person to have, keep, or make use of any still or other utensil for the making or distilling of low wines or spirits, the body of which without the head thereof shall be of less capacity or content than 400 gallons; and that it shall not be lawful for any distiller keeping or using any still of smaller content without the head than 3000 gallons to keep or use in any distillery at the same time more than two wash stills and two low wines stills, upon pain of forfeiting for every still kept or used by any such distiller at the same time, to distil wash or low wines respectively, above the number aforesaid, the sum of 100*l.* for every such further still, and for every time that the same shall be so used; and every such further still shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 11. "That every person making or keeping any wash prepared or fit for distilling or making low wines or spirits, or any low wines or feints, and having in his, her, or their custody or use any still or stills, shall be deemed and taken to be and is hereby declared to be a distiller, liable to the several duties of Excise, and to the several penalties, fines, and forfeitures imposed by this act relating to distillers."

Sect. 12. Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any distiller from placing any close metal pipe or pipes in, but not opening into, any wash back, for the purpose of conveying through such back hot or cold air, or water, for the purpose of promoting or retarding the fermentation of the worts or wash contained in such back."

Sect. 21. "That every cock required by this act to be kept or used shall be made and constructed in such manner as shall be from time to time prescribed and directed or approved by the commissioners of Excise; and if any cock required by this act to be kept or used shall be made, constructed, or used otherwise or differently than as shall at that time be directed, prescribed, or approved by the commissioners of Excise, the distiller, rectifier, or compounder by whom such cock shall be kept or used shall forfeit the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 22. "That every distiller, and rectifier, or compounder shall, at his own expense and charge, provide, maintain, and keep the several utensils, cocks, pumps, pipes, and troughs which are required by this act, and shall also provide, maintain, and keep, at the expense and charge of such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, proper and sufficient fastenings for securing the several cocks and plugs required by this act to be secured, and for securing the covers of or belonging to the chargers and receivers hereinbefore mentioned respectively, and also for securing the pumps, vessels, and utensils permitted, allowed, or required for the purposes mentioned in this act; and it shall and may be lawful for any officer of Excise surveying the distillery of any distiller to lock, secure, and fasten the several cocks, plugs, covers, pumps, pipes, vessels, and utensils, for which fastenings are required to be provided, in such manner as the commissioners of Excise may direct as aforesaid, and to keep the same and each and every of them so locked, secured, and fastened at all times, except when such officer shall be required, under the provisions of this act, to attend and shall attend to open and unlock the same."

Sect. 23. "That if the situation or position of any entered still, back, receiver, or other vessel, utensil, or pipe as aforesaid, shall be in any manner altered at any time after such entry as is by this act required shall have been made or given thereof, or the size of any still, back, receiver, or other vessel or utensil as aforesaid shall be in any manner altered at any time after the proper officer shall have ascertained the capacity or content thereof, unless on such notice as is herein provided, then in each and every such case such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, dealer, or retailer offending therein shall forfeit the sum of 200*l.* Provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, dealer, or retailer to alter the size, situation, or position of any entered still, back, receiver, or other vessel, or utensil, or pipe, or to erect and set up any new still, back, receiver, or other vessel, utensil, or pipe, on giving two days' notice in writing of such intended alteration to the proper officer, specifying the particular still, back, receiver, or other vessel, utensil, or pipe, and the size, situation, or position of which is intended to be altered, and making entry of such new still, back, receiver, vessel, utensil, or pipe in manner hereinbefore mentioned, and conforming in all respects to the regulations in this act contained in that behalf."

Sect. 27. "Provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of Excise, by any instrument in writing under the hands of two or more of them, to permit and allow any licensed distiller or rectifier, working under the regulations of any act or acts in force prior to the passing of this act, to keep or use such of the vessels or cocks already fixed or used in the distillery of such distiller, as shall in the judgment of such commissioners be secure, and adapted to the purposes for which such vessels or cocks are respectively prescribed or required by this act; and that no distiller to whom such permission shall be granted shall be liable to any of the penalties imposed by this act, in respect of such distiller keeping or using any such vessels or cocks so permitted, although the same may not be conformable with the provisions of this act; any thing heretofore contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 28. "That whenever any officer of Excise shall require that the water contained in any worm tub in or belonging to any distillery, at any time when such still shall not be at work, shall be drawn or run off, and the tub and worm cleaned, the water shall forthwith be drawn or run off, and the tub and worm cleansed by the distiller, his or her servants, or workmen accordingly; and if the water shall not be so drawn or run off at the request of such officer, and the tub and worm forthwith cleaned, and the water kept and continued out of such worm tub for the space of two hours, or until the surveying officer has finished his inspection and examination of such tub and the worm therein, the distiller in whose distillery such worm tub shall be situate shall forfeit the sum of 200*l.*; and it shall be lawful for such officer to draw or run off and keep drawn and run off such water, or so much thereof, and for so long time, as he shall think necessary."

Sect. 29. "That every distiller, rectifier, or compounder, and dealer in spirits, shall cause to be legibly cut, branded, or painted on the outside of both of the heads or ends of each rolling or moveable cask used by him or her for keeping or delivering out spirits, and shall at all times keep thereon so cut, branded, or painted, the full and true number of gallons which every such cask shall be capable of containing, together with his or her name or firm of trade, and the name of the place where his or her stock is kept; and every such cask which shall be found containing spirits without the full and true number of gallons which the same is capable of containing, and the name and place aforesaid, being so cut, branded, or painted thereon, together with the spirits contained therein, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 30. "That before any distiller shall give any notice of brewing or making any wort or wash, as by this act is required, and also before such distiller shall commence to brew or make any wort or wash, and before any rectifier or compounder shall receive, rectify, or compound any spirits, or any dealer or retailer shall receive or sell any spirits, each distiller, rectifier, or compounder, dealer, and retailer respectively shall make entry by delivering or causing to be delivered to the proper collector of Excise, or other officer authorized to receive the same, an account in writing, signed by such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, dealer, and retailer respectively, to be entered and registered by such collector or other officer, setting forth his or her name or names, and place or places of abode, and the place where the premises intended to be entered of such person or persons is or shall be situated, and also setting forth a true description of all and every vessel and vessels, and utensil and utensils whatsoever, erected and intended to be therein used in or for the purposes of such trade or business respectively, and the number of gallons which each and every or any still, together with the head thereof, is capable of containing, and specifying fully and distinctly in every such account the purpose for which each vessel and utensil is intended to be used; and also an account of the several houses, rooms, and places wherein any part of the business of such person is to be carried on, or for distilling, rectifying, or compounding any spirits, or in which any spirits are to be kept; and in such written account every such utensil, and also every such house, room, or place, shall be distinguished, by the separate and distinct number and name relating thereto respectively, which shall have been painted thereon pursuant to the provisions of this act; and every such account shall be in such form, and shall contain such particulars, as shall be from time to time directed and required or authorized by the commissioners of Excise."

Sect. 31. "That every distiller, rectifier, or compounder, dealer, and retailer respectively, shall paint, or cause to be legibly painted, and shall keep or cause to be kept so painted, upon some conspicuous part of every utensil intended to be used by him or her in his or her trade or business respectively, and on the outside of the door of every apartment and place wherein any part of the trade or business of such person is to be carried on, or wherein any spirits are to be kept, the name of each such utensil, apartment, or place, according to the purpose for which the same is respectively intended to be used; and shall also paint in manner aforesaid separate numbers relating to each and every such utensil, apartment, and

Sect. 32. "That together with every such account there shall be delivered a drawing or drawings, or description or descriptions, distinctly showing the course, direction, construction, and use of all fixed pipes to be used by any distiller, rectifier, or compounder, and of all and every branch and branches thereof, and of all and every cock and cocks therein, together with every place, vessel, or utensil from or to or with which any such pipe shall lead or communicate; and every pipe to be used by such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, except for the conveyance of water and spent wash only, shall be so fixed and placed as to be capable of being inspected and examined by the officer for and through the whole of its length or course, and shall be painted and kept painted as hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, every pipe for the conveyance of wort or wash shall be painted of a red colour, every pipe for the conveyance of low wines or feints shall be painted blue, every pipe for the conveyance of spirits shall be painted white, and every pipe for the conveyance of water shall be painted black; and if any pipe shall be used by any distiller, rectifier, or compounder, not set forth as aforesaid, or for any other purpose than shall be set forth as aforesaid, or which, except as aforesaid, shall not be fixed or placed or painted and kept painted as herein directed, or which shall be painted otherwise than as herein directed, such distiller, rectifier, or compounder shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*"

Sect. 33. "That it shall not be lawful for any distiller to set forth in the account by this act required to be signed and delivered, that any still or vessel mentioned therein is intended to be used for more than one purpose respectively; and every such entry in which any still or other vessel shall be described by any distiller as intended to be used for two or more purposes shall, in respect to such still or vessel, be deemed and taken to be void; and such distiller shall in every such case forfeit the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 34. "That if any still or vessel, or utensil whatever, shall at any time be used or applied by any distiller, rectifier, or compounder for or to any purpose connected with the distillation, rectification, or compounding of spirits, or if any fixed cask shall at any time be used by any distiller, rectifier, or compounder, or dealer or retailer as aforesaid, for holding or keeping spirits; or if any house, room, or place shall be used by any distiller, rectifier, or compounder, dealer or retailer of spirits, for the carrying on any part of the process of distillation, rectification, or compounding of spirits, or for the keeping of any spirits, which still, vessel, utensil, cask-house, room, or place shall not have been set forth, or shall not have been numbered as set forth, or shall be in any other place than shall be set forth, or shall be used or applied for or to any other purpose than shall be set forth, or shall not in all respects correspond with the representation thereof, as set forth in the account by this act required to be signed and delivered by such person; then and in every such case he or she so offending shall forfeit the sum of 500*l.* for every such offence; and every such still, vessel, or other utensil, or cask, and all spirits, or materials for distilling spirits, which shall or may be contained in any such still, vessel, utensil, or cask, or which shall or may be found in any such house, room, or place, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 35. "That no person or persons whomsoever shall erect, set up, enter, or make use of any house or premises whatsoever, in England, for rectifying or compounding spirits, or for receiving or keeping spirits, by any rectifier or compounder of spirits, or for preparing wort or wash, or for making or distilling spirits, or for receiving or keeping spirits, by any distiller or maker of spirits, within the distance of one quarter of a mile in a direct line from any other house or premises which shall be entered or used for preparing wort or wash, or for making or distilling spirits, or for receiving or keeping spirits, by any distiller or maker of spirits; nor shall any person or persons whomsoever erect, set up, enter, or make use of any house or premises whatsoever, in England, for preparing wort or wash, or for making or distilling spirits, or for receiving or keeping spirits, by any distiller or maker of spirits, within the distance of one quarter of a mile in a direct line from any other house or premises which shall be entered or used for rectifying or compounding spirits, or for receiving or keeping spirits, by any rectifier or compounder of spirits, or for preparing wort or wash, or for making or distilling spirits, or for receiving or keeping spirits, by any distiller or maker of spirits, on pain of forfeiting, in each and every such case, the sum of 500*l.* for every week that any such house or premises shall be erected, set up, entered, or used respectively, contrary to such prohibition as aforesaid; and all and every entries or entry of any such house or place so made use of contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever. Provided always, that the prohibition and penalty aforesaid shall not extend or apply, or be deemed or construed to extend or apply, to or in respect of any house or premises which may have been erected, set up, entered, used, occupied, or employed contrary to the prohibition aforesaid for preparing wort or wash, or making or distilling spirits, or for rectifying or compounding or for receiving or keeping spirits respectively by any distiller or maker of spirits, or any rectifier or compounder of spirits, on the 5th day of April, in the year 1825, so long as such house or premises continue to be so entered and used, and so long as no part of any such house or premises entered, used, occupied, or employed by any distiller or maker of spirits, and any part of any such house or premises, entered, used, occupied, or employed by any other distiller or maker of spirits, or any rectifier or compounder of spirits, shall have any way, opening, or communication whatsoever by which any wort, wash, or spirits can be removed or conveyed from the one into the other of such houses or premises, other than by carriage of a cart or waggon through and by an open street or road."

Sect. 36. "That no distiller or maker of spirits, or rectifier or compounder of spirits, shall upon the same premises carry on the trade or business of a distiller or maker of spirits, or of a rectifier or compounder of spirits, and of a brewer of beer, or of a maker of sweets, vinegar, cyder, or perry, or of a refiner of sugar; nor shall any distiller or maker of spirits enter or make use of any house or premises for preparing wort or wash, or making, distilling, or keeping spirits; nor shall any rectifier or compounder of spirits enter or make use of any house or premises for rectifying or compounding or for keeping spirits, having any communication, opening, or way, internally, or with or into, or through any enclosed or private yard, garden, field, passage, private road or place, with another house or premises used or employed by any brewer of beer, or maker of sweets, vinegar, cyder, or perry, or refiner of sugar, or by any dealer in or retailer of spirits, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 200*l.* Provided always, that where any house or premises shall appear to have been so entered and made use of as aforesaid by any person or persons on the 5th day of April, 1825, and shall continue to be so entered and used on the 10th day of October, 1825, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of His Majesty's treasury, or any three of them, to grant, by order in writing, their special licence to such persons to continue such use of such premises, for such time, and upon such terms and conditions, and upon payment of such annual sum or sums of money for defraying the expenses of extra survey of such premises, as they may think fit."

Sect. 37. "That no distiller who shall have made entry of any distillery, place, or utensils for the purpose of distilling spirits shall be permitted to withdraw such entry whilst any wash, low wines, or other

Sect. 38. "That every distiller, rectifier, or compounder who shall be licensed under this act shall forthwith cause to be painted, with letters publicly visible and legible, at least three inches long, the name or firm of such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, at full length, and, after such name, the words 'licensed distiller,' 'rectifier, or compounder,' as the case may be; and every such distiller, rectifier, or compounder shall cause such painting to be in some conspicuous place on the outside of the front of the distillery or entered premises of such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, over the gate or entrance door thereto, not more than three feet from the top of such gate or entrance door; and every such distiller, rectifier, or compounder shall preserve and keep up such painting during the continuance of his, her, or their licence; and in default of making such painting, or keeping the same so made, every such distiller, rectifier, or compounder shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 50/; and if any person, on or before whose house or other place any painting, board, or sign shall be affixed or erected, importing that such person is a distiller, rectifier, or compounder, or exercises or carries on the trade of a distiller, rectifier, or compounder, or purporting that such person is licensed so to do, shall not at the time be duly licensed for such purpose, then and in every such case every such person shall forfeit the sum of 50/."

Sect. 39. "That in case any officer or officers of Excise shall know or have cause to suspect that any private or concealed still, back, or other vessel, for making worts or wash, or for making or distilling low wines or spirits, or any privately made spirits or low wines, or any wash or other materials preparing for distillation, are set up or kept in any house or place, then and in such case, if such house or place shall be within the limits of the chief office of Excise, upon oath made by such officer or officers before one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county, city, or liberty where such house or place shall be, or before the commissioners of Excise, or any two or more of them; or, in case the same shall be in any other part of England, upon oath made by such officer or officers before one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county or place where such officer or officers shall suspect the same to be so set up and kept, setting forth the ground of such his or their suspicion, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said commissioners of Excise, or justice or justices of the peace respectively, before whom such affidavit or affidavits shall be made, if he or they shall judge it reasonable, by warrant under his or their respective hands and seals, to authorize and empower such officer or officers, by day or by night (but if in the night-time, then in the presence of a constable or other lawful officer of the peace, who are hereby required to be aiding and assisting therein), to break open the doors or any part of such house or place, where he or they shall so know or suspect such private or concealed still, back, or other vessel, spirits, low wines, wash, or materials for distillation, are so set up and kept, and to enter into such house or place, and to seize all and every such still, backs, or other vessels, and all such spirits, low wines, wash, and other materials preparing for distillation, which he or they shall find and discover, and either to detain and keep the same in the house or place where found, or to remove the same to the office of Excise next to the place where the same shall be so discovered and found; and in case the same shall not within ten days next after such seizure be claimed by the true and lawful owner thereof, then the said stills, backs, and other vessels, spirits, low wines, wash, and other materials for distillation, shall be absolutely forfeited, and the proprietor of any such private or concealed still, back, or other vessel, or the person in whose custody the same shall be found, whether such seizure be claimed or not, shall forfeit and lose for every place in which every such private still, back, or other vessel shall be so found, and also for every such still, back, and vessel found therein, the sum of 200*l.*; and if any person or persons shall obstruct, oppose, molest, or hinder any officer or officers of Excise, or others acting in their assistance, in the due seizing any such private or concealed stills, backs, or other vessels, spirits, low wines, wash, or other materials for distillation, or in detaining or keeping the same in the place where found, or in removing the same, or any of them, after seizure, to the next office of Excise as aforesaid, then and in every such case every person so offending shall forfeit the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 40. "That it shall and may be lawful for any officer or officers of Excise at all times, as well by night as by day, to enter into every house, distillery, still house, outhouse, and place whatsoever of or belonging to or made use of by any distiller of spirits, and to gauge, measure, and take an account of every still or other vessel or utensil of any kind of or belonging to or kept therein by any such distiller, and to gauge and take an account of the quantity and strength of all spirits, low wines, and feints which shall be from time to time made or distilled, and of the quantity and gravity of all wort and wash which shall be from time to time made use of in the distillery of such distiller, and of all bub and other compositions for exciting or producing fermentation in any wort or wash, and of all such spirits and materials for making or distilling of spirits which shall be in such distillery or in the possession of such distiller; and if any officer of Excise, or any person or persons acting in his aid or assistance, shall be hindered, obstructed, or prevented by any distiller, or by any servant or person acting for or in the employment of such distiller, from entering, or shall not be permitted to enter into any distillery, or any house, outhouse, or other place whatsoever, of or belonging to or made use of by such distiller, or, having entered, shall be hindered, obstructed, or prevented from doing or executing any part of his duty in the execution of this act, such distiller shall for every such offence respectively forfeit the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 41. "That in case any officer of Excise, after having demanded admittance into the distillery of any distiller, rectifier, or compounder, and having declared his name and business at the gate or entrance door or at any window of such distillery, shall not be immediately and without delay admitted into such distillery, such distiller, rectifier, or compounder shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 200*l.*; and if such officer shall not be immediately and without delay admitted into such distillery of any distiller, rectifier, or compounder, after having so demanded such admittance, it shall and may be lawful for such officer, and any person or persons acting in his aid or assistance, at all times, as well by night (if in the presence of a constable or other peace officer) as by day, to break open by force any of the doors or windows or break through any of the walls of such distillery as shall be necessary to enter such distillery."

Sect. 42. "That if, on demand of any officer of Excise, made in the distillery of any distiller, or in the entered premises of any rectifier or compounder of spirits, strong, safe, and convenient ladders shall not be provided, and conveniently and firmly placed, and of length sufficient to enable the surveying officer to ascend to and examine and descend from any vessel or utensil in any such distillery, or rectifying or compounding house or premises, or to gauge or ascertain the content or capacity of any vessel or utensil therein; or if any such ladder shall not be fixed at or in any part of such vessel or utensil where such officer shall require; or if on any visits made by any officer of Excise, on demand of any such officer, sufficient lights and sufficient aid or assistance shall not be supplied for the purposes of his or their gauging or ascertaining the content or capacity of any vessel or utensil, or of searching for and gauging and taking an account of all wort, wash, bub, low wines, feints, and spirits, and of all materials fit or proper for distillation in such distillery, or in the possession of such distiller, and all spirits in the possession of such rectifier or compounder, as well by day as by night, every distiller, rectifier, or compounder so offending, or on whose entered premises such neglect or offence shall take place, shall in any of the cases aforesaid for every such offence forfeit the sum of 100l."

Sect. 43. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any officer or officers of Excise, or any person or persons acting in his or their aid or assistance, by night or by day to break up any ground in any part of the distillery or entered premises of any distiller, rectifier, or compounder, or any ground near adjoining such distillery or premises, or any wall or partition thereof or belonging thereto, or other place, to search for any pipe or cock, or any private conveyance or utensil, and upon finding any such pipe or conveyance leading therefrom or thereto, to break up the ground, house, wall, or other place through or into which such pipe or other conveyance shall lead, and to break up or cut away any such pipe, cock, or other conveyance, and to turn any cock or cocks, and to examine whether such pipe or other conveyance may or can convey or conceal any wort, wash, or other liquor fit for distillation, or low wines, feints, or spirits, from the sight or view of the officer, so as to hinder or prevent him from taking or keeping a true account thereof."

Sect. 44. "That it shall not be lawful for any distiller to make or brew at the same time any wort or wash, or to make or distil any spirits, from malt, corn, or grain, or any mixture thereof, and from sugar or potatoes, or any mixture thereof, respectively, or to make or brew any wort or wash, or distil any spirits, from any other materials whatsoever; and if any such distiller shall at the same time make or brew any wort or wash, or shall make or distil any spirits, from malt, corn, or grain, or any mixture thereof, and from sugar or potatoes, or any mixture thereof, respectively, or shall at any time make or brew any wort or wash or distil any spirits from any other materials whatsoever, such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 200l.; and all such wort, wash, and spirits shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 45. "That every distiller who shall under the regulations of this act intend or desire to distil spirits from worts or wash brewed and made from sugar or potatoes only shall, six days before he shall commence to brew or make any wort or wash, give notice in writing to the proper officer surveying such distillery, in which notice shall be stated that such distiller intends to use sugar or potatoes only, not being mixed with any other materials whatever; and if, at any time after such notice shall have been given, any corn, grain, or malt, ground or bruised, or other material for distillation, except sugar or potatoes, according to such notice as aforesaid, shall be found in such distillery, or in any store, mill, or other premises thereto belonging; or if any wort or wash made of any materials, save and except sugar or potatoes only, as the case may be, according to such notice, shall be found in the distillery of such distiller, or in any store belonging to such distillery, then and in each and every such case such distiller shall (except in the case hereinafter provided) forfeit the sum of 200l."

Sect. 46. "Provided always, that if any distiller who shall have given any such notice of using sugar or potatoes only as aforesaid shall intend to commence or to recommence to use the other of them, or to use corn or grain and malt, at any time when there shall not be any wort or wash, or sugar or potatoes respectively, in the distillery of such distiller, such time being at least one calendar month distant from the time such distiller began to use sugar or potatoes only under any such notice, it shall be lawful for such distiller, on giving six days' previous notice to the proper officer, so to commence or recommence to use the other of them, or to use corn or grain and malt, and such distiller shall not thereafter be liable to any such penalty aforesaid. Provided also, that if any distiller using corn or grain and malt shall be desirous of commencing or recommencing to use sugar or potatoes only as aforesaid, at any time when there shall not be any wort or wash, or malt, corn, or grain in the distillery of such distiller, such time being at least one calendar month from the time such distiller shall have commenced or recommenced using corn or grain and malt as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such distiller, on giving six days' notice as aforesaid, so to commence or recommence to use sugar or potatoes only."

Sect. 47. "That from and after the 5th day of January, 1826, it shall be lawful for any licensed distiller in Scotland or Ireland to make or brew any wort or wash and to make or distil spirits from sugar only, or from potatoes only, any thing in any other act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided always, that whenever sugar or potatoes are used for that purpose, the same shall be done under the like rules and regulations as are contained in a certain act, made in the fourth year of the reign of His present Majesty, for granting certain duties of Excise upon spirits distilled from corn or grain in Scotland and Ireland, and upon licences for stills for making such spirits, and to provide for the better collecting and securing such duties, and for the warehousing of such spirits without payment of duty, for making or brewing wort or wash and making and distilling spirits from malt only, unmixed with any unmalted corn or grain, except that in the annual account of every such distiller, so far as shall relate to spirits made or distilled from sugar, he shall be chargeable and charged with duty after the rate or proportion of one gallon of proof spirits for every four degrees of the declared gravity of the worts from which such spirits were made or distilled."

Sect. 48. "Provided always, that if at any time or times during the recess of parliament it shall, from the excessive price of corn, appear expedient to His Majesty, his heirs or successors, to prohibit the making of low wines and spirits from barley, malt, and any other sort of grain, and from meal and flour, or any mixture thereof, it shall and may be lawful to and for His Majesty, his heirs and successors, from time to time, by his or their royal proclamation or proclamations, to be issued by and with the advice of his or their privy council, or by his or their order in council, to be published in the London Gazette from time to time, to prohibit the making, extracting, or distilling of any kind of low wines or spirits from barley, malt, and any other sort of grain, and from meal and flour, or any mixture thereof, for any time or times during such recess, or until twenty days after the commencement of the then next session of parliament."

Sect. 49. "That all wash which shall be made in the distillery of any distiller shall be fermented in the fermenting wash backs of such distiller, and shall be conveyed directly from thence into the wash charger, and shall be conveyed from such charger into the wash still or stills, there to be made or distilled into low wines, and all low wines shall be conveyed directly from the safe at the worm end of the wash still or stills into the low wines receiver or receivers, and shall from thence be pumped up or conveyed into the low wines and feints charger or chargers, and shall be conveyed directly from such charger or chargers into the low wines still or stills, there to be redistilled, and all spirits produced by such redistillation shall be conveyed directly from the safe at the worm end of the low wines still or stills into the spirits receiver or feints receiver or receivers, and so much of such spirits as shall be conveyed into such feints receiver or receivers shall be pumped or conveyed directly from thence into the low wines and feints charger or chargers, and shall be conveyed directly from such charger or chargers into the low wines still or stills to be redistilled, and the produce of the last-mentioned redistillation, and of every other redistillation, shall in like manner be conveyed directly from the safe at

Sect. 50. "And for more effectually securing the duties on spirits granted by this act, and regulating the process of the distillation of such spirits, be it enacted, that in the distillery of every distiller, the periods of brewing and distilling shall be always alternate and distinct periods—one to be called the brewing period, and the other the distilling period; and that no wort, wash, low wines, or feints shall be distilled in any such distillery, and that no still in any such distillery shall be made use of from the commencement of any such brewing period until twelve hours after the expiration thereof; that is to say, from the commencement of any process of wetting, brewing, or mashing any malt, corn, or grain, or sugar, or potatoes, until twelve hours after every such process shall have ceased, and all the wort or wash in such distillery shall have been collected into the fermenting backs in such distillery; and that no malt, or corn, or grain, or sugar, or potatoes shall be wetted, brewed, or mashed, nor shall any wort or wash be made or produced in any distillery during any distilling period; that is to say, from the commencement of the distillation of any wort or wash in any distillery, until after all the wort or wash in such distillery, or possession of such distiller, and all the low wines or feints in such distillery, or possession of such distiller, shall have been distilled into spirits and conveyed and run into the spirits receiver of such distillery, save and except such feints as shall have been produced by the last redistillation of the last charge of the low wines still or stills, and until the several furnace doors of each and every still in such distillery shall have been locked and secured by the proper officer; and if at any time during such brewing period any wort or wash or low wines or feints shall be distilled, or if any still shall be made use of in the distillery of any distiller, or if at any time during such distilling period any malt, or corn, or grain, or sugar, or potatoes shall be wetted, brewed, or mashed, or any wort or wash shall be made or produced in the distillery of any such distiller, then and in each and every such case such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 500*l.*"

Sect. 51. "That every distiller shall from time to time, at least six hours before he shall mash or brew as aforesaid, deliver to the proper officer of Excise a notice in writing, in which shall be set forth the day and hour when such mashing or brewing is to be commenced and made, and shall then, or within six hours after any such brewing shall be finished, deliver as aforesaid the true quantity and weight of the materials intended to be or which shall have been used or employed, and whether grain, or sugar, or potatoes respectively; and in case any mashing or brewing of any materials is commenced or made in the distillery of any distiller without such notice having been given as aforesaid, such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*; and it shall not be lawful for any such distiller to mix or cause to be mixed in any fermenting back or vessel the produce of two or more different brewings of wort or wash, or any part thereof, on pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 200*l.*."

Sect. 52. "That every distiller, after having made such entry as is by this act required, shall, before commencing to brew or make any wort, and in like manner every such distiller who shall at any time have discontinued making or brewing any wort for any longer period than one calendar month shall, before recommencing to make or brew any wort, give six days' notice in writing to the supervisor or officer surveying the distillery of such distiller, in which notice shall be set forth the day on which and sorts of materials with which such distiller intends to commence or recommence (as the case may be) making or brewing wort, and specifying the gravity of the wort or wash intended to be made in the distillery of such distiller; and in any such notice such gravity as specified shall not be less than fifty degrees, nor more than ninety degrees; and in case such distiller shall at any time be desirous of using wort of any other gravity than shall have been specified in such notice, but not being of a gravity less than fifty degrees, nor more than ninety degrees, such distiller shall in like manner, six days before the day on which he shall intend to use wort at any other gravity, deliver a notice, specifying the gravity of the wort intended to be used in such distillery after the day specified in such last-mentioned notice, such distiller not having on such day any wort or wash in the distillery or possession of such distiller, and such day being at least one calendar month distant from the day mentioned in any last preceding notice which shall have been given by such distiller; and if any distiller shall commence or after such discontinuance shall recommence the brewing or making any wort, or if any wort or wash shall be found in the distillery or possession of any such distiller who shall not have given such notice in manner and in the respective cases aforesaid, or at any time before the day set forth as aforesaid in any such notice, or if at any time there shall be found in the distillery or possession of any distiller, except in the mash tun or wort underback or coolers or coppers in such distillery, any wort or wash, the gravity whereof shall exceed the particular gravity which shall have been specified in any such notice, then and in each and in every such case all such wort or wash shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise, and such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 200*l.* Provided always, that no vessel used by any distiller shall be deemed a wort underback within the meaning of this act, unless the depth of such vessel shall be in every part thereof three feet at the least, nor unless such vessel shall be so situate in the distillery of any distiller as that the wort shall run directly into the same from the mash tun."

Sect. 53. "Provided always, that any such saccharometer may be used for ascertaining the gravity of wort or wash under this act, as shall from time to time be prescribed for that purpose by any order of the commissioners of Excise, or any four of them; and that every degree of gravity to be ascertained by any saccharometer under the provisions of this act shall be calculated in the following manner; that is to say, that distilled water being assumed as unity at the temperature of sixty degrees by Fahrenheit's thermometer, every degree of such gravity shall be correspondent to a thousandth part of the specific gravity of such water; and all wort or wash shall for the purposes of this act be deemed and taken to be of the gravity at which the said saccharometer shall, on the application thereof, denote or indicate such wort or wash to be."

Sect. 55. "That if at any time after any such declaration as aforesaid shall have been delivered, the gravity of any such wort shall be found to exceed the gravity specified in such declaration, or if the quantity of any such wort or wash shall be found to exceed by five per centum the quantity of wort mentioned in such declaration, as the quantity collected as aforesaid, then and in each and every such case such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 200l."

Sect. 56. "That if at any time after any officer of Excise shall have taken an account of and ascertained the gravity or quantity of any wort or wash in any fermenting back, any wort shall be found in such back, or any wash in process of fermentation shall be found in such back, which shall exceed in gravity the wort or wash in such back of which such account had been taken, or which shall exceed in quantity, by five per centum or more, the wort or wash in such fermenting back of which such account had been previously taken, all such wort or wash in such back shall be considered as new wort or wash, and not included in any former charge against the distiller in whose possession such wort or wash shall be found; and such distiller shall be charged with duty in respect of the whole wort or wash in such back, in like manner as such distiller is by this act chargeable in respect of any wort or wash not before charged, and the wort or wash of which such account had been previously taken in such back shall be deemed to be distilled or decreased, and the distiller shall be charged for a quantity of spirits in respect of such wort or wash so deemed to be distilled or decreased, in like manner as such distiller is chargeable under this act for any wort or wash actually distilled or decreased; and such distiller shall also, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 200l."

Sect. 57. "That every distiller who shall intend to make or prepare the composition called bub, or any other composition for inducing or increasing the fermentation of any wort or wash, shall from time to time, at least six hours previous to the beginning to make or prepare any such composition, give or cause to be given a notice in writing to the proper officer surveying the distillery of such distiller, specifying the time when and the particular vessel or vessels in which such composition is to be made or prepared, and the particular wash, fermenting back or backs into which the same is to be put, and also specifying the quantity of such composition to be put into every such back, which quantity shall not exceed the proportion of five gallons for every 100 gallons of the wort or wash to which such composition is to be so added; and it shall not be lawful for any distiller to have or use at any time any such composition of greater gravity than the gravity of the wort which such distiller shall at such time be authorized to use under the provisions of this act; and if any such composition shall be made or prepared in the distillery of any distiller contrary to the directions hereinbefore prescribed, or if the gravity of any such composition shall be increased at any time after the officer shall have taken an account thereof, or if the whole quantity of such composition shall not, as herein directed, be conveyed into the particular fermenting wash back or backs specified in such notice, within twenty-four hours after the time specified in such notice for making such composition, then and in each and every such case the distiller in whose distillery every such offence or default shall be committed or made shall forfeit the sum of 200/.

Sect. 58. "That when the whole wort or wash brewed or made in any distillery during any brewing period shall be collected into the fermenting wash backs in such distillery, and before the commencement of any distilling period in the distillery of such distiller, and before any still shall be made use of in such distillery for the distilling of such wort or wash, a declaration in writing, by or on behalf of such distiller, shall be delivered to the proper officer, that the whole wort and wash in the distillery of such distiller is collected into the fermenting wash backs in such distillery, and thereupon it shall be lawful for the officer surveying such distillery at any time, not being less than twelve hours subsequent to the delivery of such declaration, and such officer is hereby authorized and required to open any still or stills in such distillery, by removing such fastenings as prevent such still or stills from being used; and if any still in the distillery of any distiller shall be made use of before such declaration shall have been delivered as aforesaid, or before the expiration of such twelve hours as aforesaid, or if all the wort and wash in any such distillery shall not then be collected as stated in such declaration, then and in every such case such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 200/."

Sect. 59. "That eight hours before any wash shall be conveyed from any fermenting wash back in the distillery of any distiller, a notice in writing shall be given to the proper officer, by or on behalf of such distiller, in which shall be stated the number of the back in which such wash is contained, and the day and hour when such wash is to be removed; and such officer shall attend at the time specified in such notice, and after he shall have locked the charging cock or cocks of the wash still or stills, he shall remove all such fastenings as prevent the conveyance of such wash from any back mentioned in such notice into the wash charger, and thereupon forthwith and without delay all the wash which shall be contained in such fermenting wash back, or so much of such wash as such charger shall be capable of containing, shall be conveyed into such charger in manner prescribed in this act; and such officer, after having affixed and secured the fastenings which he had so removed, shall be at liberty and authorized to take an account of the true quantity thereof, and shall thereupon unlock the charging cock or cocks aforesaid; and if any wash shall be removed before such notice shall have been given, or shall be removed or conveyed from any other fermenting back, or at any other time or manner than shall have been mentioned in such notice, or before the proper officer shall have removed or secured respectively such fastenings as before mentioned, and taken account of the true quantity of the wash in such charger, such distiller shall in each and every such case forfeit the sum of 200/."

any distiller, a sample not exceeding the quantity of twenty gallons of the wash contained in any such back or charger, and to cause such sample of wash to be distilled into low wines in any still provided for that purpose by the commissioners of Excise; and such officer shall gauge or measure the quantity and ascertain the strength of the low wines produced by the distillation of such wash."

Sect. 61. "That it shall be lawful for any officer of the rank of supervisor of Excise at any time to require that any low wines receiver in the distillery of any distiller shall be emptied and cleaned out, and that any quantity of wash shall be conveyed into any wash still in the distillery of such distiller, and from any wash back as such officer shall direct or require, in order that such wash may be forthwith distilled into low wines; and all persons in the employ of such distiller shall, on reasonable notice, give and provide aid and assistance and fuel to such officer at his request in distilling such wash into low wines, and in conveying the whole of such low wines directly into such low wines receiver which shall be so cleaned out, and such low wines shall be kept in such receiver, unmixed with any matter or thing whatsoever, until such officer shall have taken an account of the quantity and strength of such low wines; and if such low wines receiver shall not be emptied and cleaned out, or if such wash shall not be conveyed into such wash still, or from such wash back, as shall be required by such officer, or if such aid and assistance and fuel shall not be given to such officer in the distilling such wash into low wines, or in conveying the whole of such low wines into such receiver, or if such low wines shall not be kept in such receiver, unmixed as aforesaid, until such officer shall have taken such account as aforesaid, then and in every such case every such distiller shall for each default or offence forfeit the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 62. "That in every such case, whether such low wines shall have been produced from wash distilled in any wash still in such distillery, and conveyed into any low wines receiver in such distillery as aforesaid, or shall have been produced from any sample of wash taken by such officer as aforesaid, and distilled in any still provided by the commissioners of Excise as aforesaid, such officer shall ascertain the quantity of proof spirit in and equivalent to such low wines, according to the strength of such low wines; and if such quantity of proof spirits so computed shall, in any of the respective cases aforesaid, exceed the rate or proportion of one gallon and one quarter of a gallon of proof spirits from each and every one hundred gallons of such wort or wash, for and in respect of every five degrees of the gravity of such wort or wash which shall have been attenuated, as taken by the surveying officer; that is to say, for every five degrees of difference between the highest gravity of the wort from which such wash was produced, as declared by such distiller pursuant to this act, or as appearing on any account thereof taken by the officer, and the lowest decreased gravity of such wort or wash, as taken by the officer previous to the distillation thereof as aforesaid; then and in each and every such case respectively every such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 200*l.*; and also the sum of 6*d.* for every gallon of wort or wash contained in the wash back from which such wash so distilled was removed or taken. Provided always, that such officer shall pay to such distiller the value of every sample of wash which he shall so take away from such distillery, or return the produce thereof, and mix the low wines with the low wines of the wash back to which they belong. Provided also, that such distiller, or any person acting in his behalf, shall and may be present at the distillation of any such wash, if such distiller or other person shall desire to be so present."

Sect. 63. "That after any wash shall have been removed from any fermenting back in any distillery, it shall not be lawful to remove any wash from any other fermenting back in such distillery, until the whole contents of such first-mentioned back shall have been taken a separate account of by the proper officer in the wash charger, and conveyed into

Sect. 64. "That four hours at least before any low wines, or feints, or spirits respectively shall be removed out of any of the respective receivers of low wines, or feints, or spirits in the distillery of any distiller, a notice in writing, specifying the day and hour when such low wines, or feints, or spirits respectively are to be removed out of such receivers respectively, shall be given to the proper officer, by or in behalf of any such distiller; and such officer shall attend at the time specified in such notice, and after having taken an account of the quantity and strength of such low wines, or feints, or spirits respectively, as the case may be, such officer shall remove the fastenings of the pumps or other conveyances used for the removal or conveyance of low wines, or feints, or spirits, and of the receivers containing such low wines, or feints, or spirits respectively, and forthwith and without delay all the low wines or feints which shall be in such low wines or feints receiver or receivers respectively shall be removed and conveyed into the low wines or feints charger or chargers; and all the spirits which shall be contained in such spirit receiver shall be removed and conveyed into the entered spirit storehouse of such distiller; and if any low wines, or feints, or spirits respectively shall not be removed and conveyed as aforesaid, or shall be removed from any such receiver without such notice, or at any other time than shall have been specified in such notice, or before the officer shall have removed the several fastenings, as herein directed, or if, after such officer shall have taken an account of the quantity and strength of the low wines or feints or spirits respectively in any such receiver, any other low wines, or feints, or spirits shall be conveyed into any such receiver, until the whole of the low wines, or feints, or spirits of which such account shall have been taken shall have been removed or conveyed from any such receiver, and the fastenings thereof shall have been again secured by such officer, then in each and every such case the distiller in whose distillery such offence shall be committed shall forfeit the sum of 200*l*."

Sect. 65. "That all the low wines produced by the distillation of the wash contained in each fermenting back in the distillery of any distiller shall be collected and kept in the low wines receiver or receivers separate and apart from and unmixed with any low wines produced by the distillation of any wash contained in any other fermenting back, or with any other matter or thing whatever, until an account of the quantity and strength of such low wines so separately collected shall have been taken by the proper officer; and upon such account having been taken, all such low wines shall be removed from such receiver or receivers into the low wines or feints charger or chargers, before any other low wines shall be made or produced from any subsequent distillation of wash in such distillery; and all the spirits and feints produced by the redistillation of such low wines, of which such account shall have been taken, shall in like manner be collected in the spirits and feints receiver or receivers respectively, and kept therein separate and apart from and unmixed with any other matter or thing (save as is hereinafter provided) until an account of the quantity and strength of such spirits and feints respectively shall have been taken by the proper officer; and if the whole quantity of low wines which shall be produced by the distillation of all the wash contained in each fermenting back in the distillery of any such distiller shall not be collected in the low wines receiver or receivers, separate and apart and unmixed as aforesaid, or if all such low wines so collected shall not remain and be kept in such receiver or receivers, until an account of the quantity and strength of such low wines shall have been taken therein by the proper officer, or if all such low wines shall not be removed from the receiver or receivers, as herein directed, or if all the spirits and feints respectively produced by the redistillation of such low wines, of which such account shall have been taken, shall not be so collected and kept separate as aforesaid (except as herein provided) until an account of the strength and quantity of such spirits and feints respectively shall have been taken by such officer as aforesaid, then and in every such case every such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 200/. Provided always, that it shall and may be lawful to mix with any such feints so collected in such receiver or receivers, or with the low wines from which such feints are produced, any feints (if any) which shall have been produced by and which may remain on hand after the redistillation of the last charge of the low wines still with the feints produced from the low wines of the preceding back of wash. Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend to prevent any distiller in whose distillery any feints shall have been collected, and an account thereof taken as aforesaid, from redistilling, under the provisions of this act, the whole of such feints, and in like manner to redistil the whole of any feints produced by such redistillation; and also, in like manner, to repeat the process of redistilling the whole of any feints produced by any such redistillation so often as it shall appear expedient to such distiller so to do. Provided nevertheless, that it shall and may be lawful for any officer of Excise, and such officer is hereby authorized to take an account of the spirits and feints respectively produced and collected as aforesaid on each and every such redistillation as aforesaid, and to compute and ascertain the quantity of proof spirits in and equivalent to such spirits and feints respectively, according to the strength of such spirits and feints respectively; and such distiller shall be chargeable and charged with duty, under the provisions of this act, for the greatest quantity of proof spirits which shall appear to have been produced or deemed to have been produced, under the provisions of this act, from the whole of the low wines which shall have been collected and taken an account of, as before mentioned, whether such greater quantity of proof spirits shall appear from the first redistillation of such low wines, or from any such subsequent redistillation as aforesaid."

Sect. 66. "That for and in respect of every 100 gallons of wort or wash which shall be brewed or made in the distillery of any distiller, the officer of Excise shall charge such distiller with duty for a quantity of spirits at the rate of one gallon of proof spirits for every five degrees of gravity of such wort or wash which shall be attenuated; (a) that is to say,

(a) The duty on spirits attaches upon the wash after it has been gauged, and before distillation, by 26 Geo. III., c. 73, s. 1; and the distiller is therefore liable to pay the duty, although the still burst, and the wash was lost before it was made into spirits: and per Macdonald, Ch. B.: "I believe it is a very general rule now adopted, on making these revenue acts, to avoid providing for contingencies of this kind, which would open a great door to fraud; and where a real misfortune happens, by a proper application to the Treasury, from the liberal manner in which these matters are conducted, a party is sure of relief." The Atty.-General v. —, 2 Anstr. 558. In the same case, the counsel for the defendant admitted that the tax on malt cannot be taken back, although it is afterwards consumed by accident before being used in brewing or distillation. An act of parliament was passed to relieve Mess. Meux & Co. from a loss to the extent of the duty on an immense quantity of beer lost by the bursting of a vat.

In another case it was held that, after the duties of Excise are charged on wash made for extracting spirits, by 26 Geo. III., c. 73, if any part of the wash is lost by accident, the manufacturer cannot be relieved from the respective proportion of the duty as for an overcharge, under the 1 W. & M., which only authorizes relief against a charge which was excessive at the time it was made, and does not extend to protect the distiller from an accident which happens to the article after the duty had been regularly assessed upon it. Rex v. Silks, 7 T. R. 56.

In the case of malt there was an express provision declaring that a return of duty shall be demandable in case of destruction of the commodity. See 9 Geo. I., c. 3, s. 35, 36, 37. Ex parte Calvert, 1 Anstr. 270.

for every five degrees of difference between the highest gravity of such wort or wash, as declared by such distiller pursuant to this act, or as appearing on any account taken thereof by the officer in any fermenting back or backs, and the lowest decreased gravity of such wort or wash, as appearing on any account thereof taken by the officer previous to the distillation of such wort or wash; and the officer shall also charge at the same rate and proportion of spirits for any lesser quantity of such wort or wash, and for any less decrease of gravity than five degrees."

Sect. 67. "That when any officer of Excise shall take an account of the quantity and strength of the low wines which shall have been produced from the distillation of the wash contained in any fermenting back in the distillery of any distiller, such officer shall compute and ascertain the quantity of proof spirits in and equivalent to such low wines, according to the strength and quantity of such low wines; and such quantity of proof spirits shall be deemed and taken to have been distilled or produced from the wash contained in such back, and duty shall be payable, and the officer shall charge the distiller with duty, on the quantity of proof spirits so ascertained, after making an allowance of two per centum on such quantity."

Sect. 68. "That whenever any officer of Excise shall take an account of the quantity and strength of spirits and feints respectively which shall have been produced from the whole of the low wines distilled from the wash contained in any fermenting back, together with any feints which may have remained from any previous redistillation in the distillery of any distiller, such officer shall compute and ascertain the quantity of proof spirits in and equivalent to such spirits and feints respectively, according to the strength of such spirits and feints respectively, and shall deduct from the quantity of proof spirits so ascertained a quantity of proof spirits, computed and ascertained as aforesaid, equivalent to the quantity of feints (if any) which may have remained on hand after any such previous redistillation, and which may have been included in the account of spirits and feints so taken as aforesaid; and after such deduction the remaining quantity of proof spirits so computed and ascertained shall be deemed and taken to have been distilled and produced from the low wines distilled from the wash contained in such fermenting back, and duty shall be payable, and the officer shall charge the distiller with duty, upon such last-mentioned quantity of proof spirits."

Sect. 69. "That every distiller shall, in respect of all wort, wash, and bub in the distillery of such distiller, be chargeable and charged according to the highest gauge of quantity which shall at any time be taken thereof, and according to the highest amount of gravity thereof at any time declared by such distiller or ascertained by any officer of Excise, without any allowance for waste, bub, dregs, yeast, or other matter whatever; and when any decrease shall take place in the quantity of wort, wash, and bub in the distillery of any distiller, the amount of such decrease shall be deemed and taken to have been distilled by such distiller, and such distiller shall be chargeable and charged with a quantity of spirits in proportion to the decrease of any such wort, wash, and bub, according to the directions of this act."

Sect. 70. "That it shall not be lawful to mix with or add to any low wines, feints, or spirits in the distillery of any distiller any sugar, syrup, or any glutinous or saccharine or other matter or thing, whereby the gravity of such low wines, feints, or spirits shall be increased, or so as to prevent the strength thereof respectively being ascertained by the hydrometer; and if it shall at any time be found that any sugar, syrup, or other glutinous or saccharine or other matter shall be so mixed with or added to any low wines, feints, or spirits in the distillery of any such distiller, contrary hereto, such distiller shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 200*l.*; and all low wines, feints, and spirits so mixed respect-

Sect. 71. "That whenever the quantity of spirits which shall be actually distilled or produced, or which, under any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed to be distilled or produced from any wort or wash contained in any fermenting back, shall exceed the rate or proportion of one gallon and one-fifth part of a gallon, of proof spirits from each and every 100 gallons of such wort or wash, for and in respect of every five degrees of gravity of such wort or wash which shall have been attenuated, as taken by the officer; that is to say, for every five degrees of difference between the highest gravity of the wort from which such wash was produced, as declared by such distiller, pursuant to this act, or as appearing on any account taken thereof by the officer, and the lowest decreased gravity of such wort or wash, as taken by the officer previous to the distillation thereof, then and in every such case the officer shall keep a distinct account of every such excess quantity, and shall set forth the same in his book or books, and in his return or charge against such distiller under the head of "undue excesses;" and in case the quantity of spirits charged upon any distiller during the continuance of the licence of such distiller, exclusive of such undue excesses as aforesaid, shall be less in respect of every 100 gallons of wort or wash distilled or decreased in the distillery of such distiller, than after the rate or in the proportion of one gallon of proof spirits for every five degrees of the gravity of the wort when made from malt, or corn or grain, or any mixture thereof, or from potatoes, or any mixture thereof, or than after the rate or proportion of one gallon of proof spirits for every four degrees of the gravity of the wort when made from sugar, or any mixture thereof, which shall have been specified in any notice which shall have been delivered by any such distiller pursuant to this act, then and in every such case such distiller shall be chargeable with the quantity of spirits after the proportion aforesaid respectively which shall appear so deficient, and the officer shall, within one month after the expiration of such licence, make a return, and shall charge such distiller with duty on the quantity of spirits which shall appear so deficient, and such distiller shall pay such duty within ten days next after such return shall be made, or ought to have been made, or shall for default forfeit 20%, together with a sum equal to double the amount of such duty."

Officer shall make a return on the distiller for the quantity of spirits chargeable, who shall pay the duty accordingly, on penalty of 20%, with a sum equal to double the duty.

Sect. 72. "That the proper officer of Excise shall, from time to time, make out and deliver to the collector of Excise, or to such person or persons as the commissioners of Excise shall appoint to receive the same, a return of the quantity of spirits for which such distiller shall, from time to time, be chargeable with duty, and of the duty payable thereon under this act; and any such officer shall and may make out and deliver any such return or account from time to time, and at any time, and for any period, as shall be directed by the commissioners of Excise; and every such officer is hereby required in every such return to charge such distiller, and such officer shall charge such distiller, according to such of the several modes of charging prescribed by this act as shall produce the highest amount of duty; and such officer shall, if required in writing by such distiller, deliver or leave with every such distiller, or at such distillery, an account in writing, signed with his name, setting forth the quantity of spirits specified in such return, with the amount of duty thereon, and the period comprised in such return; and the return of such officer shall be a charge on every such distiller, and such distiller shall pay the duty appearing by such return, or which shall be chargeable upon and have become due and payable from such distiller, within such time and times, and in such manner, as shall from time to time be directed by the commissioners of Excise for that purpose, or shall for every default forfeit 20%, together with a sum equal to double the amount of such duty."

shall, under the proper hand of such distiller, or under the hand of one of such distillers, if more than one in partnership, make a true and particular entry or return in writing to the proper supervisor of the district of the whole quantity of the wort or wash which shall have been decreased from the wash backs, or distilled in the distillery of such distiller into low wines or spirits, and of the whole quantity of spirits, computed at the strength of proof spirits, which shall have been made or distilled in the distillery of such distiller within the preceding brewing and distilling period, and of the whole quantity of feints remaining undistilled; and shall at the end of every quarter of a year, if demanded by the commissioners of Excise, make a return, in such manner as aforesaid, to the commissioners of Excise, of the whole quantity of malt used by such distiller in the preceding quarter; and in case of omission, neglect, or default in the making of such respective entry or return, or if any false entry or return shall be made, every such distiller shall for every such omission, neglect, or default, and for any such false entry, forfeit the sum of 200/."

Sect. 74. "Provided always, that no distiller shall be compelled to travel for the making of the said entries or returns, or for the payment of the said duties, or for any other cause relating to or concerning the same, to any other place than to the market town of or nearest to the entered distillery of such distiller."

Sect. 75. "That no spirits whatever shall be received or conveyed into or kept in the stock of any distiller, other than such spirits only as shall have been distilled in the distillery of such distiller, and as shall have been conveyed thereto, according to the directions of this act, from the spirits receiver in such distillery; and if any spirits other than such only as shall have been distilled by and in the distillery of such distiller shall be received or conveyed into, or shall be kept, or shall at any time be found in the stock of such distiller contrary to this act, such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 200/; and all such spirits shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise."

Sect. 76. "That all and every distiller, rectifier, or compounder of and dealer in spirits shall and is and are hereby required to keep sufficient and just scales and weights, and a one gallon measure, in his, her, or their entered warehouses, storehouses, and premises, and in every warehouse for warehousing spirits for exportation under the provisions of this act, and also to maintain the same conveniently placed and ready for use; and shall permit and suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same for the purpose of weighing, measuring, and taking an account of the spirits and casks, and other vessels and packages used or fit for conveying and removing spirits, which shall at any time be in the possession of such distiller, rectifier, or compounder or dealer; and if any such distiller, rectifier, or compounder or dealer shall not keep and maintain such scales and weights and measure, or either of them, or shall not permit or suffer any officer or officers of Excise to use the same as aforesaid; or if any such distiller rectifier, or compounder or dealer shall, in the weighing or measuring of any such spirits, casks, vessels, or other packages, use or cause, or procure or suffer to be used, any false, unjust, or insufficient scales or weights or measures, or shall practise any art, device, or contrivance, by which any such officer or officers may be hindered or prevented from taking the just and true weight and measure of any such spirits, casks, vessels, or other packages, then and in every such case such distiller, rectifier, or compounder or dealer, shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100/; and all such false, unjust, or insufficient scales and weights and measures respectively shall likewise be forfeited and lost, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 77. "That all and every such distiller, rectifier, or compounder of, or dealer in or retailer of spirits shall, when and so often as he, she, or they shall be thereunto required by any officer or officers of Excise, and with a sufficient number of his, her, or their servants, aid and assist to the

Sect. 78. "That it shall and may be lawful for any officer of Excise, from time to time, and whenever and as often as such officer shall deem expedient so to do, to take any sample or samples of any wort, wash, low wines, feints, and spirits respectively, in any back, receiver, charger, or other vessel or utensil in the distillery of any distiller, in order that such officer may ascertain the gravity or strength of such worts, wash, low wines, feints, and spirits respectively, and from such part of any such back, receiver, charger, or other vessel or utensil as the officer shall think proper; and the gravity or strength of any such sample so taken shall be and be held to be the true and correct gravity or strength of the whole contents of the back, receiver, charger, or other vessel or utensil from which any such sample shall be so taken. Provided always, that before any such sample shall be so taken, all the liquor contained in any such back, receiver, charger, or other vessel or utensil may be stirred and mixed up and mixed together by such distiller, or any person in the employ of such distiller, if they shall think fit so to do."

Sect. 79. "That the proper officer of Excise shall, as often and at such time and times as he shall think fit, take and shall keep an account, by way of debtor and creditor, of the stock of spirits in the distillery of every distiller, and shall, in such account, credit such stock with the full quantity of spirits, computed at hydrometer proof, which shall be, from time to time, duly conveyed, pursuant to this act, into such stock, from the spirit receiver in such distillery, and shall debit such stock with the full quantity of spirits, computed at hydrometer proof, which shall be from time to time sent out of such stock under legal permit; and if at any time the quantity of such spirits which shall be found in the stock or possession of any such distiller shall be greater than the quantity of spirits which by the stock account, so kept by such officer, ought to be in the stock or possession of such distiller, all such excess quantity of spirits shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Excise, and every such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 20*s*. for each and every gallon of such excess quantity of spirits; and if at any time the quantity of spirits in the stock or possession of any distiller shall be less than the quantity of spirits which by the stock account, kept by such officer, ought to be in the stock or possession of such distiller, every such distiller shall forfeit the sum of 20*s*. for every gallon of spirits which shall be so deficient. Provided always, that no distiller shall be liable to such last-mentioned penalty in any case where such decrease shall not exceed two gallons of proof spirits per centum on the quantity of spirits formed by the balance left on the last stocking, and the quantity since duly brought into stock from the spirit receiver, if such last stocking be no further distant than seven days, or three gallons of proof spirits per centum as aforesaid if more than seven days, and such distiller shall prove, to the satisfaction of the supervisor, that such decrease did not result from any fraud practised or intended."

Sect. 80. "That the several licences, entries, notices, declarations, books, accounts, and returns required or directed by this act shall and may be in such respective form or forms as the commissioners of Excise may from time to time direct; and it shall not be necessary to prove, on the trial of any complaint or information, or on any other proceeding for any offence against this act, the particular order or direction of the said commissioners of the treasury, or commissioners of Excise, in that behalf."

Sect. 81. "That no spirits shall be sent out of or removed from the distillery or stock of any distiller at any other strength than twenty-five per centum or eleven per centum above or ten per centum below hydrometer proof, or in any less quantity than in a cask containing eighty gallons, nor without a lawful permit, expressing the true quantity and strength of such spirits; and if any spirits shall be sent out of or removed from the distillery or stock of any such distiller in any less quantity than in a cask containing eighty gallons, or without such permit as aforesaid, or being of any greater strength than the strength expressed in such permit, then, and in every such case, all such spirits, and every cask and vessel containing the same, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Excise, and such distiller shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 200*l*."

Sect. 82. "That it shall and may be lawful for every distiller in England to warehouse, for exportation only, or for removal to Scotland or Ireland, any spirits distilled in the distillery of such distiller, without payment of the duty of Excise thereon, according to the provisions of this act, and under and subject to such further rules and regulations as the commissioners of Excise shall from time to time direct or order, every such warehouse to be provided and duly entered by such distiller, and to be ceiled and constructed and secured in such manner as shall be approved of by the commissioners of Excise or supervisor of the district; and every such warehouse shall have only one door, which door shall open into a public street or road, and have three locks, one of which shall be provided by such distiller, and the key of it kept by such distiller, and the other two of such locks shall be provided by the commissioners of Excise, at the expense of such distiller, the key of one of such locks being kept by the supervisor of the district, or other officer directed by the commissioners of Excise, and the key of the other of such two locks being kept by the surveying officer of such warehouse. Provided always, that it shall not be lawful so to warehouse any spirits of any strength other than the respective strengths of twenty-five per centum above proof, or eleven per centum above proof, as denoted by the hydrometer called Sykes's hydrometer; and that all such spirits shall be contained in iron-bound casks of not less than eighty gallons content each; and that there shall be marked on each end of every cask, in letters or figures legibly cut, branded, or painted thereon, the mark or number of every such cask, the full content thereof in gallons, and the number of gallons and strength of the spirits contained therein, every such cask being full at the time of the sending of such spirits out of the distillery, for the removal thereof to such warehouse; and if any distiller or distillers warehousing spirits as aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to provide and keep any such warehouse well and sufficiently constructed and secured as aforesaid, or to provide and keep such locks and keys, or to pay the supervisor for such two locks and keys as aforesaid, for securing such spirits as aforesaid, or to enter such warehouse for that purpose at the proper office of Excise, or shall make use of any warehouse or other place for keeping spirits without being constructed and well and sufficiently secured as aforesaid, or before the same shall have been first duly entered and approved of, according to the directions of this act; or shall remove any spirits to be so warehoused, except in such full iron-bound casks, marked and numbered, and having cut, branded, or painted thereon such particulars as aforesaid; or shall put into or keep in such warehouse any other liquors or other spirits other than as provided by this act; or if any such distiller or distillers, or any other person or persons whatsoever by his, her, or their order, privity, connivance, or direction, after any such spirits shall have been removed to and secured in any warehouse for keeping such spirits for exportation, shall open any of the locks or doors in the absence of the proper surveyor or supervisor and officer of Excise; or shall make or obtain any way or kind of entrance,

Sect. 83. "That when and as often as any such distiller shall intend to warehouse spirits for exportation or removal as aforesaid, he shall give two days' notice in writing to the officer or officers of Excise surveying the distillery of such distiller, and also to the proper officer of Excise surveying such warehouse, of such his intention ; in which notice shall be set forth the mark, number, and full content in gallons of each cask, and the number of gallons and strength of spirits contained therein, which such distiller intends to warehouse, and the day and hour of the day on which such distiller intends to commence the removal of such spirits out of the stock of such distiller to such warehouse. Provided always, that no such removal of any spirits shall be allowed without a permit being first granted to accompany the same according to law ; and no such removal shall take place except upon the day mentioned in such notice as aforesaid, nor upon any Excise-office holiday ; nor shall such removal be commenced at any time of the day before the hour of nine in the forenoon, or continued after the hour of two in the afternoon."

Sect. 84. "That the officer of Excise to whom any such notice shall have been given shall attend at the spirit stock of every such distiller at the time mentioned as aforesaid in such notice, and such officer shall ascertain the quantities and strengths of all such spirits as shall be in the possession or stock of such distiller in such manner as shall be directed by the commissioners of Excise, and of the spirits proposed or intended to be sent out of such stock, and shall compare the marks and numbers, and the several particulars cut, branded, or painted, as aforesaid, on the several casks in which such spirits shall be contained, with the marks and numbers and particulars described and set forth in the notice for the warehousing of such spirits ; and every such officer shall or may continue in the place where such stock is kept until the whole of the spirits of which such notice shall be given shall be removed out of the stock of such distiller, under permit as aforesaid ; and immediately after the removal of such spirits, such officer shall take stock on such distiller, in such manner as shall be directed by the commissioners of Excise, and set forth in the stock book the alteration in such stock found after the removal of such spirits."

Sect. 85. "That immediately on the arrival of such spirits under permit as aforesaid at the warehouse, the proper officer surveying such warehouse shall take an account of the contents of every cask, by gauge, or weight and temperature, as he may think fit, or as may be ordered by the commissioners of Excise, and the strength of the spirits contained therein, and shall enter an account thereof, with the mark and number of each such cask, in a book to be by him kept for that purpose, and shall also take a sample of half a pint of such spirits, drawn from every such cask, and keep the same labelled, with all such particulars as aforesaid, until three months after the whole of such spirits as shall be delivered from such warehouse for exportation shall be exported, and shall then deliver the same to such distiller; and such officer shall, after taking such account as aforesaid, deliver to the distiller or person requiring the same, for the use of such distiller, a certificate specifying the mark and number of each of the several casks, with the several particulars so found by him as aforesaid, with the day of the month and year when such spirits were warehoused as aforesaid."

Sect. 86. "That such certificate shall be forthwith delivered over by every such distiller to the officer surveying the distillery of such distiller, and upon the delivery of such certificate it shall be lawful for such officer to deduct from the number of gallons of proof spirits for which such distiller shall then be charged or chargeable with duty for the next ensuing payment the number of gallons computed at proof so warehoused, and to return the charge of duty so payable as aforesaid, against the distiller to the commissioners or collector of Excise, for the remaining number of gallons, which shall be a charge against such distiller accordingly; and every such officer shall annex to such return such certificate as aforesaid, as his voucher for having made such deduction as aforesaid."

Sect. 87. "That it shall be lawful for the distiller or proprietor of any such spirits so lodged in any warehouse as aforesaid, in the presence of the proper officer, who is hereby required when requested to attend at all reasonable times for that purpose (but not oftener than once in twenty-four hours), to view, examine, and show for sale such spirits, or any part thereof, and to examine the state of the casks, and to prevent leakage or drainage therefrom."

Sect. 88. "That it shall and may be lawful for any distiller or other proprietor of spirits warehoused as aforesaid, under the provisions of this act, to cause any cask or casks of spirits belonging to such distiller or proprietor, and which such distiller or proprietor shall require to be delivered out for exportation or removal, pursuant to the provisions of this act, to be filled up if necessary (in the presence of the surveying officer, or such other person as the commissioners of Excise shall appoint) from or out of any other cask or casks of spirits belonging to such distiller or proprietor, and which shall then be in such warehouse; and in case any part of the contents of any such cask shall remain after the filling up of any other cask or casks, the said cask, part of whose contents shall have been so used in filling, shall be kept apart for the like purpose, or if reduced below twenty gallons shall be delivered into the dealer's stock of any such distiller, on his or her payment of duty on such residue."

Sect. 89. "That in case the quantity of any spirits computed at proof which shall have been or shall be lodged in any warehouse as aforesaid shall at any time or by any means fall short or be deficient of the actual quantity so computed which was so warehoused, after allowing for so much and such part of such spirits so computed as shall have been duly exported or removed, the distiller or proprietor of such spirits shall be subject and liable to pay the full duties for home consumption upon such spirits for and in respect of the quantity so found deficient as aforesaid, and shall pay and satisfy the same upon demand, before any other of the spirits so warehoused then remaining shall be permitted to be taken out of such warehouse; and all such spirits so remaining shall be subject to the duties on the quantity so deficient, and shall and may be sold by the commissioners of Excise for exportation, for payment of the same and of other charges, paying over the surplus, if any, to the person who warehoused such spirits, or his assigns."

Sect. 90. "That spirits so warehoused may be removed at the desire of the distiller or proprietor thereof, and at his sole risk, as well of the value thereof as of the duties thereon, from the warehouse, at any one place in the united kingdom, to the like warehouse at any other place in "That it shall and may be lawful to remove, subject to the provisions of this act, from England to Scotland or Ireland, spirits distilled in England, or to remove, subject as aforesaid, from Scotland or Ireland respectively to England, spirits distilled in Scotland or Ireland respectively, any thing in any other act or acts to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding; and all such spirits so removed shall, on arrival in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, be dealt with in all respects as if the same had been distilled and made in the country into which the same are so removed; and the person or persons to whom the same shall be sent for sale shall have the same privileges and be subject to the like licence, regulations, and penalties in respect of such spirits, as dealers in spirits in the country into which such spirits shall be imported or brought, and as if such spirits had been distilled within the same."

Sect. 92. "That no spirits, whether medicated or mixed with any other ingredient or ingredients or not, which shall be made or distilled in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, shall be removed or sent from either Scotland or Ireland into England, or from England into Scotland or Ireland, except such spirits only as shall, for the purpose of such removal, be taken from and out of a warehouse in which the same shall be then warehoused, without payment of duty; and that before any such spirits shall be delivered out of such warehouse for that purpose, the proprietor or proprietors or person or persons who shall propose or intend to take out and ship such spirits for such removal as aforesaid shall give two days' notice in writing to the surveying officer of Excise of such warehouse in England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, of the time when he, she, or they shall propose or intend to take out such spirits from such warehouse, and shall specify in every such notice the number of casks intended to be so removed, and also the mark and number of each cask, the full content thereof in gallons, and the strength and quantity of the spirits contained therein, and the total quantity of spirits to be so removed, the name of the vessel and of the master thereof, or of the carriage or conveyance, by which such spirits are to be so removed, the name of the port or place at which such spirits are to be shipped, and of the port or place to which such spirits are to be removed, and of the person or persons at such last-mentioned port or place to whom the same are to be sent; and every such officer shall, upon the receipt of such notice, be authorized to examine every such cask, and ascertain the truth of the several particulars aforesaid, and the temperature and strength of such spirits, and the quantity of spirits contained in each of such casks, either by gauge or by taking the weight thereof, and shall, after receipt of the certificate of payment of duty, hereinafter mentioned, when such spirits are intended to be so removed for consumption, and upon and according to the request in writing of such proprietor or proprietors, person or persons as aforesaid, specifying the several particulars aforesaid, grant a permit for the removal of such spirits as aforesaid, expressing in or by indorsement of such permit the several particulars as aforesaid, of the total number of casks, the mark, number, content, and ullage of each such cask, the temperature, quantity, and strength of the spirits contained therein, the total quantity of spirits, and the names of the ship and master, or conveyance, and of the ports or places of shipment and destination, and name or names of the person or persons to whom such spirits are intended to be sent, and shall forthwith transmit by post a duplicate of such permit to the principal officer of Excise at the port or place nearest thereto, to which such spirits are so to be sent; and if any such spirit shall be removed from England into Scotland or Ireland respectively, or from Scotland or Ireland into England, except spirits so taken from warehouse, and duty paid as aforesaid, or otherwise than as aforesaid, or not accompanied by such permit as aforesaid, or in any greater quantity, or of greater strength, or in casks of any greater number or less content than shall be expressed in such permit, all such spirits, together with the casks containing the same, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and the person and persons so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of treble the value of such spirits, including the duty aforesaid, or of 200%, at the election of the commissioners of Excise, or the person who shall inform or sue for the same."

Sect. 93. "That after such account shall have been taken as aforesaid, and before any such spirits shall be delivered out of any such warehouse for such removal for consumption, the distiller or proprietor intending to remove the same shall pay to the collector of Excise or other person employed by the commissioners of Excise to receive the same the full duty of Excise payable on British spirits distilled in England, for and in respect of all such spirits intended to be so removed, whether such spirits shall have been distilled and shall then be warehoused in England, Scotland, or Ireland, and shall be intended to be removed from England into Scotland or Ireland, or from Scotland or Ireland into England; and such collector of Excise or other officer shall, upon request, sign and give to such distiller or proprietor a certificate of such payment of duty."

Sect. 94. "Provided always, that on the delivery from the warehouse of any spirits distilled or made in Scotland or Ireland for the removal thereof by sea to England for consumption, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioner and commissioners and assistant commissioners and collectors of Excise respectively in Scotland or Ireland to receive and they are hereby respectively authorized to receive and accept from the person or persons to whom such spirits shall be delivered from the warehouse for such removal, in lieu of the whole of the duty by this act made payable thereon, so much thereof as shall be equal to the amount of duty payable on such spirits when delivered for consumption in Scotland or Ireland respectively, together with a bond, with such good and sufficient surety or sureties as shall be satisfactory to the said commissioner or commissioners, or assistant commissioners or collectors respectively, as the case may be, for the due shipment and removal of such spirits as aforesaid, and for payment of the residue of the said duty on the quantity of spirits so delivered from the warehouse for such removal, within two months from the date of such bond, or within twenty-one days after the arrival of such spirits, or any part thereof, in England, whichever shall first happen; and that upon the payment of the residue of such duty, according to the condition of such bond, being certified by the officer of the port in England where the said residue of duty shall be paid, which certificate such officer is hereby required to grant without fee or reward, to the commissioner or commissioners, and assistant commissioners of Excise in Ireland or Scotland, every such bond shall be cancelled; any thing in this act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 95. "That upon the distiller or proprietor of such spirits, or some person on behalf of such distiller or proprietor, producing to the officer surveying the warehouse the certificate from the collector or other person as aforesaid of the payment of such duty as aforesaid, where such spirits are intended to be so removed for consumption, and such permit having been requested and granted as aforesaid, such officer shall deliver such spirits as shall be mentioned in such certificate and permit to be so removed; and that no such removal shall take place on any Excise-office or Custom-house holiday, or commence at any time of the day before the hour of nine in the forenoon, or continue after the hour of two in the afternoon; and all such spirits shall be shipped, removed, carried, or conveyed to the place of destination mentioned in such permit, and delivered there, in the same casks in which they were originally warehoused, with the marks, numbers, and notes of the contents as aforesaid branded, cut, or painted thereon, except in cases of damaged or leaky casks, which may be changed, with the leave of any commissioner of Excise, or of the surveyor or supervisor

Sect. 96. "That no spirits made in England, Scotland, or Ireland shall be shipped or carried, conveyed or removed, from England to Scotland or Ireland, or from Scotland or Ireland to England, otherwise than as provided and directed by this act, or in any ship or vessel of any less burden than fifty tons, or in any cask or vessel, except a cask which shall contain eighty gallons of such spirits at the least, on pain, in addition to all other penalties and forfeitures, of the forfeiture of all such spirits as shall be so shipped or removed, carried or conveyed, contrary to any or either of the prohibitions aforesaid, together with the casks or packages containing such spirits, and the ship, vessel, or boat, horses, cattle, and carriages employed in such removal thereof, and such spirits, casks, packages, ship, vessel, boat, horses, cattle, and carriages shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 97. "That the proprietor or proprietors of any spirits removed by sea from England into Scotland or Ireland, or from Scotland or Ireland into England, shall, within ten days next after the arrival of the ship or vessel wherein any such spirits shall be so removed within the port into which such spirits shall be brought, make due entry with the collector of Excise of the said port of all such spirits on board such ship or vessel, and deliver to such collector such certificate of payment of duty thereon, or permit, as aforesaid, and shall then land all such spirits; and if such proprietor or proprietors shall neglect or refuse, for such ten days as aforesaid, to make such entry, and deliver such certificate of payment of duty as aforesaid, or to land such spirits as aforesaid, such spirits shall be forfeited, together with the casks and packages containing the same, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and the commissioners of Excise shall cause such spirits to be publicly sold to the best bidder, at and for a price not less than the amount of such duties as aforesaid, at such places as they shall think proper; and if such spirits will not produce a price equal to the amount of the duties payable on such spirits, they shall be destroyed in such manner as the said commissioners of Excise shall think proper, and a reward shall be paid to the seizing officer or officers not exceeding two shillings per gallon, over and above all expenses, in lieu of all other allowances; and if all such spirits shall be duly landed according to the provisions of this act, the proper officer at such port shall deliver to the proprietor or proprietors thereof a certificate thereof, and the commissioners of Excise shall, upon production of such certificate of payment of duty or permit as aforesaid, and of such other certificate of the landing of such spirits as last aforesaid, thereupon cause to be repaid to the proprietor of all such spirits as shall be so removed from England into Scotland or Ireland, and on which the Excise duty payable in England has been duly paid for and in respect of every gallon of such spirits computed at proof, the difference between the amount of the duty so paid and the duty payable in the country into which such spirits shall be so brought."

Sect. 98. "That in all such entries so to be made, the number of casks and other packages containing such spirits, with the particular numbers and marks of each of them on board of each respective ship or vessel in which the same shall be so brought, shall be inserted, on pain for every neglect or refusal thereof to forfeit all such spirits, with the cask or other package wherein the same shall be contained, and the same shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 99. "Provided always, that no spirits which shall be or shall have been made or distilled in Scotland or Ireland respectively from unmalted corn or grain, mixed or unmixed with malt, shall be taken out of any warehouse, store, or place for removal to England, unless such spirits were made and warehoused by some distiller having, at the time when such spirits were so made and warehoused, no spirits made from malt only, or on which any allowance shall be or shall have been made in respect of the duty on such malt in his or her stock or possession or in such warehouse, and which shall be so certified by the proper officer at the time of warehousing, and also at the delivery thereof; nor shall any spirits made or distilled in Scotland or Ireland from malt only, or in respect of which any allowance as aforesaid has been or shall be made, paid, or received, be removed to England until the allowance so made shall have been repaid by the proprietor of such spirits to the commissioners of Excise, or such person as they shall order or direct to receive the same; and if any person or persons shall take out of any warehouse, store, or place any spirits made from unmalted corn or grain mixed or unmixed with malt for such removal, which were not made and warehoused by such distiller as aforesaid, and shall not be so certified as aforesaid, or shall remove any spirits made from malt only, or on which any such allowance as aforesaid has been made or shall be made as aforesaid, to England, without first repaying such allowance thereon as aforesaid, all such spirits shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 20*s.* per gallon for every gallon of such spirits so taken out or removed, or 100*l.*, at the election of the commissioners of Excise or person who shall inform or sue for the same."

Sect. 100. "That it shall and may be lawful to deliver in casks of not less than eighty gallons, from any such warehouse as aforesaid, any spirits lodged and secured therein as aforesaid, for the purpose of being shipped as stores, and of being consumed upon any outward and homeward voyage to or from parts beyond the seas, without payment of the duty of Excise, subject nevertheless, except as aforesaid, to the conditions, regulations, restrictions, and securities required by any act or acts in force in Great Britain relating to the shipping of rum as stores." Sect. 103. "That no person or persons shall be deemed a rectifier or compounder of spirits, within the meaning of this act, who shall not have at least one entered still capable of containing in the body thereof, exclusive of the head, 120 gallons at the least, nor unless such still shall have a suitable worm and worm tub affixed thereto, and shall be really and bonâ fide used for the rectifying or making of British compounds for sale by such person or persons; and any person who shall carry on the business of a rectifier or compounder of spirits, contrary to the directions of this act, shall be subject and liable to and shall incur all the penalties and forfeitures by this act inflicted on persons using or working any unlicensed still."

Sect. 104. "That no rectifier or compounder of spirits shall have or keep any opening, fixed pipe, or other conveyance whatever, leading to any still or stills belonging to or used by such rectifier or compounder, other than and except one charging pipe to each such still; nor shall have or keep any opening, fixed pipe, or other conveyance whatever, leading from any such still or stills, save and except the discharge cock to each still respectively belonging, and the head of such still terminating in the worm; and proper locks and fastenings shall be provided and maintained by the proper supervisor of the district, at the expense and charge of every such rectifier or compounder, for properly and sufficiently locking and securing the charge and discharge cock of each and every still respectively used by such rectifier or compounder, which locks and fastenings shall be locked and sealed by the proper officer of Excise, and shall be and remain always so locked and sealed when the still is at work; and if any such rectifier or compounder shall have or keep any such opening, fixed pipe, or other conveyance (not before excepted) leading to or leading from such still or stills, or shall refuse to pay for and maintain such locks and fastening as aforesaid, or shall prevent or hinder the officer from affixing any lock or fastening as aforesaid, or shall wilfully open, break, or damage, or cause or suffer to be opened, broken, or damaged, any of such locks, seals, or fastenings as aforesaid, every such rectifier or compounder shall for every such fixed pipe, opening, or conveyance (not before excepted), and for every such lock, seal, or fastening, forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 105. "That every such rectifier or compounder of spirits shall, before beginning to draw off any spirits from any still or stills, charge the same with a quantity of liquor, in the proportion of not less than seven parts in ten of the whole quantity of liquor which any such still, including the head, is capable of containing; and every such still shall remain and continue so charged until the rectifier or compounder shall begin to draw off spirits therefrom; and every such still shall be worked off within sixteen hours, to be computed from the time of the officer's taking the gauge thereof respectively; and if any such rectifier or compounder shall begin to draw off any spirits from any still or stills not so charged, or shall not work off the same respectively within such sixteen hours, such rectifier or compounder shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 106. "That every such rectifier or compounder of spirits shall take off, or cause to be taken off, the head or heads of any still or stills, except any still or stills whose head is soldered or permanently fixed to the body of such still, when and so soon as any such still or stills shall have ceased to be worked; and the head or heads of such still or stills shall in no case, nor on any pretence, or on any account, be put on such still or stills, until each such still shall be again charged and ready to work, nor shall any still be again worked by any rectifier or compounder until the officer shall have examined the quality of the spirits then in each such still; and if any such rectifier or compounder shall neglect to take off each and every head from each respective still, except as aforesaid, within twelve hours after each such still shall have ceased to be worked, or shall in any case, or on any pretence or account whatsoever, put on any such head or heads on any still or stills before such still or stills shall be charged and ready to work, or shall work any still or stills before the officer shall have examined the quality of the spirits then in such still or stills, every such rectifier and compounder so offending shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*"

Sect. 107. "And for the more effectually preventing the receiving or buying by any person whomsoever of spirits from persons privately distilling or unlawfully importing or landing the same, be it further enacted, that if any rectifier or compounder of or any dealer in or retailer of spirits, or any other person whomsoever, in any part of England, shall receive or buy or shall procure or employ any person to receive or buy any spirits from any person or persons whomsoever, except from some licensed distiller, rectifier, or compounder of spirits, whose name shall be painted over the outward door of his stillhouse, storehouse, warehouse, shop, cellar, vault, or other place, in manner required and directed by this act, or from some licensed dealer in or retailer of spirits, or at some public sale of spirits condemned and sold under the direction of the commissioners of Excise or Customs, every such person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 500*l.* Provided always nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to make any person or persons liable to the aforesaid penalty of 500*l.* for or by reason of the receipt or purchase of any foreign or colonial spirits, or British spirits, brought into England from Scotland or Ireland, under the provisions of this act, whilst the same shall be lying openly on the lawful quays on which such spirits respectively shall have been first landed upon the importation thereof or removal thereof from Scotland or Ireland, or in any warehouse or warehouses in which such foreign or colonial spirits shall be or may have been deposited by such seller according to law; every such seller of British spirits imported into England from Scotland and Ireland respectively being at that time duly licensed under this act as a dealer in spirits."

Sect. 108. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every the officers of Excise, from time to time and at all times by day or by night, upon his or their request, but if in the night in the presence of a constable or other officer of the peace, to enter into all and every the houses, warehouses, storehouses, rooms, shops, cellars, vaults, and other places made use of by any rectifier or compounder of, or dealer or dealers in, or retailer or retailers of spirits for the laying or keeping of any spirits; and by tasting, weighing, gauging, or otherwise, to take an account of the quantity and quality and strength respectively of all or any such spirits which shall at any time be in his, her, or their custody or possession, and to take at any time or times a sample or samples of any such commodities, paying for the same the usual price thereof, if demanded."

Sect. 109. "That every officer of Excise shall, as often and at such times as he may think fit, take an accurate and true account of the quantity and strength of all spirits in the stock, custody, or possession of all and every rectifier or compounder of or dealer in spirits, and shall compute the same at the strength of hydrometer proof; and if, after making allowance for the spirits for which permits shall have been granted since the last account taken of the stock of such rectifier or compounder or dealer, computing the same at the strength aforesaid, it shall be found that the quantity of spirits remaining in the stock, custody, or possession of such rectifier or compounder or dealer shall exceed the quantity for which such rectifier or compounder or dealer shall have credit in the books of the proper officer, whether such credit shall have arisen from what was on hand at the last preceding account taken, or from what may have been lawfully received subsequent thereto, such excess shall be deemed and taken to be spirits illegally received, and a quantity of spirits of the like kind, equal to such excess, shall and may be seized out of any part of the stock of such rectifier or compounder or dealer by any officer or officers of Excise; and the rectifier or compounder or dealer in whose stock, custody, or possession such excess shall be found shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20s. per gallon for every gallon of such excess; and if there be any decrease in such stock, not duly accounted for, by spirits sent out with permit, and exceeding five per centum on the balance or stock left on hand at the last preceding account, together with the quantity since lawfully received, the rectifier or compounder or dealer in whose stock such decrease is found shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20s. per gallon for every gallon of such deficiency."

Sect. 110. "Provided always, that if any still of any rectifier or compounder of spirits shall happen to be charged and at work at the time when any officer shall take account of the stock of any such rectifier or compounder, then and in every such case all the spirits produced from that charge of the still shall be kept separate and apart from the rest of such stock till the account of the rest of such stock shall have been completely taken, after which the spirits of or produced from that charge shall be added to such stock."

Sect. 111. "That no rectifier or compounder of or dealer in spirits receiving any spirits, or any retailer of spirits receiving any spirits of any less quantity than a cask containing eighty gallons, into his, her, or their custody or possession, shall break bulk, or draw off any part thereof, or add water or any thing thereto, or in any respect alter the same, or tap or open any of the casks so received, or alter or change any of the packages containing any spirits, or the spirits therein removed, until the proper officer or officers of Excise shall have taken an account of the strength and quality thereof; and every such rectifier or compounder or dealer or retailer as aforesaid, shall, on the receipt of any spirits, give notice thereof to the proper officer of Excise, and shall deliver to such officer the permit received by them with such spirits, whereupon such officer shall attend and take an account of the strength and quantity of such spirits; and if any such rectifier or compounder, dealer or retailer, who shall receive any such spirits as aforesaid into his, her, or their custody or possession, shall fail to give such notice and deliver such permit as aforesaid, or shall break bulk, or draw off any part of such spirits, or add water or any thing thereto, or in any respect alter the same or tap or open any of the casks or alter or change any of the packages containing any such spirits, or the spirits therein removed, until the proper officer or officers of Excise shall have taken an account of the strength and quantity thereof, all such spirits, or a quantity equal thereto, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized out of any part of the stock of such rectifier or compounder, dealer or retailer, by any officer or officers of Excise; and every such rectifier or compounder, dealer or retailer, so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.* Provided always, that in case the proper officer of Excise shall neglect to attend, for the purpose of taking such account as aforesaid, within two hours after receiving such notice, no forfeiture or penalty shall be incurred for any such offence."

Sect. 112. "That in all cases where the strength of any part of the stock of any rectifier or compounder of spirits, or any dealer in or retailer of spirits, by being mixed or compounded with any sugar, syrup, seeds, fruit, or any other ingredients or materials, cannot be easily ascertained by the hydrometer, every such rectifier or compounder, dealer and retailer, shall immediately, or on being required by an officer or officers of Excise, cause the true quantity and degree of strength of such spirits so mixed to be legibly marked on the outside of the cask or casks or vessel or vessels containing the same respectively; and if the strength of such spirits shall be found to have been untruly marked by such rectifier or compounder, dealer or retailer, on the outside of such cask or casks or vessel or vessels, or if such rectifier or compounder, dealer or retailer, shall, upon being required by the officer or officers of Excise as aforesaid, neglect immediately to mark the quantity and degree of strength of such spirits as aforesaid, or not continue such mark until all the spirits in such cask or vessel shall be removed and taken therefrom, such spirits, syrup, seeds, fruit, and other ingredients, together with the casks and vessels containing the same, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise, and every such rectifier or compounder, dealer or retailer, shall also for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.* Provided always, that no such penalty shall be incurred by any dealer or retailer who shall mark on any such cask of compounds, as the strength of the spirits therein contained, the strength expressed in the permit with which the same were received by such dealer or retailer into stock, no alteration having been since made therein."

Sect. 113. "That it shall and may be lawful for any rectifier or compounder of spirits to sell and send out, accompanied with a true and lawful permit, to any person or persons, any quantity not being less than two gallons of compounded spirits at any strength not exceeding 17 per centum under hydrometer proof; and to any person any quantity not being less than two gallons of spirits of wine; and that if any plain British or colonial spirits, not being spirits of wine, or if any other spirits, not being compounded spirits, or if any compounded spirits, except by permit, and of such strength as aforesaid, and not being less than two gallons at any one time, shall be sold or sent out by any rectifier or compounder of spirits, contrary to this act, all such spirits, with the casks or other packages containing the same, and all horses, cattle, carriages, and boats made use of in removing such spirits, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 114. "That all spirits of wine shall be made and kept of the strength of 43 per centum over hydrometer proof at the least; and that the actual and true strength of all spirits of wine shall be expressed and Provided always, that no such permit shall be granted to a distiller for any smaller quantity of spirits than eighty gallons contained in one cask, or to any rectifier or compounder of or dealer in spirits for any smaller quantity than two gallons."

Sect. 116. "That if any retailer of spirits, or other person, licensed or not licensed, shall sell or send out, deliver or remove, or shall knowingly suffer to be sent out of, delivered or removed from his or her stock, custody, or possession, any spirits exceeding one gallon, without the same being accompanied by a true and lawful permit, to be requested and granted as aforesaid; or if any rectifier or compounder of or dealer in or retailer of spirits shall receive or knowingly suffer to be received into his or her stock, custody, or possession, or shall suffer any other person, for his or her use or account, to receive any spirits without the same being accompanied with a true and lawful permit so granted as aforesaid; or if any carrier, boatman, or other person shall knowingly carry, remove, or transport, or by means of his horse, cattle, cart, vessel, boat, or other conveyance, shall knowingly suffer to be carried, removed, or transported, or shall be aiding or assisting in carrying, removing, or transporting, from any part of England to another part thereof, any spirits which by law ought and is required to be accompanied with a permit, without being accompanied with such true and lawful permit, granted as aforesaid in that behalf, every such rectifier or compounder, dealer, retailer, carrier, boatman, or other person whomsoever, shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.* over and above every other penalty and forfeiture to which he or she is or may be liable by virtue of this act; and all such spirits, and the package and packages in which the same shall be contained, and every such horse, cart, vessel, boat, and other conveyance, and all such cattle, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise."

Sect. 117. "That no distiller, rectifier, or compounder of, or dealer in, or retailer of spirits shall send out or remove from his, her, or their stock, custody, or possession, nor shall any rectifier or compounder of or dealer in or retailer of spirits, or other person, receive into his, her, or their stock, custody, or possession, any spirits, unless the permit or permits accompanying such spirits shall truly express the sort or kind thereof, and the strength of all such spirits at the time of the removal thereof; and all such spirits so removed, sent out, or received, not being accompanied with a true and lawful permit or permits, where a permit is by law required, expressing the sort or kind, and the strength thereof, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer or officers of Excise; and every such distiller, rectifier, or compounder, dealer or retailer, so sending out, and every such rectifier or compounder, dealer, retailer, or other person so receiving such spirits, shall for each and every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and no rectifier or compounder of or dealer in spirits shall have (except as after mentioned) credit in stock for any greater quantity of spirits received or found in his or her stock than for the quantity computed at proof brought in by such permit or permits as aforesaid delivered to the officer; nor shall any retailer of spirits have credit in stock for any greater quantity of spirits received into his or her stock, except as after mentioned, than for the bulk or quantity of spirits in gallons brought in and expressed by such permit or permits as aforesaid, accompanying such spirits, and delivered to the officer."

Sect. 118. "That it shall and may be lawful for any officer or officers of Excise to stop and detain any person or persons who shall be found removing or carrying any spirits of any kind from the stock of any distiller, rectifier, or compounder or dealer in or retailer of spirits, or from branded thereon as aforesaid, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.* for every such default, omission, or offence as aforesaid."

Sect. 124. "That no dealer in British spirits shall sell, or send out, or receive, or have or keep in his or her stock, custody, or possession, any plain British spirits, except spirits of wine, of any strength exceeding the strength of twenty-five per centum above hydrometer proof, or of any strength below seventeen per centum under hydrometer proof, or any compounded spirits, except shrub, of any greater strength than seventeen per centum under hydrometer proof, on pain of forfeiting all such spirits as shall be sold, sent out, had, or kept by any such dealers contrary hereto, with the casks or other packages containing the same, which shall and may be seized by an officer or officers of excise."

Sect. 125. Provided always, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for any dealer in spirits to have in his custody or possession, any spirits of wine legally received by permit, upon condition of his, her, or their keeping his, her, or their whole stock of such spirits of wine separate and apart from his, her, or their stock of all other liquors, and in a vault or room specially entered for that purpose as aforesaid, but not otherwise, and to demand and receive permits for sending out spirits of wine of the strength of forty-three per centum above hydrometer proof, or any higher degree of strength, so that the whole quantity of such spirits of wine to be sent to any one person in the same day, shall not exceed 100 gallons; and the officer granting such permit shall therein express the same to be spirits of wine, and shall debit the stock of such dealer accordingly."

Sect. 126. "That every dealer in spirits who shall have or receive into his custody or possession any foreign or colonial spirits (not being compounded colonial spirits), and also any British spirits, shall keep the same separate and apart, and in separate cellars, vaults, or other places, specially entered for that purpose respectively, upon pain of forfeiting the sum of 100*l.*, or 20*s.* for every gallon of British spirits, or compounded spirits, which shall be discovered or found in his custody or possession, in any vault, cellar, or other place, not specially entered for that purpose, or where any foreign or colonial spirits (not being compounded colonial spirits) shall be found or kept; and for every gallon of foreign or colonial spirits (not being compounded colonial spirits) which shall be discovered or found in his custody or possession, in any vault, cellar, or place, not specially entered for that purpose, or where any British spirits, or compounded spirits shall be found or kept, together with all such spirits so discovered and found, and the casks and packages containing the same, which shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and that no person or persons whomsoever shall mix or keep, sell or send out, any British spirits mixed with foreign or colonial spirits, upon pain of forfeiting for every such offence, the sum of 100*l.*; and all such spirits so mixed or sold, or sent out, contrary to the true intent and meaning hereof, together with the casks and packages containing the same, shall also be forfeited and lost, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise: provided always, that every dealer in and retailer of spirits shall be allowed on all foreign or colonial spirits (not being compounded colonial spirits) lawfully brought into his or her stock, additional credit, over and above credit for the number of gallons expressed in the permit accompanying such spirits, and delivered to the officer, for such further number of gallons as shall be equal to the number of gallons of water added to and mixed with such spirits in the presence of the officer, in order to reduce the strength thereof to the strength of seventeen per centum under proof."

Sect. 127. "And the better to prevent the removal of spirits that have been illegally imported, or privately distilled, into the stocks of entered dealers in and retailers of spirits, and of others, be it enacted, that no distiller, rectifier, or compounder of, or dealer in or retailer of spirits, shall be allowed to request or take out more than one permit in one and the same day to any one person whomsoever, except as hereinafter is excepted, and such permit shall be granted for the removal of no more than one cask or other package (not being bottles) containing any spirits of one sort or kind, and if any more than one cask or other package (not being bottles) of spirits of one sort or kind, at any one time directed to one and the same person or persons, where there are two or more in joint trade or partnership, except as hereinafter is excepted, shall be found, removed, or carried, or removing or carrying from one place in England to any other place therein, whether with or without permit, the same shall be forfeited and lost, and the person selling or sending out such spirits, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*, or 20*s.* per gallon, at the election of the commissioners of excise, or person who shall inform or sue for the same: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent any distiller, rectifier, or compounder of or dealer in or retailer of spirits from taking out two or more permits, and by virtue thereof sending two or more casks, or other packages, containing spirits of a different sort or kind, to the same person in the same day, so as each and every such cask or package, respectively, shall be separately and distinctly described in such permit or permits: and also provided, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be construed to prevent the sending with one and the same permit any number of casks, with any kind of spirits therein, each such cask then containing eighty gallons or upwards of spirits."

Sect. 128. "That no retailer of spirits shall be a distiller, rectifier, or compounder of spirits, or have any part or share in any distillery or rectifying-house, or be in any manner interested or concerned in the trade or business of a distiller, rectifier, or compounder of spirits; and if any such retailer shall be a distiller, rectifier, or compounder of spirits, or shall have any part or share in any distillery or rectifying-house, or be in any manner interested or concerned in the trade or business of a distiller, rectifier, or compounder of spirits, such retailer shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l.*"

Sect. 129. "That no retailer of spirits, not taking out, or having a license as a dealer in spirits, shall be entitled to request, or shall have any permit granted for the removal of spirits, except to a private person not being a rectifier or compounder, or dealer in or retailer of spirits; and that every retailer, not taking out or having such dealer's license, who shall sell, send out, or deliver, any spirits to any distiller, rectifier, or compounder of, or dealer in, or retailer of spirits, shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*; and all such spirits so sold, sent out, or delivered by such retailer, shall, together with the package containing the same, be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise, and every permit drawn or granted for that purpose shall be wholly null and void."

Sect. 130. "That no retailer of British spirits shall sell, or send out or receive, or have or keep in his or their stock, custody, or possession, any spirits of wine, exceeding at one time ten gallons, or any plain British spirits, of any strength exceeding the strength of twenty-five per centum above hydrometer proof, or lower than seventeen per centum under hydrometer proof, or any compounded spirits, not being shrub, of greater strength than seventeen per centum under hydrometer proof, or any foreign or colonial spirits (not being compounded colonial spirits) of less strength than seventeen per centum under hydrometer proof, on pain of forfeiting all such spirits as shall be sold, sent out, had, or kept, contrary hereto, with the casks or other packages containing the same, which shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and no allowance whatever shall be granted to any such retailer for any increase in stock of spirits of wine, or plain British spirits or compounds, by water, sugar, syrup, or fruit; anything contained in any act or acts of Parliament to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

(a) In Brown and others v. Duncan, 10 B. & C. 93, was the following important decision, establishing that a breach of revenue regulations of this nature will not preclude a vendor from recovering the price of goods. A., B., C., D., and E., carried on trade in partnership as distillers, and C. alone carried on the business of a retail dealer in spirits, within two miles of the distillery, contrary to the 4 Geo. IV. c. 94, ss. 132, 133, and his name was not inserted as one of the partners in the distillery in the excise-book, or license, as required by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 7: held, these being mere revenue regulations, the breach of them by one of the partners, with the knowledge of the others, did not render the trade carried on by the five so illegal as to deprive them of the right to recover the price of spirits sold by them, or for the breach of a guaranty for the due accounting of an agent, to whom they had consigned the spirits for sale.

Justices, upon information that spirituous liquors are kept, &c. in such gaol, &c. may enter, and empower any constable to seize the same.

Sect. 131. "That every officer of excise shall, as often and at such times as he may think fit, take an accurate and true account of the quantity of all spirits in the stock, custody, or possession of every retailer of spirits; and if, after making allowance for the spirits for which permits shall have been granted since the last account taken of the stock of such retailer, it shall be found that the quantity of spirits remaining in the stock, custody, or possession of such retailer, shall exceed the quantity for which such retailer shall have credit in the books of the proper officer, whether such credit shall have arisen from what was on hand at the last preceding account taken, or from what may have been lawfully received subsequent thereto, such excess shall be deemed and taken to be spirits illegally received, and a quantity of spirits of the like kind, equal to such excess, shall and may be seized out of any part of the stock of such retailer, by any officer or officers of excise; and the retailer, in whose stock, custody, or possession such excess shall be found, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20s. per gallon for every gallon of such excess."

Sect. 132. "That if any person shall knowingly sell or deliver, or cause to be sold or delivered, directly or indirectly, any quantity of spirits to any other person, to the end that the same may be unlawfully retailed or consumed, or carried into consumption in any part of England, such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose, over and above all other penalties, the sum of 100l."

Sect. 133. "That if any person or persons shall knowingly receive, buy, or have, in his, her, or their custody or possession, any spirits, after the same shall be removed from the place where the same ought to have been charged with the duty payable in respect thereof, or before the duty to which the same shall be liable has been charged and paid, or secured to be paid, or before such spirits have been lawfully condemned as forfeited, the person or persons offending therein, whether he, she, or they had or have, or had or have not, or do or do not claim or pretend to have, any property or interest therein, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose all such spirits so received, bought, or had, in his, her, or their custody or possession, and treble the value thereof, according to and at the rate and price which the best spirits of the like kind and strength do or shall bear and sell for in London, at the time when such penalty shall be incurred."

Sect. 134. "That no license shall be granted for the retailing of spirits within any gaol, prison, house of correction, or workhouse for any parish poor, and that all licenses granted or to be granted contrary to this provision, shall be void, and of no effect; and if any gaoler, keeper, or officer of any gaol, prison, or house of correction, or any governor, master, or officer of any workhouse for any parish poor, shall sell, use, lend, or give away, or knowingly permit or suffer any spirits to be sold, used, lent, or given away in any such gaols, prisons, or houses of correction, or workhouses, or brought into the same, other than and except such spirits as shall be prescribed or given by the prescription and direction of a regular physician, surgeon, or apothecary, and to be applied in pursuance of such prescription from the shop of some regular apothecary, every such gaoler, keeper, governor, master, or other officer, shall for every such offence forfeit and lose the sum of 100l.; and in case any such gaoler or other officer, being convicted thereof as aforesaid, shall again offend in like manner, and be thereof a second time lawfully convicted, such second offence shall be deemed a forfeiture of his office."

Sect. 135. "That it shall and may be lawful for his majesty's justices of the peace, or any one of them, upon information upon oath that any spirits are kept and disposed of in any such gaol, prison, house of correction, or workhouse for parish poor, to enter and search, or to authorize and empower any constable, headborough, or other peace-officer of the parish where any such places are situated, by warrant under his hand and seal, to enter and search any such gaol, prison, house of correction, or workhouse; and in case any spirits shall be found therein (except such as are directed to be used medicinally as aforesaid), it shall and may be lawful for such constable, headborough, or overseer of the poor, to seize such spirits, and to cause the same to be forthwith staved and destroyed."

Sect. 136. "That no person shall carry or bring, or attempt to endeavour to carry or bring any spirits (except to be used in the way of medicine, as hereinbefore mentioned) into any workhouse for parish poor; and if any person or persons shall offend therein, it shall be lawful for the master or chief officer of such workhouse, or his or their servants, to arrest such person or persons, and to carry him, her, or them before a justice of the peace of the county, division, city, town-corporate, or liberty where such workhouse is situate, who is hereby empowered to hear and determine such offence in a summary way, and to administer an oath to the witnesses; and if by the oath of one credible witness or otherwise he shall convict such person or persons of such offence, he shall forthwith commit such offender or offenders to prison, or to the house of correction, there to be kept at hard labour for any time not exceeding three months."

Sect. 137. "That every master and chief officer of every workhouse for any parish poor, shall procure one or more copy or copies of the three preceding clauses to be printed, or fairly written and hung up in one of the most public places of his workhouse for parish poor, and renew the same from time to time, so that it may be always kept fair and legible, on pain of forfeiting the sum of 10*l.* for every wilful default, to be levied by warrant of any justice of the peace of the county, division, city, town-corporate, or liberty, where such gaol, prison, house of correction, or workhouse shall be situate, to be granted on conviction of such default in a summary way before such justice, by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer; and it shall and may be lawful for every justice of the peace to enter into any gaol, prison, house of correction, or workhouse for parish poor, within the limits of his jurisdiction, and demand a sight of such copy so hung up as aforesaid; and if the same shall not be forthwith shown to him so hung up in some public place, fair and legible as aforesaid, such justice shall and may immediately convict such gaoler, keeper, master, or officer of such default, and so from time to time, as often as he shall think fit."

Sect. 138. "That no person or persons shall hawk, or shall sell or expose to sale, any spirits, by whatever name or names they are or may be called or distinguished, in or about the streets, highways, or other places, or in or from any boat or other vessel upon the water, or in any other manner or place whatsoever, except in such place as hereinbefore in this act mentioned or allowed, upon pain of forfeiting all such spirits, and the sum of 100*l.* for every such offence; and it shall and may be lawful to and for any one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, or liberty respectively wherein such offence shall be committed, on his or their own view, or on the confession of the party, or by the proof on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses made of such offence, to convict any person or persons so offending as aforesaid, and such person or persons so offending and convicted shall immediately on such conviction pay the said sum of 100*l.*, or some mitigated amount, not being less than one-fourth part thereof; and on such offender or offenders refusing or neglecting to pay the said sum, the justice or justices so convicting as aforesaid shall and may, by warrant or warrants under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, commit the offender or offenders to hard labour in the house of correction for the said county, riding, division, city, or liberty respectively, for the space of three months, to be reckoned from the day of the said commitment; and the person or persons so committed shall not be discharged until he, she, or they shall have paid the said sum of money, or until the full expiration of the said three months."

Sect. 139. "That it is and shall be lawful for one or more such justice or justices of the peace as aforesaid, on any information upon oath made before him or them against any person or persons, for hawking, or selling, or exposing to sale any spirits contrary to this act, to issue his or their warrant or warrants under his or their respective hands and seals, to be directed to any constable or other ministerial officer of the peace, for the apprehending and bringing such offender or offenders before such justice or justices of the peace, in order to such offender or offenders being by such justice or justices dealt with according to law."

6 Geo. 4, c. 80.

Any person may detain a hawker of spirits, and give notice to a peace officer, who is to carry the offender before some justice.

Either of the offending parties informing against the other, shall be acquitted of his own penalty.

Informers may be rewarded by commissioners, not exceeding 50%, if the penalty is not paid and cannot be levied, or if the offender shall be sent to prison.

Armed persons opposing the law, or violently rescuing such offenders, or assaulting officers, informers, or witnesses, guilty of felony, and to be transported for seven years.

Sect. 140. "And whereas, for want of a constable or other ministerial officer of the peace being at hand to apprehend such offender or offenders, he, she, or they has or have often escaped unpunished; be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons whomsoever, to seize and detain any person or persons who shall hawk or sell, or expose to sale, in manner aforesaid, any spirits, by whatsoever name or names they are or may be called or distinguished, for such reasonable time as he, she, or they may give notice to the constable, headborough, tithingman, churchwarden, overseer of the poor, or some other peace or parish officer or officers, who are hereby required to carry such person so seized and detained before some one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county or place where such offence or offences shall be committed; which said justice of the peace is hereby required to proceed to the examination of such person so seized and brought before him for such offence, in the same manner as if such person so seized had been apprehended and brought before him by a constable or any other ministerial officer of the peace under such warrant as aforesaid."

Sect. 141. "And for the more effectual discovery of offenders, be it further enacted, that on the commission of any offence under this act, either of the offending parties who shall first discover and inform against the other or others of such offending parties, before any information has been lodged against such informing party for such offence, shall, upon conviction of the person or persons against whom such information shall be given, be discharged and acquitted from all penalties to which at the time of such information given such informing party may be liable, for or by reason of any such offence committed by such informing party; and that the evidence of such informing party shall, on any trial at law touching such offence, be admitted to prove the facts thereof or relating thereto."

Sect. 142. "And for the encouragement of those who shall discover offences committed against this act, be it enacted, that where any person or persons shall be lawfully convicted of any offence against any of the provisions of this act, and the pecuniary penalty imposed for such offence shall not be paid, and cannot be levied, or the person incurring any such penalty is not able to pay the same, but in lieu thereof is sent to prison, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of excise to cause such reward as they shall think fit, not exceeding 50% in each case, to be paid to the several and respective persons who shall appear to them to be entitled thereto as informers, out of any monies in their hands arising by any penalties or forfeitures under the excise laws."

Sect. 143. "That if any person or persons shall, armed with a gun, pistol, sword, or pike, or in a violent manner with staves or stones, rescue any offender arrested, or any goods or chattels seized under this act, or shall prevent such arrest of seizure, or shall assault, beat, or wound any officer or officers, or other person or persons acting in his or their aid or assistance, or any person or persons who shall have given or be about to give any information against, or shall have discovered or given evidence against, or be about to discover or give evidence against, or shall seize or bring to justice any person or persons offending against this act, or who shall have seized or be about to seize or examine any goods or chattels forfeited under this act, or shall forcibly oppose the execution of any of the powers given by this act, or who, being so armed, or with such violence as aforesaid, shall offer or threaten so to do, then all and every person or persons so offending, and their aiders and abettors, thereof lawfully convicted, shall be and be adjudged to be guilty of felony; and every such felon shall be subject and liable to the like pains and penalties as in cases of felony, and the courts by and before whom he, she, or they shall be convicted, shall have full power and authority of transporting such felon and felons for the space of seven years, in like manner as other felons are directed to be transported by the laws and statutes of this realm."

Sect. 144. "That if any constable or other ministerial officer of the peace whatsoever shall refuse or neglect, upon due notice or request, or on his own view, to be aiding and assisting, or to proceed as aforesaid in the execution of this act, such constable or other ministerial officer of the peace, being thereof convicted by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before any

Sect. 145. "That if any officer of excise, or person employed in the collection or management of, or accounting for or securing the revenue of excise on spirits, shall directly or indirectly ask or demand, or take or receive any sum of money or other recompense or reward whatsoever, or any security for any sum of money or other recompense or reward, or acquiesce in or make or enter into any collusive agreement with any person or persons to do, conceal, or connive at any act or thing whereby any of the provisions of this or any other act of Parliament relating to his majesty's revenue of excise on spirits shall or may be evaded or broken, or his said revenue defrauded, or to do or perform, or permit or suffer to be done or performed, any act or thing whatsoever contrary to the duty of such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, or to neglect or omit to do or perform any act or thing whatsoever belonging or appertaining to the business or duty of such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, every such officer or person so employed, offending as aforesaid, shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit the sum of 500*l*.; and being thereof duly convicted, shall be incapable of thereafter serving his majesty in any office or employment whatsoever; and every person who shall directly or indirectly give or offer, or promise to give, to any officer or person so employed as aforesaid, any sum of money or other recompense or reward whatsoever, or any security for any sum of money, recompense, or reward whatsoever, or shall propose, make, or enter into any collusive agreement with any officer or person so employed as aforesaid, in order to corrupt and prevail upon such officer or person as last aforesaid, to do, conceal, or connive at any act or thing, whereby any of the provisions of this or any other act of Parliament relating to his majesty's revenue of excise on spirits shall or may be evaded or broken, or his said revenue defrauded, or to do or perform, or permit or suffer to be done or performed, any act or thing whatsoever, contrary to the duty of such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, or to neglect or omit to do or perform any act or thing whatsoever, belonging or appertaining to the business or duty of such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, shall, for each and every such offence, whether such sum of money or other reward or promise of, or security for the same, or such agreement, be received, accepted, entered into, or performed or not, forfeit and lose the sum of 500*l*.: provided always, that in case any such officer or person so employed as aforesaid, who shall have directly or indirectly asked or demanded, or taken or received, any such sum of money, or other recompense or reward, or any promise of, or security for the same, or acquiesced in, made, or entered into any such collusive agreement, shall, before any complaint shall have been made, or any proceedings had against him for having committed any such offence or offences as aforesaid, give information of the gift, offer, or promise, to give such sum of money or other recompense or reward or security for the same, or of such collusive agreement proposed, or made, or entered into, and proceedings shall thereon be thought fit to be instituted, so that such penalty as aforesaid shall be recovered against the person who shall have directly or indirectly given or offered, or promised to give, any such sum of money or other recompense or reward or security for the same, or shall have proposed, made, or entered into any such collusive agreement; or in case the person who shall have directly or indirectly given or offered, or proposed to give, any such sum of money or other recompense or reward or security for the same, or shall have proposed, or made or entered into, any such collusive agreement, shall, before any complaint shall have been made, or any proceedings had against him or her for having committed any such offence or offences, give information of the asking or demanding, or of the taking or receiving of any such sum of money or other recompense or reward, or promise of security for the same, or of such collusive agreement acquiesced in, made, or entered into by any officer or person so employed as aforesaid, and proceedings shall thereon be thought fit to be instituted, so that such penalty as aforesaid shall be recovered against such officer or person so employed and offending as aforesaid; then and in either of the said cases either of the said parties so first giving such information shall be exempted from and indemnified against the penalties and disabilities imposed on such party for such offence or offences by this act."

Sect. 147. "That the gallon in this act mentioned shall, for all the purposes of this act, be deemed and taken to be a gallon, imperial standard gallon measure."

Sect. 148. "And in order to secure the duties of excise granted and imposed by this act, from time to time due and owing and in arrear, from any distiller or distillers, and for the enforcement of any penalty or penalties incurred by any distiller or distillers, for any offence or offences by him or them committed against this or any other law or laws of excise relating to spirits; be it further enacted, that all worts, wash, low wines, feints, and spirits, and all materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for the making thereof, in the custody or possession of such distiller and distillers, or in the custody or possession of any person or persons, to the use of, or in trust for him, her, or them, or into whose hands soever the same shall come, and by what conveyance or title soever the same shall be claimed, shall be subject and liable to, and the same are hereby made chargeable with, all the duties of excise in arrear and owing from time to time, from or by such distiller or distillers; and shall also be subject and liable to all penalties and forfeitures incurred by such distiller or distillers, for any offence or offences by him, her, or them committed, against this or any other law or laws of excise relating to spirits; and it shall and may be lawful, in all such cases, to levy thereupon such duties, penalties, and forfeitures, and use such proceedings for the recovery or enforcement thereof, as might lawfully be done, in case the debtors or offenders were the true and lawful owners of such worts, wash, low wines, feints, and spirits, materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels: provided always, that when the same shall come into the hands and possession of any third person or persons, by any bonâ fide sale and delivery made before any such duties have been charged or become chargeable upon, or any such penalties or forfeitures have been incurred by the distiller or distillers by whom the same respectively shall have been so sold and delivered as aforesaid, no such worts, wash, low wines, feints, or spirits, materials, preparations, vessels, or utensils, shall be subject or liable to, or be made chargeable with, such duties, penalties, or forfeitures, as hereinbefore mentioned."

Sect. 149. "That all fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by this act, shall be sued for, recovered, levied, or mitigated, by such ways, means, or methods, as any fine, penalty, or forfeiture may be sued for, recovered, levied, or mitigated, by any law or laws of excise; and that one moiety of every such fine, penalty, or forfeiture, shall be to his majesty, his heirs, and successors, and the other moiety to him or them who shall discover, inform, or sue for the same: provided, that no such mitigation shall in any case reduce any penalty imposed by this act, for any offence of which any person or persons shall be convicted, to less than one-fourth part of such penalty, over and above reasonable costs, charges, and expenses, incurred by the prosecution."

Sect. 150. "That all and every the powers, directions, rules, penalties, forfeitures, clauses, matters, and things, which in and by an act made in the Parliament of England, in the twelfth year of the reign of King Charles the Second, intituled, 'An Act for taking away the Court of Wards and Liveries, and Tenures in Capite, and by Knight's Service and Purveyance, and for settling a Revenue upon his Majesty, in lieu thereof,' or by any other law in force in England, relating to his majesty's revenue of excise, are provided and established, shall be (except so far as any of them may be altered by this act) practised, used, and put in execution, in and for the purposes of this act, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if all and every the said powers, rules, directions, penalties, forfeitures, clauses, matters, and things, were particularly repeated and re-enacted in this act."

Sect. 151. "That this act shall, except where otherwise mentioned, extend to England only, and so far as relates to licenses, and to the making and distilling, and warehousing and removal, of spirits under the provisions contained in and chargeable with the duties imposed by this act, shall commence and take effect from the 10th day of October, 1825; and so far as relates to the sale, delivery, and removal of spirits, and the payment of the duties upon spirits hereby imposed, and other parts of this act (except as aforesaid), shall commence and take effect from the 5th day of January, 1826; and that all spirits made and distilled in England, or brought into England from Scotland or Ireland, under the provisions of this act, after the 10th day of October, 1825, and before the 6th day of January, 1826, and which shall during such period be found removing or removed from any part of England to any other part thereof, except only for the purpose of being warehoused under the provisions of this act, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and the distiller or other person removing or concerned in the removal or receipt of any such spirits, shall, upon conviction of such offence, forfeit his or her license, and no new excise license shall be granted to such distiller or other person so convicted for the remainder of the current year of the license so forfeited; provided always, that all and singular the law and laws of excise in force in England at the time of passing this act, shall remain and continue in force until the 6th day of January, 1826, for rectifying, compounding, selling, delivering, and removing spirits made and distilled in England, or brought into England from Scotland or Ireland for consumption in England, and in respect whereof the duties respectively hereby repealed, are paid; anything herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 152. "That, from and after the said 10th day of October, 1825, it shall and may be lawful to and for any distiller in England, and for any proprietor of any British spirits distilled in Scotland or Ireland, and brought into England, according to the provisions of this act, to warehouse, and every such distiller and proprietor respectively is hereby required forthwith to warehouse, under the provisions of this act, the whole of the British spirits which any such distiller shall, between the said 10th day of October, 1825, and 6th day of January, 1826, distil or make, or any such proprietor shall bring into or receive in England from Scotland or Ireland as aforesaid, and to continue all such spirits so warehoused until the said 6th day of January, 1826; and that on the said 6th day of January, 1826, every such distiller and proprietor respectively shall pay to the commissioners of excise, or such person or persons as they shall employ to receive the same, all the duties respectively by this act imposed, charged or chargeable upon such distiller or proprietor for or in respect of such spirits so warehoused, and of all deficiencies thereof, or of so much of such spirits as shall not, by notice on that day to be delivered by such distiller or proprietor to the proper officer, be desired by him or her respectively to be continued in warehouse for exportation only to foreign parts, and all such spirits then in any such warehouse for which such duty shall be so paid shall thereupon be delivered from such warehouse: provided always, that no spirits so warehoused for which such duty respectively shall not be so paid on the said 6th day of January, 1826, and which shall be so desired to be continued in warehouse, shall be on any pretence whatever afterwards delivered from such warehouse, except for such exportation only; and that all spirits for which the duty respectively shall not be so paid as aforesaid, and which shall not be desired by such notice as aforesaid to be continued in the warehouse for such exportation only as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise."

Sect. 153. This act may be amended, altered, or repealed in this session.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 4, extends all acts in force in England relating to foreign and colonial spirits, &c., to the United Kingdom.

By the 1 Wil. IV. c. 49, intituled, "An Act to impose Additional Duties of Excise on Spirits," after reciting, "whereas it is expedient to impose certain additional duties of excise on spirits," it is enacted, "that there shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid, to and to the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, over and above all duties already imposed for or in respect thereof by any act or acts, the several additional duties of excise hereinafter mentioned (that is to say):

1 Wil. 4, c. 49.

- “ From and after the 15th day of March, 1830, for and upon every gallon of spirits of the strength of hydrometer proof, ascertained by the hydrometer called Sikes’ Hydrometer, which shall be made or distilled in England by any person or persons whomsoever, an additional duty of sixpence, and so in proportion for any greater or less degree of strength, or for any greater or less quantity, to be paid by the first maker or distiller thereof.
- “ For and upon every gallon of spirits of such strength as aforesaid, which shall have been or shall be made and extracted in Scotland or Ireland respectively, and warehoused there without payment of duty, and which shall have been or shall be taken out of warehouse there for the purpose of being removed or imported into England for consumption, an additional duty of sixpence, and so in proportion for any greater or less degree of strength, or any greater or less quantity, to be paid by the distiller or proprietor thereof at the time of the delivery of such spirits from the warehouse in Scotland or Ireland respectively, for the purpose of being brought or imported into England.
- “ For and upon every gallon of spirits of such strength as aforesaid, which shall be in the stock, custody, or possession of any distiller in England on the 16th day of March, 1830, an additional duty of sixpence, and so in proportion for any greater or less degree of strength, or any greater or less quantity, to be paid by such distiller.
- “ For and upon every gallon of spirits of such strength as aforesaid, which shall be made or distilled in Scotland or Ireland respectively, or which shall have been made or distilled in Scotland or Ireland respectively, and shall be or shall have been on the 16th day of March, 1830, in the stock, custody, or possession of any distiller in Scotland or Ireland, or shall have been warehoused there without payment of duty, and which shall be taken out of such warehouse for consumption in Scotland or Ireland respectively, an additional duty of twopence, and so in proportion for any greater or less degree of strength, or any greater or less quantity.
- “ From and after the 14th day of June, 1830, for and upon every gallon of spirits of such strength as aforesaid which shall be made or distilled in Scotland or Ireland respectively, or which shall have been made or distilled in Scotland or Ireland respectively, and shall be or shall have been, on the 15th day of June, 1830, in the stock, custody, or possession of any distiller in Scotland or Ireland, or shall have been warehoused there without payment of duty, and which shall be taken out of such warehouse for consumption in Scotland or Ireland respectively, a further additional duty of fourpence, over and above the said additional duty of twopence, and so in proportion for any greater or less degree of strength, or any greater or less quantity.”

Spirits made in Scotland or Ireland, and removed to England, but not sold on 16th March, 1830, to be liable to the duty hereby imposed.

As to spirits made in Scotland or Ireland, and sold, but not delivered at the periods herein mentioned.

Sect. 2. “ That all spirits which shall have been made or distilled in Scotland or Ireland respectively, and removed from thence into England, and which shall not, on the 16th day of March, 1830, have been sold or disposed of, or, if sold and disposed of, shall not have been delivered to the purchaser thereof, and removed from the legal quays or sufferance wharfs, or other place of landing, and the duties whereon shall not have been fully paid and satisfied, shall be liable to the said additional duty of sixpence hereby imposed ; and the same shall be paid by the proprietor of such spirits, or the person in whose custody or possession the same shall, on the 16th day of March, 1830, or at any time afterwards, be found.”

Sect. 3. “ That all spirits which shall have been made and distilled and warehoused in Scotland and Ireland respectively, and which shall, before the 16th day of March, or 15th day of June, 1830, respectively, have been sold and disposed of by the distiller thereof, but shall not have been delivered to the purchaser, but have remained and been taken an account of in any warehouse, shall be, and the same are hereby declared to be, liable to the said additional duties of twopence and fourpence for every gallon thereof respectively hereby imposed ; and the commissioners, collectors, and officers of excise are hereby authorized and required to demand and receive the said additional duties before the delivery of any such spirits from the warehouse in which the same shall have been or shall be warehoused ; and, in case any such spirits which shall have been so warehoused shall, after the said 15th day of March, or 15th day of June, 1830, respectively, have been delivered from the warehouse, it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of excise, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to collect, recover, and receive the said additional duties hereby imposed from the distiller or proprietor of such spirits, by the same ways, means, powers, and authorities, as any other duties of excise may by any act or acts be collected, recovered, and received; and, if any distiller or proprietor of any such spirits shall have been or shall be charged with, and shall have paid or shall pay, the said additional duties, or any part thereof, it shall and may be lawful for such distiller or proprietor to recover the amount so paid from the purchaser of the spirits, in respect of which such distiller or proprietor shall have been or shall be charged, and shall have paid or shall pay the said additional duties."

Sect. 4. "That the said additional duties hereby imposed shall be under the management of the commissioners of excise for the time being, and the same shall and may be respectively raised, levied, collected, recovered, paid, and applied, in such and the like manner, and in and by the same means, ways, or methods, by which the former duties of excise for or in respect of spirits were or might be raised, levied, collected, recovered, paid, and applied, in England, Scotland, and Ireland respectively; and all and every act or acts relating to the duties of excise, and all and every fine, penalty, or forfeiture, of any nature or kind whatsoever, for any offence against or in breach of any act or acts for securing the duties of excise, or any of them, or for the regulation or improvement thereof, in force immediately before the passing of this act, and the several clauses, powers, and directions therein contained, shall and the same respectively are hereby directed and declared to extend to, and shall be respectively applied, practised, and put in execution, for and in respect of the several additional duties of excise by this act imposed, in as full and ample manner, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if all and every the said acts, clauses, provisions, powers, directions, fines, penalties, or forfeitures, were particularly repeated and re-enacted in the body of this act."

Additional duties to be under the management of the commissioners of excise.

Sect. 5. "And whereas contracts may have been made before the 16th day of March, 1830, or before the said 15th day of June, 1830, respectively, by licensed distillers and makers of spirits, and other persons, for spirits to be delivered after those days on which the additional duties hereby imposed will attach;" it is enacted, "that all and every such licensed distillers and makers of spirits, and other persons, who shall have sold any such spirits before the 16th day of March, or 15th day of June, 1830, on which the additional duties hereby imposed shall be charged, shall be allowed to add such money as will be equivalent to the additional duties by this act imposed for or in respect of such spirits to the price thereof, and shall be entitled by virtue of this act to demand, recover, and be paid the same accordingly; or it shall be at the option of any such distiller or maker of spirits, or other person, having entered into any such contract for the delivery of spirits, or of the purchaser thereof, before the delivery and receipt of such spirits, to declare the contract null and void, and the same shall be and is hereby made null and void accordingly."

Remedy for contracts.

Sect. 6. "That all spirits on which the said additional duties are hereby imposed, and all spirits which, on the 16th day of March and 15th day of June, 1830, respectively, or at any time afterwards, shall be or be found in the stock, custody, or possession of any distiller or other person liable to the payment of any of the said additional duties hereby imposed, or in the custody or possession of any other person or persons in trust for or to the use of any such distiller or other person or persons so liable, shall and the same are hereby made subject and liable to the payment of so much of the said additional duties, or any arrear thereof, as they may be respectively liable to under the provisions of this act, and shall and may be seized, taken, and sold for payment thereof, under the powers or authorities given by any act or acts for the recovery and enforcing the payment of any duties of excise."

All spirits on which the additional duties are hereby imposed made liable, and may be seized and sold, for default.

Sect. 7. "That this act may be amended, altered, or repealed, by any act or acts to be passed in this present session of Parliament."

Act may be altered this session.

3. Relating to Spirits made in England for Exportation, or to be shipped as Stores, or for Removal to Scotland or Ireland, or made in Scotland or Ireland for Removal to England. (a)

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 80, ss. 82 to 106, contains several regulations applicable to this division, and are printed, ante, 611 to 619, and need not therefore be here repeated.

Excise duties,

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 58, s. 1 & 2, the several duties, allowances, and drawbacks of excise in respect of spirits distilled or made in Scotland or Ireland, are repealed, and new duties and allowances enacted.

And by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 52, s. 66 to 75, further allowances and regulations respecting the same are enacted.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 4, extends all acts in force in England relating to foreign and colonial spirits, &c. to the United Kingdom.

Spirits shipped for stores to be openly stowed.

By the 2 Geo. III. c. 5, s. 29, 42 Geo. III. c. 93, s. 12, all spirits made or drawn in Great Britain for exportation, shipped for stores, shall, during the time the ship is within the limits of any port in this kingdom, be openly stowed and kept, so that the officers of excise may at any time examine the same, on pain of forfeiting the double duties which the wort or wash from whence such spirits were made or extracted would have been chargeable with, had such spirits been made or extracted from fermented wort or wash made in England for extracting spirits for home consumption from malt, corn, grain, or tilts, after the rate of one hundred gallons of wort or wash for every twenty-four gallons of such spirits; and which charge shall be paid by the master of the ship.

Rum, &c. shipped for stores being,
if relanded, forfeited, &c.

By the 28 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 18, if any rum or spirits shipped for stores shall be unshipped, in order to be relanded, all such rum or spirits, together with the casks or other package, and also the boats and vessels, horses, cattle, and carriages made use of in such relanding or the removal thereof, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of customs or excise; and every person who shall so unship, or cause to be so unshipped, any such rum or spirits, or shall be assisting or concerned in such unshipping, or to whose hands the same shall knowingly come, after such unshipping, shall forfeit treble the value thereof; and if any master or other person on board such vessel shall assist in, or connive at such unshipping or relanding, he shall (over and above all other penalties) forfeit 100*l.*

Rum may be taken out of warehouse and allowed to be shipped in casks of not less than 60 gallons, as stores to be consumed on board free from duty.

By the 57 Geo. III. c. 123, s. 16, any cask not containing less than sixty gallons of rum, of the growth or produce of the British sugar plantations, may be shipped as stores to be spent and consumed on board any ship in any voyage to parts beyond the seas, freed from all the duties of excise, subject, nevertheless, to the rules, restrictions, penalties, and forfeitures, by the laws now in force, in respect of any rum to be shipped as stores.

No rum shall be shipped for stores on board any ship (except by permission of the commissioners of excise) but at the port at which the ship is fitted out for the voyage; and the oath required by law to be made, that the same is to be shipped as stores to be spent and consumed in the voyage, shall be made by affidavit in writing by the master or purser of such ship.

Conditions.

And if the contents of any such cask shall be drawn off, or the rum or any part thereof used or altered, either in quantity or quality, before such ship shall have sailed upon her intended voyage, such cask, and the rum therein contained or drawn off, shall be forfeited, over and above the penalty of the bond given on the shipment thereof, and may be seized by any officer of excise.

Penalty.

No rum of the British colonies shall be imported from Great Britain to Jersey, &c. on pain of forfeiture, unless permission be given by the commissioners of cus-

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 94, it is enacted, "that it shall not be lawful to export, or to enter for exportation, from any part of Great Britain to the said islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, or Sark, or to any or either of them, under the penalty of the forfeiture thereof, to be seized by any officer or officers of the customs or excise, any rum of the production and manufacture of the British colonies or plantations, unless permission be first given for that purpose by the commissioners of his majesty's customs in England, or any four or more

(28.) Starch, Hair-Powder, and Stone Blue.

[10 Anne, c. 26; 12 Anne, st. 2, c. 9; 1 Geo. I. st. 1, c. 2; 4 Geo. II. c. 14; 23 Geo. II. c. 21; 24 Geo. II. c. 40; 26 Geo. II. c. 32; 5 Geo. III. c. 43; 10 Geo. III. c. 44; 19 Geo. III. c. 40; 24 Geo. III. c. 40, sess. 2, cc. 41, 48; 26 Geo. III. c. 51; 27 Geo. III. cc. 13, 51; 28 Geo. III. cc. 37, 73; 42 Geo. III. c. 93; 43 Geo. III. c. 69; 52 Geo. III. c. 139; 1 & 2 Geo. IV. cc. 25, 29; 3 Geo. IV. cc. 25, 27; 6 Geo. IV. cc. 81, 111; 9 Geo. IV. c. 44.]

Duties.

By the 43 Geo. III. c. 69, Schedule (A.), for every pound weight (avoirdupois) of starch, of what kind soever, which shall be made in Great Britain, to be paid by the maker thereof, 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ d.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 111, imposes a duty upon every cwt. of starch, imported into Great Britain, of 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ l. 10s.

Allowances.

By the 23 Geo. III. c. 77, 43 Geo. III. c. 69, and 3 Geo. IV. c. 25, for every pound weight of starch made in Great Britain, which shall be consumed in Great Britain, on or before 15th July, 1826, in preparing and finishing any manufactures from flax or cotton, for sale (except such starch as shall be consumed in finishing new linen in the piece, for sale), there shall be allowed a drawback of 1 $\frac{1}{4}$ d., to be paid to the manufacturer.

And for every pound weight avoirdupois of starch made in Great Britain, which shall be used and consumed in finishing new linen in the piece, for sale, 3d., to be paid to the manufacturer.

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 1, the like allowances of duty on starch made in Great Britain, used in the manufacturing of flax or cotton, or in finishing new linen in the piece, for sale, shall be allowed for starch made in Ireland, and imported into Great Britain, and used and consumed in Great Britain as aforesaid.

British gum to be deemed starch.

Sect. 4. Every article and commodity called British gum, or by any other name or description, being a preparation of or from starch, or of or from any of the materials from which starch is made in Great Britain; or made in Ireland, and imported from thence into Great Britain, shall be deemed starch, and subject and liable to all the duties, allowances, and drawbacks, imposed, granted, and allowed upon starch, and to the several laws and regulations relating thereto.

No entry to be allowed (in certain places), except to persons assessed to the duties granted by the 6 Geo. 3, c. 38, and by the 19 Geo. 3, c. 50.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 1, and 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 20, "No person or persons whatever residing in any part of the kingdom out of the limits of the head office of excise in London, and in any places where there are not rates to church and poor, shall be permitted to make entry of any workhouse, or place for the making of starch, unless such person or persons shall be assessed in his, her, or their own name, and pay, in the several parishes and places in which such workhouse or place for the making of starch shall be situated, to the rates and duties on houses, windows, and lights, granted by an act made in the sixth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for Repealing the several Duties upon Houses, Windows, and Lights; and for granting to his Majesty other Duties upon Houses, Windows, and Lights;' and unless such person or persons shall also be assessed in his, her, or their own name, and pay in the several parishes and places in which such workhouse or place for the making of starch shall be situated, to the rates and duties upon inhabited houses, granted by an act made in the nineteenth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for Repealing the Duties on all Inhabited Houses, imposed by an Act made in the last Session of Parliament, and for granting to his Majesty other Duties upon all Inhabited Houses in Great Britain, and for amending the said Act; and also for amending so much of an Act, made in the Seventeenth Year of the Reign of his present Majesty, as imposes a Duty upon all Servants retained or employed in the several capacities therein mentioned,' or by any other act or acts of Parliament now in force; and that no entry of any workhouse or place for making of starch, already made, or to be made, as required by the statutes in that case made and provided, in any place out of the limits of the head office of excise in London, and where there are not rates to church and poor, shall be of any avail to any person or persons not so qualified, or for any longer time than the person or persons so making entry shall be qualified as aforesaid ; and every person making starch, not qualified as aforesaid, shall, notwithstanding any entry by him, her, or them made, be deemed and taken to be persons making starch without entry, and shall be subject to the like penalties and forfeitures as persons making starch without entry are by the statutes in such case made and provided now subject unto."

Persons making entries, and not qualified, liable to the penalties of making starch without entry.

By the 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 41, ss. 1, 6, 7, every maker of starch for sale shall take out a license annually, paying for the same 5*l.*, under the penalty of 30*l.*

Starch-makers to be licensed.

But the 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, repeals all former duties on excise licenses, and imposes new duties, viz. (int. al.):—Upon every license to be taken out by every maker of starch for sale, the annual sum or duty of 5*l.*, under the penalty of 100*l.*

See the several enactments of this statute relating to licenses, penalties, &c., title Mls and Berr, Vol. I.

By the 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 48, s. 1, no maker of starch within Great Britain shall erect, set up, alter, change, enlarge, or make use of any workhouse, storehouse, room, or other place, for the making, drying, or keeping of starch, or for the keeping any flour or meal, or other materials proper to be made into starch, or use any vat, trough, kiln, stove, box, utensil, or other vessel for the making of starch, without first giving notice in writing thereof, and of his name or place of abode, unless such notice shall have been before given in writing at the next office for the said duties on starch. Every offender therein, for each offence, to forfeit 200*l.*

Places of making and name and place of abode to be entered.

By the 5 Geo. III. c. 43, s. 19, leaving a summons at the place where discovery shall be made of such offence for using any workhouse, &c., or keeping any flour, &c., without giving notice, &c., directed to the person prosecuted by his right or assumed name, shall be deemed as effectual as if delivered personally, and directed to him by his proper name.

Summoning offenders.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 12, all rooms and places, vessels and utensils, used for the purpose of drying or making of starch, shall be marked and numbered by the direction of the surveyor or supervisor, at the expense of the starch-maker, on forfeiture of 50*l.* for each offence.

Rooms and vessels to be numbered.

By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 22, "all flour and meal, and other materials for making starch, which shall be found in any private workhouse, warehouse, or other place, and all private utensils and vessels for making or keeping starch, for which no entry shall be made, or notice given as aforesaid, shall be forfeited and lost, and the same, or the value thereof, shall and may be seized and recovered by the said officer or officers for the said duties on starch, for her majesty's use."

Materials found in private workhouse.

Penalty.

By the 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 48, s. 3, "every person who shall make starch within Great Britain, shall cause to be painted in large legible letters of at least three inches in length, over the outward door, or in some conspicuous part of the front of his or her starch-house, the christian and surname of such starch-maker, with the addition of the word starch-maker ; and if any person shall make starch within Great Britain, without having his or her christian and surname, with the addition of the word starch-maker, so as aforesaid painted over the outward door, or in some conspicuous part of the front of his or her starch-house, he or she so offending shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*"

By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 14, "all and every the officers for the said duties on starch, shall at all times, by day or by night (and if in the night, then in the presence of a constable, or other lawful officer of the peace), be permitted, upon his or their request, to enter the house, workhouse, warehouse, or other place whatsoever, belonging to, or used by any person or persons, who, within or during the last-mentioned term of thirty-two years, shall be a maker or makers of any starch whatsoever, and by gauging or weighing of the starch, or gauging the boxes and other utensils, or otherwise, as to such officer shall seem most proper and convenient, to take an account of the just quantity of the starch which shall have been made by such maker or makers of starch, from time to time ; and shall thereof make return or report in writing to the respective commissioners for the said duties on starch, or such as they respectively shall appoint

Officer may enter houses, &c., and take account of starch, and shall make a return in writing to the commissioners, and leave copy with maker.

28. Starch, &c. to receive the same, leaving a true copy (if demanded) of such report in writing under his hand, with or for such maker or makers of starch respectively; and such report or return of the said officer or officers shall be a charge upon such maker or makers of starch; and if the said officer shall refuse or neglect to give or leave a true copy of his report in writing with or for such maker or makers of starch, at the time of taking such account, upon demand as aforesaid, every such officer, for every such offence, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 40s. to every such maker and makers of starch respectively."

Penalty.

Starch-makers to give proper notice to excise officers before they begin to empty vats;

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 6, "every maker of starch, before he, she, or they do begin to empty or wash out any of the vat or vats, made use of by him, her, or them, in preparing or making of starch, he, she, or they shall give to the officer of excise of the division or district where his, her, or their starch-house is situate, twelve hours' notice, if such starch-house shall be within the limits of the chief office of excise in London; or, if such starch-house shall be in any other part of Great Britain, twenty-four hours' notice of the particular time and hour when and at which he, she, or they intend to begin to empty or wash out such vat or vats; and in case such maker or makers of starch shall not begin to empty or wash out the said vat or vats, at the hour and times mentioned in such notice, or within two hours next after, then every such notice shall be, and is hereby declared to be, void, and every such maker and makers of starch shall, and is hereby obliged to give a fresh and like notice in manner aforesaid: and in case any such maker or makers of starch shall neglect or refuse to give such first notice before he begins to empty or wash out his, her, or their vat or vats, or to insert in such notice the particulars hereinbefore required, or to give a fresh notice in manner aforesaid, before he begins to empty or wash out the vat or vats, in case he, she, or they shall not begin and proceed to empty or wash out the said vat or vats at the hour and time mentioned in the said first notice, or within two hours next afterward, such maker or makers of starch shall, in every such case, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100l."

Vats to be emptied in 48 hours, and sour waters shifted in 12 hours after beginning those operations, on penalty of 100l.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 15, it is enacted, that "every maker of starch, after he shall have begun to empty or wash out his vat or vats, agreeably to the notice by the said act required, shall proceed and continue to empty or wash out such vat or vats, until the whole of such vat or vats shall be emptied or washed out, without leaving off, except for the space of one night; and every such starch-maker shall finish emptying or washing out such vat or vats, within the space of forty-eight hours, from the time of beginning to empty or wash out the same."

After vats emptied, waters shall remain in the frames, &c. 48 hours.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 7, it is enacted, "that when and so soon as the said vat or vats shall be so emptied or washed out as aforesaid, and the water shall be put into the frames, tubs, or other utensils, used for preparing and making the same into starch, the said waters shall remain unmoved and undisturbed in the same frames, tubs, or utensils, for the space of forty-eight hours, at least, from the time of emptying and washing out the said vat or vats, agreeable to the said notice, and that the slimes and wash shall not, during the said space of forty-eight hours, be taken off the same: and that the officers for the duties upon starch may be able to ascertain when the said waters were so put into the said frames, tubs, or utensils, after the said vat or vats have been emptied or washed out, as aforesaid, every maker of starch shall give, or cause to be given, to the officer of excise under whose survey such maker of starch shall then be, a notice in writing, specifying therein the particular hour or time of the day when such maker of starch did finish the emptying or washing out of each and every vat and vats; and if any maker or makers of starch shall, after the said fifth day of July, 1779, neglect to deliver such notice as last aforesaid, he, she, or they shall, for every such neglect, forfeit and lose the sum of 100l."

Starch-maker to give the officer a notice in writing, &c.

Sect. 9. "That when the slimes shall be taken off, as aforesaid, and the same shall be put into any tub or tubs, or other utensil, the same shall remain in the same tub or tubs, or other utensils, into which the same shall have been first put, for the space of twenty-four hours after the same shall have been so taken off; and if any maker or makers of starch shall move or disturb the waters after the same shall have been so emptied or washed out of the vat or vats into any frame, tub, or utensil, or shall take off the slimes or wash during the space of forty-eight hours, as aforesaid, or shall move or disturb the slimes after the same shall have been put into such tub or tubs, or other utensil, during the space of twenty-four hours, as aforesaid, then, and in every such case, such maker and makers of starch shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 18, it is enacted, that "if any maker of starch shall, whilst his starch is in operation and under water, mix, or cause to be mixed, any of the starch waters of one making with those of another making, every such starch-maker shall forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*.: provided, nevertheless, that slimes which shall have been entered on the officer's books as slimes, for the space of twenty-four hours, may be mixed in the presence of the officer for the duties on starch, and not otherwise."

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 8, it is enacted, "that whenever any maker or makers of starch shall be desirous to take off from the sour waters the slimes or wash so put into the frames, tubs, or utensils, after the same shall have been and have remained unmoved and undisturbed for the space of forty-eight hours, as aforesaid, he, she, or they shall give to the officer of excise of the division or district where his, her, or their starch-house is situate, twelve hours' notice, if such starch-house shall be within the limits of the chief office of excise in London, or if such starch-house shall be in any other part of Great Britain, twenty-four hours' notice, of the particular time and hour when and at which he intends to take off such slimes and wash; and in case such maker or makers of starch shall not begin and proceed to take off the slimes and wash, as aforesaid, at the time and hour mentioned in such notice, or within two hours next after, then every such notice shall be, and is hereby declared to be, void, and every such maker and makers of starch shall be, and is hereby, obliged to give a fresh and like notice, in manner aforesaid; and in case any such maker or makers of starch shall neglect to give such first notice before he begins to take off such slimes or wash, or to insert in such notice the particulars hereinbefore required, or to give a fresh notice, in manner aforesaid, before he begins to take off such slimes or wash, in case he, she, or they shall not begin and proceed to take off such slimes and wash at the hour and time mentioned in the said first notice, or within two hours next afterwards, such maker or makers of starch shall, in every such case, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 15, "every starch-maker, after he shall have begun to take off the slimes or wash from the sour waters, agreeably to the notice by the said act required, shall proceed and continue to shift the said sour waters until the whole is finished, and shall finish the shifting the said sour waters within the space of twelve hours from the time of beginning to take off the said slimes or wash; and every starch-maker who shall not finish the emptying or washing out his, her, or their vat or vats, within the space of forty-eight hours from the time of beginning the same, or shall not finish the shifting the said sour waters within the space of twelve hours, from the time of beginning to take off the said slimes or wash, shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 16. "That when any starch-maker shall have finished the taking off the slimes and wash from the sour waters, and the green waters shall be put into the frames, tubs, or other utensils, used for preparing and making the same into starch, the said green waters shall remain unmoved and undisturbed in the same frames, tubs, or other utensils, for the space of twenty-four hours at the least from the time the shifting of the sour waters shall have been finished; and the said green waters shall not, during the space of twenty-four hours, be moved or disturbed in the said frames, tubs, or utensils: and that the officers for the duties upon starch may be able to ascertain when the said green waters were so put into the said frames, tubs, or other utensils, after the shifting of the sour waters had been finished, as aforesaid, every maker of starch shall give, or cause to be given, to the officer for the said duties under whose survey such maker of starch shall then be, a declaration in writing, specifying therein the particular hour or time of the day when such maker of starch did finish shifting the sour waters; and if any maker of starch shall, after the said twenty-fourth day of June, 1786, neglect to deliver such declaration last aforesaid, or shall

The starch waters of different makings not to be mixed, on penalty of 100*l*.; but slimes may be mixed in presence of an officer.

Starch-makers to give proper notice before they take off the slimes and wash from sour waters, on forfeiture of 100*l*.

Sour waters to be shifted within 12 hours, on penalty of 100*l*.

Green waters to remain undisturbed 24 hours, after shifting the sour waters; of which shifting a declaration is to be made, on penalty of 100*l*. for offence in either particular.

28. Starch, &c. move or disturb the green waters during the space of twenty-four hours after the shifting the sour waters shall have been finished, agreeably to such declaration last aforesaid, then every such maker of starch shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Boxes.

By the 4 Geo. II. c. 14, s. 1, all makers of starch shall use regular square or oblong boxes only, for boxing and draining green starch, before it is dried in the stove, on pain of forfeiting 10*l*. for every offence.

By the 4 Geo. II. c. 14, s. 1, and 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 11, every maker of starch shall, if within the bills, give twelve hours' (elsewhere twenty-four hours') notice in writing to the officer, of his intention to put any green starch into such boxes; and he shall, in such notice, express the particular frame or tub from which he intends to box any starch; and when he shall begin to box, he shall continue to proceed to box the same, till the whole quantity in such frame or tub shall be boxed; and if he shall neglect to give such notice, or shall not proceed or continue after such notice given, he shall forfeit 200*l*.

By the 1 Geo. I. st. 1, c. 2, s. 6, if the charge be made by gauging it before it be dried in the stove, then every box of green starch, or starch before it be dried, containing fifty-seven inches in length and ten inches in breadth, and eight inches in depth, or, in the whole, four thousand, five hundred, and sixty solid inches, shall be esteemed one hundred and thirty-one pounds avoirdupois of starch dried and perfectly made.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 10, if the officer shall miss any quantity of starch, of which an account had been taken by gauge, whilst the same was in the sour waters or slimes, and before it hath been put into the boxes, he may charge the maker according to such gauge taken.

Drying in the stove.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 13, 14, 15, when the maker shall have broken the starch from his boxes, he shall deliver to the officer an account in writing of the true number of pieces broken from such box, distinguishing the size of the different pieces, under the denominations of large, middling, and small; and how many pieces of each denomination are contained in each breaking from the boxes. And whenever any maker shall put his starch, when scraped, or when put into papers, into the stove for drying the same, he shall place the several pieces so put into the stove, in such manner as that the officers may have access to and be able to count the same. And he shall provide ladders, and assist the officer in taking an account of the said several pieces in the stove; and he shall not, for two hours after the officer hath entered the stove, stir the fire under the stove, nor throw upon the pan of such stove any dirt, meal, or other ingredient, whereby a smoke may be raised, or the officer hindered in counting the pieces. Any maker offending in any of the premises, he shall forfeit 200*l*.

Breaking down into scrapings.

Sect. 16. When any maker of starch intends to break down any piece, into scrapings or otherwise, he shall give to the officer twelve hours' notice, if within the limits of the chief office of excise; if in any other part of Great Britain, twenty-four hours, of the particular time and hour when he intends to break down such pieces; and if he shall not begin at the time, or within two hours after, the notice shall be void, and a fresh notice in like manner be given. And if he shall begin without giving such notice, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

Removing from the stove.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 19, if he be desirous to remove such starch from the stove, he shall give the like notice; and if he shall begin to remove any starch from the stove after the same is dried, without giving such notice, he shall forfeit 200*l*.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 17, if the officer shall find any piece of starch drying, of which no account had been taken in the box, the same shall be deemed starch whereof no account had been taken, and the maker shall forfeit 100*l*.

To be papered and stamped.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 1, 2, all starch, before it be put into any stove or place to dry (except for crusting), shall be put or wrapped in papers, and the maker shall, before he begins papering such starch for drying, give to the officer of the district twelve hours' notice in writing, if within the limits of the chief office, elsewhere twenty-four hours, of the particular time and hour when he intends to begin, and shall, in such notice, express the number of pieces intended to be papered, and where intended to be dried; and if such starch-maker shall not begin to paper such starch at the time, or within one hour, such notice shall be void. And every piece of starch, when papered, shall be tied up with strings, crossing each other on that side of the piece where the ends shall be folded, and there shall be pasted thereon a label or piece of thin paper three inches long, and three inches broad at least, of a different colour, upon which the officer shall put a stamp or seal, in such manner as to prevent opening such paper of starch without tearing the said piece of stamped paper: and every maker offending herein shall forfeit 100%.

Sect. 14. If any person shall forge or counterfeit any such stamp or seal, or the impression of the same on the papers, he shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy (a); or shall knowingly sell any starch with such forged or counterfeit stamp, or seal, or impression, or affix any paper duly stamped to any piece of starch other than that which was originally inclosed therein, he shall forfeit 500%.

Forging or using forged stamps.

Sect. 11. When the paper wherein such starch is contained shall be broken or damaged, and the maker shall be desirous of having the same re-papered and re-stamped, he shall give, if within the bills, twelve hours', elsewhere twenty-four hours', notice to the officer, who, on being satisfied that it was damaged by accident, may re-stamp the same as before.

Damaged stamps may be replaced.

Sect. 3. If any piece of starch papered and not stamped, or any piece not papered in manner as aforesaid, or any scrapings or loose starch, shall be found in any stove or place for drying, the same shall be forfeited; and the maker in whose possession the same is found shall forfeit 200%. But this shall not extend to pieces of starch put into the stove for crusting only, before the same be scraped.

Starch unstamped and scrapings.

Sects. 9, 10. Within one hour after such starch shall have been papered and stamped, all scrapings belonging thereto shall be weighed and taken account of and put into water, and shall not be mixed with other starch, or preparation for making starch then in operation, and when dissolved shall be strained through a sieve, and the officer shall take an account thereof as a green water; and the same shall not be again meddled with, until notice shall be given for boxing the same, as required by the 4 Geo. II. c. 14, and 19 Geo. III. c. 40. And if any maker shall neglect to put such scrapings under water, and stir the same until dissolved, and strain the same within one hour after having been weighed and taken account of, or shall wilfully disturb or cause the same to be taken away without notice, he shall be deemed to have boxed starch without notice: or if he shall, in order to increase the quantity of scrapings before the same be weighed, mix starch of the same or any other making, or any flour, meal, or other thing with such scrapings, or wilfully cause any water or other liquid to be put to such scrapings, or by any means cause the same to be increased in weight, he shall forfeit 200%.

By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 16, every maker shall keep sufficient and just scales and weights at the place where he makes his starch, and permit and assist the officer to make use thereof, on pain of 10%.

Maker to keep scales and weights.

By the 10 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 1, if any maker shall use insufficient scales or weights, he shall forfeit 100%; but not to be prosecuted both on this and the former act. And by the 28 Geo. III. c. 37, s. 15, the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer.

By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 19, no maker of starch shall remove any starch of which no account hath been taken by the officer, from the place where it was made, without giving to the officer, within the limits of the chief office of excise in London, twenty-four hours' notice, and elsewhere two days' notice.

Removing before surveyed.

(a) But, by the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 1, in all cases where any act committed in breach of, or in resistance to any of the laws for collecting the revenue, would, by the laws in force, subject the offender to suffer death, as guilty of felony without benefit of clergy, such act shall be deemed to be felony with benefit of clergy, and punishable only as such, unless the same shall also be declared felony without benefit of clergy by this act.

28. Starch, &c.

Removing upwards of 28lbs.

Loose starch above 28lbs. and scrapings may be seized.

Concealing or privately making.

Assisting in private or unentered places.

Officer to charge for materials missing.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 19, if he shall remove any starch after it is dried out of the stove or drying-place, before it has been weighed and taken account of by the officers, he shall forfeit 200*l*.

By the 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 48, s. 4, no starch exceeding twenty-eight pounds shall be removed or carried by land or water, unless the word "starch" be painted or marked on the package in legible letters three inches long, on pain of forfeiture thereof, together with the chests, casks, sacks, or other package containing the same; and the boat or vessel, horses, or other cattle, carts, or other carriages, made use of in removing the same.

Sect. 5. If any dealer in starch shall knowingly receive any quantity of starch exceeding twenty-eight pounds' weight, not having the word "starch" marked thereon as aforesaid, he shall forfeit 200*l*.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 13, all starch not being papered and stamped as before directed, and all loose starch exceeding twenty-eight pounds, and scrapings of starch, which shall be found in the possession of any maker of (or dealer in, 27 Geo. III. c. 31, s. 23) starch, or any person for his use, or shall be found removing by land or water, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of the said duties; together with the package containing the same, and the boat or vessel, horses, or other cattle, carts, or other carriages, made use of in removing thereof; and such person shall forfeit moreover 10*s*. for every pound. But not to extend to starch made into hair-powder, or to any quantity taken out of the papers in the possession of any hair-powder maker, or blue-maker, or to any quantity not exceeding twenty-eight pounds, in the possession of any dealer in starch; nor to the returns from the sieves that may be in the possession of any maker of hair-powder.

By the 4 Geo. II. c. 14, s. 4, and 23 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 34, if any officer of the duties upon starch or of the customs, shall have any cause to suspect that starch is privately making in any place, or hid or concealed with intent to defraud the duties, then, upon oath made before any commissioner or justice residing near, setting forth the ground of his suspicion, such commissioner or justice may issue his warrant to authorize such officer by day or night (but if in the night in presence of a constable or other peace-officer) to enter such suspected place, and seize and carry away the same, with the materials, as forfeited, together with the boxes and other things containing it; and unless the party make it appear that the duty has been paid, he shall forfeit 50*l*.; and if any person obstruct the officer, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 20, if any maker of starch shall fraudulently conceal any starch, with intent to defraud his majesty of the duties, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

By the 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 48, s. 2, when any officer of excise shall discover that the making of starch is carried on in any private workhouse, and without notice having been given, and shall at the same time discover any person knowingly assisting in making starch in any private or unentered place, or shall be any ways concerned in carrying on such private making of starch, every person so offending shall forfeit 30*l*. over and above all penalties that the proprietor may be liable to. And any officer of excise and all other persons acting in his aid may arrest and convey him before a justice, who, on confession or proof on oath of one witness, may convict such offender, who shall immediately pay the said penalty, and on his refusing or neglecting to pay the same he shall be committed to the house of correction for six months, to be reckoned from the day of conviction, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid. And on conviction for a second offence, he shall forfeit 60*l*., and on non-payment shall be committed in like manner for one year, unless the same be sooner paid.

By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 17, the officer shall be permitted to take an account of the quantities of flour, meal, and other materials proper to be made into starch, that shall be in the possession of the maker; and if he shall miss any such materials, which he had taken an account of the last time he was there, and shall not on reasonable demand receive satisfaction what has become thereof, he may charge the maker with such quantity of starch as such materials so missing in his judgment would reasonably have made, not exceeding

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 17, if any officer shall miss any starch, or materials for making thereof, of which a gauge had been taken while in the green water or slimes, and before put into the boxes, and shall not receive satisfaction what is become of the same, he shall charge the maker according to the gauge so taken, and such maker shall pay the duty so charged.

By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 20, every maker shall keep all such starch made by him, that hath not been surveyed or taken account of by the officer for the duties on starch, separate from all such as may have been surveyed by the said officer, for twenty-four hours after making, within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, and for two days if in any other part of Great Britain, unless sooner taken account of, on pain of forfeiting 5*l*. Starch unsurveyed to be kept separate.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 3, (a) every person who shall make starch, shall weekly make a true entry in writing at the next office for the duties of starch, of all the starch by him made within each week, setting forth the weight, and how much was made at each time, on pain of 50*l*.; which entry shall be on oath of the maker, or his chief workman or servant, according to the best of his knowledge and belief, before such officer as shall be appointed by the commissioners within the limits of the chief office of excise in London, and, if elsewhere, with and by the collector and supervisor of the district. Entry of starch made.

By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 12, and 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 5, no maker of starch shall be obliged to go or send further, either to make entry or payment, than to the next market-town. See also the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 26, ante.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 4, (a) every maker of starch shall, within one week after he shall or ought to have made entry, pay off the duties, on pain of double duty. And no maker, after default in payment, shall sell or deliver out any starch until he hath paid off the duty, on pain of double the value of such starch. Payment of the duties.

By the 23 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 29, cockets granted for shipping starch, to be landed in any other part of the kingdom, shall express the quality, quantity, and weight, the mark of the package, and by whom made and sold, and where consigned; and if shipped without such cocket, it shall be forfeited and seized, together with the package. Carrying coast-wise.

By sect. 27, and the 42 Geo. III. c. 93, s. 19, no starch shall be imported otherwise than in some package, containing at least two hundred and twenty-four pounds of neat starch, and stowed openly in the hold; on pain of being seized and forfeited, together with the package, and the master of the vessel to forfeit 50*l*. Importation and exportation.

By the 26 Geo. II. c. 32, s. 8, on information brought against such master (referring to the 23 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 29), he may detain the wages of the mariners till it be determined; and, if it shall appear that the starch was put on board by any mariner without the master's knowledge, the master may apply the wages of such mariner in payment of the forfeiture.

By the 23 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 28, the officers of excise (in like manner as the officers of the customs) may go on board any vessel, within the limits of any port, and search for and seize all starch forfeited, together with the package; and they may likewise seize such as, before entry and payment of duties, shall be found unshipping or unshipped. Officers of excise, like officers of the customs, may go on board vessels.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 5, 7, 8, when any starch-maker or dealer in starch shall intend to export any starch upon which all the duties have been paid, and shall have given notice of packing up the same as directed by the 25 Geo. III. c. 74, the officer who shall attend to see the said starch packed up shall mark every paper of starch on the label or piece of paper to be affixed thereto, with the word "Exportation;" but the same shall not be permitted to be packed up or exported, unless it shall have the piece of paper stamped, as by this act directed, entire and unbroken. And if any piece of starch so No starch to be exported without a perfect label on each parcel.

(a) By the 19 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 2, starch made by them, and sect. 13, the 11th sect. of 10 Anne, c. 26, respecting makers of starch making entry of the duties, are repealed.

28. Starch, &c.

Officers may seize suspected

marked for exportation shall be found upon land (except where packed up before shipped, or in removing from thence to be put on board), the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of excise or customs.

By the 4 Geo. II. c. 14, s. 3, any officer of excise or customs may seize any starch or hair-powder, with the horses and package, that shall be found in any ship or vessel, or shall be carrying in any cart or waggon or other carriage, where he has good reason to suspect that it hath been privately made, or imported without payment of duty, or reloaded after drawback allowed; and shall in ten days exhibit an information before three commissioners of excise, or two justices residing near the place where the seizure is made; and if the party doth not make it appear that the duty hath been paid, it shall be forfeited, together with the horses and package; and the offender shall likewise forfeit 5*l.* for every hundred weight.

And by the 23 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 30, the said officers may seize any starch, with the package, that shall be found in any vessel, cart, or other carriage, where they shall have good reason to believe that the same was made in some private workhouse, or clandestinely imported, or reloaded after drawback; and if the party at the hearing of the information shall not make it appear that the duty hath been paid or secured, he shall forfeit 5*l.* for every hundred pounds' weight, and so in proportion, and also the goods and packages shall be forfeited.

forfeited by any excise act, &c., the vessel also forfeited.

By the 42 Geo. III. c. 93, s. 18, where goods shall be forfeited under any act relating to the excise, the packages containing the same, and the vessel, boat, cart, carriage, and cattle used in the removal thereof, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of excise.

Unshipping foreign starch before entry, or re-loading the same.

By the 23 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 31, if any foreign starch shall be unshipped with intention to be laid on land before entry and payment of the duties, or shall be landed again after shipping for exportation on debenture, the same, together with the package, vessels, boats, horses, and other cattle and carriages used in landing or conveying the same, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officers of the customs or excise; and the persons from whom the same shall be seized shall forfeit 5*l.* for every hundred pounds' weight; and so in proportion.

Concealing starch
ported.

Sect. 32. If any person shall knowingly harbour, keep, or conceal, or knowingly permit to be kept, harboured, &c., any starch unlawfully imported, or reloaded after shipping for exportation upon debenture, he shall, whether he claim any property therein or not, forfeit 50*l.* for every hundred pounds' weight, and so in proportion, together with the goods and package.

No person appearing to claim
within 20 days.

Sect. 33. Where any such starch shall be seized as forfeited, and no person shall claim the same in twenty days, if it be within the limits of the chief office of excise in London, the officer who made the seizure may cause notice, signed by the solicitor of excise, to be affixed at the Royal Exchange, of the time of proceeding to trial and condemnation of the same by the commissioners of excise; and if it be out of the said limits, then public notice shall be given by proclamation at the next market-town, on the market-day next after the said twenty days, of the day and place where the justices will proceed to trial and condemnation thereof; and the judgment thereon shall not be liable to appeal, nor be removed by certiorari.

Regulation for
tying up starch in parcels.

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 2, "all person and persons intending to export any starch made in Ireland to Great Britain, shall, six hours at the least before he or they shall ship the same, give to the proper officer of the customs of the port or place in Ireland, where the same shall be intended to be shipped, a notice thereof in writing, specifying in such notice the number of boxes or other external packages, and also the number of pieces or parcels, and net weight of the starch contained in each such boxes or other external package respectively, intended to be so shipped, with the respective marks and numbers of every such box or other external package, and the tare thereof (every such external package having the word 'Starch' permanently marked on the outside thereof in distinct letters of two inches in length at the least, and containing at the least two hundred and twenty-four pounds net avoirdupois of such starch, and the starch therein being in pieces or parcels, and each piece or parcel enclosed in a separate paper, tied up with a string, the ends of which shall cross each other on that side of the piece or parcel where the ends of the paper are folded), and also specifying in such notice the quay or place where such goods are lying, and from which they are intended to be shipped, and the time when such shipment is intended to take place, and the name of the ship or vessel in which the same are intended to be shipped and exported, and of the master or commander thereof, and of the particular port or place in Great Britain to which such goods are intended to be exported; and such officer shall, upon the receipt of such notice and the production of such goods, take an account of such starch, and of the marks and numbers of each of such boxes or other external packages, and shall ascertain the gross weight of each of such boxes or other external packages of starch, and compare the same with the particulars expressed in such notice as aforesaid; and the shipper or exporter of such goods shall thereupon nail, screw, or fasten down each of such boxes or other external packages; and, before shipping the same, give and enter into bond with sufficient sureties, to be approved of by the proper collector of the customs in Ireland, in a penalty calculated at the rate of 7*d.* British currency for every pound weight avoirdupois of the starch mentioned in such bond, with a condition thereunder written, that such starch (being therein described according to the several particulars specified and contained in such notice as aforesaid, if upon such examination as aforesaid the goods and packages are found to agree with such notice), and that every part thereof shall be shipped and exported as aforesaid, and shall not be unshipped, unladed, or laid on land, or put on board any other ship or vessel in Great Britain (except in case of shipwreck or other unavoidable accident); which bond the collector of the customs of the port or place in Ireland from which such starch is intended to be exported, is hereby directed to take in his majesty's name, and to his majesty's use; and shall without fee or reward, after the boxes or other external packages containing such starch have been seen and inspected on board of such ship or vessel as aforesaid, for the exportation thereof, deliver a certificate of such shipment, describing therein the number of boxes, or other external packages, with the respective marks and numbers thereof, and the number of pieces or parcels of starch papered and tied up as aforesaid contained therein respectively, together with the tare of each such box or other external package, and the net weight of the starch therein contained, and also the date of such shipment and bond as aforesaid, with the name of the ship or vessel, and of the master or commander thereof, and the port or place in Ireland at which shipped and from which exported, and the port or place in Great Britain to which the same is intended to be exported, according to the particulars contained in such bond as aforesaid, and shall thereupon deliver such certificate to such master or commander, to accompany the goods on the said voyage, and shall transmit a duplicate of such certificate by the post, at the expense of the shipper of such goods, to the inspector or port-surveyor of excise of the port or place in Great Britain mentioned in such certificate; and that, upon the arrival of such ship or vessel at such port or place as aforesaid, or from necessity at any other port or place in Great Britain, such master or commander shall show the same to every officer of excise who shall board the said ship or vessel and demand the inspection of such certificate, and shall deliver such certificate to the proper inspector or port-surveyor of excise, at the port or place in Great Britain of such importation; and upon entry of such goods being made at such port or place in Great Britain as last aforesaid, for the payment of the duties payable thereon, the inspector, surveyor, or officer of excise duly appointed for that purpose, shall and may open every such box or other external package, and weigh and compare the contents thereof with such certificate thereof as aforesaid, and if he deem it necessary, open the ends of the paper in which each piece or parcel of such starch is enclosed and tied up, so as to satisfy himself that the same contains only starch made in Ireland; and if, upon such weighing and examination thereof, he shall find the same to agree with the particulars specified in such certificate as aforesaid, and to be a fair and legal importation, he shall forthwith, after the duties payable on the importation of such starch shall be fully paid, make out and deliver to the master or commander of such ship or vessel, a certificate of the due importation, landing, and examination of, and payment of duty on such starch, specifying the several particulars aforesaid, and shall, at the expense of the importer of such starch, transmit by post a duplicate of such last-mentioned certificate to the collector of the customs of the port or place in Ireland from which such starch was shipped or exported as aforesaid, who upon the receipt of such certificate is hereby required, after comparing the same with such bond as aforesaid, to cancel such bond, if such certificate and bond are found to correspond and agree; and such importer is, after the delivery of such certificate as aforesaid, hereby required thereupon, at his own expense, but in the presence of the proper officer of excise, strongly to affix with warm paste made with glue on every piece or parcel of starch so papered and tied up, a label of thin paper, three inches long and three inches broad at the least, of a different colour to that in which the starch is wrapped; videlicet, if the starch is wrapped in blue or brown paper, the label shall be white, and if wrapped in white paper, the label shall be blue; and such label shall be affixed on that side of the piece of starch where the ends of the paper shall be folded, and in such manner as to prevent the opening thereof without tearing the label; and the proper officer of excise shall thereupon stamp every label on every piece or parcel of such starch, with such stamp as shall be directed by the commissioners of excise for the duties upon starch."

Sect. 3. "That if, upon the proper officer of the customs in Ireland taking an account of and weighing any packages of starch produced to him as the goods specified and described in any such notice as aforesaid,† shall find and discover the same not to agree with the particulars specified in such notice, or not according to the provisions of this act, every such notice shall be void, and the person and persons giving such notice shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*. British currency, to be recovered, paid, and applied as any other penalty or penalties by any law relating to his majesty's customs in Ireland; and that, if any starch for which any such bond shall be given as aforesaid, for the due shipment and exportation thereof to Great Britain, shall not be landed in Great Britain (shipwreck and other unavoidable accident excepted), and the duty payable thereon paid, and for which such a certificate thereof as is hereinbefore mentioned shall not be delivered to the proper collector of the customs in Ireland within three calendar months after the date of such bond, the penalty of such bond shall be forfeited; and if any starch made in Ireland shall, after the expiration of one month after the passing of this act, be shipped in Ireland and imported into Great Britain otherwise than as aforesaid, or without such Irish certificate as is hereinbefore provided for that purpose, or not agreeing therein with in the weight, quality, and description of the goods or packages therein specified, or for which such certificate is not received or delivered at the time of importation, or which is not duly entered, and the duties paid thereon, or on any piece or parcel of which the importer thereof refuses or neglects to affix such label as aforesaid, or of which any piece or parcel shall be removed or concealed from the proper officer before the same has been marked or stamped thereon by such officer to denote the charge of duty, all such starch, with the packages containing the same, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and if any package or packages shall be imported as aforesaid as starch made in Ireland, which shall be or contain any foreign starch, or any other goods or commodity than starch made in Ireland, all such goods and packages shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and the importer and importers thereof, and every person concerned herein, shall, over and above such forfeiture, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*., or treble the value of such goods and packages, at the election of his majesty's attorney-general, to be recovered, paid, and applied as any other penalty or penalties by any law or laws relating to his majesty's revenue of excise in Great Britain."

By the 12 Anne, st. 2, c. 9, s. 20, no perfumer, peruke-maker, barber, or dealer in hair-powder, shall make, use, or offer to sale, any powder made of or mixed with alabaster, talc, plaster of Paris, whiting, lime, or other thing of the like nature (sweet scents only excepted), on pain of forfeiting the same, and 50*l*.

By the 4 Geo. II. c. 14, s. 5, if any maker of hair-powder, perfumer, peruke-maker, barber, or dealer in hair-powder, shall mix any powder or alabaster, plaster of Paris, talc, chalk, whiting, lime, or any other material of any kind (rice first made into starch, and sweet scents only excepted), with any starch or powder of starch to be made use of for making of hair-powder, and shall make any hair-powder with any of the said materials, or any other materials (except starch or powder of starch, or of rice first made into starch), and shall use, sell, or offer to sell any hair-powder so mixed or made, he shall forfeit the hair-powder so mixed and 20*l*.

28. Starch, Hair-Powder, &c.

Sect. 6. Every maker of hair-powder shall, at the office of excise next adjoining to the place where he resides, make entry in writing of his place of abode, and of his workhouse or other place made use of for making hair-powder, on pain of 20*l*.

Places of making hair-powder to be entered.

Sect. 7. The officer for the duties upon starch, at all times in the day, on his request, may enter all and every place used for making hair-powder, and the shops of perfumers, peruke-makers, barbers, and other sellers or dealers in hair-powder, and examine every parcel of hair-powder, and carry away samples, paying a reasonable price for the same; and if it appear the same is mixed with plaster of Paris, or any other material than starch or powder of starch (rice first made into starch, and sweet scents only excepted), the person in whose custody the same may have been found, shall forfeit 20*l*.

Officer to enter the same and survey.

Sect. 9. And if such starch-maker or dealer shall not, on request, suffer him to enter and examine, and take samples (on offering to pay the common price), he shall forfeit 20*l*.

Sect. 8. If any starch-maker, powder-maker, or dealer in hair-powder, shall have in his possession any alabaster, plaster of Paris, talc, chalk, whiting, lime, or other material besides starch, or powder of starch, or of rice first made into starch, for the making, mixing, or counterfeiting of hair-powder, he shall forfeit the same, and 10*l*.

Persons having in their possession materials for adulterating hair-powder.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 21, every maker of stone-blue for sale shall make an entry in writing at the excise office in London, if the same be within the limits of the said office; or if in any other part of Great Britain, then at the office of excise next the place where the business shall be carried on, of his name and place of abode, together with the workshop or place that shall be made use of in making or keeping stone-blue, or materials for making thereof; on the penalty of 50*l*.

Stone-blue.

Makers of stone-blue.

Sect. 22, 25, 26. Any officer of excise, by day, at his request may enter such workshop or place, and examine every parcel of stone-blue, and take samples thereof, paying for the same according to the price stone-blue shall then bear; and if any person shall refuse to permit him to enter such place, or hinder him in taking such samples, or shall assault, molest, or hinder any officer in the execution of this act, he shall forfeit 50*l*.

Sect. 23. No maker shall begin to make any stone-blue for sale, from any flour, meal, or other ingredients (other than for colouring the same), except starch for which the duties have been paid, on pain of forfeiting thereof (except such colouring), together with the boxes, tubs, &c., containing the same, and also 100*l*.

Sect. 24. If any maker of stone-blue or hair-powder for sale shall receive into his possession any starch in papers not stamped, or any loose starch or scrapings, he shall forfeit 10*s*. a pound; and all such starch in papers unstamped, or loose starch and scrapings in the possession of such stone-blue maker, or maker of hair-powder, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of excise. And if any maker of stone-blue or hair-powder shall keep above twenty-eight pounds of starch or hair-powder in any unentered place, the same shall be forfeited, and also 50*l*.

No starch to be received by stone-blue makers but in stamped papers.

All the said forfeitures shall be sued for, levied, and mitigated, as by the laws of excise, (a) or in the courts at Westminster; and be distributed half to the king, and half (and by the 10 Anne, c. 26, half with full costs) to the prose-

Power of the justices.

- Obstructing officer. By the 24 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 6, if any maker of starch shall obstruct any officer for the duties upon starch in the execution of his duty, he shall forfeit 100%.
- Proof to lie on the claimer. By the 23 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 35, where any starch shall be seized for non-payment of duties, or non-entry, and it shall be disputed whether such payment or entry were made or not, the proof shall lie on the owner or claimer, and not on the officer who seized.
- Appeal. Sect. 37. If the party find himself aggrieved by the judgment given by the justices, in case of condemnation of goods seized under this act, he may appeal to the next quarter sessions, whose judgment shall be final (except in the case mentioned ante, sect. 33, where no person shall appear to claim the goods seized within twenty days).
- Mitigation. Sect. 38. The commissioners or justices may mitigate the penalties and forfeitures in such manner as they shall think fit, the reasonable costs and charges of the officers, as well in making the discovery as in the prosecution of the same, being allowed over and above such mitigation, and so as such mitigation do not reduce the penalty less than one-fourth part thereof, over and above the said costs and charges.
- Utensils liable. Sect. 40. No writ of certiorari shall supersede execution or other proceedings made in pursuance of this act.
- Penalties, &c. to be recovered according to 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 52. By the 10 Anne, c. 26, s. 23, and 28 Geo. III. c. 37, s. 21, all starch, materials, and utensils for making starch, in custody of the maker, or of any person to the use of such maker, shall be liable to all the debts and duties of starch and all penalties incurred; and such proceedings may be had thereupon as if the debtor or offender were the lawful owner.
- The 9 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 2, directs all penalties and forfeitures imposed by any act or acts relating to the revenue of customs or excise, which by law the officers of excise are authorized to prosecute, and which the commissioners of excise shall order to be prosecuted, to be so prosecuted, sued for, recovered, levied, mitigated, and applied, in and by such ways, means, and methods, &c., as by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53. See ante, p. 229 to 310.

- Duties. The duties of customs on stone or slate carried coastwise, and imposed by the 4 Geo. IV. c. 69, have ceased.
- Customs. The 57 Geo. III. c. 32, grants certain duties upon stone-bottles, and drawbacks, to be allowed on exportation.
- The 6 Geo. IV. c. 111, repeals all former duties of customs, and imposes new duties. See ante, 123.
- What deemed to be a stone-bottle. By the 57 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 3, every bottle or other vessel which may be used as or for a bottle, made of earthen or stone ware, or of earth or clay alone, or mixed with any other material or materials, which shall not exceed two quarts in measure, or the mouth or neck of which shall not exceed in diameter, in the narrowest part of the inside thereof, three inches, and no other, shall be deemed and taken to be a stone-bottle within the meaning of this act.
- Bottles not to be made of less size than three ounces in measure of distilled water. Sect. 7. No maker of earthen or stone ware, or of bottles or other vessels made of earthen or stone ware, or of earth or clay alone, or mixed with any other material or materials, shall make of earthen or stone ware, or of earth or clay alone, or mixed with any other material or materials, any bottle or other vessel which may be used as or for a bottle, smaller or of less size or content than three ounces in measure of distilled water, on pain of forfeiting, for every such offence, 50%.

By the 57 Geo. III. c. 119, s. 1, all stone-bottles made in Great Britain, or made in Ireland and imported from thence into Great Britain, and used for the sole purpose of containing liquid blacking, and which shall be of the description after specified, shall be wholly exempted from the duties imposed, and not be entitled to the drawback.

Sect. 2. Every bottle made in Great Britain, or made in Ireland and imported into Great Britain, of earthen or stone ware, or of earth or clay alone, or mixed with any other material, which shall not exceed one pint in measure, and the mouth and neck of which shall be not less than one inch and a half in diameter in the narrowest part of the inside thereof, and which shall be permanently stamped in the making thereof, in fair and legible characters, with the words "Blacking Bottle," and no other, shall be deemed and taken to be a stone-bottle made for the sole purpose of containing liquid blacking, and be exempted from the duties.

Sect. 3. If any person shall sell any such stone-bottle as aforesaid for any purpose or use other than for containing liquid blacking, or shall attempt to export the same upon drawback, such person shall, for every such offence, forfeit 50%.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 3, within twenty days next after the master or purser of the ship wherein any such stone-bottles shall be imported into Great Britain shall have or ought to have made an entry or report at the custom-house, of the contents of such ship, the proprietor, importer, or consignee of such stone-bottles shall make due entry with the collector of excise in the port or place where such stone-bottles shall be so imported, of all such on board of such ship belonging to him, &c., and shall then, and before the landing of any such stone-bottle, pay the duty imposed by this act, and shall also, within such twenty days, land all such stone-bottles, on pain to forfeit such stone-bottles, and which may be seized by any officer of excise.

Sect. 4. Every maker of stone-bottles, before he shall make or manufacture any stone-bottles, shall make a true and particular entry in writing of every house, workhouse, millhouse, warehouse, shed, shop, room, and place by him used, or intended to be used, for the wetting, softening, grinding, preparing, mixing, or keeping of any clay, earth, or other materials commonly used or fit or proper to be used in making or manufacturing stone-bottles, or in the making, hardening, drying, baking, burning, or keeping of such bottles, at the office of excise within the limits of such house, shop, &c.; and every such maker shall also make like entry of every cone, kiln, stove, vat, cistern, mill, lathe, trundle, or other machine, implement, vessel, or utensil by him kept or made use of, or intended to be made use of, in the making, manufacturing, turning, hardening, drying, baking, or burning of any such bottles, at the office of excise within the limits whereof such cone, utensil, &c. &c. shall be situate, kept, or used; on pain of forfeiting 100% for such place or utensil not so entered, together with all the stone-bottles and other materials found therein, which may be seized by any officer of excise.

Sect. 6. The officers of excise, at all times between the hours of five in the morning and eleven at night without the presence of a constable, and between eleven at night and five in the morning, in the presence of a constable, may enter into the houses, workhouses, millhouses, warehouses, sheds, shops, rooms, and other places entered or made use of by any maker of stone-bottles, and by weighing, tale, or otherwise take an account of the weights, kinds, and quantities of the stone-bottles made, &c., or found in the possession of such maker of stone-bottles.

Sect. 7. Every maker being desirous to put stone-bottles in any kiln, stove, or oven for baking or burning the same, shall give to the officer under whose survey he shall be, six hours' previous notice in writing of such his intention, specifying the particular kiln, &c., in which such stone-bottles are to be deposited, and the hour at which it is intended to deposit the same; and if any such maker shall neglect to begin so to deposit such stone-bottles in the kiln, &c., within one hour after the time mentioned in the notice, such notice shall be void, and such maker shall give a fresh one; and if any maker shall put stone-bottles into any kiln, &c., without having given such notice, he shall forfeit 50%.

29. Stone-Bottles.

Number, size, &c. of stone-bottles to be delivered to officer before stopping up kiln, &c.

Makers to give notice for lighting fires to heat kilns, &c.

Makers to keep scales and weights, &c.

Penalty.

Makers to give notice to officer before drawing any stone bottles from kiln, &c.

Stone-bottles, when drawn, to be conveyed to the weighing-room, and inspected and weighed.

Penalty.

Sect. 8. Every maker of stone-bottles shall, before he begin to close or stop up any kiln, stove, or oven, containing stone-bottles, before he shall deliver to the officer of excise a declaration in writing of the number and names by which the bottles of each particular kind are commonly known, with the reputed measure of such stone-bottles of each size, and the number thereof contained in each and every such kiln, &c., on pain of forfeiting 50l.: provided, that no maker of stone-bottles shall incur the said penalty if the number of stone-bottles of any particular kind specified in any declaration shall not vary more than at and after the rate of 5 per centum from the true numbers.

Sect. 9. When any maker of stone-bottles shall be desirous to kindle any fire to heat his kiln, stove, or oven, into which stone-bottles are intended to be put for baking or burning the same, he shall give to the officer of excise six hours' notice in writing of his intention so to do: provided that no maker of stone-bottles shall kindle any fire for the purpose aforesaid, until after the expiration of one hour from the time when the depositing the stone-bottles shall be finished; and if any such maker shall so light any fire for that or any other purpose till after one hour, to be reckoned and computed as aforesaid, he shall forfeit 50l.; and if any maker shall neglect to light such fire within one hour after the time mentioned, such notice shall be void, and such maker shall give a fresh notice in writing; and if any such maker shall light a fire without giving such previous notice, he shall forfeit 50l.

Sect. 11. Every maker of stone-bottles shall keep sufficient and just scales and weights at the place where he shall manufacture stone-bottles, and also permit any officers of excise to use the same for weighing and taking an account of and re-weighing the stone-bottles made by or being in the possession of such maker; upon pain of forfeiting for every neglect or refusal 100l.; and if any maker shall, in the weighing or re-weighing, use or suffer to be used any false, unjust, or insufficient scales or weights, or practise any contrivance by which any such officers may be prevented or delayed in taking the true weight of any such stone-bottles, such maker shall forfeit 100l., with all such insufficient scales and weights, which may be seized by any officer of excise.

Sect. 12. Every maker of stone-bottles desirous to draw stone-bottles out of any kiln, stove, or oven, shall, twelve hours before the beginning to draw, give to the officer of excise a notice in writing of his intention so to do, specifying the particular kiln, stove, or oven, and the time and hour at which it is intended to draw the same; and if any officer of excise shall attend at the time mentioned in such notice, such maker shall, so soon as such officer shall so attend, immediately, and with a sufficient number of his workmen or others, begin to draw the bottles out of such kiln, stove, or oven, and without unnecessary delay, and with a proper number of his workmen or servants, proceed until the whole shall be drawn out. And every maker of stone-bottles, so soon as any stone-bottles not exceeding two quarts' measure shall be drawn out of his kiln, stove, or oven, convey or cause the same to be conveyed directly into the weighing-room, and forthwith place the same therein, in such manner that all may, so far as the nature of the case will admit, be the most easily inspected and examined, and the numbers of the several sizes and denominations be ascertained by the officer of excise; and such maker shall immediately, if the proper officer then be in attendance, and if not, then on being required by such officer, proceed to weigh and shall weigh the whole and every part of such bottles in the presence of the officer; and such maker shall be charged with and pay the duty for all such as are unbroken, according to such weight. And if any such maker, having given such notice and begun to draw such stone-bottles, shall not, if any officer shall attend at the time specified in such notice, without any unnecessary delay, and with a proper number of workmen or servants, continue to draw such bottles from the kiln, stove, or oven, or if any maker shall not remove and deposit them in the weighing-room, and in such manner as aforesaid, or shall not proceed to weigh the whole of such stone-bottles as aforesaid, he shall forfeit 100l.; and if any maker shall neglect to begin to draw at the time mentioned in his notice, or within one hour after, such notice shall be void, and he shall give a fresh notice in writing: provided, that no maker of stone-bottles shall be at liberty to give any such notice for drawing except between six in the morning and six in the afternoon; and every notice given for drawing stone-bottles at other times shall be void.

Sect. 13. In weighing aforesaid of any stone-bottles, the turn of the scale shall be given in favour of the crown, and in lieu thereof there shall be allowed to such maker one pound weight upon each one hundred pounds so weighed.

Sect. 14. All stone-bottles chargeable with said duties shall be weighed, taken account of, and charged with the said duties as soon as the same shall be baked or burned; and if any maker of stone-bottles, or his workmen, or other person, shall molest or obstruct any officer in weighing or taking an account of such stone-bottles, he or they shall forfeit 100%.

Sect. 15. Every maker of stone-bottles, whose stone-bottles, not exceeding two quarts' measure, have been weighed by any officer of excise, shall, for six hours after the same shall have been weighed, keep such stone-bottles in the weighing-room, in the same state and position in which they were left by the surveying officer, unless sooner re-weighed by the surveyor or supervisor, to the end that he may have an opportunity to re-weigh the same, on pain of forfeiting 100%; and, if upon the re-weighing any additional weight shall be found, such additional weight of stone-bottles shall be charged with the duties by this act imposed.

Sect. 16. Every maker of stone-bottles shall, when required by the officer of excise, surveyor, or supervisor, with a sufficient number of his workmen or servants, assist such officer of excise, or surveyor, or supervisor, in weighing and taking account, or in re-weighing and taking account, of all his stone-bottles, on pain of forfeiting for every neglect or refusal 100%.

Sect. 17. If any maker of stone-bottles shall convey away stone-bottles not exceeding two quarts' measure from any kiln, stove, or oven, before the proper officer of excise shall have weighed the same, or shall neglect or refuse to produce such bottles to such officer that he may weigh them; or if any person shall hide or conceal any such stone-bottle, to defraud his majesty of the duties, every maker or other person so offending shall forfeit 100%.

Sect. 18. Every maker of stone-bottles shall keep all stone-bottles which shall not have been weighed by the officer of excise, separate from all stone-bottles that have been weighed, upon pain of forfeiting 100%.

Sect. 19. Every maker of stone-bottles shall once in every six weeks make a true entry in writing at the office of excise, within the limits whereof such stone-bottles shall be made, of all the stone-bottles not exceeding two quarts' measure by him made within such six weeks; and such entry shall contain the true numbers and sorts by such maker made within such six weeks, with the reputed measures of each particular sort, with the aggregate weight of the total number so made within such six weeks, on pain of forfeiting 100%; which entry shall be verified upon oath by the maker, or by his chief workman employed in making the same, which oath shall be administered by the proper collector, surveyor, or supervisor of excise, without fee: provided, that no such maker shall be obliged to go further than the market-town next to the place where such stone-bottles shall be made for the making of any such entry.

Sect. 20. Every maker of stone-bottles shall, within six weeks after he shall make or ought to have made such entry, pay off all duties of excise for such stone-bottles, upon pain of forfeiting double the amount of such duties.

Sect. 21. Any officer of excise may take a sample of any stone-bottles or other earthenware, either baked or unbaked, or burned or unburned, in the possession of any maker of stone-bottles, paying for the same (if demanded) the wholesale price thereof; and if any maker shall refuse to permit the officer to take such sample, upon his tendering such price for the same, he shall forfeit for every such offence 100%.

Sect. 22. If any stone-bottles shall be concealed in any place whatsoever, with intent to defraud his majesty of the duties, the same shall be forfeited, together with the packages containing the same, and they may be seized by any officer of excise, and the person in whose custody the same shall be found shall forfeit 50%; and if any officer shall have cause to suspect that any such

If any person whatsoever shall assault, resist, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer of excise in the due execution of this act, or shall, by force or violence, after any officer shall have seized any stone-bottles, or any clay, earth, or other material, or any vat, mill, vessel, or utensil, as forfeited by this act, rescue, or cause to be rescued, any such stone-bottles, or any clay, &c., or shall attempt so to do, every such person shall forfeit 200 l .
Penalty. Offering bribes to officers.	Sect. 29. If any person whatsoever shall give, or offer to give, any bribe, recompense, or reward, to any officer of excise, in order to corrupt or prevail upon such officer to perform any act contrary to his duty, or to neglect or omit any act or thing belonging to the business or duty of such officer in the execution of this act, or to connive at or conceal any fraud relating to any of the duties by this act imposed, or not to discover the same, such person shall, for each such offence (whether such offer or proposal be accepted or not), forfeit 500 l .
Penalty. Perjury.	Sect. 30. Any person convicted of wilfully taking a false oath, in any case in which an oath is required to be taken by virtue of this act, shall be liable to the pains and penalties for wilful and corrupt perjury.
Penalties, how to be recovered.	Sect. 34. The powers of 12 Car. II. c. 24, and other excise acts, extended to this. By the 52 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 31, 57 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 7, c. 119, s. 3, all fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by those acts shall be sued for, recovered, or mitigated, by any law of excise, or by action, &c. in any of the courts of record at Westminster, one moiety of which shall be to the king, and the other moiety to him who shall inform, discover, or sue for the same. By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 2, all penalties and forfeitures imposed by any act or acts relating to the revenue of the customs or excise, are to be levied, mitigated, and applied, according to the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. Every retailer of sweets, or made wines, or of mead or metheglin, 1*l.* 1*s.*

Sect. 11, provides for sales at fairs and races; and that alehouse-keepers shall not be licensed as makers or retailers of sweets, or made wines, without first producing their alehouse licenses.

Sect. 14. No license for the sale of sweets, or made wines, mead or metheglin, to be drank or consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, shall be granted to any person who shall not have and produce a license for the sale of beer, &c., by retail; and if granted, the same shall be void, and the party liable to all penalties imposed upon persons for selling spirits, &c., without a license.

Note.—See the several other provisions of this statute as to the licenses, penalties, &c., at length. (Ante, p. 245, &c.)

By the 10 & 11 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 5, every person who shall sell or make use of any materials used in the making of wines, and in whose custody any quantity of sweets exceeding two gallons shall be found, shall be deemed and taken to be a maker of sweets for sale. Who deemed a maker.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 177, s. 4, every person whatsoever who shall have in his custody any liquor made by infusion, fermentation, or otherwise, from fruit or sugar, or from fruit or sugar mixed with any other ingredients or materials, commonly called sweets or made wines, exceeding 100 gallons, shall be deemed a maker of sweets or made wines, other than mead, for sale, and subject to the survey of the officers of excise. Having in possession sweets exceeding 100 gallons, deemed makers.

By the 10 Geo. II. c. 17, s. 4, every maker of sweets for sale shall first give notice to the excise officers of his name and place of abode, and of the rooms and places he intends to use for making or keeping of sweets or made wines, on pain of 20*l.* Notice to be given.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 177, s. 1, every maker of sweets or made wines for sale shall, before he begin to draw off any sweets or made wine from any steep or from any vessel or utensil in which the same shall have been made, give to the officer of excise, under whose survey such maker shall then be, six hours' notice in writing within the limits of the chief office of excise in London, and twelve hours' notice in writing in other places in Great Britain, of his intention so to draw off any sweets or made wine; and of the time when, and the particular steep, vessel, or utensil from which the same are to drawn off, and the quantity thereof; and such officer shall, if he shall deem it expedient, attend to see such sweets or made wines so drawn off; and if such officer shall attend, all such sweets or made wine shall, at the time specified in such notice, be, with all diligence and despatch, drawn off in his presence; and if any such maker shall draw off any sweets or made wine without giving such notice, or shall neglect to draw off with all due diligence and despatch such sweets or made wines, on the officer's attendance, such maker shall forfeit 50*l.*, together with all such sweets or made wine drawn off without such notice. Makers to give notice to officer of excise before sweets drawn off, and to state quantity. Penalty.

Importation.

Tobacco imported from the East Indies in British vessels, to be in casks containing not less than 100*lbs*. and not in bags or packages within such casks, on pain of forfeiture.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, ss. 5, 6, (a) no tobacco shall be imported but from America, on forfeiture thereof, with the vessel and her contents; except from Spain, Portugal, and Ireland, from which places it may be imported under certain regulations. But, by the 59 Geo. III. c. 74, s. 1, tobacco may be imported from any port or place within the limits of the charter granted to the united company of merchants of England, trading to the East Indies, in any British ship or vessel, owned, registered, and navigated according to law: provided, that such tobacco shall not be imported in any cask, chest, case, or other package which shall not contain at the least one hundred pounds' weight net of tobacco, not packed in bags or packages within any such cask, &c., nor separated or divided within any such cask, &c., or in any manner whatever, on pain of forfeiting all such tobacco, with the casks, chests, cases, and other packages containing the same, and also the ship, vessel, or boat in which the same shall be so imported or brought, with her guns, furniture, ammunition, tackle, and apparel, which may be seized by any officer of the customs or excise: provided, that such tobacco shall be liable to all the provisions of the acts now in force regulating the trade to and from the places within the limits of the charter granted to the united company of merchants trading to the East Indies.

(a) Note in the prior editions.—The 29 Geo. III. c. 68, regulating the importation, exportation, and manufacture of tobacco and snuff, being of great length, it is thought sufficient in this place to give a short account thereof only; and also of the 30 Geo. III. c. 40, made to explain and amend the same; and for further information to those whom it may materially concern, to refer them to the acts themselves.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 47, no tobacco, either manufactured or unmanufactured, shall be entered or shipped for exportation to any parts beyond the seas, Ireland excepted, in any ship or vessel whatever, unless such ship or vessel shall be of the burden of seventy tons or upwards; and if any officer of customs or excise shall apprehend that any such vessel is of a less burden, he may detain her, with the cargo, until he cause her to be admeasured according to the rules for admeasurement prescribed by the 26 Geo. III. c. 60: and if it shall appear that such vessel is of the burden of seventy tons or upwards, the officer so stopping her shall not be liable to any damages for such detention; and if the master shall clear out his vessel as of a proper burden, and she shall not be of the burden of seventy tons, according to the rule for admeasurement, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

Tobacco not to be exported in vessels of less than 70 tons.

Penalty.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 69, s. 21, it shall be lawful to carry and export from Great Britain to Ireland, and from Ireland to Great Britain, and to import into Ireland from Great Britain, and into Great Britain from Ireland, any tobacco, either manufactured or unmanufactured, in any ship or vessel of the burden of seventy tons or upwards, subject to all such rules, regulations, restrictions, penalties, and forfeitures, as are imposed upon such importation and exportation respectively, in vessels of the tonnage in which such tobacco may be exported or imported, under any act or acts in force before the passing of this act: provided, that if any such tobacco shall be so exported or imported in a vessel of less burden than seventy tons, all such tobacco, and also the ship, vessel, and boat, with their materials and furniture, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of the customs or excise.

Tobacco may be exported and imported between Great Britain and Ireland in ships not less than 70 tons.

If exported or imported in vessels of less burden, vessels and tobacco forfeited.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, ss. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, no tobacco or snuff shall be imported in any vessel of less burden than one hundred and twenty tons; nor any tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, or snuff-work, in any vessel whatever; nor any tobacco or snuff in any hogshead, cask, or other package less than four hundred and fifty pounds, on the like penalty; except loose tobacco for the crew or passengers, not exceeding five pounds for each person; nor shall the vessel be forfeited if proof be made from the smallness of the quantity that such tobacco or snuff was on board without the knowledge of the owner or master, and without any want of reasonable care on their part. And in each of the above cases, the tobacco and snuff, together with the packages, and also the ship or vessel, with her guns, tackle, &c., in which imported, may be seized by the officers of customs or excise. See also the 30 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 3.

Importation of tobacco or snuff, in what vessels, packages, quantities, &c.

By the 47 Geo. III. st. 1, c. 25, s. 1, the preceding restriction is repealed as to the packing and dividing tobacco within the outer hogshead, cask, chest, or case.

By sect. 2, the outer hogsheads, &c. must contain four hundred and fifty pounds, net, at the least, of tobacco.

By the 22 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 14, no tobacco or snuff shall be imported or brought into any part of Great Britain, London, Bristol, Liverpool, Lancaster, Cowes, Falmouth, Whitehaven, and Hull, and by 31 Geo. III. c. 47, s. 3, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; on the like forfeiture.

At what port.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 111, and 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, repeals all former duties of customs, and in lieu thereof new duties are granted upon tobacco and snuff imported: and a drawback is allowed upon tobacco manufactured within two miles of any port into which tobacco may be imported, made into shag, roll, or carrot tobacco.

Duties.

Customs.

Drawback.

The 43 Geo. III. c. 69, repeals the former excise duties, and grants other duties in lieu thereof.

Excise.

Note.—Tobacco and snuff are also subject to annual duties by the act for continuing the duties on pensions, offices, &c.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 1, repeals all former duties on excise licenses.

or deliver, or send out by retail, any tobacco or snuff, without making such entry as aforesaid, or any tobacco or snuff which shall not be first removed to and received by him or her into some shop or place so entered, and into his or her retail stock of tobacco or snuff, with and under such permit or permits, certificate or certificates, as aforesaid, so delivered to the proper officer, as aforesaid, all such tobacco and snuff, respectively, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise, and every such manufacturer shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

By the 29 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 62, every such manufacturer and dealer shall cause to be painted or written, in large legible characters, over the outer door, or in the front, or on some conspicuous part of each such house or place, the words, "Manufacturer of and Dealer in Tobacco and Snuff," or "Tobacco" or "Snuff," or "Manufacturer of" or "Dealer in Tobacco and Snuff," or "Tobacco or Snuff" (as the case may be), on the penalty of 50*l*.

Sect. 63. If any person, who has not made such entry as aforesaid, shall paint or write up the said words in such manner and place, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

By the 30 Geo. 3, c. 40, s. 8, no person shall set up or begin any manufactory of tobacco, &c. &c. within five miles of the sea-coast (except in the ports and places aforesaid where tobacco may be imported, or places within three miles thereof; and also except in cities, or the suburbs thereof, and market-towns); and no entry thereof shall be of any avail.

By the 29 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 76, tobacco and snuff may be manufactured by any unlicensed Spanish cutter or snuff-miller at any entered mill, on account of any other licensed manufacturer, provided the same be legally permitted from such other manufacturer, and for the sole purpose of manufacturing or grinding.

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 109, s. 3, it shall be lawful for any manufacturer of tobacco and snuff at any time to strip and separate from the stalks thereof any tobacco-leaf which has not been wetted, or put into or sprinkled with water, without giving to the officer of excise previous notice, and without such stripping being deemed to be a commencement of the manufacture of tobacco or snuff: provided that every such manufacturer shall, in the notice for commencing the manufacture of any tobacco or snuff, mention whether the tobacco-leaf specified in such notice and intended to be part of the operation, or how much thereof, is leaf stripped from the stalks thereof by such manufacturer, and how much thereof is leaf unstripped; and if such leaf be leaf stripped from the stalks, such stalks shall not be deemed part of the tobacco-leaf to be weighed for the operation specified in such notice, but such manufacturer shall have credit in his unmanufactured stock for all such tobacco-stalks.

Sect. 4. The word "operation" is used in this act, and shall be construed to mean and express only the quantity of tobacco and other materials by law allowed for the manufacture of tobacco and snuff weighed by the officer of excise, and declared by the manufacturer at one time for the manufacture of the tobacco or snuff specified in such declaration.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, ss. 77, 95, and 30 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 30, every manufacturer shall give notice in writing to the officer of excise under whose survey he shall be, if in London six, in cities and market-towns twelve, and in any other part of Great Britain twenty-four hours, before he shall begin to strip, spin, or press any tobacco for cutting, or make any tobacco into carrots, or flatten any tobacco-stalks for Spanish; and in every such notice shall specify the weight of each article, and the time he intends to begin to strip, spin, press, or make into carrots any such tobacco; and the officer shall attend accordingly, and such manufacturer shall begin within one hour of the time so mentioned, and shall proceed without delay; and shall afterwards deliver a declaration in writing to such officer of the quantity intended to be used for each sort of tobacco, on the penalty of 20*l*., and such notice being void.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, ss. 78, 79, no manufacturer shall be liable to the said penalty of 20*l*. for not making into carrots any tobacco, if such tobacco shall afterwards appear to be unfit to be so made into carrots according to such declaration; and notice thereof in writing, specifying the weight of such tobacco, shall be given in forty-eight hours after delivery of the declaration; and in case the manufacturer within that time in like manner deliver to such officer a like declaration, specifying into what sort of tobacco or snuff it is to be manufactured, and shall, in like manner, proceed to press for cutting, to spin, to make into carrots, and the like, if it be to be made into snuff.

81. Tobacco and Snuff.

Sects. 80, 81, 82. Such manufacturer, as soon as the manufacturing is finished, shall deliver to the officer a declaration of the weight of the different sorts of tobacco so manufactured, and the number of the rolls or carrots made, and the weight thereof, and of the tobacco-stalks and returns arising from the operation; and shall keep each sort separate for twenty-four hours, or until an account be taken, on the penalty of 50*l*.

Weight, &c. of each sort to be declared after manufacturing.

Sect. 102. Every manufacturer of tobacco shall keep all unmanufactured tobacco, tobacco in the state of operation, and manufactured tobacco, in his possession, separate from each other, on pain of forfeiting 50*l*.

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 109, s. 6, "no manufacturer of tobacco shall have depending, at one and the same time, more than three operations for the manufacture of cut tobacco, under which denomination all such tobacco shall be kept in stock, permitted, and sent out, whether the same be generally called or known by the name of short cut or shag tobacco; and that every such operation, where the weight of tobacco, or tobacco and returns, declared for such operation, shall not exceed five hundred pounds' weight avoirdupois, shall be finished, and declared by such manufacturer to be finished, before the expiration of seven working days from the date of such declaration; and that where the weight of tobacco, or tobacco and returns, so declared, shall exceed five hundred pounds, such operation shall be finished, and declared by such manufacturer to be finished, before the expiration of ten working days from the date of such declaration; and that every such manufacturer who shall have depending, at one and the same time, more than three operations for the manufacture of cut tobacco, or who shall refuse or neglect to finish, and declare to be finished, any operation for the manufacture of cut tobacco, within the period of time hereinbefore mentioned, according to the size of such operation, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l*."

Only three operations of cut tobacco at one and the same time to be allowed, and such operations to be finished within a limited time, according to the size of the operation.

Sect. 7. "That during the process of any operation for the manufacture of cut tobacco, every such manufacturer shall cause all the tobacco-stalks stripped from the tobacco, or tobacco and returns weighed and declared for such operation, to be from time to time removed, when stripped, and kept and deposited in bin, cask, chest, box, or parcel, separate and apart from all other tobacco-stalks, and ticketed or labelled as the stalks belonging to such operation, and shall not add to or mix anything therewith, or conceal or make away with any part thereof, until the same have been weighed and taken account of by the proper officer of excise, when the operation to which they belong is finished; and when and so soon as any operation for the manufacture of cut tobacco is finished, and within the respective period hereinbefore for that purpose prescribed, according to the weight of such operation, the manufacturer thereof shall give notice and a declaration in writing to the proper officer of excise, that such operation is finished, specifying the number, date, and original weight thereof, and the weight respectively of such manufactured cut tobacco, and of the tobacco-stalks and returns of such operation; and such officer shall, within twenty-four hours, or if in a market-town within six hours, next after the receipt of and at the time specified in such notice, attend for that purpose, and such manufacturer shall thereupon produce to such officer all the manufactured tobacco (except such part thereof as shall have been taken therefrom and sent out pending such operation, under the laws in that case made and provided), and the tobacco-stalks and returns of such operation; and such officer shall thereupon weigh all such manufactured cut tobacco, tobacco-stalks (if any), and returns, respectively, of such operation, and so soon as the same are weighed to the satisfaction of such officer, such manufacturer shall cause all such manufactured cut tobacco to be removed, and put or placed with his or her stock of manufactured tobacco, and shall also remove the tobacco-stalks (if any), and the returns of such operation, and put or place the same with his or her stock of unmanufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalks, and returns, not in operation; and if any such manufacturer, as aforesaid, shall

Manufacturer of cigars deemed a manufacturer of tobacco. Tobacco to have only three operations depending at one and the same time, or any operation of less weight than herein mentioned.

Notice to be given when operation is finished, for officer to take account.

Manufacturers of cigars not making special entry before manufacturing cigars; not removing the stripped stalks and keeping them separate, &c.; neglecting to give notice; deceiving officer; not removing cigars, &c.

shall any manufacturer of roll tobacco have or be allowed or entitled to any credit in his or her manufactured stock for more than the weight of so much of the tobacco-leaf weighed and declared for such operation, as shall be spun into roll, and so produced and weighed as aforesaid, and the further credit of 15 pounds for every 65 pounds of such weight of leaf so spun, produced, and weighed as aforesaid, and after the same rate for any less quantity, so as such credit shall not exceed the rate of 115 pounds for every 100 pounds of the tobacco, or tobacco and returns, weighed and declared for such operation for roll tobacco."

Sect. 9. "That every manufacturer of cigars shall be deemed a manufacturer of tobacco; and that no manufacturer of tobacco shall have depending, at one and the same time, more than three operations, or any operation of less weight than 30 pounds of tobacco, or tobacco and returns, for the manufacture of cigars; and that every manufacturer of cigars shall, in the entry made by him or her of premises for manufacturing tobacco, specify and distinguish some room or rooms, place or places thereof, to be used by him or her for making cigars, and which during the manufacture of cigars shall not be used by such manufacturer for any other purpose; and that every such manufacturer shall cause all the tobacco-stalks stripped from the leaf of any tobacco, declared for an operation for the manufacture of cigars, to be from time to time removed, as the same are stripped from the leaf, and kept and deposited in such room, in bin, cask, chest, bag, or parcel, separate and apart from all other tobacco-stalks, and ticketed or labelled as being the tobacco-stalks belonging to such operation, and shall not add to or mix anything therewith, or conceal or make away with any part thereof, until all the cigars made up or to be made up of or from such operation, together with the tobacco-stalks and returns thereof, have been weighed and taken an account of by the proper officer of excise; and every such operation shall be finished and completed within twenty-eight days from the date of the declaration of such manufacturer for such operation; and that, when and so soon as any such operation shall be completed and finished, the manufacturer thereof shall give twenty-four hours' notice, and a declaration thereof in writing, to the proper officer of excise, specifying the date and weight of such operation, and the number of the cigars manufactured therefrom; and such officer shall attend at the time specified in such notice and declaration, and such manufacturer shall thereupon produce all such cigars, together with the tobacco-stalks and returns of such operation, to such officer, to be weighed and taken an account of, and such officer shall thereupon weigh and take account of the whole of such manufactured cigars, and also of the tobacco-stalks (if any) and the returns of such tobacco; and so soon as the same are weighed by and to the satisfaction of such officer, such manufacturer shall remove all such cigars, and place the same with his or her stock of manufactured tobacco, and shall also remove the tobacco-stalks (if any) and returns of such tobacco, and place the same with his or her stock of unmanufactured tobacco or tobacco-stalks and returns not in operation, there to be respectively kept as aforesaid; and if any person manufacturing cigars shall begin to manufacture cigars without having first made such special entry for that purpose as aforesaid, and being duly licensed as a manufacturer of tobacco, or shall, whilst any such room or place so entered is used for manufacturing cigars, use or suffer such room or place to be used for any other purpose, or shall neglect or refuse to remove and keep all such tobacco-stalks as aforesaid, when the same are stripped from the leaf as aforesaid, separate and apart and ticketed or labelled as aforesaid, or shall add anything to or mix anything therewith, or conceal or make away with any part thereof, until the proper officer shall have weighed and taken an account of all the cigars made up or to be made up of or from such operation, together with the tobacco-stalks and returns thereof, or shall not finish and complete every such operation within twenty-eight days from the date of the declaration for such operation as aforesaid; or shall not, when such operation is finished, and within the time aforesaid, give such notice and declaration as aforesaid, specifying such particulars as aforesaid, and produce all such cigars, together with the tobacco-stalks and returns of such operation, to such officer, to be weighed and taken account of, and give such officer all necessary aid and assistance in weighing and taking a true account thereof; or shall use any art, device, means, or contrivance by which such officer shall be hindered, molested, or prevented in weighing the same, or shall be deceived, or such account as aforesaid shall be defeated; or if any such manufacturer shall not afterwards remove or cause to be removed and kept, as aforesaid, all such cigars, tobacco-stalks (if any), and the returns of such tobacco as aforesaid, all such cigars, tobacco-stalks, and returns shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and if, on weighing such cigars, tobacco-stalks, and returns, as aforesaid, the officer shall find any increase in the weight thereof, above the rate of 105 pounds for every 100 pounds of the weight of the tobacco or tobacco and returns weighed and declared for such operation, such increase or greater weight shall be forfeited, and a quantity of such cigars equal thereunto shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and every such manufacturer shall, for each and every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100%.: provided always, that no manufacturer of cigars shall have or be allowed or entitled to any credit in his or her manufactured stock, for more than the weight of tobacco or tobacco and returns of the operation actually made into cigars, and produced to and weighed by the officer as aforesaid, with 5 pounds for every 100 pounds of the tobacco or tobacco and returns weighed and declared for such operation, and so in proportion for any less quantity."

Sect. 5. "That if, before the expiration of any period respectively prescribed by this act, for finishing, and declaring to be finished, any operation for the manufacture of tobacco, any unforeseen or inevitable cause or accident shall occur, by which any such manufacturer respectively shall unavoidably be prevented from finishing, and declaring the same to be finished, within such period, and such manufacturer shall forthwith give notice in writing of such cause or accident to his or her surveying-officer of excise, specifying therein the nature thereof, and shall give proof to, and to the satisfaction of, the supervisor of excise, in whose district the entered premises of such manufacturer are situate, of such cause or accident, and of the unavoidable delay thereby occasioned, and shall finish such operation, and declare the same to be finished, with as much diligence and despatch as the nature of such cause or accident, hinderance and obstruction, will allow and permit, no such manufacturer shall incur any forfeiture or penalty by reason of the delay in the performance thereof, within the respective period prescribed for that purpose, unavoidably occasioned by such cause or accident; anything in this act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 11. "That if, upon any notice given by any manufacturer of tobacco or snuff respectively, under any of the provisions of this act, the officer of excise shall attend as thereby required for the purpose, and at the time specified in such notice, and such manufacturer shall not, within the space of one hour after such officer shall be present, as aforesaid, begin to do, and proceed in doing, the act or thing specified in such notice, or for which such notice was given; or if any such manufacturer shall previously declare in writing, delivered to any such officer, any such notice void, every such notice shall be void to all intents and purposes, and as if never given; and that it shall and may be lawful for any manufacturer of tobacco or snuff to proceed in any act, matter, or thing, requiring the presence only of the officer when done by any such manufacturer, and which shall be specified in any such notice, if such officer shall not attend for that purpose; provided always, that no such manufacturer shall proceed so to do, unless such officer shall not attend for the space of one hour after the expiration of the time specified in such notice for that purpose; and that no notice shall be given, or declaration made, by any manufacturer of tobacco or snuff (except in case of some unforeseen and inevitable accident), that shall require the attendance of any officer of excise at or upon the entered premises of any such manufacturer, on a Sunday, or at any other time, or between any other hours than between six of the clock in the morning and eight of the clock in the evening; and that, if any notice shall be given or declaration be made by any such manufacturer, which shall require such attendance of the officers (ex-

Sect. 12. "That no manufacturer of tobacco shall make, manufacture, or have in his or her custody or possession for exportation, or shall export on drawback, or ship, or give notice for that purpose, any cut, roll, or carrot tobacco, unless such tobacco has been wholly made from tobacco-leaf, having the tobacco-stalks stripped and separated therefrom, or from such leaf so stripped, and returns of tobacco-leaf so stripped, and without the stalks thereof; and if any manufacturer of tobacco shall make, manufacture, or have, in his or her custody or possession, for exportation, or shall give notice to ship, or ship for exportation on drawback, any cut, roll, or carrot tobacco, which shall have been made from tobacco, or tobacco and returns, without the tobacco-stalks being first wholly stripped and separated from the leaf thereof, so that such cut, roll, and carrot tobacco respectively shall have been wholly made from the leaf of tobacco from which the whole of the stalks have been stripped, or from such leaf so stripped, and returns of tobacco-leaf so stripped, the same respectively shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and such manufacturer, who shall so make, manufacture, or have the same in his, her, or their custody or possession, for exportation on drawbacks, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 200*l*."

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 83, if any manufacturer shall make, or have in his possession, any roll tobacco, or carrot tobacco for exportation, with any tobacco-stalks therein, the same shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of excise, and the manufacturer having the same in his possession shall forfeit 50*l*.

Sect. 84. Every person who shall cut any walnut-tree leaves, hop-leaves, sycamore-leaves, or other leaves, herbs, or plants, in imitation of tobacco (not being tobacco-leaves or plants); or shall colour, stain, dye, or cure the same so as to resemble tobacco; or shall mix any such leaves, herbs, or plants with tobacco; or shall sell or expose to sale or have in his possession any such leaves, herbs, or plants, so cut, coloured, stained, dyed, or cured, or mixed, shall forfeit the same, with the casks and package, which may be seized, and also 200*l*. The same penalty attaches to the causing and procuring of such leaves (not being tobacco-leaves) to be cut, stained, &c. in imitation of tobacco-leaves.

Sect. 85.—30 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 23. Manufacturers of tobacco may keep and use any dye or stain for staining or dyeing tobacco or tobacco-stalks. See the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 46, ss. 1, 7; 5 Geo. I. c. 11, s. 22, post.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 86, every manufacturer of snuff shall provide proper moveable casks for preparing, laying down, or putting into bins, snuff-work and tobacco-stalks for flour; and shall place them so as that the officer may conveniently examine and weigh the same, at all times; and shall mark every such cask with a progressive number, and the tare and weight thereof; and shall not lay down any snuff-work in any cask not so marked, nor put the same in any bin; on the penalty of 50*l*.

Sect. 87. Such manufacturer of snuff shall, before he begins to liquor, damp, strip, press, or cut any tobacco or stalks, &c. or to lay down any snuff-work, or tobacco-stalks for tobacco-stalk flour, give like notice as aforesaid to the officer, and shall in such notice declare the weights thereof respectively, and the number of each particular cask or bin in which the same is intended to be laid down; and such officer shall attend accordingly; and such person shall begin within one hour of the time so mentioned, and shall without delay proceed therein, until the whole is weighed; and shall then deliver an account in writing of the quantity intended for each sort of snuff or flour; and when put into casks he shall give a like notice, and, in the presence of the officer, shall affix to each cask a ticket, specifying the number of such cask, and the weight of the snuff-work, &c. therein, and the time when laid down, and what sort of snuff it is intended for: which ticket shall be signed both by such manufacturer or his servant and the officer; and when the same is intended to be taken out to be ground, like notice shall be given, and the same shall be weighed out in the presence of the officer; and no such manufacturer shall mix snuff-work or tobacco-stalks for flour of one making with another; on pain of forfeiting, for every offence aforesaid, 50%.

Sect. 88.— 30 Geo. III. c. 40, ss. 9, 10. Provided always, that whilst such snuff-work shall be in cask or bin, and shall afterwards appear to be unfit for the purposes specified in such declaration, or be intended to be manufactured contrary thereto, notice thereof in writing shall be given to the officer within forty-eight hours after the delivery of such declaration, and a fresh declaration shall be given, specifying the sort it is intended for, and such manufacturer shall proceed therein in manner as aforesaid.

By the 30 Geo. III. c. 40, ss. 19, 20, 21, Scotch snuff and tobacco-stalk flour may be manufactured into brown Scotch snuff, and tobacco-stalk flour into rappee snuff, subject to the regulations aforesaid. And, on taking stock, certain credits shall be allowed (as set forth in the act); and if, on such taking stock, any excess be found, the same shall be forfeited, as brought without an authentic permit, and may be seized.

Sect. 11, 12. And to snuff-work in operation, tobacco, tobacco-stalks or flour, or returns of tobacco, may be added, once while in cask or bin, or once immediately before the grinding, or once at or during each operation, on giving to the officer, previous to such increase being made, a like notice, specifying the cask or bin, and the number thereof, and the time when first laid down, and the time when any increase was made, and the weights of the tobacco, &c. intended to be added.

Sect. 13. The whole of any parcel of snuff-work in cure may be mixed with the whole of any other parcel in cure, although laid down at different times, if the same be mixed in the presence of an officer, to whom notice is to be given as aforesaid.

Sect. 14. If any manufacturer has occasion to supply his customers with manufactured tobacco or snuff from any parcel in operation before the whole is finished, he may, in the presence of an officer, take for the purpose aforesaid any manufactured tobacco or snuff not less than 200 pounds from any parcel then in operation. But, if taken without conforming to the regulations specified in the act, he shall forfeit 50%.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 89, every manufacturer of snuff shall diligently manufacture such snuff-work and tobacco-stalks for flour, when taken out of such cask, into snuff, according to the notice given; and when the same is finished, he shall deliver to the officer a declaration in writing of the weight of each sort so made, and shall keep the same separate for twenty-four hours, or until the officer shall have taken an account thereof, on the penalty of 50%.

Sect. 90. But the same shall not extend to Scotch snuff returned directly from the mill; provided, at the time the same is taken from the room where deposited, a declaration in writing be delivered to the officer, specifying the weight thereof, and the time when the same was laid down in snuff-work.

Sects. 90, 91. Provided always, that every manufacturer may provide a store-room for keeping dried Scotch snuff, with good and sufficient fastenings, to be approved of by the surveyors and supervisors of the district; but the same shall have but one door or entrance, which shall be locked up, sealed, and secured by the officer when any Scotch snuff shall be therein; wherein may be deposited Scotch snuff returned directly from the mill for six months, without being taken as part of his stock. And when the same is intended to be taken out of such room, notice shall be given to the survey-officer, in six hours if within the limits of the head office of excise, and twelve hours if elsewhere in any city or its suburbs, and twenty-four hours if elsewhere, who shall attend and open such room, and such snuff shall be taken out in his presence, and shall be kept separate one making from another, on the penalty of 50%. And if any such manufacturer shall open such store-room, except in the presence of an officer, he shall forfeit 200%.

By the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 46, s. 1, every person who shall cut or cause to be cut any walnut, hop, sycamore, or any other leaves, herbs, plants, or materials (not being tobacco-leaves or plants); or shall colour or cure, or cause any such to make the same resemble tobacco for sale; or shall sell or cause to be sold, or agree or offer to sell knowingly, the same, mixed or unmixed with tobacco,

31. Tobacco and Snuff.

Snuff-work, &c. not fit for the purpose intended.

Snuff of one sort may be made into another sort.

To snuff-work in operation, tobacco, &c., may be added.

Snuff-work in cure may be mixed.

200lbs. or above may be taken from tobacco or snuff in operation.

as tobacco, shall forfeit 5s. a pound, half to the king (charges of the prosecution first deducted), and half with full costs to him who shall sue.

Sect. 7. — 5 Geo. I. c. 11, s. 22. Every person who shall make, mix, or colour, or cause or procure to be mixed or coloured, any snuff with ochre, umber, or other colouring, except water tinged with Venetian red only; or shall mix with snuff any fustic or yellow ebony, touchwood, or other wood, or any dirt, sand, or small tobacco sifted from tobacco, or knowingly sell or expose to sale any such, shall forfeit the same, and 3*l.* for every pound weight, half to the king, and half to him that shall sue.

By the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 46, s. 3, all such leaves, herbs, plants, and materials, so sold, contracted for, or knowingly offered for sale, and all engines, utensils, and tools for working the same, may be searched for and seized, by warrant of three commissioners of the treasury or of the customs.

Sect. 4. But no house or warehouse shall be opened to search for or seize the same but at seasonable hours, and not without a special warrant from two justices of the peace.

Sect. 4. And the said materials or engines found and seized within the limits of any port, or within six miles of any port, shall be brought to the next custom-house warehouse; and if at a greater distance from any port, shall be secured by order of two justices at the king's charge, till the cause of such seizure shall be determined at the next, or, at farthest, the second quarter-sessions after seizure; and the same, after condemnation or recovery by judgment of such sessions, shall be openly burned or destroyed by order of the same, at his majesty's charge.

Sect. 5. All servants and labourers employed in manufacturing or knowingly selling such leaves or materials, shall, on conviction before two justices by oath of one witness, be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, to be kept to hard labour (not exceeding) six months.

Persons mixing fustic, &c., with snuff-work, or having the same in their possession.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 93, if any person shall mix any fustic, or other wood; or any walnut-tree, or other leaves, herbs, or plants (other than tobacco); or any earth, clay, or tobacco-sand, with any snuff-work or snuff; or shall make or colour, or cause, &c. the same with any sort of colouring (water tinged with colour only excepted); he shall forfeit 200*l.* And if any manufacturer or dealer in snuff shall sell, offer, or expose to sale, or have in his entered premises, any fustic, yellow ebony, touchwood, logwood, red or Guinea wood, Braziletto or Jamaica wood, Nicaragua wood, or Saunders wood; or any walnut-tree, hop, or sycamore leaves; or shall have in his possession any of the aforesaid articles; or any other wood, leaves, herbs, plants, earth, clay, or tobacco-sand, mixed with any snuff-work or snuff; or such snuff-work or snuff coloured (except as aforesaid); he shall forfeit 50*l.*, and the same shall be forfeited and may be seized.

Adulterating tobacco or snuff, &c.

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 109, s. 14, "no manufacturer of, dealer in, or retailer of tobacco or snuff, shall mix with or put, or cause, permit, or suffer to be mixed with or put, into or amongst any tobacco, manufactured or unmanufactured, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns of tobacco, snuff-work, or snuff, any substance, material, or thing whatsoever, not being tobacco or snuff, and other than water only, or water tinged with colour or flavoured only; and if any tobacco, manufactured or unmanufactured, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns of tobacco, snuff-work, or snuff, shall be found in the custody or possession of any such manufacturer, dealer, or retailer, or in transit from any such manufacturer, dealer, or retailer, or other person or persons, to any other person or persons, mixed with any substance, material, or thing, not being tobacco or snuff, and other than water only, or water tinged with colour or flavoured only, or to or amongst which any substance, material, or thing, not being tobacco or snuff, and other than water only, or water tinged with colour or flavoured only, has been put, all such tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff-work, and snuff, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and if any manufactured tobacco, or tobacco-stalk flour, in the possession of any manufacturer of, dealer in, or retailer of tobacco or snuff, shall be found, upon any examination of analysis thereof, to contain a greater weight of any substance, material, or thing, not being tobacco, and other than water only, or water tinged with colour or flavoured only, than two per centum of the weight of the manufactured tobacco or tobacco-stalk flour under examination of analysis; or if any snuff in the possession of any manufacturer of or dealer in or retailer of tobacco or snuff shall be found, upon any examination or analysis thereof, to contain a greater weight of any substance, material, or thing, not being snuff, and other than water only, or water tinged with colour or flavoured only, than four per centum of the weight of the snuff under examination or analysis, such material, article, or thing, not being in such case respectively tobacco or snuff, and being other than water only, or water tinged with colour or flavoured only, shall be deemed to have been unlawfully added and mixed with such manufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalk flour, or snuff respectively, by the person or persons in whose possession such manufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalk flour, or snuff, shall be found; and all such manufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalk flour, and snuff respectively, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise; and every manufacturer of, dealer in, and retailer of tobacco or snuff, in whose possession any such adulterated tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns of tobacco, snuff-work or snuff, shall be found, or who shall commit, or cause, permit, or suffer to be committed, any such offence as aforesaid, shall forfeit for each and every such offence the sum of 100*l.*, over and above all other penalties and forfeitures."

Forfeited.

Proviso as to allowance of weight of any substance in tobacco other than water, &c.

31. Tobacco and Snuff.

In what case considered as unlawfully added.

Penalty.

By the 30 Geo. III. c. 40, ss. 15, 16, 17, any manufacturer of British rappee, Scotch, or brown Scotch snuff, completely finished, and of which an account has been taken by the officer, may liquor or damp the same before mixing with snuff of a different making, so as the weight exceed not the legal credit; and if such manufacturer shall intend to liquor or damp snuff for which the legal credit has not been received, he shall give notice thereof to the officer, specifying the kind, weight, and quantity (and other particulars in the act stated): but no snuff shall be liquored in less parcels than 200 pounds, nor one making in more than four different parcels.

Snuff completely finished may be liquored.

Sect. 18. Snuff for which such allowance shall have been made, shall be kept separate from all other snuff, and shall be shown to the officer on demand, on the penalty of 20*l.*

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 94, every manufacturer and dealer who shall mix Spanish with short-cut tobacco, or any tobacco-stalk flour with British or foreign snuff, or any British rappee, Scotch, or brown Scotch snuff, the one with any other of them, or with any kind of foreign snuff, shall every day enter into a book or paper the quantity sold, sent out, or consumed, of two pounds or upwards, and the gross weight thereof, and the gross weight of the tobacco-stalk flour, and the time when mixed, on pain of forfeiting 50*l.*

An account to be kept of mixed tobacco or snuff sold or sent out.

Sect. 96. When any officer shall discover that the manufacturing of tobacco or snuff is carried on in any unentered place, and at the same time shall discover therein any person knowingly assisting, or any ways concerned in carrying on the same, every such person shall forfeit 30*l.* over and above all penalties and forfeitures that the proprietor thereof shall be liable to; and such officer or his assistant may stop and arrest such person, and convey him before a justice, who, on his confession or the oath of one witness, may convict such person so discovered, who shall immediately pay the said penalty to such officer or person who brought him; and, if not so paid, such justice shall commit him to the house of correction to hard labour for six months from the day of conviction, or until the said penalty be paid. And for a second offence he shall forfeit 60*l.*, which if not paid in manner aforesaid, he shall be committed in like manner for one year, or until such penalty be paid.

Manufacturing tobacco or snuff in unentered places.

Sects. 97, 98. The officers of excise (at any time between five in the morning and eleven in the evening, with or without a constable, or other officer of the peace, and between eleven in the evening and five in the morning with a constable or other peace-officer) may enter into any house or place belonging to or made use of by any manufacturer or dealer, and take an account of the stock found therein; and shall give credit (as particularly set forth in the act). And if at any time any excess in stock shall be found, the same shall be deemed and taken to be brought in without notice and without permit.

Officers may enter and take stock.

31. Tobacco and Snuff.

Scales and weights to be provided by manufacturer or dealer. And to assist the officers.

Not to be weighed whilst in operation.

To be kept separate.

Officers may take samples.

An account to be kept of the quantity daily sold.

Verification on oath not required, but a declaration to be made instead.

Dealers to make entries in books on being required by excise-officer.

Unfair increase in stock to be forfeited.

Supervisors and other officers of equal or superior rank, to weigh tobacco in possession of any manufacturer of tobacco or snuff.

Sect. 99. Every manufacturer and dealer shall keep sufficient scales and weights for the use of the officers, on the penalty of 100*l.*; and if any such person shall, in weighing, use any art or device to prevent such officer from taking a true weight of such tobacco, &c., he shall forfeit 200*l.*, together with such scales and weights, which may be seized.

Sect. 100. And every such manufacturer and dealer shall, with a sufficient number of his servants, assist such officer in taking such account of stock, on pain of forfeiting 50*l.*

Sect. 101. But no officer shall weigh any tobacco-stalks, or snuff-work, whilst actually in the operation of manufacture; except snuff-work intended to be sent out or received by permit.

Sect. 102. And unmanufactured tobacco, tobacco in the state of operation, and manufactured tobacco, shall be kept separate from each other, on the penalty of 50*l.*

See the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 109, ss. 7, 8, and 9, ante, p. 661, 2, 3, 4.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 103, the officers shall be permitted to take samples of tobacco or snuff, &c., in the possession of any manufacturer or dealer, paying for the same (if demanded) the value or usual price, on the penalty of 100*l.* upon refusal.

Sects. 104, 105. Every manufacturer and dealer shall, in a book or paper, to be furnished by the officers, on demand made, keep an account of all tobacco, &c., and snuffs, which he shall have sold, sent out, or consumed the preceding day, in quantities of four pounds or upwards of tobacco, &c., and two pounds or upwards of snuffs; and also another book or paper in like manner, if under four pounds of tobacco, &c., or two pounds of snuffs: but no such person shall have more than one such book or paper of each sort at the same time, which is to be returned to the officer, if in London, or any city or market-town, every six weeks, elsewhere every six months, or when the same is filled up, or demanded, and shall be verified on oath. And such books and papers shall lie open for the inspection of the officer, and shall be made up at his request, on the penalty of 100*l.* for every such offence.

By the 53 Geo. III. c. 88, s. 1, no verification on oath, as mentioned in the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 105, shall be required; and when any of the books or papers therein mentioned shall be returned to the officer, the truth of the entries therein shall be verified upon the declaration in writing of, and subscribed by the manufacturer of or dealer in tobacco or snuff, in the presence of such officer, and if any manufacturer of or dealer in tobacco or snuff shall neglect or refuse to verify upon his declaration the truth of the entries made in any such book or paper, or to subscribe the declaration, or shall make or subscribe a false declaration, he shall forfeit 100*l.*

Sect. 2. Every manufacturer of, and dealer in tobacco and snuff, shall, on demand by the officer of excise under whose survey he shall then be, enter into the said book, or on such paper, the quantities of the said commodities, which he is by the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, ss. 94 and 104, required to enter; and shall immediately afterwards, if demanded by such officer, return such book or paper to him; and the truth of the entries shall be verified upon declaration as aforesaid, under the penalty of 100*l.* for every neglect or refusal.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 106, if any officer shall discover any increase in such stock not legally accounted for, the same shall be deemed and taken to be made by a commodity for which no duty has been paid, and privately brought in without permit; and such increase shall be forfeited, and may be seized; and the person in whose stock such increase shall be found, shall also forfeit 20*l.*

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 109, s. 13, "it shall and may be lawful for any supervisor, or other officer or officers of excise of equal or superior rank to a supervisor, but in the presence and with the approbation of the collector or general surveyor of excise, if in a town in which such a collector or general surveyor is resident, and such collector or general surveyor be summoned and required by such manufacturer to attend for that purpose, at any time or times, to weigh all or any part or parcel of all the tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff-work, and snuff, of any manufacturer of tobacco or snuff respectively, whether the same or any part or parcel thereof be manufactured or unmanufactured, or is in or under any process of manufacture (except the snuff-work of any operation for the manufacture of snuff, between the time of being put into process of cure and the taking out any part of any of the snuff-work of such operation for drying or grinding the same); and if, upon any such weighing, such supervisor or other officer or officers as aforesaid shall find in the possession of any manufacturer of tobacco or snuff respectively any greater weight of any manufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalk flour, or snuff respectively, or any unmanufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalks, or returns (not being part of any depending operation weighed or declared for the manufacture of tobacco or snuff respectively), than the credit to which such manufacturer shall be by law at that time entitled for such manufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalk flour, or snuff respectively, or for such unmanufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalks or returns respectively, such greater weight of manufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalk flour, or snuff, or unmanufactured tobacco, tobacco-stalks, or returns, respectively, shall be forfeited, and shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of excise, and every such manufacturer shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 100*l.*; and if any such supervisor or other officer or officers as aforesaid shall, upon any such weighing of any tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff-work, or snuff, weighed or declared for, or in or under any process for the manufacture of tobacco or snuff, respectively, find such tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff-work, or snuff, or any part or parcel thereof, to be of greater weight than shall be accounted for by such manufacturer, by the water added thereto for the purpose of the manufacture thereof, every such supervisor, or other officer and officers, as aforesaid, shall, and is hereby authorized and required to make thereupon a full and particular examination, not only of such operation on which such greater weight shall be found, and not accounted for, as aforesaid, but of all every other operation and operations (if any) for the manufacture of tobacco or snuff of the same denomination, which such manufacturer shall then depending, and of every part and parcel thereof, and of all the circumstances relating thereto, as he or they shall think fit, or as he or they may be lawfully requested to make by any such manufacturer; and to take from as many parts and parcels of such tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff-work, and snuff, as he or they shall think fit, any quantity or quantity of a sample thereof, not exceeding four pounds' weight from each such parcel, paying such manufacturer for the same at and after the current price of manufactured tobacco, including the duty thereon; and if, upon weighing such tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff-work, and snuff, weighed and declared for, and in or under any process for the manufacture of tobacco or snuff of the like denomination, as aforesaid, by such manufacturer, and which such manufacturer shall then show to such supervisor, or other officer or officers, and request him or them to weigh and examine, as aforesaid, the same shall be found to be together of greater weight than shall be accounted for by such manufacturer, as aforesaid, every such manufacturer shall, for every such offence, forfeit and lose the sum of 100*l.*; and if any manufacturer of tobacco or snuff respectively shall obstruct or hinder any supervisor or other officer or officers, as aforesaid, from weighing or taking account of any tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff-work, or of any part or parcel thereof (except such snuff-work, as aforesaid, in examining the state or condition thereof, or taking any such sample, or shall not give to such supervisor, or other officer or officers, as aforesaid, all such aid and assistance as he may require in or for any such weighing or taking any such account, as aforesaid, or shall use any art, device, or contrivance, by which any such supervisor, or other officer or officers, as aforesaid, shall be hindered, obstructed, deceived, or defeated therein; or if any manufacturer shall, after any supervisor, or other officer or officers, as aforesaid, shall have begun, or expressed or signified to such manufacturer, his workman, his or their intention or determination to begin to weigh or take account of any tobacco, tobacco-stalks, tobacco-stalk flour, returns, snuff, or any part or parcel thereof, as aforesaid, remove or con-

Penalty, 200l. Scotch snuff not having gained more than 5lbs. in 100lbs.	By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, ss. 107, 108, Scotch snuff, in the custody of a manufacturer or dealer in snuff, not having gained more than five pounds in the hundred pounds by the moisture of the air, shall be deemed a fair commodity, and such manufacturer shall have credit for the same in stock, and may remove the same by permit; and the manufacturer and dealer shall keep all such Scotch snuff on which such allowance shall be made separate from all other snuff, and at all times show the same to the officer of excise upon demand, on the penalty of 20l.
Tobacco or snuff not to be removed before weighing.	Sect. 109. If any manufacturer shall remove any tobacco or snuff out of his entered house or place before the same has been weighed and taken an account of by the officer, or shall hide or conceal the same from the view of such officer, he shall forfeit 50l.
Not without a permit.	Sect. 110. And no tobacco (except returns) of four pounds and upwards, nor snuff of two pounds and upwards, nor any tobacco-stalks, Spanish, returns of tobacco, tobacco-stalks for flour, snuff-work, or tobacco-stalk flour, exceeding two hundred pounds, shall be removed by land or water without a permit, on pain of forfeiting the same, with the casks or other packages, and also the horses, cattle, boats, barges, and carriages, used in conveying the same, which may be seized by any officer of customs or excise.
Officers to grant permits.	Sects. 111, 112. The officers of excise, on request, shall grant permits, wherein shall be limited the time for such removal, and distinguishing the weight and kind, according to the denominations in the request-note, and the name of the person to whom and place to which to be sent, and whether by land or water, and by what mode of conveyance; and if the goods permitted shall not be delivered and received within the time so limited, the same shall be deemed and taken to be removed without permit.
Exceptions.	By the 30 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 29, no permit shall be granted or be valid for the removal of any snuff-work from one part of the kingdom to another, except from the entered premises of a manufacturer of snuff where the same was laid down, to the mill, for the purpose of being ground into snuff, on pain of forfeiture thereof, together with the hogsheads, packages, horses, cattle, boats, barges, and carriages, used in the removal thereof, which may be seized.
Request-notes to be given.	By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, ss. 113, 114, no such permit shall be granted or be valid, unless a request-note be sent from such manufacturer or dealer, containing the particulars specified in the act, and such permit correspond with the request-note; and if for removing unmanufactured tobacco (other than samples), except the same be in the original package, and be removed according to the regulations specified in the act (for which see this section in the act itself). And all tobacco, &amp;c., removed contrary thereto shall be forfeited, together with the casks and package, and the horses, cattle, boats, barges, and carriages, used in the removal thereof, which may be seized.
Permits for removing unmanufactured tobacco.	The 30 Geo. III. c. 40, ss. 25, 28, provides always that permits may be granted for the removal of any unmanufactured tobacco in any quantity not less than two hundred pounds, in any package whatsoever, from the entered premises of any manufacturer to any mill to be manufactured, and back to such entered premises.
Permit for removing to and from mills.	Sect. 27. And every manufacturer of tobacco or snuff may manufacture his tobacco, tobacco-stalks, snuff-work, and returns of tobacco, at any entered mill, and may remove the same by permit to and from such mill.
Tobacco may be finished or snuff dried at mills.	By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 115, nothing herein shall extend to prevent any manufacturer from stoving or finishing tobacco, or drying snuff-work at any cutting-mill or snuff-mill, provided the officer be allowed to weigh and take an account thereof, after such stoving, finishing, or drying.
Permits, when not used, to be returned.	Sect. 116. Where any permit shall be granted for the removal of any tobacco, &amp;c., or snuff, and the same shall not be removed agreeably thereto, such permit shall be returned before the expiration of the time limited for such re-

moval, on forfeiture of treble the value of such goods; and where such permit shall not be so returned as aforesaid, and, on taking stock, a decrease does not appear to answer the contents of such permit, a like quantity to that permitted to be removed shall be forfeited, and may be seized.

Removing to London, or the parts aforesaid.

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 119, no tobacco, tobacco-stalk, Spanish, tobacco-stalk for tobacco-stalk-flour, snuff-work, tobacco-stalk-flour, or snuff, shall be removed from any place without the limits of the bills of mortality, or excise-office in London, to any place within those limits, nor from any place without the limits of the ports hereinbefore enumerated to any place within, or within two miles of those limits, on forfeiture thereof, with the casks and packages, and also the vessels and boats, and the horses, cattle, and carriages, employed in removing the same, which may be seized by any officer of the customs or excise.

Sect. 120. No Spanish manufactured by any Spanish cutter from tobacco-stalks, received by him, accompanied with a legal permit, from any other manufacturer of tobacco, for the purpose only of manufacturing the same into Spanish, for or on account of such other manufacturer; nor any cut tobacco, cut by any cutter from tobacco, &c. (as before); nor any tobacco-stalk flour ground by any snuff-miller from tobacco-stalks received, &c. (as before); nor any snuff ground by any snuff-miller from any snuff-work received, &c. (as before); nor any hogshead, &c., or package containing any such Spanish, &c., or the vessel, boat, &c. &c., employed in removing the same, shall be forfeited by reason of the return of any such Spanish, &c., by any such Spanish cutter or snuff-miller, from his entered mill not within the limits of the weekly bills, or of the chief office of excise, or from any place not within the limits of the said first-mentioned ports, to the entered premises whence received, situate as aforesaid, or within two miles of the said ports, provided the said Spanish, &c., be accompanied with a permit according to this act.

Sect. 121. Provided also, that any manufacturer of snuff may send for sale, by permit, any snuff manufactured by him, from any part of the kingdom to any other part thereof.

By the 30 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 26, tobacco-stalks stripped from the leaf may be removed by permit from any entered premises out of the limits of the bills of mortality to any place within those limits, subject to the regulations in the aforesaid act and this act specified.

Manufacturers or dealers may return tobacco or snuff received into their stock, to the persons from whom they received it, under the regulations
herein specified;

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 122, "any manufacturer or manufacturers of or dealer or dealers in tobacco or snuff, who shall have received into his, her, or their stock any tobacco or snuff removed according to the directions of this act, accompanied with a legal permit, shall see cause to return the same to the person or persons from whom he, she, or they received the same, then and in every such case such manufacturer or manufacturers, or dealer or dealers, shall be at liberty, within forty-eight hours after he, she, or they shall have received the same tobacco or snuff into his, her, or their stock, to give twelve hours' notice in writing to the officer of excise under whose survey he, she, or they shall then be, of his, her, or their intention to return such tobacco or snuff, and shall in such notice express the true cause and occasion for returning the same; and such officer shall, and is hereby required to, attend and examine such tobacco or snuff; and when and so soon as such officer shall have examined the same, and taken an account of the quantity and quality thereof, such manufacturer or manufacturers, or dealer or dealers, shall forthwith, in the presence of such officer, repack such tobacco or snuff, and shall immediately, or within half an hour after the coming of the said officer, and in the presence of the said officer, write on the outside of the package in which the tobacco or snuff so intended to be returned shall be, in large legible characters, as well his, her, or their own christian and surname, or the known name of his, her, or their firm, as also the christian and surname of the person or persons, or the known name of the firm or company, from whose stock the same tobacco or snuff was received, and likewise the words, 'Returned Tobacco,' or 'Snuff,' as the case may require; and such officer shall thereupon underwrite on the package his own christian and surname, and mark the said package with some mark or number; and then, and not before, the proper officer of excise shall grant a permit to accompany such tobacco or snuff so to be returned; in which permit shall be expressed the quantity and quality of the tobacco or snuff so to be returned, the cause and occasion of returning the same, the mark or number put on the package, the christian and surnames both of the person or persons from whose stock such tobacco or snuff is removed, and of the person or persons to whom the same is to be returned, and also the time for which such permit shall be in force; and if any such tobacco or snuff be found returned, or in part returned or returning, without such permit as aforesaid accompanying the same, or if such tobacco or snuff be found returned, or in part returned or returning, to any other person or persons than the person or persons from whom such tobacco or snuff had been first received, or if the tobacco or snuff returned, or in part returned or returning, with such permit as aforesaid, be not the identical tobacco or snuff which had been received as aforesaid, without any addition to, subtraction from, or alteration of the same, then, and in each and every such case, such tobacco or snuff, with the hogsheads, casks, chests, cases, and packages whatsoever, containing the same, shall be forfeited, and the same respectively shall and may be seized by any officer or officers of the customs or excise, and the person or persons returning the same, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this proviso, shall forfeit the sum of 50*l*."

but if found returned or returning, without permit, &c., may be seized, and the party to forfeit 50*l*.

Sect. 123. If any tobacco of four pounds' weight or upwards, or any snuff of four pounds' weight or upwards, or any tobacco-stalks, Spanish, tobacco-stalks tobacco-stalk flour, snuff-work, or tobacco-stalk-flour, shall be found removing, unless between seven in the morning and five in the evening from twenty-ninth September to twenty-fifth March, and between five in the morning and seven in the evening from twenty-fifth March to twenty-ninth September except by a common carrier or vessel usually travelling or navigating out of the hours), all such tobacco, &c., shall be forfeited, together with the casks package, and the cattle, carriages, and vessels containing and made use of in conveying the same, which may be seized by any officer of customs or excise, whether the same be accompanied with a permit or not.

the 48 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 7, if any person shall offer for sale any tea, rum, geneva, or other foreign spirits, or any tobacco or snuff, not being allowed to deal therein, and not having a permit for the same; or if any pedlar, petty chapman, or other trading person, going from town to town or to other men's houses, and trading either on foot, or with any horse, or other cattle, or otherwise, within Great Britain, shall offer for sale any tea, rum, geneva, or other foreign spirits, or any tobacco or snuff, without a permit for the same, it shall be lawful for the person to whom the same shall be offered for sale to stop, arrest, and detain the person offering the same for sale, and to seize such tea, &c., and carry the same to a warehouse for the customs or excise, and to carry the person so offering for sale before a justice of peace, who may require such person to give recognizance, as directed by the 45 Geo. III. c. 121, and such person shall be subject to the provisions in the said act, in relation to recognizances of persons seized as smugglers; and, if the offender be a subject of Great Britain, and a seaman, and capable of serving in the navy, may send such offender to any officer of the impress service, to be dealt with according to the provisions of the 22 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 2, or be by such justice committed to prison, and for the penalties incurred for such offence; and such goods may be sold in the name of the person who seized them, as if seized by an officer of the customs or excise; and, after condemnation of the goods, or commitment of the offender, the person who seized them shall be entitled to 5*l*., if one moiety shall exceed 5*l*., then a moiety of such value, which the justice of the customs and excise are to cause to be paid; and the justice arresting any such offender shall also be entitled to such further reward as shall be given to any officer or non-commissioned officer of the army, or to any constable, for arresting any offender against any acts of Parliament for the prevention of smuggling.

Tobacco, &c., offered to sale without a permit, or by hawkers with one, may be seized by any person to whom the same shall be offered.

2 Geo. IV. c. 109, s. 2, "from and after the 10th day of October 1801 and every person and persons who shall deal in or retail, or be the entry to deal in or retail, tobacco or snuff, shall, upon demand, by any proper officer of excise a book or books, to be prepared with

By the 29 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 125, if any person shall counterfeit or forge, or cause or procure to be counterfeited, any permit for the removal of tobacco or snuff from any part of this kingdom to any other part thereof, he shall forfeit 500*l*.

Sect. 149. If any person shall assault, resist, oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer in the due execution of this or any other act, or shall rescue any such goods which have been seized, or any vessel, horses, cattle, or carriages, which have been forfeited, and for which no particular penalty is provided, he shall forfeit 200*l*. for each offence.

Sect. 150. If any person shall give or offer any bribe, recompense, or reward to any officer to prevent him doing his duty, whether the same be accepted or not, he shall forfeit 500*l*.

Sect. 152. No tobacco, &c., or snuff, shall be landed without first making entry thereof with the officers of the customs, on forfeiture thereof, with the casks and package.

24. Tobacco and Snuff.

Sect. 153. If any officer of excise shall have cause to suspect that any tobacco, &c., or snuff, which shall have been imported contrary to this act, or forfeited by this or any other act, is deposited, lodged, hid, or concealed, if within London or Westminster, or the limits of the chief office, upon oath made before two commissioners, elsewhere upon oath made before one justice, setting forth the ground of his suspicion, such commissioners or justice may by warrant authorize such officer, by day or night, but, if in the night, in the presence of a constable or other peace-officer, to enter into such suspected place, and to seize and carry away all such tobacco, &c., or snuff which shall be there found, together with the casks and package containing the same; and if any person shall obstruct or hinder any such officer so authorized, or person assisting him, in the execution of such warrant, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

Entry to be made before landing. Officers may search suspected places.

Tobacco and snuff, taken as prize, are subjected to the regulation of this act by the 43 Geo. III. c. 134, s. 5.

Sect. 154. No manufacturer or dealer in tobacco or snuff, or who is or shall be in anywise interested or concerned in manufacturing or dealing in tobacco or snuff, shall act as a magistrate in the execution of any act relating to tobacco or snuff; and all acts done by such person shall be utterly null and void.

No manufacturer or dealer to act as a magistrate.

By the 12 Geo. I. c. 28, s. 13, 5 Geo. III. c. 43, s. 4, 6, 8 Geo. I. c. 18, s. 6, if any tobacco-stalks or stems stripped from the leaf shall be imported, the same shall be forfeited and burned; and the officer seizing the same shall be rewarded 1*d*. per pound; and every person who shall be assisting or otherwise concerned in unshipping the same, or to whose hands they shall knowingly come after unshipping, shall forfeit treble value, together with the vessels, bags, or other things, wherein the same are contained, and the horses, cattle, and other carriages made use of in removing the same; half to the king, and half to such officer of the customs who shall seize, inform, or sue for the same.

Importing tobacco-stalks.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 159, tobacco (and also liquors) derelict are subject to the following regulations.

Sect. 2. every person bringing into this kingdom, or finding or discovering on the coasts of this kingdom, any foreign liquors or tobacco derelict, jetsam, flotsam, or wreck, in respect whereof any duty of customs or excise is imposed, shall, within twenty-four hours next after he shall have so discovered the same, if the same be found on land, or within twenty-four hours next after the same shall have been landed, if the same be found at sea, give notice thereof to the next custom-house or excise-office, or to some neighbouring officer of customs or excise, specifying the place where the same are deposited; and the proper officers shall forthwith take a particular account of such liquors or tobacco, and shall demand of the person in possession they may be, or who shall have found or brought to land the same, the full duties of customs and excise due in respect thereof; and in case the same shall not on such demand be paid, the said officer shall cause such tobacco to be securely lodged and deposited in a warehouse, under the officer's lock, until the duties shall be paid, or until they shall be sold; and no person shall bring into this kingdom, or find or discover on the coasts of this kingdom, any foreign liquors or tobacco derelict, jetsam, flotsam, or wreck, in respect whereof any duty is by law imposed, and shall not give notice, as aforesaid, every such person shall forfeit 100*l*.; and if any person shall remove, open, or alter, in quantity or quality, or cause to be removed, or aid or assist in the removing, &c., any such liquors or tobacco, or shall break, or destroy, or cause to be broken, &c., or aid or assist in the breaking, or destroy, or cause to be destroyed, any of the cases or packages containing any such liquors or tobacco, or shall not render an account of by the proper officers, and before the said liquors or tobacco shall be by them lodged or deposited, as aforesaid, every such person shall forfeit 100*l*.; and all such liquors and tobacco so removed, together with the casks and other packages containing the same, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer: provided always, that if the duties shall not be paid within eighteen months next after such lodging, as aforesaid, the said liquors and tobacco shall be so deposited, the commissioners of customs or excise may sell and dispose of such liquors and tobacco, or any part thereof, for the satisfying the duties payable, and also the costs, charges, and expenses attending the conveying to such warehouse, and of the keeping and sale thereof, rendering the overplus, after payment, to such person as shall be by law entitled to the same; and if, upon such tobacco, &c. being put up or offered to sale, no person shall bid for the same as much or more money than the duties payable in respect thereof, together with the warehouse-rent, costs, charges, and expenses, taken together, would amount to, the commissioners may permit the person entitled to the same to expose, or to sell and dispose thereof for exportation only, subject to the usual regulations in such cases, or if such persons should refuse so to do, then to sell and dispose of such liquors or tobacco for exportation, or to destroy the same, as such commissioners may deem most expedient: provided also, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend to prevent any such liquors or tobacco as the said commissioners may deem necessary for that purpose, being sold duty free, for the payment of the salvage expenses incurred in respect thereof.

Regulations observed for securing duties on tobacco, or foreign spirits, derelict.

Penalty.

34. Tobacco and Snuff.

Goods may be retained in custody of person bringing or finding the same for one year, upon entering into bond for payment of duties.

Sect. 3. The lord of the manor on which such liquors or tobacco shall be found, having by law just claim thereto, or where no such lord of the manor shall exist, then the person or persons bringing into this kingdom, or finding or discovering, on the coasts thereof, any such foreign liquor or tobacco, shall be at liberty to retain the same in his own possession for one year and one day, to be computed from such bringing or finding thereof, on his entering into bond, with two sufficient sureties, to be approved of by the proper officer of customs or excise, in treble value, for the due payment of the duties in respect thereof, at the end and expiration of such year and day, or, in default of such payment, to restore such liquors and tobacco at the end or expiration of such year and day, to the proper officer of the customs or excise, in the same state as the same was in at the time of such bringing, &c.

Penalties, &c., how levied.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 2, all penalties and forfeitures relating to the excise or customs are to be recovered, &c. according to the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53. See ante, p. 197 to 226.

Vinegar-maker to be licensed. (a)

The 4 Geo. IV. c. 81, repeals all former duties on excise licenses, and imposes new duties: viz. (int. al.) upon every license required to be annually taken out by every maker of vinegar or acetous acid, for sale, 5*l.*

Duties. Excise.

The 58 Geo. III. c. 65, s. 1, repeals all former duties of excise on vinegar, verjuice, &c., and s. 2 imposes other duties: viz.

(a) It was held, that a maker of vinegar for sale, whether as vinegar or as blacking, or as any other article not being vinegar properly so called, or pure and applicable to the common uses of vinegar, is liable to the duty of excise, and the other provisions of the several statutes relating to the makers and preparers of vinegar for sale; and that it is not necessary to state in the information that the liquid was preparing for sale; that may be proved. Attorney-General v. Green, 4 Price, 224. And it was held, that tar-distillers, necessarily making tar-acid, or acetous-acid, in the progress of their manufacture, are therefore taken to be vinegar-makers within the sixth section of the 24 Geo. III. c. 56, and that they were thereby subjected, as such, to all the excise regulations made by the statutes passed in respect of the makers of vinegar, and were not protected by the proviso in that section; and, consequently, were liable to an information for penalties for not giving the usual notice to the excise required by the fourteenth section of the 10 & 11 Wil. c. 21. Attorney-General v. Haulgrave, 11 Price, 217.

For every gallon (wine measure) of vinegar or acetous acid, or liquors prepared for vinegar or acetous acid, made in Great Britain for sale, 4d., to be paid by the maker. 35 Vinegar, &c.

For every gallon of vinegar or acetous acid, or liquors prepared for vinegar or acetous acid, made in Ireland and imported into Great Britain, 4d., to be paid by the importer.

For every gallon of vinegar or acetous acid, or liquors prepared for vinegar or acetous acid, imported into Great Britain from foreign parts, 1s., to be paid by the importer.

For every gallon (wine measure) of vinegar made in Great Britain for sale, made in Ireland and imported into Great Britain, and exported from thence to foreign parts, on which the duties shall have been paid, there shall be allowed and paid a drawback of 4d.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 111, imposes a duty in lieu of all former duties of customs; viz. 18l. 18s. the tun (see ante, 147). Customs.
Entry, &c.

The 10 & 11 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 15, thirty-four gallons shall be accounted equal of vinegar, vinegar-beer, or liquors preparing for vinegar, according to standard ale quart.

s. 14. If any vinegar-maker shall, without giving notice at the next excise-use any storehouse, warehouse, cellar, or other place, for the making, or keeping any vinegar-beer, or liquors preparing for vinegar, he shall, for every such storehouse or other place so made use of without such notice, forfeit 50l. Penalty on using any place without giving notice.

The 26 Geo. III. c. 73 (made perpetual by the 35 Geo. III. c. 89), s. 56, any person shall be entitled to carry on the trade of a vinegar-maker, make an entry with the proper officer of excise of the brewhouse, shop, yard, or place, for the carrying on such trade; and in such entry specify whether he be a maker of vinegar from malt or corn, or from sugar, or from any and what other materials; and every entry not conformable thereto shall be void.

s. 5. No vinegar-maker from melasses or sugar, or from any other material except malt or corn, shall carry on, alone or in partnership, the trade of brewer, or maker or rectifier of spirits, in the same buildings or premises, within two miles thereof; and all entries made for carrying on the trade of brewer or maker or rectifier of spirits, contrary hereto, shall be void. See 1 Geo. IV. c. 80, s. 36, ante, 595. Vinegar-maker
ler or rectifier.

The 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 30, s. 17, if any maker or retailer of vinegar shall, on request or demand made by the officer in the day-time, or if in the night by a constable, refuse to permit him to enter his house, storehouse, or other place belonging to or used by him, and to take account of the vinegar and any liquors prepared for vinegar, he shall forfeit 15l. Refusing to admit the gauger.

The 3 Geo. III. c. 65, s. 10, every officer of excise shall at all times, on request (but, if in the night, to be accompanied by a supervisor or justice of the peace) be permitted to enter into the entered house, warehouse, and other place used by any vinegar-maker for sale, and to take an account of the weight, measure, or gauge, as to such officer shall seem fit and convenient of such liquor and material, and of all sulphuric acid, in the custody of such maker; and if any person shall obstruct, molest, or hinder him from so doing, he shall forfeit 200l. Officers of excise may enter premises used by any vinegar-maker.

The 10 & 11 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 12, no vinegar-maker shall receive into his custody any beer, returns of beer or ale, cider, verjuice, or other liquors for vinegar, nor deliver out any vinegar in casks or by the gallon, until the first given to the officer, unless from September 29, to March 29, between seven in the morning and five in the evening, and from March 29, to September 29, between five in the morning and seven in the evening, on pain of 50l. At what times only to receive liquors.

s. 1. In receiving such liquors into his custody, he shall show the gauger before he mixes them with any other liquors, rape, or other materials, on pain of 20l. To be shown to the gauger.

The 3 Geo. III. c. 65, s. 11, no vinegar-maker for sale shall have or be in the custody or possession any vinegar or acetous acid, or any other liquor, except such as shall be delivered to him by the gauger, on pain of 50l. Vinegar-makers not to take into their custody vi-

No wort to be sent out, nor vinegar or preparation for vinegar, unless duty paid, and accompanied with a permit.

Concealing.

Vinegar or materials found concealed, adulterated, &c. to be forfeited, and the offender forfeit 100*l*.

What deemed vinegar, &c.

Liquors, of whatever kind, prepared for vinegar for sale, to be charged with the duty hereby imposed.

sugar-water, sugar-wash, melasses-water, melasses-wash, alegar, stale beer, returns of beer or ale, cider, verjuice, or other liquor prepared or preparing for vinegar or acetous acid, or capable of being used as or applied to the purposes of vinegar or acetous acid, or any sulphuric acid, melasses, brown sugar, honey (except for his private family), or any pyrolignite or acetate of lime or soda, or other material (except corn or grain) fit or proper to be made into or mixed with vinegar or acetous acid, without giving twelve hours' previous notice thereof in writing to the officer of excise, under whose survey such maker shall then be, specifying the day and time of the day when the same will be taken or received into his custody, and the quantity and description thereof, that such officer may be present to take account thereof, by weight, measure, or gauge; nor shall diminish, remove, or mix the same or any part thereof with his stock, until such officer shall have taken account, nor afterwards use or employ any such materials uncharged with duty, without accounting for the same to the satisfaction of the officer, on pain of forfeiting or every such offence 100*l*.

Sect. 12. No person shall sell, deliver, or send out any fermenting or fermented wort or wash, not being fermented beer, charged with duty, to any person whatsoever; and no person, not being an entered vinegar-maker, shall sell, deliver, or send out any vinegar or purified acetous acid, alegar, stale beer, stale ale, or stale cider, verjuice, sugar-water, or melasses-water, or other liquors prepared or preparing for vinegar or acetous acid, or capable of being used as or applied to the purposes of vinegar or acetous acid, except to an entered vinegar-maker, under such notice for receiving the same, as aforesaid, or without the duties hereby imposed being first paid or charged in respect of such vinegar, or purified acetous acid, alegar, stale beer, stale ale, or stale cider, verjuice, sugar-water, or melasses-water, or other liquors, and the same being accompanied with a permit or certificate as herein mentioned, on pain of forfeiting all such liquors, which may be seized by any officer of excise, together with the cattle and carriages used in removing the same; and every person so offending or receiving such liquors shall forfeit 200*l*.

By the 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 30, s. 16, if any maker of vinegar for sale shall conceal or convey any vinegar, or liquor preparing for vinegar, from the view of the gauger, he shall, for every barrel, forfeit 40*s*.

By the 58 Geo. III. c. 65, s. 25, if any person shall remove, hide, or conceal any vinegar, or acetous acid, or liquors preparing for or capable of being used as or applied to the purposes thereof, or any material for making, rectifying, or purifying the same, subject or liable to the duties of excise, with intent to evade the payment of such duties, or to defraud the king; or shall adulterate or mix with any vinegar or acetous acid any other acid (except sulphuric acid), in the proportion not exceeding one-thousandth part thereof by weight, all such vinegar or acetous acid, liquors, and materials so removed, taken away, hidden, concealed, or adulterated, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of excise; and beside such forfeiture, every person so offending, and all persons assisting therein, or receiving any vinegar, liquors, or materials, without such permit, shall severally forfeit 100*l*.

For the provisions of this act for trying the strength of vinegar by an acetometer, see sections 8 and 9; and for regulating the mode of charging the stills, see sections 13 and 14.

By the 10 & 11 Wil. III. c. 21, s. 11, all stale beer, returns of beer or ale, cider, verjuice, or any other liquor proper to be made into vinegar, which shall be found in the possession of any common vinegar-maker (except such as are to be drank in his family, and which shall be kept separate for that purpose), shall be deemed vinegar, or liquors preparing for vinegar.

By the 58 Geo. III. c. 65, s. 6, all liquors brewed or made, by whatsoever means or manner, into vinegar or acetous acid for sale, and all liquors prepared or preparing for, or capable of being used as, or applied to, the purposes of vinegar or acetous acid made for sale, or found in the possession of any vinegar-maker for sale, in Great Britain, or imported into Great Britain, whether any such liquor shall be sold, or made for sale, unmixed or mixed with any other ingredients, or shall be known and called by the name of vinegar, ale-gar, verjuice, radical vinegar, acetous acid, acetic acid, pyroligneous acid, or by any other name, shall be respectively subject to and chargeable with the duties hereby imposed.

Sect. 6. And every person who shall make, prepare, extract, distil, rectify, purify, or sell any such liquors, as aforesaid, not being a dealer in, retailer, or seller of such vinegar, or acetous acid only, as he shall receive by permit or certificate, as herein mentioned, from some entered vinegar-maker, shall be deemed a vinegar-maker, and be subject to all the license and other duties, regulations, restrictions, and penalties, to which makers of vinegar are subject and liable.

Persons preparing such liquors deemed vinegar-makers.

Sect. 24. So much of the 6 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 16, as directs that the duty on cider or perry unfit for sale, and charged with the duties on vinegar, should be allowed and drawn back, shall be repealed.

Sect. 27. If any question shall arise whether any vinegar or acetous acid, liquors or materials prepared for the purposes of vinegar, &c., which shall have been seized, the proof of such vinegar, &c. not being so, shall lie upon the owner or claimer thereof.

By the 58 Geo. III. c. 65, s. 15, "no person shall make vinegar for sale from malt, or other fermenting material, at, in, or upon any house or place entered or used for making, distilling, rectifying, or purifying acetous acid, or pyroligneous acid, or for making or compounding white lead, sugar of verdigris, iron liquor, or acetate of lime, acetate of soda, or acetate of lime, or within the distance of three hundred feet in a direct line from any house or place, nor shall any person make, prepare, distil, rectify, or purify acetous acid, called pyroligneous acid, or make or compound any white lead, sugar of lead, verdigris, iron liquor, or acetate of lime, acetate of soda, or acetate of alumine, at, in, or upon any house or place entered or used for making vinegar from malt, or other fermenting materials, for sale, or within the distance of three hundred feet in a direct line from any such house or place, as aforesaid; nor shall any person rectify or purify any acetous acid, or pyroligneous acid, for sale, from any other materials than pyrolignite, or acetate of lime, or soda, upon pain of forfeiting, for every such offence, the sum of 500l.

Making vinegar for sale from malt, &c. in or at a certain distance from any entered place for distilling or preparing pyroligneous acid, &c. in or at a certain distance from any place entered for making vinegar from malt, &c., penalty 500l.

Sect. 20. "That if, at any time hereafter, any officer of excise shall find or suspect that the quantity of vinegar or acetous acid, called pyroligneous acid, extracted, rectified, or purified from pyrolignite, or acetate of lime, or any such maker, as aforesaid, and taken account of and charged with by any of the quarters ending, respectively, on the fifth day of January, fifth day of April, fifth day of July, and tenth day of October, in every year, shall be deficient, or fall short of the quantity of vinegar, or acetous acid, which should, or ought to have been, or was capable of being produced from pyrolignite, or acetate of lime, or soda, respectively, received by such maker in such quarter respectively, for the purpose of being rectified or compounded into dry or concrete pyrolignite, or acetate of lime, to produce one gallon of acetous acid of the strength of proof, for every pound of dry or concrete pyrolignite, or acetate of soda, one gallon of acetous acid, of the strength of proof for every pound of dry or concrete pyrolignite, or acetate of soda, and acetate of lime, in solution, to produce one gallon of acetous acid of the strength of proof, for every two gallons thereof of like strength, and acetate of soda in solution, to produce two gallons of acetous acid of the strength of proof, for every three gallons thereof of the like strength thereof, Officer, on discovering a deficiency in the quantity of vinegar, &c. which should have been produced, to charge such deficiency with the duty, unless satisfactorily accounted for.

deficiency being duly accounted for to the satisfaction of the officer is hereby authorized and required to charge such maker with so much and such quantity of such acetous acid, of the strength of proof, as shall be equal to the quantity so found or discovered to be deficient.

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 24, ss. 29, 30, 31, 32, every such vinegar-maker shall enter a list of all such liquors made within his district, at the next excise-office, and shall, within a month after such entry, clear off the duties, and pay the same.

Entry and payment of the duty.

Duty on importation. The 6 Geo. IV. c. 111, imposes various duties of customs upon wines imported. See ante, 148.

Wine may be imported in packages of three dozen quart or of six dozen pint bottles, as well for sale as private use, upon payment of duty as French wine. By the 59 Geo. III. c. 52, a drawback of all the duties was allowed on wine for the use of his majesty's naval officers, for their actual consumption on board ships; and see the 45 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 2; similar provisions, 53 Geo. III. c. 44.

The 4 Geo. IV. c. 69, s. 19, enacts, that it shall be lawful to import into Great Britain any wine whatever, as well for sale as for private use, in packages, each of which shall contain at least three dozen reputed quart bottles or flasks, or six dozen reputed pint bottles or flasks, on payment of the same duties, as well of customs as excise, as French wine is or shall be subject to, in such manner, and under and according to such and the like rules, regulations, conditions, and restrictions, and subject to such and the like penalties and forfeitures, as are provided and enacted in any act or acts of Parliament with respect to French wine so imported into Great Britain, so far as the same are applicable thereto.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 1, repeals all former duties on excise licenses. See ante, 245.

Licenses for selling foreign wine. (b) Sect. 2 imposes new duties upon every excise-license required to be taken out annually by dealers in and retailers of foreign wine (ante, 248), viz:

Every dealer in foreign wine who shall not have an excise-license for retailing spirits, and a license for retailing beer . . .	10	0	0
Every retailer of foreign wine, who shall have taken out a license for retailing beer to be drank or consumed on his, her, or their premises, but shall not have taken out an excise-license for retailing spirits to be so drank or consumed . . .	4	4	0
Every retailer of foreign wine who shall have taken out excise-licenses for retailing beer and spirits respectively, to be so drank or consumed (c) . . .	2	2	0

Certain words to be put up. By the 26 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 11, every person who shall have taken out a license for retailing foreign wine, and who shall not take out a license for retailing spirits or ale, shall be deemed a dealer in foreign wines by wholesale; and every person having a license for retailing spirituous liquors, or ale and beer, shall be deemed a dealer in foreign wine by retail.

Sect. 14. And every wholesale dealer shall cause to be painted or written in large legible characters, over the outer door, or in the front, or on some conspicuous part, of each house, &c., and other place by him used for the keep-

Sect. 15. If he shall put up those words on any unentered place, he shall forfeit 100*l.*, and be subject to the penalties for selling foreign wine without entry.

By the 32 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 3, every retailer shall cause the word "Wine" be expressed either on a sign hung out, or in some visible place, or near the door in the front of his house, or other place made use of for the retailing wine, to denote that such retailer is a dealer of wine, and liable to take out license for the retailing thereof; and if any person shall sell wine by retail without fixing or hanging out such token, he shall forfeit 10*l.*

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 12, every dealer in foreign wine shall make entry in writing at the next excise-office of all warehouses, vaults, or other places, by him made use of for keeping foreign wine for sale, on pain of forfeiture of the wine therein, and of the casks, bottles, and packages containing same, and also of 100*l.* for every such place; but this shall not extend to sold whilst lying openly on the quay where first landed.

Sect. 13. When any such entry shall have been made by any dealer or of foreign wine, no other dealer (not being in partnership with the who made such first entry) shall, on any pretence whatsoever, make of the same, or of any other warehouse or place within the same house or place in which such first entry shall then be existing; but every person who shall make such further entry shall be deemed a dealer in foreign wine without entry, and shall be subject to the like penalties as dealers in foreign wine entry.

Sects. 17, 18. Any officer of excise may enter, upon his request, by day or night, if in the night, in the presence of a constable or other peace-officer, any place made use of for keeping wine by any dealer, either by retail or wholesale; and, by tasting, gauging, or otherwise (except wine in casks) to take an account of all the wine in any vessels, except bottles, and to take an account of the wine in bottles in any other manner than by tasting or by uncorking or opening the bottles, and also may take samples of the same, whether in casks or bottles, paying for the same; and any person who shall refuse to comply with the officer shall forfeit 100*l.*

Officers, may enter warehouses, &c., and take samples.

Every dealer shall mark upon every cask or vessel containing more than three gallons of foreign wine, the quantity such vessel is capable of holding, and also the sort of wine kept within, whether it be French red or French white, on pain of forfeiture thereof, and the casks or vessels containing the same, which may be seized by any officer.

Casks, &c. to be marked by dealer with the quantity they will contain.

Geo. III. c. 77, s. 5, every dealer in or seller of foreign wine shall distinguish all wine in his possession, the produce of the Cape of Good Hope, or of the territories or dependencies, in like manner as he is by the 26 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 13, directed to distinguish foreign wine other than French wine from French wine; and shall, in like manner, distinguish all red wine of the Cape, or of the territories, or dependencies, from all white wines in his possession, the produce thereof, in like manner as he is by the said last-mentioned act directed to distinguish French white wine from French red wine; under the rules, restrictions, and forfeitures of the said act.

Wine the produce of the Cape of Good Hope kept separate from other foreign wine.

Geo. III. c. 59, ss. 20, 21, every dealer in or seller of foreign wine shall, to the officer of excise under whose survey he is, every cask, vessel, or bin, above three gallons' capacity, and every bin or place in which he keeps any foreign wine, on pain of forfeiture thereof, and also shall mark such casks and bins so shown to him, and the officer shall mark such casks and bins so shown to him; and if any person whatsoever shall rub out or deface such mark, or if he shall, without notice first given at the excise-office within the limits of the district, &c., set up any vessel, utensil, or other convenience, for the keeping of wine, or alter or enlarge any vessel, utensil, or bin capable of holding three gallons, or shall have the same in any unentered place, he shall forfeit for every such bin, vessel, or utensil so altered, 50*l.*

Places for keeping wine to be shown to officer, and the casks to be marked by him.

Every wholesale dealer in and seller of foreign wine shall, before he shall put off or bottle any foreign wine, give six hours' notice in writing, if within the limits of the chief office in London, twelve hours' notice in other places in Great Britain, to the officer of excise, of his intention to draw off or bottle any foreign wine, the time when, and the particular warehouse or place in which such foreign wine is to be drawn off, and the quantity, and into how many casks or bottles, the same is intended to be drawn, and what sort of wine, and from what particular cask or vessel; and such officer may attend, if he think fit; and the same shall be packed or piled in the presence of such officer, if he attend, or an account thereof given to him upon his next survey; and no foreign wine shall be removed from the bin or place in which it shall have been so deposited without giving like notice, on the penalty of 50*l.*; but not to extend to a small number of bottles drawn off, or more or less than is contained in such notice.

Notice to be given when wine is put off or bottled.

Sect. 22. Provided, that if the dealer or seller of foreign wine by wholesale shall not begin and proceed to draw off or bottle such wine at the time mentioned in such notice, or within one hour after such time, then such notice shall be void, and he shall give a fresh notice to such officer.

Exception.

Sect. 22. But nothing herein contained shall extend to make it unlawful for any wholesale dealer to draw off or bottle any wine at his will and pleasure, for the purpose of immediately sending out the same, without giving such notice to the officer of excise under whose survey such dealer or seller shall then be.

Wine of different sorts to be kept separate.

Sect. 23. Every dealer in and seller of foreign wine shall keep all French red wine in their possession apart, in separate bins, casks, bottles, jars, vessels, utensils, piles, parcels, and divisions, from other wine; and shall also, in like manner, keep separate all other wine in his possession, upon pain of forfeiting 50*l.*

Red and white Cape wine to be kept separate.

By the 54 Geo. III. c. 77, s. 4, every dealer in or seller of foreign wine shall keep all red wine in his possession, the produce of the Cape of Good Hope, its territories, or dependencies, separate and apart, and in separate bins, casks, bottles, and divisions; and in like manner keep all white wine of the said settlement and its dependencies, separate, and in separate bins, casks, bottles, and divisions; on pain of forfeiting 50*l.*

Cape wine not to
other wine.

Sect. 8. If any dealer in or seller of foreign wine shall mix red wine or white wine in his possession, of the produce of the said settlements, territories, or dependencies, with or among any other wine, or shall give notice to any officer of excise to have packed, or shall enter for exportation any red or white wine, the produce of the said settlement, &c., mixed with any other wine, such dealer or seller shall forfeit 300*l.*, and all the wine so mixed.

Cider and spirits to be kept separate from wine.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 24, all retail dealers, who shall have in their custody any cider, spirituous or other liquors, shall keep the same separate and apart from foreign wine; on pain of forfeiting 10*s.* for every gallon of cider or spirits which shall not be so kept separate, together with such wine, cider, and spirits, and the cask, bottles, and packages containing the same: which may be seized by any officer of excise.

Cider, &c. found

Sect. 29. All cider, sweets, British-made wine, mead, spirits, and other liquors whatsoever, found in any entered place for the keeping or selling of foreign wine by any wholesale dealer, shall be deemed and taken to be foreign wine within the meaning of this act, of the same sort as the wine with which it shall be kept; or, if kept separate from any wine, then the same shall be deemed and taken as French red wine.

Sect. 25. But no dealer in or seller of foreign wine shall have in his possession any British-made wine, or sweets; on pain of forfeiting the same, and also 10*s.* a gallon.

No dealer in foreign wine to have sweets in his possession.
No dealer in foreign wine, not being an entered dealer in spirits, shall have more than two gallons of spirits of wine at a time, or any other British spirits of greater strength than 20 per cent. under hydrometer proof.

By the 57 Geo. III. c. 128, s. 14, no dealer in foreign wine, not being an entered dealer in or retailer of spirits in England, shall have, receive, or take into his custody any spirits of wine, exceeding two gallons at one time, or any British spirits, except spirits of wine, of a greater strength than twenty per centum under hydrometer proof at least; on pain of forfeiting such spirits, which may be seized by any officer of excise; (a) and the person offending shall, for each and every offence, forfeit 100*l.*

(a) The words, "officer or officers of excise," in the 57 Geo. III. c. 128, s. 13, are general, and apply to any officer of excise whose accounts may be scrutinized.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 26, for the better ascertaining the quantity of wine sold by dealers, every person who shall sell any foreign wine shall keep an account of the quantity sold, sent out, or consumed in each day under three gallons, expressing the number of gallons or bottles; and shall, every day, enter into a book to be kept for that purpose an account of the gross quantities sold, sent out, &c. the preceding day; and also in another book shall enter each parcel of three gallons or more which shall be sold or sent out in each day, expressing the number of gallons or bottles; which books are to be prepared by the commissioners, and delivered unto the dealer upon demand; but no dealer shall have above one book of each sort in his custody one time; and when filled up, it shall be returned to the officer from whom it was received, and the truth of the entries shall be verified on oath by such dealer, or his servant, who kept the same and made the entries therein, to the best of his knowledge and belief, to be administered by the officer; and a new book shall be thereupon delivered to the dealer, and so toties quoties as often each book shall be filled up; and such book shall lie open to be perused by the officer; and the dealer shall, at the request of the officer, fill up such books, respectively, with the quantity by him sold in each day. And every dealer or seller offending in any of the matters aforesaid, or making any false entry in any such books, shall forfeit 20*l*.

36. Wine.

An account to be kept of wine daily sold.

ss. 27 and 28. If any officer shall find that the quantity of foreign wine in stock of any wholesale dealer, added to the quantity for which permits have been granted, and also to the quantity sold, sent out, or consumed in quantities, under three gallons, since the last account was taken, exceeds the stock left in hand, on taking the account, after adding the quantity since last by permit (if any), such quantity so found in excess shall be deemed to be made up by foreign wine for which no duty has been paid and privately sold in without permit, and shall be forfeited, and may be seized by the officer, and the person in whose stock the same is found, shall also forfeit the value thereof; but not to extend to an excess of stock occasioned by lawfully receiving wine from any lawful quay, and in the original casks in which the same was imported, and no part drawn thereout.

Excess in stock to be forfeited.

29. No foreign wine exceeding three gallons shall be removed from the kingdom to another, by land or by water, without a permit, granted by this act, on pain of forfeiture thereof, together with the casks and packages containing the same.

Not to be removed without permit. (a)

30. No permit for the removal of foreign wine shall be granted or made by the dealer or seller requiring the same send or deliver to the officer, or excise granting the same a note in writing, specifying the name of the person to whom such wine is to be sent, the quantity of each sort, whether French red or French white wine, or any other description of wine, and the mode of conveyance by which it is intended to remove the same, on pain of forfeiting the same, together with the bottles, packages, and the horses, carriages, &c., used in the removal of the same, which may be seized by any officer of excise.

36. If any wine shall not be delivered within the time limited in the act (except in case of some unavoidable accident), the same shall be deemed and taken as wine removed without permit: provided always, that the same shall be restored without delay, if the person who hath the charge thereof at the time of the seizure enter into recognizance with one surety before a neighbouring justice, in double the value of such seizure (which recognizance such justice is hereby required to take), to prove, within one month next ensuing, to the satisfaction of the commissioners of excise, that such wine, through unavoidable accident, could not be so delivered and received; and the justice shall certify upon the back of the permit that such recognizance hath been entered into, and also allow such further time for the wine to be delivered as to him shall seem meet; which indorsement shall have the same force as a permit granted according to this act; and the justice shall forthwith transmit every such recognizance to the king's remembrancer in the Court of Exchequer.

By the 54 Geo. III. c. 77, s. 6, every permit granted for the removal of wine, the produce of the Cape of Good Hope, its territories, or dependencies, shall distinguish such wine from all other wine according to the denomination thereof specified in the request-note, according to the directions of the 26 Geo. III. c. 59.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 32, no wine shall be brought into any place made use of by any dealer in foreign wine without an authentic permit granted and given according to the directions of this act, which shall be produced to and left with the officer under whose survey such dealer shall then be, on pain of forfeiture thereof, together with the casks, bottles, and packages containing the same; and the said wine, &c., may be seized by any officer of excise.

Sect. 33. Every private person (not being a dealer either by wholesale or retail), who shall have occasion to remove any foreign wine from one place to another, shall have a permit from the officers of excise, on proof of payment of duties, and on a request-note, specifying the quantity and kind and number and contents of the vessels, and whether by land or water, and by what mode of conveyance, on pain of forfeiture thereof, with the casks, bottles, and package containing the same, and also the horses, cattle, carriages, or boats used in the removal thereof; and the same may be seized.

Sects. 37, 38. Where any permit shall have been granted to any dealer in wine, or private person, as aforesaid, and he shall not actually and really send away the wine by such permit authorized, nor return the permit to the officer who granted the same, before the expiration of the time limited therein, he shall for every gallon of wine mentioned in such permit forfeit treble the value thereof, to be estimated according to the highest price of such sort of wine of the best quality in London.

Sect. 37. Where such permit shall not be by the dealer returned as aforesaid, and upon taking an account of the stock remaining in his hands there shall not appear a decrease to answer the wine mentioned in the permit, then and in such case such dealer shall forfeit the like quantity of wine so permitted and not removed, to be seized by the officer, out of any wine in his custody of the denomination given in the permit; but if he shall not then have such quantity of the same denomination in his custody, he shall forfeit 100*l*.

Sect. 39, 40. If any person shall counterfeit or forge, or cause to be counterfeited or forged, any such permit, or any certificate of such recognizance as is hereinbefore required to be taken, or any such indorsement as is hereinbefore sold, under the 26 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 33, although he might have obtained a permit for so doing. Sect. 42. In case any foreign wine shall be fraudulently deposited, hid, or concealed with intent to defraud his majesty of the duties, the same shall be forfeited, together with the casks, bottles, and packages containing the same. And the better to enable the officers to make discovery thereof, if any officer shall have cause to suspect that any wine is so fraudulently deposited, hid, or concealed, if within London or Westminster, or the limits of the chief office of excise, upon oath made by such officer before two commissioners of excise, or elsewhere before a justice, setting forth the grounds of his suspicion, such commissioners or justice respectively, before whom such oath shall be made, may by warrant empower such officer, by day or night (but if in the night in presence of a constable or other peace-officer), to enter such suspected place, to seize and carry away such wine which shall be found so concealed, as aforesaid, together with the casks and packages.

Hiding or concealing foreign wine.

Sect. 44, 45. If any person shall assault, resist, oppose, molest, obstruct, or hinder any officer in the due execution of this act; or shall rescue any foreign wine after seizure; or stove, break, destroy, or damage any cask, vessel, bottle, or package, whilst any officer is attempting to seize the same; or shall give or bribe or corrupt any officer to do contrary to his duty, whether such bribe be accepted or not; he shall forfeit 100*l*. for every offence.

Sect. 48. Provided, that if any wine so shipped for exportation shall be unloaded or laid on land (shipwreck, &c. excepted), the same, or the value thereof shall be forfeited, over and above the penalty in any bond which may be given.

Landing wine which has been shipped.

Sect. 50. But no officer of the customs shall be entitled to any reward for seizure, unless he give notice thereof within twelve hours at the next excise-office to the supervisor of excise.

Officers not entitled to rewards unless notice of seizure be given in 12 hours.

Sect. 51. No person, being a dealer in or seller of foreign wine, or in any way interested or concerned therein, shall during such time act as a justice in relation to this act; and all acts done by any such person shall be utterly void.

No dealer in wine to act as a justice.

Information must be exhibited within four calendar months next after the offence committed, or the goods seized (b); but the conviction need not be within that time (c). Under the enactments antecedent to the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, in most cases, the prosecution must have been within three months; but may, under recent regulations in particular cases, be a less time than is now allowed. If goods are found subjecting the party having possession to a forfeiture, the day on which they are found will be the day whereon such forfeiture was incurred. (e)

III. Proceedings, &c., before justices, &c.

(2) By whom information, &c., to be instituted, and conduct to be pursued by officer.

(2.) By whom Information, &c., to be instituted.

The information must be commenced and prosecuted by order of the commissioners of excise, in the name of an officer of excise; and, in Ireland or Scotland, by order of the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of excise in Ireland or Scotland respectively, and in the name of an officer of excise; except in cases where summary proceedings are instituted by or at the instance of any officer of excise for the conviction, upon immediate arrest of any person under or by virtue of any act relating to the revenue of excise. (a) The averment in the information that it was duly authorized, need not be proved (b); and proof of acting as an officer of excise is to be admitted sufficient proof of being such officer, without producing or proving his commission. (c)

Clear instructions for officers of excise, and for the assistance of justices of the peace, have been given by a gentleman of great intelligence and experience in the department of the excise, and by the authority of the chief office; and which, in the liberal conduct directed to be pursued by the officers against the party accused, do the highest credit to those gentlemen who now regulate this branch of revenue.

When any detection or seizure is made, it must, as soon as the facts can be carefully collected, be reported to the commissioners; and the officer by whom any detection or seizure is reported, is to state the facts perspicuously and candidly, not omitting the account given by the offender at the time of the detection or seizure, or at any other time, or the excuse or defence he actually does or is likely to set up to justify or palliate his conduct, in order that the commissioners may be the better able to judge of the course that it is expedient to adopt in every case.

To accomplish this object, the officer who reports is not merely to commence his report (except in common cases) with an account of the detection or seizure, but is to introduce the account of the detection or seizure, by stating such preliminary matter (particularly any fact or circumstance that will in the subsequent part of the report be referred to) as will make the case plain and easy to be understood.

These preliminaries having been complied with, the next (and a main object it is), in drawing up such a report, is to state every fact of the transaction which is the subject of the report, in succession, as it arose.

Particular care, in every report of this kind, must be taken to state accurately the time and place, and (besides the place) the full and proper name of the parish and county, shire, division, city, or town, when, where, and within which the transaction occurred.

These instructions, however, are not to supersede any directions as to any particulars required to be reported in any cases by former general letters or orders; but such letters and orders must be complied with, the same as if these instructions had not been issued.

In selecting the officer whose name is used as the informer in the information, formerly, care must have been taken not to use the name of an officer who might be wanted as a witness at the hearing of an information; and it was a general rule, that neither the name of a supervisor or officer in whose division or ride the offence had been committed, or the seizure made, should be used. But it was provided by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 75, that, upon the trial or hearing of any information, or other legal proceeding, for the recovery of any penalty incurred, or for the condemnation of any goods seized or forfeited under any excise law, any officer of the excise, or other person entitled to any share of the penalty or seizure, shall be a competent witness. Therefore, an officer may be an informer, and also a witness.

(a) 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 61, ante, 285; s. 65, ante, 288; and see ante, 289. (b) 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 71, ante, 282. As to customs, see ante, 211. (c) Id. s. 17, ante, 236.

(3.) Against whom an Information may be laid.

The same law as prevails in case of offences against the laws of customs, would prevail against offenders under the excise laws. Therefore, infants (a) and married women (b) are liable; a master is liable for his servant's crimes committed in the course of his employ; (c) and partners are liable for the acts of each other; (d) and several persons may be proceeded against jointly or severally (e).

III. Proceedings, &c., before justices, &c.

(4.) Before whom it is to be laid. (f)

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 128, directs that all penalties, incurred under any act relating to the revenue of excise, shall be recovered as described by section 65: viz. when the offence is committed, or the person committing the same found, or the goods are seized, in any part of the United Kingdom, out of the limits of the chief office of excise in London (comprising only London and Westminster, Southwark, and the suburbs thereof, and parishes within the weekly bills of mortality, with the parishes of St. Mary-le-Bone and St. Pancras, (g) in Middlesex), by information before a justice of the peace for the place where the offence was committed, or the offender found, or goods seized. (h)

but the information must not be laid before a justice of the peace who is a clerk, or subject to the excise laws, in any case which relates to the particular trade or business of such justice, or in any case in which he is in anywise as concerned or interested; for otherwise the proceedings are declared to be void. (i)

The information may be exhibited to, and the summonses and subpoenas issued by, one or more of his majesty's justices of the peace; but it is generally found convenient to prepare the information, summonses, and subpoenas, in the singular number, and present them to one justice, if one can conveniently found; but if at any time that should not be the case, the justice of the peace, or any two or more of them, in the several counties, shires, cities, towns, and places, throughout the United Kingdom, are, by 3 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 67, (k) required to meet once in every three calendar months in their respective jurisdictions, or oftener, if there shall be occasion, to hear, adjudge, and determine all matters and things brought before them relating to the revenue of excise, and all informations exhibited in respect of any penalty incurred, or the condemnation of any goods seized, as for any act relating to the revenue of excise. (l)

It is particularly provided; that if it shall happen that any justice of the peace, before whom any such information shall have been exhibited, shall die, or be absent at any time after the exhibiting of the information, and before the defendant shall appear or plead to such information, no judgment shall be thereupon given, or before any judgment given shall be duly executed, so that the further attendance of any justice or justices thereupon cannot be procured, any other justice or justices of the peace, within the same jurisdiction, may act therein, for and in the stead of the justice or justices so dying or absent, in all respects touching such information, and the due completion of the proceedings thereon, in the same manner as if the information had been at first exhibited before the justice or justices, respectively. III. Proceedings, &c., before justices, &c.

Reference to former general powers of justices. (a)

The act (sect. 67) further provides, that all powers and authorities, rules and regulations, given and granted by any act of Parliament, relating to justices of the peace, or to constables or other officers, acting under their authority, respecting summary proceedings (except altered by or repugnant to it, which are by section 127 repealed), shall be enforced, and shall be applied and executed for the conviction of any person prosecuted by order of the commissioners of excise, or the commissioner or commissioners and assistant commissioners of excise in Scotland or Ireland respectively, for any penalty incurred by such person, under any act relating to the revenue of excise, and for the levying of any such penalty, or for the imprisonment of any such offender, in the same manner as if such powers and authorities, rules and regulations, were repeated and contained in that act. (a)

The 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2, enacts, that in all cases, where two or more justices of the peace are authorized to hear any complaint, one justice shall be competent to receive the original information or complaint, and to issue the summonses, requiring the parties to appear before two or more justices of the peace, and that (after examination upon oath into the merits of the complaint, and the adjudication thereupon by any such two justices being made) all the subsequent proceedings, to enforce obedience thereto, or otherwise, whether respecting the penalty, fine, imprisonment, costs, or other matter or thing, may be enforced by either of the said justices, or any other justice of the peace for the same county, riding, or place, in such and the like manner as if done by the same two justices who heard and adjudged the complaint.

If, upon consideration of the report, the board order proceedings, either for the recovering of a penalty or the condemnation of a seizure, or both, before justices of the peace, and an order is received for that purpose, an information must be carefully prepared, in the name of an officer of excise, from the act of Parliament referred to in the order of the commissioners, and the instructions contained in such order.

We have before observed upon some of the requisites of the information, and have seen that it should be in the name of an officer of excise, and show that it has been instituted by order of the commissioners of excise or customs. (c) It may now be in the name of an officer who is to give evidence in support of the information. (d) It has been said that it need not be in writing, (e) but, from the language of the act, it should seem that it must be in writing. (f)

It should state the day on which it is exhibited, in order that it may appear to have been within the limited time.

It should allege that the offence complained of was committed within four calendar months last past, to wit, on, &c.; but, to support such statement or allegation, it is not necessary to prove that the offence was committed on the very day stated in the information; and proof that it was committed at any time within the four months will suffice.

So, with respect to quantities and numbers, certain quantities and numbers must be stated in the information; but proof of more or less will suffice: though, if the quantity and number proved should be more and greater than stated in the information, the latter can only, on the hearing, be condemned.

The information must not state the offence in the alternative; and, if a conviction be in the alternative, viz. that the defendant did sell beer or ale,

(a) 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 67, ante, 288; the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, gives a general form of conviction; and see 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 127, ante, 227.

(b) See the requisites of information under the customs' laws, ante, 212; and, in general, under the excise laws, prior to the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 73, see Paley it will be quashed, and will not be helped by the evidence applying to the sale of beer only. (a)

One information may contain several counts, or different ways of stating the same offence, or different offences arising out of one and the same transaction; but the object of such counts, in general, is not to inflict a number of penalties on the defendant, but to prevent the ends of justice from being defeated, which, if only one count was inserted, might sometimes be the case; and, in general, the crown will be satisfied with a judgment on the count which, after hearing the evidence, appears most satisfactorily proved, or the ends of justice require, though it may sometimes happen that the crown may think it necessary to press for two or more penalties.

One information may also contain counts for separate offences, committed on different days by the same person or persons.

And, if two or more persons are jointly engaged in any illicit transaction against the excise laws, and a penalty is imposed upon every person committing the offence by which such penalty is incurred, such several persons jointly and severally incur every such penalty, and may be proceeded against jointly or severally for the recovery thereof, as may be deemed expedient. (b) The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, ss. 53, 83 (ante, 290—293), avoids the effect of objection to any defect or defects of form which may appear on the information, or in any proceedings thereupon, or relating thereto.

Some forms of informations in different cases will be found in the collection of forms under the last division of this subject.

III. Proceedings, &c., before justices, &c.

3.) Of the Proceedings upon the Information: viz. Notice, Summons, &c. (c)

7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, ss. 65 and 66, (d) we may remember, enacts, that notice in writing, of the information having been exhibited, shall be given to the person or persons against whom the same shall have been exhibited for the penalties incurred for such offence, or to the claimant of the duty alleged to have been forfeited, within one week after such information has been exhibited; and the commissioners of excise or justices are to require the defendant or claimant to appear and plead to, and attend the trial of, such information, at a stated time and place, and which summons shall be served or left fourteen days before the specified time. (e)

Where the information is exhibited for the recovery of double duty, or condemnation of seizures from persons unknown, and no one appears to claim the same; in which cases, other provisions are made. (f)

Forms of summonses will be found under the sixth head, post.

When the information being exhibited to, and the summons issued by, the justice, the summons must be served within one week after the information is exhibited, fourteen days at the least before the time appointed in such summons for the hearing; except in cases of double duty and seizures from persons not claimed.

When the information is exhibited for the recovery of double duty, service of the summons must be made not less than twenty-four hours before the time appointed in such summons for the hearing of the information is sufficient; and if for the condemnation of seizures not claimed, eight days' notice given in the manner hereinafter declared to be sufficient. (g)

As to the mode of the service of the summons, it is good and valid in spite of any such notice or summons (whether the information is exhibited for the recovery of double duty or any other penalty, or the condemnation of any seizure), if the same be left at or upon the place used or occupied by the defendant for carrying on trade or business, or at the building or place where the offence shall have been committed or the seizure made, or at the place of residence, or with the wife, or child, or menial servant of the defendant, such notice or summons being directed to him by his right or assumed name; except in cases of seizures not claimed, in which other provision is made. (a)

In all cases where any seizure is made of any goods by virtue of any act relating to the revenue of excise, in any part of the United Kingdom out of the limits of the chief office of excise, and no person appears to claim them, any one of the seizing officers may cause a notice, issued by any justice of the peace within whose jurisdiction such seizure shall have been made, and before whom any information shall have been exhibited for the condemnation thereof, to be affixed to some conspicuous part of the outside of the office of excise, next to the place where such seizure shall have been made, during the market-day next after the expiration of six days from the day on which such seizure was made, or during any other subsequent market-day; in which notice shall be specified the day (the same being any day after the termination of eight days from the date of such notice), and the place when and where the justices of the peace will proceed to the hearing and adjudicating of the matter (b) of any such seizures, to whom, within their respective jurisdictions, authority is given to proceed at the time and place mentioned in such notice, to examine into the cause of any such seizure, and to give judgment accordingly; and such judgment will be as good, valid, and effectual in law, as if the proprietor of the goods had been summoned in the manner directed by sect. 66. (c)

Cattle and perishable goods.

Where any horses or other cattle, or any goods of a perishable nature, are seized by any officer of excise, as forfeited by any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise or customs, the commissioners of excise, or the commissioners and assistant commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, are authorized to order any such seizure to be delivered up to the claimant thereof, upon his entering into a bond to his majesty in the penalty of double the value of the horses or other cattle or goods delivered up, with a condition thereunder written, that such bond shall be void upon payment of the appraised value of such horses or other cattle or goods, on the condemnation thereof. (d)

If no claimant of any such horses or other cattle, or goods of a perishable nature, appears, or if appearing, he refuse or neglect to enter into such bond, the commissioners of excise, and commissioner and assistant commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, are authorized, at any time after the expiration of fourteen days from the making of any such seizure, to order and direct the sale of all such horses or other cattle, or goods, at public auction, notwithstanding the condemnation thereof has not at the time taken place. (e)

If any such horses or other cattle, or goods, shall afterwards be ordered to be restored without any proceeding being instituted for the condemnation thereof, or if instituted before the same are condemned, or if, upon the hearing for the condemnation thereof, the decision thereupon is in favour of the claimant, the appraised value of such horses or other cattle, or of such goods, or the proceeds of the sale thereof, at the election of the claimant, shall on demand thereof be paid to him, together with such further reasonable sum by way of compensation for the loss sustained by reason of the seizure, detention, and sale of such horses or other cattle, or goods, as the commissioners of excise, or commissioner and assistant commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, shall think fit. (e)

If the proprietor or claimant of any such horses or other cattle, or goods, accepts such appraised value or proceeds of sale, together with such further sum as may be offered by the directions of the commissioners, or commissioner and

(7) Of the apprehension, appearance, or default.

Under the customs' laws, an arrest in the first instance is given by express enactment. (b) And though, in general, under the excise laws, the proceedings before commissioners and magistrates should be by summons, (c) yet, in some cases, an immediate apprehension is allowed,—as, where persons are found employed in unentered excise manufactories, when any excise officer may arrest him and convey him before a magistrate, who may convict him; (d) and sheriffs are to grant warrants or writs of capias out of the Court of Exchequer; (e) and where no sufficient distress can be found to pay the penalty, a warrant against the person may be issued. (f) Under the former excise laws, there were many cases in which the offender might be arrested in the first instance, upon oath of offence having been committed. (g) summons or affixed the notice, should be sworn, and prove the time, place, and mode of serving (a) or affixing it, and then the other witnesses for the crown, after being duly sworn (or in case of a Quaker having taken his affirmation) are examined in order to prove the charge contained in the information, and the justices are then to call on the defendant for his defence, and swear and examine his witnesses, and give judgment, without regarding any defects of form in the information, or in any proceedings thereon (b); and, in all trials of seizures, the seizure, and form and manner of making it, are to be taken to have been as alleged in the information, without requiring any evidence thereof; and all judicial persons before whom any such seizure shall be brought to hearing, shall proceed to a determination on the merits without inquiring into the fact, form, or manner of making the seizure. (c.)

If the defendant be in prison, a copy of the information (besides his being summoned) must be delivered for him to the gaoler, and such service proved at the hearing. (d)

If defendant appears, how to proceed.

If the defendant appear, the information is to be read to him; and if he plead guilty, the justices will, of course, give judgment for the crown. If not guilty, the several witnesses for the crown should be called, sworn, and examined, the defendant being present and being informed, at the end of the examination of each witness for the crown, that he is at liberty to cross-examine him.

When the case on the part of the crown is closed, the defendant should be called upon for his defence; and after stating, if he pleases, the nature of his defence to the justices, his witnesses should be examined in the same manner as the witnesses have been for the prosecution; and then the justices, after hearing any observations that the prosecutor has to make on the case by way of reply, are to give judgment.

The collector or supervisor, as well as the defendant, should also call, in every case, all the witnesses that he has present, though at the time it may appear unnecessary, because, in case of appeal, it is enacted that no witnesses but those who have been sworn and examined on the hearing of the information, shall be examined on the appeal; (e) it will not, however, be necessary to examine every witness at length, when several speak to the same facts, but merely to have them sworn and examined shortly in confirmation of the other witnesses.

Who are witnesses, and what evidence to be adduced by prosecutor, and what by defendant.

The informer, officers, and any other persons who may be entitled to the whole or any share of the penalties sought to be recovered, or of the goods to be condemned, are now authorized and required, notwithstanding their interest, to be admitted to give evidence, and to be deemed and taken to be competent witnesses; (f) though it was formerly otherwise.

Quakers are competent witnesses for and against the prosecution, and are to be affirmed. (g)

As a general rule, the prosecutor should be prepared to prove every material allegation in the information. But, under several provisions in the excise laws, there are many formal and indeed substantial proofs dispensed with, and in other cases the onus probandi of the converse of the averments is thrown on the defendant.

Thus, it is provided, that if, upon the trial of any information, or in any other legal or judicial proceeding, any question arises touching or concerning the keeping of any office of excise, or whether any person is a commissioner or assistant-commissioner of excise, or a collector, or other officer of excise, or commissioned or appointed to act as such, evidence of the actual keeping of such office of excise, or that such person is, or at the time in question was reputed to be, such commissioner or assistant-commissioner, or such collector or other officer, or does or did then act as such commissioner or assistant-commissioner, or as such collector or other officer, so commissioned and appointed, shall in every such case be admitted, and be deemed and taken to be sufficient and legal proof of such facts respectively, without producing or proving the particular commission, appointment, or other authority, whereby such person is or was commissioned or appointed to be such commissioner or assistant-commissioner, or such collector or other officer, unless by other evidence the contrary be made to appear. (a)

So, there is an enactment as to what shall be deemed sufficient proof of entry of premises, when that shall come in question; (b) so, on all trials of seizures, the seizure shall be taken to have been as alleged in the information. (c)

So, the allegation that the commissioners ordered the prosecution need not be proved. (d)

So if, upon any information for the recovery of any penalty, or for condemnation of chattels seized as forfeited by any act relating to the excise or customs, any question is made or arises whether any duty of excise or customs has been paid upon or in respect of the goods or commodities in such information mentioned, or whether such goods, commodities, or chattels, are of such sort and as in such information alleged, the proof of the payment of such duty, at such goods, commodities, and chattels respectively, are not of such a sort or kind as stated in the information, lies upon the proprietor or claimer of. (e)

When the justices give judgment for the crown, and the defendant prays a mitigation of the penalty awarded against him, the justices may, if they think fit in cases where there is or shall be any provision that no mitigation shall be made by them, reduce it to not less than one-fourth part thereof; and payment of such mitigated sum is a discharge of the penalty for the offence of which the defendant has been convicted. (f)

It is not necessary that the justices should be attended by a clerk; but it is very necessary that they, or some person on their behalf, should care-fully take down in writing, at the time each witness gives his evidence, if not in words, the substance, as well as the substance of the defence advanced by the defendant; and that such minutes be carefully preserved, as they are useful for the satisfaction and justification of the justices, and may, in some cases, be subsequently required, in order to draw up the conviction as required by the statute. (g)

When there are defects in form in convictions are aided and may be amended by the court or commissioners of appeal, (i) still, however, the conviction must be correct in matters of substance. (k) It may be framed as directed by Geo. IV. c. 23. (l) Mere minutes will in the first instance suffice, but they may be drawn up in full form afterwards. (m) It must not be in the form of a plea. cution for penalties, or condemnation of any seizure, if he be satisfied that the penalty or forfeiture was incurred without any intention of fraud, or of offending against any law of excise. (a) The application to the attorney-general should be supported by petition and affidavit. (b)

So, a party threatened with a prosecution, or already proceeded against, may apply to the commissioners of excise, under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, (c) by petition, supported by affidavit, and pray that they will be pleased to order that no prosecution be instituted, or that the prosecution be stayed, either altogether or upon terms; and the commissioners may order such stay of proceedings, or restoration of the goods absolutely or conditionally, on such terms as they may think just. (d)

Appeal.

If either party be dissatisfied with the decision of the justices, he may appeal to the next general quarter sessions of the peace; but this is not allowed unless the appellant, immediately upon the giving judgment, give notice in writing of such appeal to the convicting justices, and also to the adverse party, and lodge such notice with the clerk of the peace for the justices at the general quarter sessions, by whom the appeal is to be finally determined; and also give the adverse party at least one week's notice in writing, of the time and place where the appeal is to be heard. (g)

If the judgment appealed against is a conviction of the appellant in any penalty, he is required also, within three days after conviction, to deposit in the hands of the proper collector or supervisor the amount of the penalty, or the sum to which it is mitigated; and, in case of appeal for or against a condemnation, the seizure is to remain in the hands of the excise (whichever party appeals) until the final adjudication and determination of the appeal. (h)

These conditions having been complied with, if there be above a week between the time of giving notice of appeal and the next general quarter sessions, the justices at such quarter sessions are required to hear, adjudge, and finally determine such appeal. And if, upon any such appeal, any defect in form shall be found in the information, or in any part of the proceedings thereon, or relating thereto, or in the record thereof, every such defect of form shall be rectified and amended by order of such justices, or the major part of them, assembled at such quarter sessions. (i)

If there be not one week between the time of giving such notice and the next general quarter sessions, then the appeal is given to the general quarter sessions next after the expiration of one week after the giving of such notice. (k)

On the hearing of such appeal, the justices at the quarter sessions are required to proceed to re-hear upon oath, and to re-examine the same witnesses as to evidence, and the merits of the case, whereon the original judgment appealed against has been given; and they are not to examine any fresh evidence; and the court of quarter sessions may reverse or confirm, in whole or in part, the judgment appealed against, or give such new or different judgment as in its discretion it shall think fit; and the same power of mitigation is given to the quarter sessions as is given to the justices who heard the information. (l)

Where the original judgment is affirmed, the same is to be enforced by the justices of the peace as if there had been no such appeal. But where the

No certiorari or other process lies at the suit of any defendant to supersede or affect any proceeding by commissioners of excise or justices of the peace. (c) It was held, on the prior acts, that no certiorari to remove a conviction under the excise laws, can be sustained. (d) But some of the acts before the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 55, s. 79, did not take the certiorari away. (e)

A habeas corpus lies whenever a defendant is illegally imprisoned; and therefore, if he be confined under a conviction totally defective, he may by habeas corpus be discharged. (f)

(14.) Of the Proceedings in Execution. (g)

In no case in which a penalty is awarded, and such penalty is not immediately paid, should the collector, supervisor, or any other officer, take security for the payment of such penalty without the express orders of the commissioners.

(14.) Of the proceedings in execution. (g)

Officer ought not to take security for penalty.

On the hearing of an information, the justices give judgment for the crown (such judgment is not appealed against, or if appealed against is affirmed by the court of appeal), the next step is to enforce it.

If the judgment is for condemnation of goods seized as forfeited, the justices of the peace are required to grant a warrant under their hands, to any officer of excise, for the sale of the goods condemned. (h)

If the judgment to be enforced is for a full or mitigated penalty, the justices are authorized and required to grant a warrant to an officer of excise, authorizing him to levy the penalty, or so much thereof as shall not have been satisfied, upon the goods of the defendant, and either to detain and keep them where found, or remove them to the next office of excise.

Such judgments are to be enforced by the justices of the peace at the general quarter sessions.

If it was for condemnation of goods, at the general quarter sessions, and they are required to grant a warrant under their hands, or under the hands of any two of them, to any officer of excise, for the sale of the goods condemned. (i)

If the judgment is for any penalty, they are required to apply the money which shall have been deposited, as before stated; (k) in satisfaction of such penalty, and, if not sufficient, they are to grant a warrant under their hands, or the hands of any two of them, to any officer of excise, requiring him to levy the penalty or balance upon the goods of the offender, and either to keep the goods where found, or remove them to the next office of excise.

In these cases, it will be observed, the statute directs the warrant to be under the hands of the justices, &c.: it need not, therefore, be under seal. (m) And for several penalties imposed by different acts suffices. (n)

The goods upon which such levy is made are to be sold, as soon as conveniently may be, after a certain time to be limited in the warrant (not less than four days, nor more than eight days), unless the penalty for which the levy is made be previously paid. (a)

The officer making the levy is empowered to deduct out of the money arising by the sale—

1st. The penalty.—And, 2ndly, All reasonable charges and expenses attending the levy.

The overplus is to be returned to the proprietor of the goods, or the person legally entitled thereto. (b)

The officer, if required, must show the warrant to the person upon whose goods the levy is made, and suffer him to take a copy of it, and the warrant itself is of the same force and effect, in all respects, as a writ of fiery facias issued out of the Court of Exchequer in England, for the recovery of any debt due to his majesty. (c)

Goods liable to an excise duty, and the materials, vessels, &c., subject to arrears of duty and penalties.

When the offender is a person in any trade or business subject to the excise laws, the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 28, in order to secure the duties of excise due from any such person, and for the enforcement of penalties, enacts, that all goods and commodities, for or in respect whereof any duties of excise is or shall be by law imposed, and all materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for the making thereof, or by which any such trade or business has been carried on, in the custody or possession of the person carrying on such trade or business, or of any other person, to the use of or in trust for him, shall be subject and liable to, and chargeable with, all the duties of excise, which, during the time of any such custody or possession, shall be charged, or become chargeable, or be in arrear, or owing, from or by the person carrying on such trade or business, for or in respect of the same, or of any such or the like goods and commodities, respectively; and also subject and liable to all penalties and forfeitures, which, during any such custody or possession, shall be incurred by the person carrying on such trade or business, for any offences by such person committed, against any act relating to the revenue of excise. (d) And all such goods, commodities, materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels, shall be and remain subject and liable to all such duties, penalties, and forfeitures, into whose hands soever the same shall afterwards come, or by what conveyance or title soever the same shall be claimed; and it shall be lawful, in all such cases, to levy thereupon such duties, penalties, and forfeitures, and to use such proceedings for the recovery or enforcement of such duties, penalties, and forfeitures, respectively, as may lawfully be done, where the debtors or offenders are true and lawful owners of such goods, commodities, materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels.

Body-warrant.

For want of sufficient goods to satisfy the penalty, with the charges and expenses, and on a return in writing made upon the levy-warrant by an officer to whom such warrant is directed, to the persons by whom such warrant has been granted, or any one or more of the justices of the peace within whose jurisdiction respectively any such warrant shall have been issued, that such officer cannot find within the jurisdiction in which such warrant shall have been issued any goods of the defendant whereon the same can be levied; (e) or on a return, that part of such penalty, charges, and expenses have been levied or paid, and that such officer cannot find any further goods of the person against whom such warrant has been granted (beyond the goods already seized and sold) within the jurisdiction in which such warrant has been issued whereupon the residue of such penalty, charges, and expenses can be levied, the persons by whom such warrant was granted, or any one or more of the justices of the peace to whom respectively such return shall have been made, are respectively authorized and required thereupon to grant a warrant to any officer of excise to arrest and convey the defendant to the common gaol or house of correction within his or their jurisdiction respectively, and then to deliver the defendant, with a duplicate of such warrant for arrest (or body-warrant), to the gaoler or keeper of such gaol or house of correction, there to remain and be kept until satisfaction be made of such judgment, or until he shall be ordered by the commissioners of excise or the commissioner and assistant commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, to be liberated. (a)

A body-warrant of this description must not be executed on a Sunday. (b) Where any goods of the defendant are discovered after the execution of the body-warrant, any one or more justices are required (notwithstanding the grant of such warrant of arrest or body-warrant) to grant a fresh warrant to any officer of excise to levy upon the goods so found any penalty, charges, or expenses which the former levy-warrant may have been granted, or to levy so much thereof as may not have been before paid; and, upon payment and satisfaction thereof, the warrant for arrest or body-warrant shall be discharged, and the defendant be forthwith liberated out of custody. (c)

Where any warrant (whether levy-warrant or body-warrant) has been granted, cannot be executed by reason that sufficient distress or that the defendant cannot be found within the limits of the jurisdiction of the commissioners or justices in which such warrant has been issued, one or more of the justices of peace for any other county or place within the United Kingdom, are authorized and required to indorse his or their name or names respectively upon the warrant; and such warrant and indorsement thereon is a sufficient authority to the officer of excise to whom such warrant is directed, or having the command thereof, to execute the same in such other county or place, and to levy the penalty for which the warrant shall have been so granted, or so much thereof as may not have been before paid, upon the goods of the defendant which shall be found within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices indorsing such warrant, and to arrest and convey the defendant to the common gaol or house of correction in such county or place where such warrant shall have been indorsed, there to remain until delivered as before directed. (d)

A justice indorsing any such warrant is by the act saved harmless and released from any consequences arising therefrom, and the original maker of the warrant remains responsible for its legality. (e)

Goods seized as forfeited by virtue of any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise, after condemnation (such cases only excepted for which other provisions by any act relating to the revenue of excise may be specially made) shall be publicly sold to the best bidder, at such time and place, and in such manner, as the commissioners of excise or the commissioner and assistant commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively order, under such provisions as are by any act of Parliament in that behalf made and contained.

Goods subject to any duty of excise or customs, and for which every penny has not been paid, which shall be ordered to be sold under any act of Parliament, shall be sold for home consumption at a less price than the amount of the duty which shall not have been paid. (g) For which, at any sale so ordered or directed, a price is not offered equal to the amount of the duty, and all condemned goods the importation of which is or shall be prohibited, shall be forthwith destroyed or sold for such public use as shall be ordered by the Treasury. Costs and expenses.

Distribution of penalties and forfeitures, half to the king, and the other half to the officer or informer.

All costs and expenses attending the seizure, detention, custody, removal, prosecution, condemnation, and sale of any goods whatsoever, forfeited by any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise are (such cases only excepted for which other directions are by any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise specially given) to be paid out of the gross proceeds arising from the sale thereof, whenever the same are sold; and, if not sold, but the same are destroyed or otherwise disposed of, such costs and expenses are to be paid out of the revenue of excise. (a)

All penalties and forfeitures incurred and recovered under any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise (such cases only excepted for which other directions are specially given), are, after deducting of all costs and expenses incurred relating thereto, to be distributed, one moiety to his majesty, and the other to the officer of excise, or the person who shall discover, inform, or sue for the same. But, on proof of any officer acting collusively, the commissioners may direct his share to be forfeited. (b)

We have seen, that the general enactments in the 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, ss. 114 to 119, enact, that no action shall be commenced against any officer of excise, or person employed in the revenue of excise, &c., without first giving an explicit notice, in a certain form, of the intended action. The action must be commenced within three months next after the cause of action occurred. The venue must be laid in the proper county. The defendant may plead the general issue; and, if the plaintiff fails, the defendant is entitled to treble costs. The act also authorizes a tender of amends to be pleaded, or money may be paid into court; and if, on trial for seizures, the judge shall certify there was probable cause of seizure, the officer is not liable to any action, &c. (d) The constructions on this and on similar acts will be found ante, 223, &c.

An action against an officer for acting under any excise warrant, or otherwise, in execution of his office, may be removed from the Court of Common Pleas, or any other court, into the Exchequer. (e) 2ndly. Recovery, before justices, of excise duties.

Secondly. Recovery before Justices of Excise Duties. (f)

It has been observed, that the prevention and punishment of frauds are material parts of the duty of an excise officer; but the securing and recovering of excise duties payable by persons subject to the excise laws, is of still higher importance.

The 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 25, (g) directs, that every person carrying on any trade or business subject to any law of excise, shall pay and clear off the duties imposed by any act of Parliament, and charged upon or incurred by such person, at such time and place, and to such person respectively, as shall for that purpose be specially directed by any act of Parliament, or as shall be from time to time directed by the commissioners of excise; and that, if any such person shall not pay and clear off such duties at such time and place, or upon demand thereof made (under order of the commissioners of excise, or of the commissioner and assistant-commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively) by the collector of excise in whose collection such trade or business shall be carried on, or by any officer authorized and directed by such collector under such order, to make such demand (whether such demand be made personally of the person who shall have incurred such duty or duties, or shall be left at the dwelling-house of any such person, or on the premises where such duties shall have been charged or incurred), every such person forfeits and loses double the value of the duty so neglected to be paid and cleared off. (a)

By the above provision, each collector in his own collection, under order of the commissioners of excise, or of the commissioner and assistant-commissioners of excise, may (when, upon due consideration, there are solid grounds for believing that duties charged on any trader are in danger of being lost, and the time for payment of such duties has not in the ordinary course arrived) accelerate the time of such duties becoming payable, by either demanding payment thereof himself, or by any officer (authorized and directed by him to make such demand) demanding the same; and if such duties are not forthwith paid on such demand, the trader incurs the penalty of double the value of the duties demanded. But, in all such cases, it is very desirable that the collector (if his other business will permit him, and the trader lives within any reasonable distance) should make the demand himself; and in no case (although the law allows him to authorize an officer to make the demand) should he intrust the performance of this duty to any one below the rank of a supervisor, unless extreme despatch is necessary, and no supervisor is at hand. (b)

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 72, (c) enacts, that the letter or instructions officially received by the collector, or other officer of excise, of the collection, district, or place in which the subject-matter of any such information, or other legal or judicial proceeding, may have arisen, for his direction and government, and in which such order is mentioned or referred to, and under which order such officer shall have acted, shall be admitted to be sufficient evidence and proof of such order.

Proof of order.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, ss. 15 and 26, (d) limits the distance that the trader may be required to go to pay such duties.

The above regulations are applicable to the whole of the United Kingdom; and if a trader out of the limits of the chief office of excise does not pay the excise duties charged upon him accordingly, he incurs the penalty of double the value of the duty; (e) and an information may be exhibited against him before any one or more of his majesty's justices of the peace, within whose jurisdiction the offence has been committed or the offender is found, and the proceedings are to be conducted in the manner before pointed out for the recovery of other penalties incurred by persons for other offences against the excise laws; except that, instead of its being necessary to give the defendant fourteen days' notice of trial, it is sufficient if the summons is served twenty-four hours at the least before the time appointed in such summons for the hearing of the information. (f)

Thirdly. Recovery of Penalties on immediate Arrest of Persons employed in unentered Excise Manufactories. (g)

Thirdly. Recovery of penalties on immediate arrest of persons employed in unentered excise manufactories. (g)

Power is given to the officers of excise immediately to arrest any persons found employed in unentered excise manufactories, and to take them before a justice, who is forthwith to hear and determine the case, without the officer's waiting for an order from the commissioners of excise, or the commissioner and assistant-commissioners in Scotland and Ireland, to prosecute. III. Proceedings, &c., before justices, &c.

Mode of proving entry; no entry legal except in real owner's name; penalties, &c.

Excise penalties are to be distributed in moieties, between his majesty and the informer.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 18, directs that every person required to make entry (which all persons carrying on any trade or business subject to the excise laws are) of any buildings, place, vessel, or utensil, under any act relating to the revenue of excise, shall deliver such entry, with his signature thereto, to the officer of excise in whose survey such building, place, vessel, or utensil shall be intended to be used. (a)

And, by s. 33 (b), where any officer of excise shall find, in any private or unentered place, manufacturing, or in the course of manufacturing, any goods or commodities in respect whereof any duty of excise is or shall be imposed, or any materials or preparations for manufacturing any such goods or commodities, and shall at the same time discover in or about such private or unentered place any person knowingly aiding, assisting, or in anywise concerned in the manufacturing of such goods or commodities, every person so discovered shall forfeit 30*l.*, over and above all other penalties to which the proprietor of the same, or the person in whose custody or possession the same shall be found, or by whom the manufactory of such goods or commodities may be carried on, is or may be subject and liable.

Any officer of excise and his assistants may arrest and detain every person so discovered, and convey him or her before one of his majesty's justices, who, on confession or proof on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses made of such offence, may convict every person so discovered. (c) And the person so convicted shall, immediately on such conviction, pay the sum of 30*l.* into the hands of the officer who shall have conveyed such offender before such justice of the peace, to be paid to the commissioners of excise, or the commissioner and assistant-commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland respectively, or to such persons as they may respectively appoint, to be applied in such manner as other excise penalties are by that act directed to be applied. And on such offender neglecting to pay the said 30*l.*, the convicting justice is to issue his warrant to commit him to prison and hard labour for three calendar months, unless he pays in the meantime the said sum of 30*l.* And for a second offence upon a like conviction the offender shall forfeit 60*l.*, and in default of payment be committed for six months, or until the sum of 60*l.* shall be paid. (c)

With a power, nevertheless, for the commissioners of excise, or for the commissioner and assistant-commissioners of excise in Scotland and Ireland, respectively, to order any person so imprisoned to be discharged, at any time before the term of his or her imprisonment shall have expired. (c)

On arresting such an offender, it is the duty of the officer forthwith to convey the offender before a justice of the peace for the place in which the offence has been committed, and when the justice is ready to hear the case, give information against the offender, and charge him orally with the offence imputed to him, and be prepared with his witnesses to support it.

The officer, and any other person, who may be entitled to the whole or any share of such penalty, shall, notwithstanding their interest, be admitted to give evidence. It is not incumbent on the officer to prove that the manufactory is not entered, but it lies upon the defendant (if such is his defence) to prove that it is entered. (d)

If any question, or doubt, or dispute be made or arise, whether the person who arrested the offender and conveyed him before the justice, is an officer of excise, it is, by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 17, (e) enacted, that evidence that he is reputed to be or acts as an officer of excise, shall be admitted, and deemed and taken to be sufficient and legal evidence thereof, without producing or proving the particular commission, appointment, or authority, whereby he is commissioned or appointed to be such officer, unless by other evidence the contrary be made to appear.

Fourthly. Of Search-Warrants and Mode of obtaining same, and Assistance of Peace-Officers and others.

III. Proceedings, &c., before justices, &c.

All goods, commodities, and chattels whatsoever, forfeited under or by virtue of any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise, may, without special or particular warrant, be seized:—1st, By any officer of excise.—2ndly, By any person employed in the revenue of excise.—Or, 3rdly, By any person acting in the aid and assistance of any such officer or person so employed. (a) 4thly. Of search-warrants and mode of obtaining same, and assistance of peace-officers, &c.

Amongst others, all goods and commodities subject to any duty of excise, and all materials, utensils, and vessels, proper or intended to be made use of in the making thereof, removed, or deposited, or concealed in any place, to defraud his majesty of such duty, are forfeited; and in every such case, and in every case where any goods or commodities are forfeited by any law relating to the excise, all the casks, vessels, cases, and other packages whatsoever, containing, or which shall have contained, such goods or commodities, and every vessel, boat, cart, carriage, or other conveyance whatsoever, and all horses or other cattle, and all things used in the removal, or for the deposit or concealment hereof, are also forfeited; and every person who removes, deposits, or conceals, or is concerned in removing, depositing, or concealing, any such goods or commodities, forfeits treble the value thereof, or 100*l.*, at the election of the commissioners of excise or customs, or of the commissioner and assistant-commissioners of excise or custom in Scotland and Ireland, respectively, or the person who sues for the same. (b)

Besides goods forfeited by any law of excise, every officer of excise has, and may use and exercise, all such and the like powers and authorities for the arrest and prosecution of any person, or for the search, examination, seizure, detention, removal, and prosecution of any vessel, boat, cart, carriage, or other conveyance, or any horse or cattle, or any foreign or imported goods or commodities whatsoever, forfeited under any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of the customs, as are or shall be granted, or be used or exercised, in that behalf by any officer of the customs. (c)

This right of seizure, however, does not authorize any officer of excise, or person employed in the revenue of excise, or their assistant, to enter or go into, their own authority, any place into which they are not otherwise legally authorized; and if any officer of excise has cause to suspect that any goods or commodities, forfeited under or by virtue of any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise, are deposited or concealed in any place to which he has no right of access, and such place is in any part of the United Kingdom out of the limits of the chief office of excise in London, he may apply to any one or more of the justices of the peace for the county, shire, division, city, town, or place where he suspects such goods and commodities are deposited or concealed; and any one or more of such justices may, upon oath being made by such officer before him or them, setting forth the ground of such suspicion, if he or they judge reasonable, by special warrant under his or their hands, authorize and empower such officer, by day or by night (but if between the hours of eleven of the clock at night and five in the morning, then in the presence of a constable or other officer of the peace), to enter into every such place where any such goods or commodities are suspected to be deposited or concealed, and to seize and carry away the same. (d)

But officer of excise cannot of his own authority enter a place (not especially provided for by act), to search for suspected goods, but must make oath, and obtain a warrant. (d)

And the officer, in case of resistance, having such warrant, may break open the door, and force and remove any other impediment or obstruction to such entry, search, or seizure, and removal. (d)

In the late case of The King v. Walls and another, 1 Bar. & Adolph. 166, the mode of entry and search under a writ of assistance, and under the different modern provisions in the law relating to the customs and excise, was fully considered. The 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, empowers any officer of customs, or person acting under the commissioners of customs, authorized by writ of assistance, to enter any house, shop, &c., there to seize, and from thence to bring, any uncustomed or prohibited goods.

A writ of assistance was addressed to certain officers therein mentioned, and to all other his majesty's officers, ministers, and subjects in England and Wales; it set out the commission of the officers of the customs, which empowered them to enter and search any house, shop, &c., where smuggled goods were, or were suspected to be concealed, to appoint officers, &c., and to do all other things necessary for his majesty's service in such cases, according to law; and it commanded the several persons to whom it was directed to permit and suffer the commissioners of customs, their deputies, servants, and officers, to enter and search the houses, shops, &c. where smuggled goods were, or were suspected to be concealed, and to do all things which ought to be done in that behalf, according to the commission, and to the laws of the realm; and all persons addressed by the writ were to assist in the execution of the premises. It was held, that this writ did not confer a general and absolute authority to enter and search houses for smuggled goods; but that such entry and search must be justified by reference to the event, or to probable cause: and the evidence on those points, and whether there was reasonable ground to suspect a concealment of goods, being uncertain, a new trial was directed.

Instructions to be attended to before applying for a search-warrant.

The following judicious instructions have been given in a work before alluded to:—"When any officer of excise, either from his own view, knowledge, or observation, or from information received from any other person, suspects that any goods or commodities, forfeited under any excise law, are deposited or concealed in any place to which he has not access, he should make use of his best discernment by considering the fair weight of the circumstances which lead to his suspicions, and not conclude that, because from such circumstances it is possible that goods or commodities forfeited may be deposited or concealed, they necessarily are so; or, because the informer gives a plausible account, that it must necessarily be true; but, by minutely interrogating him and entering into detail with him on the subject, so as to ascertain whether one part of it agrees with the other, endeavour to ascertain its truth or falsehood, and also learn his character and his connexion with the party against whom he gives information, and his motive and inducement to give such information, and whether revenge forms any part of it; and then, if, upon turning all these things in his mind, the officer is, upon the whole, satisfied that his suspicions are true, then, and not till then, he should apply to a justice of the peace for a warrant. Every failure in a search under a warrant lowers, in a certain degree, if it does not disgrace, the unsuccessful officer, and brings odium and obloquy on the whole revenue."

If the justice applied to has no warrant of his own that he prefers, a warrant in the form presently given may be used; annexed to which is the formal part of the affidavit, to which must be added the grounds of the officer's suspicion; and, on the same having been sworn before the justice, he will, if he judges the suspicion reasonable, issue his warrant, directed to the officer by whom the affidavit is made.

Attendance of peace-officers.

If the warrant is executed between the hours of eleven of the clock at night and five in the morning, the presence of a constable or other lawful officer of the peace is necessary; (a) and upon notice given or request made by any officer of excise to any constable, headborough, or other ministerial officer of the peace, to go with him, and to be present at the doing or performing of any act or thing at which the presence of a constable, headborough, or officer of the peace is required, by any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise, such constable, headborough, or officer of the peace is required to attend and be present, under a penalty of 20*l.* (b)

It cannot very well occur in executing a search-warrant, but it may in many other cases happen, that a constable, headborough, or other ministerial officer of the peace, who has begun to assist an officer of excise in the execution of his duty, in a place where such officer has jurisdiction, may be taken in the progress of such assistance out of such place, and then he may continue his assistance into any other place, otherwise out of his jurisdiction. (a)

And by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 35, all justices of the peace, bailiffs, constables, and all his majesty's officers, ministers, and subjects serving under his majesty, by commission, warrant, or otherwise, are required to be aiding and assisting to every officer of excise, in the due execution of any act or thing required and enjoined by any act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise to be done, and all such persons who so aid and assist are by the same act saved harmless. (b)

III. Proceedings, &c., before justices, &c.

Fifthly. Of Overcharges and Relief. (c)

It sometimes happens that persons subject to the excise laws are charged with, or have paid, more than by law they are liable to pay; and provision for relief, in such cases, in a summary way, is provided by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 120, and other acts. (d)

When any person, chargeable with any duties of excise, has been charged herewith, any two or more justices, out of the limits of the chief office of excise, may (upon complaint of any overcharge made by any officer of excise, within twelve calendar months next after the making of such charge) hear, adjudge, and determine such complaint, and examine the witnesses upon oath, who shall be produced as well on behalf of the complainant as of his majesty, and of all parties therein concerned, and by warrant under their hands discharge or acquit such person of so much of such charge as shall be made out and proved before them to have been overcharged. (e)

If the complainant has, before such acquittal, paid any money in respect of such overcharge, the commissioners of excise, or the commissioner and assistant-commissioners in Scotland and Ireland respectively, are required, upon such acquittal, to repay to the complainant, out of the public monies in their hands, or at their discretion to allow out of the next duties becoming payable to the complainant, so much money as has been so paid. (e)

No such complaint, however, is to be heard before the justices, unless a notice in writing of the time and place of hearing thereof (which must contain and set forth the ground and substance of such complaint) has been given to the collector of excise in whose collection, or to the supervisor of excise in whose district, such overcharge has been made, eight days at the least before the time appointed for the hearing of such complaint. (e)

The payment of any duty with which the complainant has been charged, or proceedings for the recovery thereof, are nevertheless not to be delayed or impeded by reason of the making of any such complaint, or of the same being pending. (e)

These provisions are general with respect to all overcharges of excise duties, there are other cases for which, though not strictly falling under the head of overcharge, special provision is made, as in the case of sales by auction. (f)

VI. The Forms of Proceedings in general before Justices, &c. under Excise Laws.

As the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 73 (ante, 290), directs justices to proceed on the merits without regarding any defect of form in any information or proceeding therein, and the 82nd sect. of the same act (ante, 293) directs commissioners of appeal and justices of the peace at quarter sessions not to regard matters of form, so great accuracy is not necessary as would be otherwise required; still, however, matters of substance must be observed, and it may assist in practice to give a few of the usual forms. Of late a printed form of information, or rather informations, against several offenders, for several distinct offences committed at different times, has been issued, with a form, printed on the back, of one conviction against several offenders for several distinct offences. These forms may be used as minutes, and the formal convictions may afterwards be drawn up fully. But it may be safer to adopt at once separate informations and convictions, when time will allow.

See the form of such information, post, 710; and the form of such conviction, post, 717.

A. Form of formal parts of summons for the recovery of a penalty or penalties, and the condemnation of a seizure, when information exhibited before one justice of the peace for the county, &c., where offence or offences committed. (a)

To C. D.

County of [Essex], } You are hereby to take notice, that A. B., officer of excise, to wit. } having, on the day of the date of this summons, exhibited to and before me, E. F., Esq., one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of [Essex], at [Chelmsford], in the said county, an information by order of the commissioners of excise against you, for the forfeiture of the sum of [100l.], and also for the forfeiture of certain goods and chattels, to wit, [fifty gallons of British spirits], for that [state the legal ground of forfeiture], and also for the forfeiture of the further sum of [100l.], and also for the forfeiture of certain other goods and chattels, to wit, &c. [name them], for that [state the legal ground of forfeiture]. I have appointed that all parties shall be heard of and concerning the matter and matters of fact in the said information mentioned and alleged, on the [tenth] day of [January] now instant, at [eleven] of the clock in the [forenoon] of the said day, at the house of W. R., being an inn and public-house known by the sign of the [Bell], at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex]; at which time and place you are hereby required to be and appear before such of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county as shall be then and there present, and have jurisdiction to hear and determine the same, then and there to make your defence in and to the matters contained in the said information; but, though you fail therein, the said last-mentioned justices (at the time and place in that behalf before mentioned) will proceed to the examination of the matter and matters of fact in the said information mentioned and alleged, and thereupon then and there give judgment and sentence as in and by the statute in that case made and provided is directed. And I do hereby authorize and require any officer of excise to serve this summons, and to attend at the time and place in that behalf before mentioned, then and there to make a return of the execution hereof. Given under my hand, at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], this [first] day of [January], in the year of our Lord [1830].

1. Summons for recovery of penalty and condemnation of seizure, by one justice of the county where offence was committed.

B. Form of formal parts of summons for the recovery of a penalty or penalties, and the condemnation of a seizure, when information exhibited before two justices of the peace for the county, &c., where offence or offences committed.

To C. D.

County of [Essex], } You are hereby to take notice, that A. B., officer of excise, III. Proceedings, &c.

E. Summons upon an information before one justice for the condemnation of British spirits, with packages, carriage, and cattle, and the recovery of the optional penalty of 100*l.*, applicable to England.

To C. D.

County of [Essex], }
to wit. } You are hereby to take notice, that A. B., officer of excise, hath, on the day of the date of this summons, at [Chelmsford], in the county of [Essex], exhibited, by order of the commissioners of excise, to and before me, E. F., Esq., one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of [Essex], wherein the offence hereinafter mentioned was committed, and where the goods, commodities, and chattels hereinafter mentioned were seized, an information against you for the forfeiture of certain goods, commodities, and chattels; that is to say, a certain large quantity, to wit, [twenty gallons of British spirits], contained in divers packages, to wit, [four bottles], and a certain carriage, to wit, [a cart], and certain cattle, to wit, [one mule], used in the removal of the said spirits, and also the sum of [100*l.*]; and thereby informeth me that, within four calendar months last past, to wit, on the [tenth] day of [January], in the year of our Lord [1831], at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], one J. W., being then and there an officer of excise, did seize and arrest, as forfeited from you, the said C. D., the said spirits, contained in the said packages, and the said carriage and cattle, then and there used in the removal of the said spirits; the same spirits, for that you, the said C. D., then and there knowingly had in your custody and possession the said spirits, after the same had been removed from the place where the same ought to have been charged with the duty payable in respect thereof, before either the duty to which the same was liable had been charged and paid, or secured to be paid, or such spirits had been lawfully condemned as forfeited; the said packages, for that the same then and there contained the said spirits so forfeited, as aforesaid; and the said carriage and cattle, for that the same were then and there used in the removal thereof, contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided; whereby, and by force of the statute in that case made and provided, the said spirits then and there became forfeited, together with the said packages containing the same, and the said carriage and cattle then and there used in the removal thereof: and you, the said C. D., being the person so offending, have forfeited and lost the said sum of [100*l.*], the said A. B., who sues as aforesaid, having elected and thereby electing the said penalty of [100*l.*], in lieu and instead of treble the value of such spirits; and you will further take notice, that I have appointed that all parties shall be heard of and concerning the matter and matters of fact in the said information mentioned and alleged, on the [tenth] day of [February] now instant, at [eleven] of the clock in the [forenoon] of the said day, at the house of W. R., being an inn and public-house known by the sign of the [Bell], at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex]; at which time and place you are hereby required to be and appear before one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county as shall be then and there present, and have jurisdiction to hear and determine the same, then and there to make your defence in and to the matters contained in the said information; but, though you be therein, the said last-mentioned justices (at the time and place in that behalf before mentioned) will proceed to the examination of the matter and matters of fact in the said information mentioned and alleged, and thereupon then and there give judgment and sentence, as in and by the statute in that case made and provided is directed; I do hereby authorize and require any officer of excise to serve this summons, and to attend at the time and place in that behalf before mentioned, then and there to make a return of the execution hereof. Given under my hand, at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], this [first] day of [February], in the year of our Lord [1830].

6. Notice of hearing affixed on outside of excise office next to place of seizure.

County of [Essex], } Take notice, that A. B., officer of excise, having seized, on the to wit. } [first] day of [January] now instant, at [Chelmsford], in the county of [Essex], divers goods, commodities, and chattels, to wit, [twenty gallons of British spirits], [three bottles], [one cart], and [one mule], by virtue of a certain act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise, and no person appearing to claim the said goods, commodities, and chattels, so seized as aforesaid, and an information having this day been exhibited, at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], before me, one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of [Essex], within whose jurisdiction such seizure was made, for the condemnation thereof, that two of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county of [Essex], within whose jurisdiction such seizure was made, and who have jurisdiction to hear and determine the matter of the said seizure, will, by virtue of the statute in that case made and provided, on the [17th] day of [January] instant, at [eleven] of the clock in the [forenoon] of the said day, at the house of W. R., being an inn and public-house known by the sign of the [Bell], at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], proceed to the hearing and adjudging of the matter of such seizure, and examine into the cause thereof, and give judgment accordingly. Dated at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], this [eighth] day of [January], in the year of our Lord [1830].

The officer of excise by whom the seizure was made must cause this notice to be affixed on some conspicuous part of the outside of the office of excise, next or nearest to the place where such seizure was made, during any market-day after the expiration of six days from the day of seizure. And, 2nd, the time appointed in such notice for the hearing of the case must not be less than nine days from the date of such notice, which should be affixed the day it is dated. If it is doubtful which of two market-towns is the next to the place of seizure, it will be prudent to request the justice to sign three notices, and to affix one on the outside of the excise office in each of such towns, and, making a memorandum thereof on the third, keep it to produce and prove at the hearing when the others were affixed. If there is no such doubt, the justice need only be requested to sign two such notices: one to affix, and one to keep to produce at the hearing, and prove when the other was affixed. D., in the custody or possession of the said C. D., or of any person or persons to the use of or in trust for the said C. D., and upon all the [malt], and all the materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for making thereof, or by which the said trade and business of a [maltster and maker of malt] has been carried on by the said C. D., which were in his custody or possession when the said penalty was incurred, into whose hands soever the same shall have afterwards come, and by what conveyance or title soever the same shall be claimed, and also upon all the goods and chattels of the said C. D., you do levy the said sum of [70l. 4s. 5d.], so recovered against the said C. D. by the said A. B., as aforesaid, whereof the said C. D. stands convicted before us this day, with all reasonable charges and expenses attending such levy; and for levying thereof, we do hereby authorize and command you, every or any of you, to seize and take the [malt], materials, preparations, vessels, utensils, goods, and chattels aforesaid, and either to detain and keep the same in the place where the same shall respectively be found, or to remove the same to the next office of excise; and if, within [six] days next after such seizure, the said sum of [70l. 4s. 5d.] shall not be paid or satisfied, then and in such case, so soon as conveniently may be after the expiration of the said [six] days, to sell and dispose thereof, or of so much thereof as will be sufficient to levy the said sum of [70l. 4s. 5d.], with all reasonable charges and expenses attending such levy, and to deduct the said last-mentioned sum, and the said charges and expenses, out of the money arising by such sale, and to return the overplus, if any, of the said [malt], materials, preparations, utensils, vessels, goods, and chattels, or any part thereof, or of the money arising from the sale thereof, or of any part thereof, to the proprietor or proprietors of the said [malt], materials, preparations, utensils, vessels, goods, and chattels, respectively, upon which such levy shall have been made, or to the person or persons who shall be legally entitled thereto, and forthwith to pay the said sum of [70l. 4s. 5d.] to the collector of excise for the collection called [Rochester] Collection, for the time being, to be by him applied and answered for, according to the statute in such case made and provided. And all constables and headboroughs of the said county are hereby required to be aiding and assisting to you in the due execution hereof; but, in case there cannot be found sufficient to levy the said sum of [70l. 4s. 5d.], with all reasonable charges and expenses attending such levy, then and in such case you, by a return of this warrant, are forthwith to certify the same to us, or some other justice or justices of the peace for the said county of [Essex], having jurisdiction therein. Given under our hands, at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], this [first] day of [January], in the year of our Lord [1830.] (a)

C. Body-warrant granted by one justice for a full or mitigated penalty, after a special levy-warrant, when no part of the penalty has been recovered.

3. Body-warrant by one justice, for a full or mitigated penalty, after special levy-warrant, where no part of penalty has been recovered.

County of [Essex], } To G. H. and I. K., Officers of Excise, or either of them, and to wit. } to the Gaoler or Keeper of the Common Gaol or House of Correction of, for, and within the County, Shire, Division, City, Town, or Place, where this Warrant shall be executed.

Whereas, on the [first] day of [January], [1830], at [Chelmsford], in the county of [Essex], C. D., being a person carrying on the trade and business of a [malster and maker of malt], the same being a trade and business under and subject to the laws and statutes of excise, was duly convicted by and before E. F., [Esq.], and L. M., [Clerk], two of his majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of [Essex], by the judgment of the said justices, of an offence heretofore committed in the same county by him, the said C. D., being, at the time of the committing of such offence, a person carrying on the said trade and business, and the same trade and business being then under and subject to the laws and statutes of excise, against a certain act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise, in the mitigated (c) penalty of [70l. 4s. 5d.], incurred by him for the said offence, under and by virtue of the said act, which said penalty was, by the said conviction and judgment of the said justices, recovered against the said C. D. by A. B., officer of excise, who prosecuted as well for our sovereign lord the king as for himself in that behalf; and whereas the said justices, by their warrant under their hands, made and issued within the said county, bearing date the [fifth] day of [February], [1830], did require and command you, the said G. H. and I. K., or either of you, that, upon all the [malt], and all the materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for making thereof, or by which the said trade and business of a [malster and maker of malt] had been carried on by the said C. D., in the custody or possession of the said C. D., or of any person or persons, to the use of or in trust for the said C. D., and upon all the [malt], and all the materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for making thereof, or by which the said trade and business of a [malster and maker of malt] had been carried on by the said C. D., which were in his custody or possession when the said penalty was incurred, into whose hands soever the same should have afterwards come, and by what conveyance or title soever the same should be claimed, and also upon all the goods and chattels of the said C. D., you, or either of you, should levy the said penalty of [70l. 4s. 5d.], so recovered against the said C. D. by the said A. B., as aforesaid, whereof the said C. D. stood convicted before them, the said justices, as in that behalf aforesaid, with all reasonable charges and expenses attending such levy; and whereas you, the said G. H., by a return in writing, made on the said warrant under your hand, bearing date this day, have certified to me, R. S., Esq., one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of [Essex], whose hand is hereunto set, that you, the said G. H., have made diligent search for but cannot find (within the jurisdiction in which the said warrant was so issued) any such [malt], materials, preparations, utensils, or vessels, as are in and by the said warrant mentioned and directed to be levied on, or any goods or chattels of the said C. D., whereon the said penalty, charges, and expenses, or any part thereof, can be levied: Now I, the same justice, do, in his majesty's name, authorize, require, and command you, the said G. H. and I. K., or either of you, to take and arrest the said C. D., and forthwith to convey him to the common gaol or house of correction of, for, and within the county, shire, division, city, town, or place, where you, or either of you, shall so take and arrest the said C. D., and there to deliver him, together with a duplicate of this warrant, to the gaoler or keeper of such gaol or house of correction, there to remain and be kept by such gaoler or keeper until satisfaction shall be made of the said judgment, or until he, the said C. D., shall be ordered by the commissioner (a) of excise to be liberated or discharged. And all constables and other his majesty's officers are hereby authorized and required to be aiding and assisting to you in the due execution hereof; and the gaoler or keeper of such gaol or house of correction, to which you shall so convey the said C. D., is hereby authorized and required there to receive and take into his custody the said C. D., there to remain and be kept by such gaoler or keeper until satisfaction shall be made of the said judgment, or until he, the said C. D., shall be ordered by the commissioner (a) of excise to be liberated or discharged. And for you, or any or either of you, so doing, as is before to you respectively directed, this shall be to you, any or either of you respectively, a sufficient warrant and authority. Given under my hand, at [Chelmsford], in the said county of [Essex], this [third] day of [March], in the year of our Lord [1830]. (b)

III. Proceedings, &c.

D. Body-warrant granted by one justice for the residue of a full or mitigated penalty, after a special levy-warrant.

County of [Essex], } To G. H. and I. K., Officers of Excise, or either of them, and to wit. } to the Gaoler or Keeper of the Common Gaol or House of Correction of, for, and within the County, Shire, Division, City, Town, or Place, where this Warrant shall be executed.

1. The like, for residue of a full or mitigated penalty, after special levy-warrant.

Whereas, on the [first] day of [January], [1830], at [Chelmsford], in the county of [Essex], C. D., being a person carrying on the trade and business of a [malster and maker of malt], the same being a trade and business under and subject to the laws and statutes of excise, was duly convicted by and before E. F., [Esq.], and L. M., [Clerk], two of his majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of [Essex], by the judgment of the said justices, of an offence heretofore committed in the same county by him, the said C. D., being then a person carrying on the said trade and business, and the same trade and business being then under and subject to the laws and statutes of excise, against a certain act of Parliament relating to the revenue of excise, in the mitigated penalty of [70l. 4s. 5d.], incurred by him for the said offence, under and by virtue of the said act, which said penalty was, by the said conviction and judgment of the said justices, recovered against the said C. D. by A. B., officer of excise, who prosecuted as well for our sovereign lord the King, as for himself in that behalf. And whereas the said justices, by their warrant, under their hands, made and issued within the said county, bearing date the first day of March, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, did require and command you the said G. H. and I. K., or either of you, that, upon all the malt, and all the materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for making thereof, or by which the trade and business of a malster and maker of malt had been carried on by the said C. D., in the custody or possession of the said C. D., or of any person or persons to the use of or in trust for the said C. D., and upon all the malt, and all the materials, preparations, utensils, and vessels for making thereof, or by which the said trade and business of a malster and maker of malt had been carried on by the said C. D., which were in his custody or possession when the said penalty was incurred, into whose hands soever the same should have afterwards come, and by what conveyance or title soever the same should be claimed; and also upon all the goods and chattels of the said C. D., you or either of you should levy the said penalty of one hundred pounds shillings and pence, so recovered against the said C. D. by the said A. B. as aforesaid, whereof the said C. D. stood convicted before the said justices as in that behalf aforesaid, with all reasonable charges and expenses attending such levy. And whereas you the said G. H., by a return in writing made on the said warrant under your hand, bearing date this day, have certified to me L. M., Esq. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of Kent, whose name is hereunto set, that, by virtue of the said warrant, you have seized and sold divers quantities of the malt, materials, preparations, vessels, utensils, goods, and chattels in the said warrant in that behalf mentioned, and thereon and thereout have levied the sum of twenty pounds shillings and pence, part of the said penalty, charges, and expenses; and that you, the said G. H. and I. K., have made diligent search for, but cannot find within the jurisdiction within which the said warrant was so issued, any more further such malt, materials, preparations, vessels or utensils, as are in the said warrant in that behalf mentioned, or any more or further goods and chattels of the said C. D., (beyond the malt, materials, preparations, vessels, utensils, goods, and chattels already seized and sold as aforesaid), whereon the residue of the said penalty, charges, and expenses, or any part thereof can be levied. Now, I, the said last-mentioned justice, do, in his Majesty's name, authorize, require, and command you, the said G. H., (a) See note (a), ante, p. 723.

(b) See note, ante, p. 719.

III. Proceedings, &c.

and I. K., or either of you, to take and arrest the said C. D., and forthwith to convey him to the common gaol or house of correction, of, for, and within the county, shire, division, city, town or place, where you, or either of you, shall so take and arrest the said C. D., and there to deliver him, together with a duplicate of this warrant, to the gaoler or keeper of such gaol or house of correction, there to remain and be kept by such gaoler or keeper, until satisfaction shall be made of so much of the said judgment as still remains unsatisfied, and thereby the whole of the said judgment shall be satisfied, or until the said C. D. shall be ordered by the commissioner (a) of excise, to be liberated or discharged. And all constables and other his Majesty's officers, are hereby authorized and required to be aiding and assisting to you in the due execution hereof; and the gaoler or keeper of such gaol or house of correction, to which you or either of you shall so convey the said C. D., is hereby authorized and required there to receive and take into his custody the said C. D., there to remain and be kept by such gaoler or keeper, until satisfaction shall be made of so much of the said judgment as still remains unsatisfied, and thereby the whole of the said judgment shall be satisfied, or until the said C. D. shall be ordered by the commissioner (a) of excise, to be liberated or discharged; and for your, or any or either of you so doing, as is before to you respectively directed, this shall be to you, or any or either of you respectively, a sufficient warrant and authority. Given under my hand at Maidstone, in the county of Kent, this [second] day of [April], in the year of our Lord [1830].

••• In order to execute this warrant out of the jurisdiction of the justice granting it, in any other county, shire, division, city, town, or place, it is necessary that a justice of the peace of such other county, shire, division, city, town, or place, should indorse his name on such warrant, and it will be necessary to add, after his signature, "one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of _____," [as the case may be], but it is not necessary to prove, in order to justify his indorsing such warrant, the hand-writing of the justice granting the same.

E. Demand of payment of duty in danger of being lost.

To Mr. William Martin, malster.

Demand by collector of payment of duty in danger of being lost.

The sum of one hundred pounds five shillings and sixpence, having been charged upon and incurred by you, as duties on malt imposed by the statute in that case made and provided, I, William Price, (the collector of excise for Rochester Collection, in whose collection the trade and business of a malster was carried on by you, at the time such duties were charged upon and incurred by you), do hereby demand of you, under order in that behalf, of the commissioners (b) of excise, payment forthwith to me, for his Majesty's use, of the said sum of one hundred pounds, five shillings, and sixpence; and if the same is not forthwith paid and cleared off according to this demand, you will forfeit and lose double the value thereof. Dated this [first] day of [July], [1830].

(To be signed) William Price, Collector of Excise for Rochester Collection.

••• This demand may be made either personally of the trader, or be left at his dwelling-house, or on the premises where the duty or duties demanded were charged or incurred.

To Mr. William Martin, malster.

Demand by officer authorized by collector, of payment of duty in danger of being lost.

The sum of one hundred pounds, five shillings, and sixpence, having been charged upon and incurred by you, as duties on malt, imposed by the statute in that case made and provided, I, William Brown, officer of excise, (authorized and directed in that behalf by the collector of excise, in whose collection the trade and business of a malster was carried on by you, at the time such duties were charged upon and incurred by you, and one of the officers of excise in the said collection), do hereby demand of you, (under order in that behalf of the commissioners of excise to the said collector, and by authority and direction of the said collector to me), payment forthwith to me of the said sum of one hundred pounds, five shillings, and sixpence; and if the same is not forthwith paid and cleared off according to this demand, you will forfeit and lose double the value thereof. Dated this [first] day of [August], [1830].

(To be signed) William Brown, Officer of Excise.

(a) If used in England, add an "s" to the word "commissioner," and dash up the blank. If used in Scotland or Ireland, insert the words "and assistant commissioners."

(b) If used in Scotland or Ireland, cancel the "s" in the word "commissioners," and insert "and assistant commissioners."

F. Commitment.

To Miles Spry, and to the Keeper of the House of Correction at _____, in the County of York.

County of _____, } Whereas, Abraham Greaves, of Tadcaster, in the county of York. } York, is, and stands convicted this day, before me, Henry Gilby, esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of York, for that one G. H., being an officer of excise, did, on the [first] day of [February], in the year of our Lord [one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight], at Tadcaster, in the said county of York, discover and find in a certain private and unentered place, manufacturing, and in the course of manufacturing, certain goods and commodities, for and in respect whereof a duty of excise is imposed, and certain materials and preparations for manufacturing such goods and commodities, to wit, spirits, wort, and wash, made from melasses, and molasses, malt, corn, and grain, and did at the same time discover in and about such private and unentered place, the said Abraham Greaves, knowingly aiding, assisting, and concerned in the manufacturing such goods and commodities, contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, whereby he, the said Abraham Greaves, hath forfeited and lost the sum of thirty pounds. And whereas the said Abraham Greaves hath refused and neglected to pay the said sum of thirty pounds into the hands of the said William Lord, being such officer of excise as aforesaid, and who conveyed the said Abraham Greaves before me, in pursuance of the said statute, charged with the offence aforesaid—These are therefore to require you, the said Miles Spry, to convey the said

III. Proceedings, &amp;c.

Memorial or petition, stating that defendants are wholesale grocers, and wholly innocent of the offence, and shewing that it is their practice to let their servants have their goods at wholesale prices, and that one of them, without their knowledge, took some of their liquors, and sold it to G. H., and made use of one of their tickets.

dens, buildings, and outhouses thereunto belonging, and to seize and carry away all such (a) large quantity of British spirits, and all other goods and commodities so forfeited as aforesaid, that he shall there find deposited and concealed. And all constables and other his Majesty's officers, are hereby authorized and required to be aiding and assisting to him in the execution hereof: and for so doing this shall be to him and every of them a sufficient warrant. Given under my hand this [fifth] day of [April], in the year of our Lord [1828].

To the Honourable the Commissioners of the Revenue of Excise.

The humble Memorial of A. B., C. D., and E. F., of &c., wholesale grocers and tea dealers.

Sheweth,

That your memorialists have, for upwards of sixteen years last past, carried on business as wholesale grocers and tea dealers, in lane aforesaid, in an extensive way and with uniform credit and reputation, and have never been knowingly guilty of any violation of the revenue, or of any other laws, in the course of carrying on their said business.

That notwithstanding the inviolate good conduct of your memorialists in this respect, they were lately, to their great surprise, served with process issuing out of the Court of Exchequer, requiring them to appear to an information to be filed against them in that Court by his Majesty's Attorney-General.

That your memorialists caused an appearance to be entered for them accordingly, and they have taken an office copy of such information, by which it appears that your memorialists are charged in ten several counts, with having "in the year 1815, sold and delivered to one G. H., therein stated to be a licensed brewer of beer, (your memorialists being charged in the said information with knowing him to be so licensed), a quantity of liquors, contrary to law," for which a penalty or penalties is or are sought to be recovered. And your memorialists are further charged in the said information with having sold and delivered to the said John Mitchell, knowing him to be so licensed, a quantity of molasses, contrary to law, for which further penalties are sought to be recovered.

That your memorialists never knowingly engaged, either directly or indirectly, in any illegal, illicit, or prohibited course of trade, and particularly your memorialists positively state, that they are wholly innocent of all and every the supposed offences, in and by the said information imputed to them.

That your memorialists have always been in the habit of allowing their clerks, warehousemen, and other trade servants, to have and be supplied with the articles in which your memorialists trade and deal, whenever they wished to have the same for the use of themselves and their families, or their immediate friends, at the wholesale price, which practice your memorialists believe to be common to the greater part of wholesale houses in the grocery and tea business, it being generally considered, that where the articles are wanted for the immediate use and consumption of the servant, or of his family, such a privilege is but a reasonable indulgence; and even where they are intended to be resold by the servant to his personal friends, that it tends to promote habits of gainful industry, and tends to the establishment of connexions which eventually enable the individual to engage in retail business, which ultimately conduces to the advantage of the wholesale dealers, his former masters.

That, on being served with the process issued in virtue of this information, your memorialists, knowing that they had never had any such dealings as those imputed to them by this prosecution, made inquiry among the persons who were in their service and employ during the said year, 1815, for the purpose of ascertaining whether any of them had been engaged in such dealings, and had committed the offences in and by the said information mistakenly imputed to your memorialists.

That such inquiry informed your memorialists, that J. K., who, in the year 1815, lived with your memorialists in the character of salesman, had been the perpetrator of the offences mentioned or referred to in the said information, and that he had, in the course of the year 1815, sold 14lbs. of juice, or liquors, and one half puncheon of molasses to the said G. H. But, for the complete justification of your memorialists, and the entire satisfaction of your Honors, your memorialists crave leave to state the particulars of the information which they then received respecting those transactions, &c.

That the above mentioned two articles of juice and molasses are the only articles of that description which the said J. K. bought of your memorialists during the period of time mentioned in the said information.

That your memorialists now find, to their great surprise, that the said J. K. was in the habit of occasionally using the printed invoices of your memorialists' warehouse, for making out the bills of parcels of goods really belonging to and sold by himself. But your memorialists positively state, that he had no authority whatever from them for doing this, and they were not aware of the practice at the time, it being a violation of the established regulation of their house, and permission for which they have constantly and uniformly refused to all their clerks or servants who ever applied for such a permission; your memorialists beg leave again to repeat, that they were not in any manner privy to the aforesaid dealings and transactions by and between the said J. K. and G. H., nor were they at all apprized of the same, until after the institution of this prosecution; and they never partook, directly or indirectly, of any part of the gains or profits arising therefrom.

(a) Insert the articles suspected to be deposited.

That in a penal proceeding like the present, your memorialists humbly submit they ought not to be charged, and that the law will not charge them with the personal default or misconduct of their servants, committed entirely without their knowledge or suspicion. And the truth of this statement is manifested by the annexed affidavit.

Your memorialists are advised and feel confident that, under these circumstances, they have a good and sufficient defence against the said information; but, as they are of course anxious to avoid the expense of defending a Crown prosecution, and are desirous also of avoiding the public imputation of a violation of the law, of which knowing themselves to be innocent, they are unwilling to be publicly accused; and as they feel assured that your Honors act on principles of public justice, and would not continue a prosecution after every appearance or suspicion of guilt has been removed, they have thought it right to submit this statement to your Honors' consideration, and they humbly pray—

That your Honors, under the circumstances aforesaid, will be graciously pleased to direct your solicitor to instruct his Majesty's Attorney-General to enter a noli prosequi on the record of the said information; or that your Honors will grant to your memorialists such other relief in the premises as to your Honors shall seem just.

And your memorialists shall ever pray, &c.

This memorial was accompanied with the following affidavit, made by J. K. himself, the actually guilty party, and by the three defendants. J. K. had been convicted, and had compounded the penalties incurred by him:

In the Exchequer,

Between { His Majesty's Attorney-General, . . . Informant.
and
A. B., C. D., and E. F., . . . Defendants.

Affidavit in support of the said memorial.

A. B., C. D., and E. F., of &c., wholesale grocers and tea dealers, the above-named defendants, and J. K., late of &c., but now of &c., grocer, and late salesman in the warehouse of the said defendants, severally make oath and say; and first defendants themselves say, that these defendants have for upwards of sixteen years last past carried on business as wholesale grocers and tea dealers in , aforesaid, in an extensive way, and with uniform credit and reputation, and have never been knowingly guilty of any violation of the revenue, or of any other laws, in the course of carrying their said business. But notwithstanding the inviolate good conduct of the said defendants in this respect, they were lately, to their great surprise, served with process issuing out of the Court of Exchequer, requiring them to appear to an information to be filed against them in that Court, by his Majesty's Attorney-General. Whereupon the said defendants caused an appearance to be entered for them accordingly, and they have taken an office copy of such information, by which it appears that they are charged in ten several counts, with having, in the year 1815, sold and delivered to one G. H., therein stated to be a licensed brewer of beer, the said defendants being charged in the said information with knowing him to be so licensed, a quantity of liquorice contrary to law, for which a penalty or penalties is or are sought to be recovered. And the said defendants are further charged in the said information, with having sold and delivered to the said G. H., knowing him to be so licensed, a quantity of molasses, contrary to law, for which further penalties are sought to be recovered. But the defendants say, that they never knowingly engaged, either directly or indirectly, in any illegal, illicit, or prohibited course of trade, and particularly defendants positively state, that they are wholly innocent of all and every the offences, in and by the said information imputed to them. And the said defendants further say, that they have always been in the habit of &c., [stating the substance of the memorial, as to their practice of allowing their servants to have their bills at wholesale prices]. And the said defendants further say, that they now find to their great surprise, that the said J. K. was in the habit of occasionally using the bills of parcels of the said defendants' warehouse, for making out the bills of parcels of goods really belonging to and sold by himself. But the said defendants, and also the said J. K., positively state, that he had no authority whatever from them for so doing, and they were not aware of the practice at the time, it being a violation of the established regulation at their house, and permission for which they have constantly and uniformly refused to all their clerks or servants who ever applied for such a permission, and all these deponents positively say, that they, the said defendants, were not in any manner privy to the aforesaid dealings and transactions, by and between the said J. K. and G. Proceedings thereon.

Notwithstanding this memorial and affidavit, the petition was not attended to, and the following singular letter was returned:—

Messrs. A. B., C. D., and E. F.

Rejection of the petition.

The Attorney-General v. Messrs. A. B., C. D., and E. F.

Gentlemen,

I am desired to acquaint you, that the honourable Board of Excise have refused to grant the prayer of your petition for stay of proceedings in your beer prosecution.

This petition makes no offer, and as the Board never cause any prosecution to be instituted unless the defendant has clearly incurred a penalty for some violation of the Excise laws, they never order proceedings to be stayed but on an offer made by the petitioner to pay either a fine or costs, or both, by way of atonement for the offence and compromise of the prosecution. Your humble servant,

L. M., Officer.

Result.

The information was tried, and, after wasting several hours, a juror was withdrawn. The gentlemen at present having the care of this branch of the Revenue observe a much more candid, liberal, and honourable course of conduct.

Execution.

What.

EXECUTION is the last performance of an act, as of a judgment, &c. It is the obtaining possession of any thing recovered by judgment of law. 1 Inst. 289.

How put in force.

Execution is in general put in force by a judicial writ, grounded on the judgment of the Court from whence it issues. But, in case of life, the Court may command execution to be done, without any writ. 2 Hawk. c. 51, s. 4; Finch, 478.

On a peer.

In fixed and stated judgments, the law makes no distinction between a peer and a commoner, or between a common and ordinary case, and one attended with extraordinary circumstances; for which reason it was adjudged in Felton's case, who murdered the Duke of Buckingham, that the Court could not order his hand to be cut off, nor make it part of the sentence that his body should be hanged in chains, but that the body after execution, being at the King's disposal, might be hung in chains, or otherwise ordered as the King should think fit. 2 Hawk. c. 48, s. 2.

Manner of.

As to the manner of an execution, it cannot be lawfully executed by any but the proper officer, the sheriff or his deputy. 2 Hawk. c. 51, s. 6; 2 Hale, 411.

The execution must be done pursuant to the judgment. 2 Hale, 411.

The sheriff cannot alter the execution; if he doth, it is felony, and some say murder. 2 Hale, 411; Co. P. C. 211.

Though the King cannot alter the judgment, he may remit a part of it; as, in treason, he may pardon all but the beheading. 2 Hale, 412. Such pardon must be under the great seal. Id. Post. 269.

Infants.

The execution of persons under the age of discretion is usually respited, in order to obtain a pardon. 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 8.

Coming to life after hanging.

It is clear that if a man, condemned to be hanged, come to life after he be hanged, he ought to be hanged again; for the judgment was not executed till he was dead. 2 Hawk. c. 51, s. 7.

Person attainted at large.

Where a person attainted hath been at large after his attainder, and afterwards is brought into Court and demanded why execution should not be awarded against him, if he deny that he is the same person, it shall immediately be tried by a jury returned for that purpose. 2 Hawk. c. 51, s. 3;

Extortion.

[T is said that extortion, in a large sense, signifies any oppression under colour of right; but that, in a strict sense, it signifies the taking of money, by any officer, by colour of his office, either where none at all is due, or not so much is due, or where it is not yet due. 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 1; Co. Lit. 68. b.; per Dallas, J., 3 B. & B. 145.

As to threats to extort, see title Threats, Vol. V.

Extortion was, and still continues, a high misdemeanor at common law, and punishable by fine and imprisonment; Co. Lit. 368. b.; and, therefore, an indictment at common law lies against a judge for taking a fee for his judgment, an officer for receiving more than the usual fee, a ferryman for taking more than is due to him by prescription, or a sheriff for refusing to execute process till his fees are paid him. Com. Dig. Extortion, (A).

As to extortion by coroners, see ante, Vol. I. p. 884, 886.

As to extortion by innkeepers, see ante, Vol. I. p. 95, 105.

As to extortion by toll-gate keepers, see title Toll-gates, Vol. III. p. 143.

And by stat. 3 Edw. 1, c. 26, (which is only in affirmance of the common law), "No sheriff, nor other the King's officer, shall take any reward for doing his office, but shall be paid of that which they take of the King; and that so doth, shall yield twice as much, and shall be punished at the King's pleasure."

[No sheriff nor other the King's officer]—Under these words, the law bearing with the sheriffs, are understood escheators, coroners, bailiffs, gaolers, and other inferior officers of the King, whose offices were instituted before the making of this act, which do any way concern the administration of justice, or the common good of the subject, or for the King's service. 2 Inst. 209.

Also the justices of the peace, whose office was instituted after this act, are bound by their oath of office to take nothing for their office of justice of the peace to be done, but of the King, and fees accustomed, and costs limited by statute.

What.

A misdemeanor at common law.

Coroners.

Innkeepers.

Tollkeepers.

By stat. 3 Edw. 1, c. 26.

Who may be guilty of.

EXTORTION.

And generally, no public officer shall take any other fees or rewards for doing any thing relating to his office, than some statute in force gives him, or else as hath been anciently and accustomably taken; and if he do otherwise, he is guilty of extortion. Dalt. c. 41; and see 1 Russ. 222.

But where a person was appointed collector of certain duties under 43 Geo. III. c. 99, by the proper constituted authorities, and considered himself, and was considered by those authorities to be such collector, but whose appointment was informally made, it was decided that he could not be indicted at common law for the receipt of duties by colour and pretence of being collector of such duties, though the money were fraudulently collected and misapplied by him, because he was in fact appointed collector, and in that character received the money. R. v. Dobson and another, 7 East, 218.

A collector of post horse duty demanded of A. a sum of money, alleging that A. had let out horses for hire, without payment of the duty. A. denied that he had done so, and gave the collector a promissory note for 5*l.*, the amount of which, after it became due, was paid by A. to the collector, who handed it over to his principal, the farmer of the post horse duties. Held, that this was extortion in the collector, and that his having paid the money over to his principal made no difference. R. v. Higgins, 4 C. & P. 247.

A sheriff is not liable to be indicted for the extortion of his officer; Sawderson v. Baker, 3 Wils. 316; but he may be sued for it. Woodgate v. Knatchbull, 2 T. R. 148.

Accessories.

What may be taken.

There are no accessories in extortion. 1 Str. 75.

Shall take any reward—Therefore, by this statute, they can at this day take no more for doing their office than hath been since allowed to them by authority of Parliament. 2 Inst. 210.

All prescriptions which have been contrary to this statute, and to the common law, in affirmance of which it is made, have been always holden to be void. 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 2.

It is equally extortion, where a greater fee is exacted than what is legally due; as where money is exacted as a fee, where none whatever is payable. 2 Salk. 680; 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 1.

It has been resolved, that a promise to pay them money for doing of a thing, which the law will not suffer them to take any thing for, is merely void. 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 2; 2 Burr. 924; 1 Bl. Rep. 204.

For what.

To do his office—It is not said, that he shall take no reward generally, but no reward to do his office: thus the fee of 20*d.*, called bar fee, time out of mind taken by the sheriff of every prisoner that is acquitted, is not against this statute; for it is not taken for doing his office. 2 Inst. 210; but see title Gaols, post, 1039.

But there seems to be no necessity for this distinction; for it cannot be intended to be the meaning of the statute to restrain the courts of justice, in whose integrity the law always reposes the highest confidence, from allowing reasonable fees for the labour and attendance of their officers; the chief danger of oppression is from officers being left at their liberty to set their own rates on their labour, and make their own demands; but there cannot be so much fear of these abuses, while they are restrained to known and stated fees, settled by the discretion of the courts, which will not suffer them to be exceeded, without a proper resentment. 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 3; 2 Inst. 210, 211.

But, in the ecclesiastical court, a person was libelled against for fees, and, upon motion, a prohibition was granted, for that it was holden that no court had a power to establish fees; the judge of a court may think them reasonable, but that is not binding; but if, on a quantum meruit, a jury think them reasonable, then they become established fees. 1 Salk. 333; Hardr. 351.

The fees in sessions, for traversing, trying, or discharging indictments, discharging recognizances, and the like, do vary according to the different customs in different places. Dalt. c. 41.

Punishment and penalty.

Shall yield twice as much—At the common law this offence is severely punishable at the King's suit by fine and imprisonment, and also by a removal from the office in the execution whereof it was committed. And this statute doth add a greater penalty than the common law did give; for hereby the plaintiff shall recover his double damages. 2 Inst. 210; 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 5.

EXTORTION.

And by 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 4, actions on informations for extortion may be laid in any county. It has been said, this section applies to indictments. 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 6, sed quære.

Venue.
31 Eliz. c. 5.

At the King's pleasure—That is, by the King's justices, before whom the cause depends. 2 Inst. 210; 1 Stra. 75.

Before whom tried.

Indictment—Several defendants may be jointly indicted when no fee was due. 2 Ld. Raym. 1248; 3 Len. 268; Com. Dig. Extortion, (C.); 1 Stra. 175. As to the venue, see supra. The time of the offence must be alleged. 4 Mod. 101, 103. The indictment must state a sum which the defendant received, and it will not be sufficient to aver that he did receive a gift or reward, without specifying value, 4 Burr. 2471; 2 Leach, 794, though it is not material to prove the exact sum as laid in the indictment. 1 Ld. Raym. 149; 6 T. R. 267. So, in an information, though several sums and specific persons are stated to have been the objects of the defendant's extortion, if it conclude with a general charge, of which he is found guilty, that, under colour of his said office, he did illegally cause his agents to receive and demand of several other persons several other sums of money, under pretence of weighing and examining their several weights and measures, the whole will be vitiated and judgment will be arrested. 2 Stra. 999. If the indictment charge that the defendant, as bailiff of a hundred, under colour of his office, took a sum of money, without shewing more particularly by what pretence it was taken, it will be good at least after verdict; for, perhaps, he might claim it generally as being due to him as bailiff, in which case, the demand could not be otherwise stated. 1 Sid. 91. Where nothing at all was due, that fact ought to be averred, and where any thing was due, the sum which might have been lawfully taken must be expressed. 3 Leon. 38; Com. Dig. Extortion, (C). The Court will not quash an indictment for extortion upon motion, though it appear to be defective, but leave the party to demur. 5 Mod. 13.

I. Felony.

FELONY is supposed by some to come from the Saxon fel, which signifieth fierce or cruel; of which the verb fell signifieth to throw down or demolish, and the substantive of that name is used to signify a mountain rough and uncultivated. But the same word, with a little variation, runneth through most of the European languages, and signifieth, more generally, an offence at large; and the Saxon word fællan signifieth to offend, and fellnissæ, an offence or failure; and although felony, as it is now become a technical term, signifieth, in a more restrained sense, an offence of a high nature, yet it is not limited to capital offences only, but still retaineth somewhat of this larger acceptation; for petit larceny is felony, although it is not capital.

Definition of.

According to Sir Henry Spelman's observation, it signifies such an offence or which, during the feudal institution, a man should lose or forfeit his estate; which he derives of two northern words, fee, which signifies the fief, feud, beneficiary estate, and lon, which signifies price or value.

Upon the whole, the only adequate definition of felony seems to be this, viz. "an offence which occasions a total forfeiture of either lands or goods, or both, at the common law, and to which capital or other punishment may be superadded, according to the degree of guilt." 4 Bl. Com. 94-5.

The idea of felony is, however, so generally connected with that of capital punishment, that it seems hard to separate them; and to this usage the interpretations of law now conform. For if a statute makes any new offence felony, the law implies it shall be punished with death, (viz. by hanging), as well as by forfeiture. See 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 4; 2 Id. c. 48.

Statute enacting a felony.

Where a statute declares that the offender shall, under the particular circumstances, be deemed to have feloniously committed any act, it makes the offence a felony, and imposes all the common and ordinary consequences attending a felony. 3 M. & S. 556. And though a statute make the doing an act felonious, yet, if a subsequent act make it penal only, the latter is considered as a virtual repeal of the former. 1 Hawk. c. 40, s. 5.

All felonies are several and cannot be joint, so that a pardon of one felon does not discharge another; but the felony of one man may be dependent on that of another, and the pardon of the one, by a necessary consequence, be to the benefit of the other, as in cases of Principal and Accessary, Felony by several.

See title Accessory, Vol. I.

It would swell this title unnecessarily, and to an inconvenient length, to set down every thing which may be comprehended under the word felony; therefore, for the consideration of the several particular kinds of felonies, the reader is referred to their respective titles; as for instance, Burglary, Coinage, Forgery, Homicide, Rape, Robbery, and many others; and, especially, the relating to stolen goods of all kinds belongs to title Larceny.

Reference to felonies.

The method of bringing a felon to justice, from the first commission of felony to his condemnation and execution, is treated of under the several titles of Arraignment, Arrest, Attainder, Bail, Commitment, Confession, Denial, Examination, Execution, Forfeiture, Gaol, Hue and Cry, Indictment, Judgment, Jurors, Process, Trial. And the course and whole process of trying an offender is treated of under titles Sessions, Trial, Vol. V.

Mode of apprehending and prosecuting a felon.

FELONY.

The method of confining offenders to hard labour in penitentiary houses, or in vessels upon navigable rivers, instead of transportation, is treated of under the title Transportation, Vol. V.

II. Misprision of Felony.

What is.

MISPRISION of felony (from the French word mespris, a neglect or contempt), is the concealing of a felony which a man knows, but never consented to; for, if he consented, he is either a principal or accessory in the felony, and consequently guilty of misprision of felony, and more. 3 Inst. 36; 1 Hale, 374.

For it is said that every felony includes misprision of felony, and may be proceeded against as a misprision only, if the King please. 1 Hawk. c. 59, s. 1.

Punishment for.

The punishment of misprision of felony in a common person, is fine and imprisonment; in an officer, as sheriff or bailiff of liberties, imprisonment for a year, and ransom at the King's pleasure, by the statute of Edw. I. c. 9.

If any person will save himself from the crime of misprision, he must discover the offence to a magistrate with all speed that he can. 3 Inst. 140.

Misprision in a larger sense is used to signify very considerable misdemeanor, which hath not a certain name given to it in the law.

III. Theftbote.

What is.

THEFTBOTE (from the Saxon words theft and bote, boot or amends) is, where one not only knows of a felony, but takes his goods again, or other amends, not to prosecute. 1 Hawk. c. 59, s. 5; 1 Russ. 210.

But the bare taking of one's own goods again, which have been stolen, is no offence, unless some favour be shewn to the thief. 1 Hawk. c. 59, s. 7.

Punishment for.

This offence is very nearly allied to felony, and is said to have been anciently punished as such; but at this day it is punishable only with ransom and imprisonment, unless it were accompanied with some degree of maintenance given to the felon, which makes the party an accessory after the fact.

IV. Rewards for Apprehending Felons.

Rewards.

THE law on this subject has in prior editions been collected here. It is considered best to place it under the more appropriate title Rewards, Vol. V. and see that title. The act now in force relating thereto is the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 28, 29, 30, which enactment makes a material alteration in the previous law collected in this part of prior editions of this work.

Forms, in Felonies.

Two forms of proceedings for a felony, viz. an information and warrant of apprehension for stealing goods were here inserted in prior editions. They will be found in title Arrest, Vol. III. See the various titles of Felonies throughout the work for the forms in general relative thereto.

Fighting.

(See Assault, Vol. I.; Riot, Vol. V.)

PRIZE-FIGHTING, like any other fighting, is illegal, and a breach of the peace. No consent can make it legal; and all the country being present would not make it less an offence; and, in general, prize-fights are unlawful assemblies, and every one going to them is guilty of an offence, and indictable accordingly. See R. v. Billingham, 1 M. & R. M. C. 127. "My advice to magistrates and constables is, in cases where they have information of a fight, to secure the combatants beforehand, and take them to a magistrate, who ought to compel them to enter into securities to keep the peace till the next assizes or sessions, and if they will not enter into such security, to commit them to prison. In this way the mischief would be prevented and the fights put a stop to." Per Bayley, Id. It is usual to require a surety for the peace between the two combatants and all other persons.

Fine, Punishment by (a).

Punishment by fine.

A FINE is the lowest species of punishment which can be inflicted. 11 Harg. St. Tr. 292.

It differs from an amercement, inasmuch as the latter, though ordered by the Court, is affeered or fixed by the jury, and the former is determined on by the judges, and forms a part of their sentence. 8 Rep. 40.

For what.

As to when a party may be fined see the different titles of offences throughout this work. It is only for the smaller species of offences that a party can be fined, as for misdemeanors, &c.

Who may fine.

Courts of record only can in general fine and imprison, and such a Court may fine for an offence committed in Court in their view, or by the confession of a party recorded in Court. 1 Lil. Ab. 621. Such a Court might fine for a contempt. 1 Rol. Ab. 219; 8 Rep. 38; 9 Rep. 60; 6 T. R. 530. Some Courts may fine but not imprison, as the court leet. Some may imprison but not fine, as the constables at the petty sessions, for any affray made in disturbance of the Court. 11 Rep. 44; 1 Rol. Rep. 74. Some Courts cannot fine or imprison, but may amerce, as the county court, hundred, &c. 11 Rep. 43 b. Some Courts can neither fine, imprison, nor amerce, as ecclesiastical Courts, held before the ordinary, archdeacon, &c., or their commissaries, and such who proceed according to the canon or civil law. 11 Rep. 44 a. Acts of Parliament sometimes give powers to Courts, though not of record, to fine.

Presence of defendant.

A defendant need not be personally present in Court where a judgment of fine only is pronounced against him, if, in such case, a clerk in court will undertake to pay the fine, and the Court think fit to dispense with his attendance. 1 Salk. 55; 2 Hawk. c. 48, s. 17; Com. Dig. Indictment, (N).

Who to have.

All fines and amercements are debts of record, and belong to the King the instant judgment is given. 3 Salk. 32; 2 B. & A. 613. But some part of a fine (usually a third) may be given to the prosecutor for the injuries he has sustained. Such part is given by the Court of King's Bench, they having the King's privy seal for that purpose. 1 Keb. 487; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 3; Bac. Ab. Indictment, (A).

Amount of fine.

The amount of the fine ought, in no case, to be excessive. See 9 Hen. III. c. 14.

It seems, that whenever fine and ransom are mentioned in a statute, the latter imports a sum three times the amount of the former. 2 Dyer, 232 a.; 4 Bla. Com. 380; sed vide Co. Lit. 127. When an act of Parliament directs a fine at the will of the King, this is always understood to mean at the discretion of the judges, and they fix it at their pleasure within constitutional boundaries. 3 Salk. 33.

Mitigation of.

But where a statute specifies the sum to be forfeited, the Court have no power to mitigate it after conviction. 3 Salk. 33. Nor have the King's Bench, in any case, authority to lessen a fine imposed by an inferior tribunal; but, in both these cases, redress may be obtained; in the former case, in the Court of Exchequer, Id., or sometimes at sessions; and in the latter, by petition to the lords of the treasury. 8 T. R. 618, n. It is said, however, to be the constant practice of the Court of King's Bench, to intimate a design of mitigating the fine to the King, if the offender will pay the prosecutor's costs, and make satisfaction for his damages. 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 3; Bac. Abr. Indictment, (A). And that Court is in possession of a writ of privy seal, issued at the commencement of every reign, warranting them in applying the money or part of it in defraying the prosecutor's expenses.

Feme covert.

On a motion to mitigate the fine the defendant should appear in person. 1 Ventr. 209; 3 Salk. 33.

When a married woman is convicted of a misdemeanor, some other punishment will be imposed in lieu of a fine, because, in contemplation of law, she can have nothing with which she may pay it. R. T. Hard. 279.

Fines and Forfeitures, Levying and Estreating of.

- I. Levying and Estreating of, in General, 739.
- II. Levying of, when imposed or taken before Justices of the Peace, and at Quarter Sessions, 742.

I. Levying and Estreating of, in General.

WHEN a fine is imposed by the Court of King's Bench, process may issue directly out of that Court to levy it. Such process is usually a levari facias. It may be issued directly, notwithstanding the judgment be both fine and imprisonment. R. v. Woolfe, 1 Chit. Rep. 428; 2 B. & A. 609, S. C. A capias pro fine may also be awarded. 1 Salk. 56.

Levying fine by Bench.

The Court will not give the sheriff directions how he shall dispose of property remaining in his hands, which has been seized in execution towards the payment of a fine imposed upon a defendant convicted of a blasphemous libel; but if the sheriff has made an improper return, it may be quashed. R. v. Carlile, 1 D. & R. 474.

The payment of an amercement may be enforced by distringas or action of debt. 2 New. Ab. 502.

Levying amerce-ment.

When a fine is imposed by the Court of King's Bench, it may be paid to any of its accredited officers, from whence it usually passes to the privy purse, without being brought into the Exchequer. 1 M<sup>c</sup>C. & Y. 534, 535. A payment to the King's coroner will suffice. R. v. Shackell, Id. 514.

Payment of fine.

The party is sufficiently discharged by the payment of the fine to any officer empowered to receive it, and is not bound to obtain a quietus from the Exchequer. Id.

When a person has entered into a recognizance to keep the peace, which becomes forfeited by his committing any breach of the peace, if it was acknowledged before a justice out of sessions, a writ of certiorari must be obtained to remove it into the Crown Office. This writ is obtained on laying an affidavit of the circumstances before a judge at chambers, who will grant fiat for the writ to issue; when the writ has been served and the recognizance is returned, a writ of scire facias is sued out at the Crown Office, stating the recognizance and suggesting the breach of it. This is delivered to the sheriff of the county in which the defendant resides, and he gives notice of it to the defendant, who must enter an appearance at the Crown Office, and plead any matter in defence; and on this issue is joined, and that issue tried in the same way as any other issue joined in the Crown Office, except that no proclamation is made at the trial, there being no crime to be tried. If the jury find the recognizance has been forfeited, they find a verdict for the crown, and judgment is entered up, and a fi. fa. or ca. sa. issued out of the Crown Office for the amount of the recognizance; but if to these writs there be a return of nihil or non est, or if the prosecutor take no steps to the judgment so signed, the recognizance is estreated into the Exchequer by the master of the Crown Office, in the same way as a recognizance forfeited by the non-appearance of a party to receive judgment; and process issues from the Exchequer. 2 C. & P. 11, n., and R. v. Wiblin, Id.

An estreat, as we have already seen, (ante, title Estreat, Vol. II.) is a true copy or note of some original writing or record, and especially of fines, amercements, and forfeitures, imposed in the rolls of a court, to be levied by the bailiff or proper officer.

By stat. 3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 12, clerks of assize, &c. may be amerced for not returning their estreats, by the barons of the Exchequer.

All estreats of fines, recognizances, amercements, and other forfeitures, (other than fines, recognizances, and forfeitures, forfeited before justices of the peace, and at quarter sessions, post, 742), are now regularly transmitted from all jurisdictions wherein they are imposed, into the treasurer's remembrancer's office in the Exchequer, which estreats, after examination of them by the third sworn clerk in office, in order to see that they are correctly taken, and after a short entry made thereof by him (for which service no fee is paid) are delivered by him to the clerk of the foreign estreats, or his deputy, who subscribes the entry of estreats, thereby charging himself with the receipt of them for the purpose of their being by him produced at the apposal of the sheriff, before the foreign apposer, who has a counterpart delivered to him by the sheriff, to the end that he may charge the said sheriff with such fines as are paid in court at the time of conviction, or otherwise; (see 1 M.C. & Y. 536, 537); and the remainder of such fines and forfeitures not so taken in charge, are sent out by the clerk of the estreats in the summons of the green wax (which is a levari facias, and in the nature of a feri facias), to the sheriffs of the respective counties, on the seal day after the return of the estreat into the Exchequer. This writ is returned in the following Easter term, and then the same officer issues a second summons to the sheriffs on the seal day after the following Trinity term. In the Michaelmas or Hilary term following, upon the return of the second process, the sheriffs are apposed before the foreign apposer, and those fines which are returned nihil, are handed over through the clerk of the nihil to the Pipe Office, and entered on the great roll, and become debts of record; land schedules from the great roll are sent from thence to the office of the lord treasurer's remembrancer, who, by his officers, orders the writ of extent to issue. In re Foreign Apposer, 2 Y. & J. 564.

It is the duty of the clerk of the estreats, as a matter of course, when he finds a fine estreated as unpaid, without further examination, or exercising any discretion whatever, to issue process for its recovery. See R. v. Shackell, 1 M.C. & Y. 523, 524; and see further as to the duty of the clerk of estreats, 7 Hen. IV. c. 3. In re Foreign Apposer, 2 Y. & J. 564. Such process is by feri facias, capias, and extent. When it appears that the fine has been paid, then the process should be, if any, against the officer who received it, in order that he may account for it, and not against the defendant. 1 M.C. & Y. 514.

By stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 22, s. 10, where any fine or forfeiture shall be paid to any sheriff, clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, or other officer, and be certified and estreated into the Exchequer, the process or summons of green wax shall go forth to the sheriff, against the officer or person to whom such fine or forfeiture is paid, for levying the same, &c.

Though fines and recognizances forfeited before justices of the peace, or at the quarter sessions, should not now be estreated into the Exchequer, in consequence of the provisions contained in the recent acts of 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, post, 742; and 4 Geo. IV. c. 37, post, 747; yet, if they be so estreated, that Court has jurisdiction over them, semb. 13 Price's Rep. 302, n.

From the earliest period, down to the statute 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 22, the practice was not to estreat fines and forfeitures into the Court of Exchequer, which were imposed by the Court of King's Bench, until they were paid. The duty imposed by that statute upon the officer of the Court of King's Bench is to estreat, not merely such fines as are paid, but also all fines that are not paid.

Where fines on defendants convicted on indictments or criminal informations are set in Hilary or Easter Term, and not paid before the end of the following Hilary Term, the King's coroner, or other proper officer, is bound, by the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 22, to estreat them into the Exchequer, as fines imposed and not received on the last day of the ensuing Trinity or Hilary term respectively; and if any such fine be subsequently paid to the first officer, it is his duty, under the statute, to make a second estreat of it into the Exchequer, as of a fine received on the last day of the succeeding Trinity or Hilary Term, as the case may be, and a previous application to discharge the first estreat in the whole or in part is unnecessary. R. v. Shackell, 1 M'Cl. & Y. 514, 523.

By stat. 4 & 5 Wm. III. c. 24, s. 5, all clerks of assize, &c., upon delivery of their estreats, are to take the following oath before one of the barons of the Exchequer (a):

Oath to be taken.

"YOU shall swear, that these estreats, now by you delivered, are truly and carefully made up and examined, and that all fines, issues, amercements, recognizances, and forfeitures, which were set, lost, imposed, or forfeited, and in right and due course of law ought to be estreated in the Court of Exchequer, are, to the best of your knowledge and understanding, therein contained; and that in the same estreats are also contained and expressed all such fines as have been paid into the Court, from which the said estreats are made, without any wilful or fraudulent discharge, omission, misnomer, or defect whatsoever. So help you God."

Form of oath.

When the estreats come into the aforesaid office, the parties concerned have an opportunity of traversing the King's right, in which case they employ one of the sworn clerks in the office as their attorney, and another of the sworn clerks is retained on the part of the crown in support of its right, who carry on the pleadings in this office according to the course of the common law, and the right is either determined by the Court on demurrer, or after issue joined by a jury, and the pleadings and judgments thereon are entered on record by sworn clerks on rolls, intituled, the memoranda of each year. 2 Man. Exch. Prac. App. 253.

Traversing King's right to fine.

The parties may also apply in a summary way for the favour of the Court of Exchequer, which is empowered, under a writ of privy seal, issued at the commencement of every reign, to compound or discharge any fines, issues, amercements, and recognizances, according to the custom of each case. 2 Man. Exch. Pract. App. 253; see also the 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39.

Compounding and discharging fines,
&c. by Court of Exchequer.

Also, by stat. 4 Geo. III. c. 10, this authority of the Exchequer is enlarged; and after reciting, that in order to relieve ignorant people, especially poor persons, whose recognizances, as parties or witnesses, have, by reason of their inattention, been estreated, it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for the barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer, upon affidavit and petition to be presented to them by or on the behalf of the person or persons imprisoned, or liable to be imprisoned, on the forfeiture of any such recognizances, to discharge such person or persons, by order from the said barons, without any quietus to be sued out for that purpose; for which order no more than 1*l.* shall be taken by the officer appointed to give out the same; but no discharge shall be given on such petitions, where any debt is due to the Crown, other than by recognizances so prayed to be discharged; nor in any cases of defrauding his Majesty's revenue by contraband trade, or assaulting his Majesty's officers of the customs or excise, in the execution of their duty, or any person or persons lawfully assisting them therein. This act has not been frequently brought into notice; it has been considered as giving the Court greater power than it before had. See R. v. Cartman, 1 Price, 637, where an estreat of a forfeited recognizance on a serious offence was discharged under the act. The usual documents to found an application for this discharge are a constat, petition, certificate, and affidavit, verifying the statements in the petition. See further, as to discharging, mitigating, and compounding fines and forfeited recognizances, 1 Price, Exch. Pract. c. 13.

II. Levying &c. of Fines and Forfeitures imposed before Justices and at Sessions.

Fines and forfeitures before justices, and at sessions.

THE provisions of the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 22, which relate to fines, issues, and amercements, forfeited recognizances, sum or sums of money paid or to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them, or any of them, imposed and adjudged at any quarter sessions of the peace, and of the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24, which make the same perpetual, are now repealed by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46; and proceedings to be adopted in future, for enforcing the payment of fines and forfeited recognizances, before justices or the court of general or quarter sessions, are directed by that act, and by stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 37, passed for amending it.

These new provisions have, it seems, effected a complete change in the law and practice in respect to recognizances forfeited at sessions; and it seems now the duty of sessions not to estreat the forfeited recognizances into the Exchequer, as formerly, but to issue process thereon immediately themselves, in order that the amount may be forthwith levied; and the clerks of the peace have no longer any authority to send the estreat into the Exchequer: though, if indeed the estreat be sent into that Court, it has jurisdiction over it. money, which shall have been paid or otherwise accounted for; and such oath shall be made in the form following:—

"I, , make oath, That this roll is truly and carefully made up and examined, and that all fines, issues, amerciaments, recognizances, and forfeitures, which were set, lost, imposed, or forfeited, and in right and due course of law ought to be levied and paid, are, to the best of my knowledge and understanding, inserted in the said roll, and that in the said roll are also contained and expressed all such fines as have been paid to or received by me, either in Court or otherwise, without any wilful or fraudulent discharge, omission, misnomer, or defect whatever. So help me God."

Sect. 4 enacts "That each and every justice of the peace before whom any recognizance shall be entered into or taken, shall and is hereby required to give, or cause to be given, at the time of entering into such recognizance, to the person or persons, surety or sureties so entering into the same, and to each of them, a written or printed paper or notice, in the form or to the effect stated in the schedule marked (B) (a), to this act annexed, adapting the same to the particular circumstances of the case; and each and every such justice shall, in such recognizance, state and particularly specify not only the profession, art, mystery, or trade of every person so entering into such recognizance, together with their Christian name and names and surnames, but also the parish, township, or place of his or her residence; and in case such residence shall be in any city, town, or borough, shall also state and particularly specify the name of the street and number of the house (if any) in which such person shall reside, and also whether owner or tenant thereof, or lodger therein."

Sect. 5 provides and enacts, "That if any person, on whose goods and chattels such sheriff, bailiff, or officer, shall be authorized to levy any such forfeited recognizance, or sum of money to be paid in lieu or satisfaction thereof, shall give security (b) to the said sheriff, bailiff, or officer, for his appearance at the next general or quarter sessions, then and there to abide the decision of the Court, and also to pay such forfeited recognizance, or sum of money to be paid in lieu or satisfaction thereof, together with all such expenses (c) as shall be ordered and adjudged by the Court, it shall be lawful for such sheriff, bailiff, or officer, and he is hereby authorized and required, to discharge such person so giving such security out of custody: provided also, that in case such party so giving security shall not appear in pursuance of his undertaking, it shall be lawful for the Court forthwith to issue a writ of distringas and capias, or fieri facias and capias, against the surety or sureties of the person so bound as aforesaid."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That the court of general or quarter sessions, before whom any person so committed to gaol or bound to appear shall be brought, is hereby authorized and required to inquire into the circumstances of the case, and shall, at its discretion, be empowered to order the discharge of the whole of the forfeited recognizance, or sum of money paid or to be paid in lieu or satisfaction thereof, or any part thereof (d); and such order shall be made in the form or to the effect of the schedule marked (C) to this act an-

(b) If the party be desirous of appealing to the sessions for relief against the forfeited recognizance, he should give the security here pointed out, and not pay the money to the sheriff or allow him to levy on his goods, for the clause does not extend to cases where such payment or levy is made, but only to those where the sheriff has taken the body or security. Haynes v. Hayton, 7 B. & C. 293; 2 C. & P. 621, S. C. The above section has been considered as very inaccurately worded. See per Bayley, J., 7 B. & C. 298.

It is questionable whether on such a levy the sheriff is entitled to poundage. Id.

(c) Costs may be awarded under this provision. 7 B. & C. 300.

(d) The sessions have no other jurisdiction than that given by this act; and the power given them is confined to cases in which a party brought before the sessions has been committed to gaol, or been bound to appear under a security given, according to the 5th section. It does not extend to cases where a party pays the money in order to prevent a sale by the sheriff or otherwise. Haynes v. Hayton, 7 B. & C. 293; 2 C. & P. 621, S. C. Therefore, where a party whose recognizance had become forfeited for not appearing to an indictment, and nexed (a), and shall be signed by the clerk of the peace, which said order shall be a discharge to such sheriff, bailiff, or officer, on the passing of his accounts at the Exchequer, or before any auditor or other proper officer duly authorized to pass the same; and in all cases where the party shall have been lodged in the common gaol by such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, the justices of the peace so assembled are hereby empowered either to remand such party to the custody of the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, or, upon the release of such party from the whole of such forfeited recognizance, to order such party to be discharged from custody, and such order shall be a full and sufficient discharge to the said sheriff, bailiff, or officer, on the passing of his accounts at the Exchequer, or before any auditor or other proper officer duly authorized to pass the same; and it shall and may be lawful to and for the said court of general or quarter sessions to award such costs, charges, and expenses to be paid by either party to the other, as to the said court shall seem just and reasonable."

Sect. 9 provides and enacts, "That none of the proceedings under this act shall be liable to or charged with any stamp duty."

Sect. 10 enacts, "That the clerk of the peace and other officers shall be entitled to their usual and legal fees on the discharge of any forfeited recognizance, and the said clerk of the peace to an allowance of 6*d.* for every one hundred words, for all copies of the roll sent to the said lords commissioners of the treasury; and in case any such sheriff, bailiff, officer, or clerk of the peace shall refuse or neglect to do and perform any duty, act, or thing imposed or required upon or from such sheriff or clerk, bailiff or officer, in manner by this act directed, then, and in every such case, such sheriff, bailiff, or officer, or clerk so refusing or neglecting, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 50*l.*, to be recovered by any person or persons who will sue for the same, together with full costs of suit, by action of debt or on the case, in any of his Majesty's Courts of record at Westminster, wherein no essoign, protection, wager of law, or any more than one imparlance shall be allowed."

Sect. 11 provides and enacts, "That nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend so as to prevent or interfere with the appropriation of any such fines, issues, amerciaments, forfeited recognizances, sum or sums of money, when so paid or accounted for into the said Court of Exchequer by any such sheriff, bailiff, or officer, but the same shall and may be applied, disposed of, and appropriated in such and the like manner as such fines, issues, amerciaments, forfeited recognizances, sum or sums of money paid in lieu or satisfaction of them or any of them, paid into the Exchequer, were applied, disposed of, and appropriated before the passing of this act."

Sect. 12 provides and enacts, "That it shall be lawful for the lords commissioners of his Majesty's treasury to make such compensation as they may think fit, for the loss of any legal fees occasioned to the officers thereof, or to the officers of the Court of the duchy of Lancaster, by this act."

Sect. 13 provides and enacts, "That nothing in this act contained shall extend or be in any ways prejudicial to the rights, liberties, or privileges of the king's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, in right of his duchy or county palatine of Lancaster; but that the same rights and privileges shall be enjoyed and used in all respects, and to all intents and against whom process had issued, paid the sheriff the sum in the recognizance, in order to prevent a sale of his goods; and the justices at sessions afterwards, by order, mitigated the recognizance to a small sum, and directed the sheriff to discharge the residue from the recognizance: it was held that such order was void, and that the party was not entitled to recover from the sheriff the sum which the justices had ordered to be discharged. Id.

Since this provision, it seems now to be the duty of sessions not to estreat a

"In all cases where the party incurring or subject to any fine, issue, amerciament, forfeited recognizance,* sum or sums of money to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them or any of them, shall reside or shall have fled or removed from or out of the jurisdiction of the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, in which any such fine, issue, amerciament, forfeited recognizance, sum or sums of money to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them, or any of them, shall have been incurred, imposed, or forfeited, or become due, it shall be lawful for such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, and he is hereby authorized and required to issue his warrant, together with a copy of the writ, directed to the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer acting for the county, riding, city, borough, or place in which such person shall then reside or be, or in which any goods or chattels or other property shall be found, requiring such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer to execute such writ, and every such last-mentioned sheriff, bailiff, or other officer is hereby authorized and required to act in all respects under such warrant, in the same manner as if the original writ had been delivered to him by order of the court of the general or quarter sessions of the county, riding, city, borough, or place for which such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer shall act; and the said sheriff, bailiff, or other officer is hereby required, within thirty days after the receipt of such warrant, to return to the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, from whom he shall have received the same, what he shall have done in the execution of such process, and whether the party shall have given good and sufficient security to appeal at the ensuing general or quarter sessions to be held for the county, riding, city, borough, or place from which the writ issued; and, in case a levy shall have been made, to pay over all monies received in pursuance of the warrant to the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer from whom he shall have received the same."

Sect. 4. "Every sheriff, bailiff, or other officer acting for any county, division, riding, city, borough, or place, shall, and he is hereby required, to make up or cause to be made up annually, and immediately after the expiration of the year for which he shall act, or after the usual period for making up his account, in case he shall act under any grant, appointment, or other authority, for a longer period than one year, an account in writing, containing the names and residences of all persons incurring fines, issues, amerciaments, forfeited recognizances,* sum or sums of money paid or to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them or any of them, which he has been authorized or required to levy, by virtue of any writ or writs issued to him, or to any* predecessor in office; and in case any fine, issue, amerciament, forfeited recognizance,* sum or sums of money paid or to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them or any of them, shall not have been levied or paid, the causes of non-payment shall be fully and particularly stated; and such account such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer is hereby required to transmit, within thirty days from the expiration of the year for which such account ought to be made up, to the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or at or within such other period as such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer shall be required by the said commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them, in order that such account may be duly examined, checked, and inspected, under the direction of the said commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them; and when so examined and approved, such account shall be transmitted to the proper officer in the Court of Exchequer, or to the auditor or other officer duly authorized to pass such account."

Sect. 5. "Every clerk of the peace, and town clerk, or other proper officer, is hereby required, within twenty days from the opening of the court of general or quarter sessions, to send to the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, a copy or an extract of the roll or rolls delivered by the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, on the first day of the opening of such court of general or quarter sessions, in such form as shall be required by the said commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, also the causes of discharge in case any person shall have been relieved on appeal to the said court of general or quarter sessions, and the answer given by any sheriff, bailiff, or other officer to such court, where any fine, issue, amercement, forfeited recognizance, * sum or sums of money paid or to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them or any of them, has not been received by such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer duly authorized to receive the same."

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the stat. 31 Hen. VIII. c. 2, (which relates to fishing in ponds), and the statutes 5 Eliz. c. 21, 5 Geo. III. c. 14, and also so much of the stat 4 W. & M. c. 23, as relates to fish, and the whole of the stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, (except sections 1, 2, 3.)

The 35th section of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, also enacts, "That if any person shall at any time be found fishing, against the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for the owner of the ground, water, or fishery, where such offender shall be so found, his servants, or any person authorized by him, to demand from such offender any rods, lines, hooks, nets, or other implements for taking or destroying fish, which shall then be in his possession, and in case such offender shall not immediately deliver up the same, to seize and take the same from him for the use of such owner: provided always, that any person angling in the day-time against the provisions of this act, from whom any implements used by anglers shall be taken, or by whom the same shall be delivered up as aforesaid, shall, by the taking or delivering thereof, be exempted from the payment of any damages or penalty for such angling."

The 5th section of the stat. 4 W. & M. c. 23, which was nearly similar to the above enactment, is now repealed by the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, so far as it "relates to pigeons and fish, and to persons wrongfully fishing, and to all instruments and engines for destroying or taking fish."

The general clauses of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, affecting all the provisions of that act, will be found at large, title Tarping, Vol. III., 550 to 556.

The 63rd section contains a provision for the apprehension of offenders except only those guilty of the offence of angling, post, Vol. III. p. 551.

The 64th and the following sections regulate the proceedings in respect of summary convictions, post, Vol. III. p. 552, 553.

The 66th section relates to the application of forfeitures and penalties on summary convictions. See the section, post, 763, 764, n.

The 71st section gives a general form of conviction, post, Vol. III. p. 554.

The 61st section as to cases of felony, makes principals in the second degree and accessaries before the fact, punishable in the same manner as principals in the first degree and accessaries after the fact, except receivers, who are, on conviction, liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years; and abettors in misdemeanors are liable to be indicted and punished as principal offenders, post, Vol. III. p. 551.

The 62nd section makes abettors in offences punishable on summary conviction, punishable as principals, post, Vol. III. p. 551.

The above enactment of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 34, is, in its wording, very different from that of the prior statutes, relative to the offence of taking or destroying fish.

Thus the 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 1, in order to render it an indictable offence to enter into an inclosed park or garden, &c. to destroy fish, required the fish should be "bred, kept, or preserved" therein(a); but these not being in the new statute, this fact is no longer requisite.

(a) See the 35th section of the act, this penalty, if he give up his tackle, or infra, which exempts the angler from the same be taken from him.

in, the same section of the 5 Geo. III. in making it an indictable offence to take fish, confined such offence to the taking in waters running in peculiar places, such as an inclosed park, &c. or garden, &c. adjacent, &c.; whereas the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. extends it to the taking, &c., of "any water running through or being in any land adjoining or being to the dwelling-house," &c.

in, the 3rd section of the same act of 5 Geo. III. imposed a penalty for the use of the owner only, on persons found guilty, on summary conviction, of taking or destroying fish in water "being in an inclosed which was private property;"(b) and it was necessary, to support a conviction under that act, to state and prove that the offence was committed in inclosed ground, being private property. R. v. Sadler, 2 Chit. Rep. 127; Lisle v. Brown, 1 Marsh. 127; 5 Taunt. 440, S. C.(d); Wickes v. Buck, 2 Bing. 483. But this is not so under the new act.

The first section of the 5 Geo. III. c. 14, also has the words "without the consent of the owner," which are not in the new statute. Now, under the new words, it was, it should seem, necessary not only to state in the indictment, but also prove, that the act was without the consent of the owner. v. Mallinson, 2 Burr. 679; R. v. Rodgers, 2 Campb. 654. This, it is held, is not necessary under the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29; at all events, though it might be necessary to adduce some evidence to negative the owner's consent, the owner need not be called for the purpose; his non-consent may be inferred from other circumstances, or proved by his agents. Regent, R. v. Chamberlain, R. & M. C. C. 155, so decided on the 5 Geo. III. c. 14.

, the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 7 (e), enacted that persons stealing stat. 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 1, it enacted—If any person shall enter any park or paddock fenced in or being or into any garden, orchard, or other land or belonging to any dwelling-house, in or through which park, &c. or garden, &c. any river or stream of water shall run or be; or wherein shall any river, stream, pond, pool, moat, or other water; and by any means whatsoever shall steal, take, destroy any fish, bred, kept, or preserved in any such river, &c. without the consent of the owner: or shall be or assisting therein as aforesaid, shall receive or buy any such fish, or being the same to be so stolen as aforesaid; and being convicted within six calendar months after such offence or offence shall have been committed, before any justice of gaol delivery for the county wherein any such park or paddock, orchard, or yard, shall be; or on such indictment, be by verdict or confession convicted of such offence, the person or persons so convicted shall be transported for seven years.

indictment on this sect. against a person who had taken fish in an inclosed park and taking fish, &c. and preserved there, in a stream running through the park

—It appeared that the park was walled round, except where the river entered and passed out, and that there were fences to keep in the deer, that there was nothing to keep in the fish, that they were not known to breed there, that nothing was done to stock the river, but that persons were never suffered to angle in the park without leave. It was held that this was not a place where fish were to be considered as "bred, kept, or preserved," within the meaning of this act, and therefore the conviction was wrong.

(b) See the words of the section, post, 762, n.

(c) See this case, post, 765.

(d) In this case it was decided, that a stream of water running by the side of a piece of ground, and forming part of the inclosure of the ground, is not a stream "in inclosed ground," within the meaning of the 3rd section of the 5 Geo. III.: though it appeared that the ground was inclosed on every other side of it, and that the ground on the opposite side of the stream was likewise inclosed, though the property of a different person.

(e) This statute, after reciting, that whereas divers idle, disorderly, and mean persons betake themselves to the stealing, taking, and killing of fish out of ponds, pools, moats, stews, and other several fish "without the consent of the owner," should, on conviction, make compensation to him for the same, and forfeit a sum not exceeding 10s. for the use of the poor. The 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3 (a), gave a penalty of 5*l.* to the owner only of the fishery, for stealing his fish out of an inclosed ground not being a park, &c. This latter provision did not contain the words without the consent of the owner.

In the case of R. v. Mallinson, 2 Burr. 679, a conviction on the statute of Car. for taking and killing fish, not setting forth (amongst other particulars) that the defendant had not the licence or consent of the owner, was adjudged to be bad. For, by the Court, the offence provided against by the act is stealing fish, taking it without the consent of the owner. The jurisdiction given to the justice is over every such offender in stealing, taking, and killing. And it has been holden, that it must appear upon a conviction under this third clause of the 5 Geo. III. that there was a complaint by the owner, and that the fishing was without the owner's consent. R. v. Corden, 4 Burr.

waters and rivers, to the great damage of the owners thereof; enacted, that if any person shall use any net whatsoever, or any angle, hair, noose, troll, or spear; or shall lay any wears, pots, nets, fish hooks, or other engines; or shall take any fish by any means or device whatsoever, or be aiding thereunto in any river, stew, pond, moat, or other water as aforesaid, without the consent of the lord or owner of the water, and be thereof convicted by confession, or oath of one witness, before one justice, in one month after the offence; every such offender in stealing, taking, or killing fish shall, for every such offence, give to the party injured such recompence for his damages, and in such time as the justice shall appoint, not exceeding treble damages; and moreover shall pay down to the overseers for the use of the poor such sum, not exceeding 10*s.*, as the justice shall think meet: in default of payment, to be levied by distress and sale, rendering the overplus, if any; for want of distress, to be committed to the house of correction not exceeding one month, unless he enter into bond with one surety to the party injured, not exceeding 10*l.*, never to offend in like manner.

(a) By the 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3, it was enacted—"In case any person or persons shall, after the 1st of June, 1765, take, kill, or destroy, or attempt to take, kill, or destroy, any fish, in any river or stream, pond, pool, or other water (not being in any park or paddock, or in any garden, orchard or yard, adjoining or belonging to any dwelling-house, but shall be in any other inclosed ground which shall be private property), every such person, being lawfully convicted thereof by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of 5*l.* to the owner or owners of the fishery of such river or stream of water, or of such pond, pool, moat, or other water; and it shall and may be lawful to and for any one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace in the county, division, riding, or place where such last-mentioned offence or offences shall be committed, upon complaint made to him or them upon oath, against any person or persons, for any such last-mentioned offence or offences, to issue his or their warrant or warrants, to bring the person or persons so complained of before him or them; and if the person or persons so complained of shall be convicted of any of the said offences last mentioned, before such justice or justices, or any other of his Majesty's justices of the same county, division, riding, or place aforesaid, by the oath or oaths of one or more credible witness or witnesses, which oath such justice or justices are hereby authorized to administer, or by his or their own confession, then and in such case the party so convicted shall, immediately after such conviction, pay the said penalty of 5*l.* hereby before imposed for the offence or offences aforesaid, to such justice or justices before whom he shall be so convicted, for the use of such person or persons as the same is hereby appointed to be forfeited and paid unto; and, in default thereof, shall be committed by such justice or justices to the house of correction, for any time not exceeding six months, unless the money forfeited shall be sooner paid."

Sect. 4. Or such owner of the fishery may bring an action for the penalty (within six calendar months after the offence), in any of the Courts of record at Westminster.

Sect. 5. Provided that nothing in this act shall extend to subject any person to the penalties thereof, who shall fish, take, or kill, and carry away any fish in any river or stream of water, pond, pool, or other water, wherein such person shall have a just right or claim to take, kill, or carry away any such fish.

And, in a more recent case, it was clearly holden, that, in a conviction, stat. 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3, it must be distinctly stated in the information, and in the evidence, that the proceeding was at the instance of the owner of the fishery. R. v. Daman, 2 B. & A. 378; 1 Chit. Rep. 147, S. C. (a). It is to be observed, that the wording of the late act 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 34, is materially different in these respects from these prior enactments, the stat. Car. II. and Geo. III., for it wholly omits the words "with the consent of the owner," and does not state that the penalty is to be levied on the owner only, or empower him to bring an action for it. Consequently it is submitted, that it would not be now necessary, in a conviction under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 34, to state or prove that the wrongful act was done with the consent of the owner of the fishery, or that the conviction was at the instance (b). It would be presumed the owner did not consent, in this case, the defendant had been convicted before three justices of the peace of Southampton, under the 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3, of destroying, with gun or fire, in inclosed grounds, being the property of the defendant. The conviction stated—"Be it remembered, that, on the 15th day of May, 1818, at &c., Sir Henry Fane, Bart., at the instance and on the behalf of the Honourable Anne Fane, lady of the manor of Avon Tyrry, in the county of Southampton, came in his private capacity before us, and gave us to be believed, that the defendant, for the offence of destroying, with gun or fire, in inclosed grounds, being the property of the said lady Anne, and thus: "Whereupon the said Sir Henry Fane, on behalf of the said A. Fane, lady of the manor, and owner of the said fishery, prayed judgment, that the defendant might be brought to answer the charge." The conviction then set out the defendant's appearance and plea, and the finding of the jury. But it was not extended, either upon the face of the conviction, or in the evidence, that the proceeding was at the instance of the owner of the fishery. The conviction was removed into the Court of Queen's Bench, by certiorari, and a rule was obtained to quash it. Chitty argued, that the conviction, and Cass supported it. Per Bayley, J. "In the case of a conviction, nothing is to be presumed, either by intendment, or by necessary intendment; and therefore we must, on every occasion, look only to the words of the conviction, and the act of Parliament. The act of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 34, for the more effectual preservation of the fishery, and it directs that the offender shall forfeit, for every offence, 5*l.* of the fishery. The forfeiture is to be made to the owner of the fishery, and the act gives him a right to bring the penalty either by action, or by distress. In the latter case, the action must be in his name; and, therefore, it follows, by necessary intendment, that it must appear on the face of the proceedings, either that the penalty is sued for in his name, or at his instance. And it is not sufficient that this fact should be stated by the justice in the conviction, but it must be also embodied in the information, and established by the proof. In this case, the magistrates state in the conviction, that Sir Henry Fane, at the instance and on the behalf of the Honourable Anne Fane, lady of the manor, &c. appeared before them. Now it does not appear upon what authority that fact is stated, and there is nothing proceeding from the party which leads to that conclusion. Then, in the information it is stated, that Sir H. Fane, on the behalf of A. Fane, prays the judgment; but it is not stated that he does it at her instance, and there is a material distinction between the two phrases. For the latter necessarily implies a previous communication, which the former does not. Then comes the appearance of the defendant, and his plea of not guilty, after hearing the information read. Now, as the information is wholly silent as to the person at whose instance the charge is made, the defendant is unapprised of that circumstance; and it is to be observed, that if that fact had formed part of the information, the plea of not guilty would have put it in issue, and made it necessary for the prosecutor to prove it. I am, therefore, of opinion, that the act of Parliament requires the information to be in the name, or at the instance of the party grieved, and that that must appear both in the information and in the evidence stated in the conviction. And that not having been done in this case, this conviction must be quashed.

(b) It will be observed, the 66th sect. of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, does not, like the prior acts, in every event give compensation to the owner; and he will not by that act be entitled to it, if he be examined as a witness in support of the offence, or be not known. The general form of conviction also given by the 71st and it would be for the defendant to prove the contrary, by calling the owner himself, or otherwise. Indeed, it is not to be conceived how any third person could in proof of the offence swear positively to the negative fact of the owner not having consented, and if the owner were bound to prove it, he could not possibly obtain compensation as the party aggrieved, the 66th section of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, taking that compensation away from him, if he be examined as a witness in proof of the offence.

It should seem that a person who fishes in a fishery belonging to another, but to which he has a claim, for the purpose of giving occasion to an action in order to try the right, is not liable to the penalty. See Kinnerley v. Orpe, Dougl. 517, decided on the 3rd section of the 5 Geo. III. c. 14, ante, 762, n.; at all events, however, the party claiming the right must have some fair and plausible colour of title to the fishery. See ante, Vol. I. 832, 833.

A conviction before a justice of the peace under the above act of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. must, like all others, shew the offence to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the convicting justice. Where a conviction on the 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3, for fishing without the consent of the owner, in part of a certain stream "which runneth between B. in the parish of A., in the county of W., and C. in the same parish and county," was quashed, because it did not appear that the intermediate course of the stream between the two termini, in which the offence was alleged to be committed, was in the county of W.; and the Court said, they would not presume that the place where the offence was committed, was within the jurisdiction of the convicting magistrate, but it must expressly so appear; and that it did not follow that the intermediate course of the stream was in the same county with the two termini mentioned, the fact being often otherwise. R. v. Edwards, 1 East, 278; see ante, p. 760, as to streams constituting boundaries of parishes, &c.

The means used to take the fish need not be stated in the indictment or conviction. R. v. Carradice, R. & R. C. C. 206.

Though the indictment should state the offender feloniously to have taken the fish, that averment would be immaterial, as the word feloniously would be rejected as surplusage. Id.

It seems necessary to specify in an indictment or conviction, that a certain number of fish were taken. Rex v. Marshal, 2 Keb. 594. An indictment or conviction for taking divers fish, without specifying some number, would be bad. See Id.; Paley on Convictions, 82; and see R. v. Daman, 1 sect. of the act is as if it were founded at the instance of a third person, and not the owner. The following is the enactment of that act, as to the application of forfeitures: Sect. 66. 'And with regard to the application of all forfeitures and penalties upon summary convictions under this act,' it is enacted "That every sum of money, which shall be forfeited for the value of any property stolen or taken, or for the amount of any injury done, (such value or amount to be assessed in each case by the convicting justice), shall be paid to the party aggrieved, if known, except where such party shall have been examined in proof of the offence; and in that case, or where the party aggrieved is unknown, such sum shall be applied in the same manner as a penalty; and every sum which shall be imposed as a penalty by any justice of the peace, whether in addition to such value or amount, or otherwise, shall be paid to some one of the overseers of the poor, or to some other officer, (as the justice may direct), of the parish, township, or place in which the offence shall have been committed, to be by such overseer or officer paid over to the use of the general rate of the county, riding, or division, in which such parish, township, or place shall be situate, whether the same shall or shall not contribute to such general rate: provided always, that where several persons shall join in the commission of the same offence, and shall, upon conviction thereof, each be adjudged to forfeit a sum equivalent to the value of the property, or to the amount of the injury, in every such case no further sum shall be paid to the party aggrieved than that which shall be forfeited by one of such offenders only; and the corresponding sum or sums forfeited by the other offender or offenders shall be applied in the same manner as any penalty imposed by a justice of the peace is hereinbefore directed to be applied."

—Bower, on a former day, had obtained a rule to shew cause why the conviction should not be quashed, for two objections, viz. that it was wrong in stating the offence in the alternative, that the defendant did kill, &c. or attempt to kill, &c. and that it did not state the offence to have been committed in an inclosed ground. He now moved to make the rule absolute; and on the first objection urged, that it was a well-founded general rule, that against the statute 7 & 8 Geo. Where several persons are so jointly liable, it should seem, that only one conviction, with an award of several penalties against each, and not several convictions, should be made. Paley's Conv. 160; *R. v. Observations and

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 15, enacts, "That if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously break down or otherwise destroy the dam of any fishpond, or of any water which shall be private property, or in which there shall be any private right of fishery, with intent thereby to take or destroy any of the fish in such pond or water, or so as thereby to cause the loss or destruction of any of the fish, or shall unlawfully and maliciously put any lime or other noxious material in any such pond or water, with intent thereby to destroy any of the fish therein, or shall unlawfully and maliciously break down or otherwise destroy the dam of any millpond, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years; and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, (if the Court shall so think fit), in addition to such imprisonment."

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the prior acts relative to this offence, viz. the stat. 5 Eliz. c. 21; the 9 Geo. I. c. 22; and the stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 54; except as to threatening letters.

The general clauses affecting this, and all the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, will be found post, title Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 722 to 727.

The provision in the above act as to putting noxious materials into fish ponds, &c., and breaking down the dams of mill ponds, is not to be found in prior acts.

The statute of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, in some respects differs importantly from the prior act 9 Geo. I. c. 22; this offence, under the stat. 9 Geo. I. c. 22, must have been proved to have been committed from malice to the owner of the water; and therefore, where it appeared, that the defendant had broken down the mound of a fish pond, in order to steal the fish, the judges held that it was not an offence within the statute. R. v. Ross, 2 East's P. C. 1067; R. & R. 10, S. C. (a). But this is not required by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV.

In all legal proceedings charging a party with an injury or crime, the nature of such injury or crime must be so described, that the defendant may know what he is called upon to answer; that the jury (or, in this instance, that the justice) may appear to be warranted in their conclusion of "guilty" or "not guilty," upon the premises delivered to them; and that the court or judge may see such a definite injury or crime, that they may apply the remedy or the punishment which the law prescribes. For this he cited 2 Cowp. 682-3; 1 Ld. Raym. 171. On the second objection, he contended, that, to bring an offence within the meaning of the 5 Geo. III. it should be committed within some "inclosed ground;" and that the conviction, being deficient in this statement, it was bad.—The Court admitting the validity of these objections, the conviction was quashed. See also the cases in 3 T. R. 159; Doug. 278.

(a) In this case Thomas Ross was indicted on 9 Geo. I. c. 22, for unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously breaking down the head and mound of two fish ponds in a place called Bosworth Park, belonging to Sir Wolston Dixie, Bart. "whereby the fish therein were lost and destroyed." It was proved that a part of the head or mound of one of the ponds had been cut down to a considerable depth by two persons, of whom the prisoner was one, so as to leave but little water in the pond, and that the fish were gone. But it appeared to have been the object of the offenders to steal the fish, and not this act the offence must be proved to have been done maliciously; but whether from malice to the owner, or otherwise, is immaterial: and it is sufficient if it be done with intent to take or destroy the fish, or so as thereby to cause the loss or destruction of them.

lecting any case upon the construction of this clause, he left the evidence of the facts to the jury, who found the prisoner guilty, and he respited judgment in order to take the opinion of the judges upon the question of law.— In Trinity Term, 1800, the judges, on conference, held the conviction wrong, as the clause against breaking the heads, &c. of ponds does not extend to cases where the object of the party was to steal the fish; which is guarded against by another clause; and that even if the offence proved had been originally within the Black Act, it was virtually taken out of it by the subsequent statute of 5 Geo. III. c. 14.

Perhaps, (observes Mr. East), stat. 5 Eliz., which was not adverted to upon that occasion, may also be thought to meet the case so far as concerns the act of cutting the dam with intent to steal the fish.

And by sect. 15, no salmon shall be sent to fishmongers or their agents in London, under six pounds' weight; on pain that the sender, buyer, or seller, on the like conviction, shall forfeit 5*l*. and the fish; half the penalty and fish to the informer, and half to the poor; the said sum to be levied by distress; for want of sufficient distress, to be committed to the house of correction, or other county gaol or prison, there to be kept to hard labour for three months, if not paid in the mean time.

By sect. 17, persons aggrieved may appeal to the next sessions.

By stat. 13 Edw. I. st. 1, c. 47, it is enacted, That no salmon shall be taken in the Humber, Ouse, Trent, Don, Aire, Derwent, Wharfe, Nidd, Yore, Swale, Tese, Tine, Eden, or any other water wherein salmon are taken, between September 8th and November 11th. Nor shall any young salmon be taken at mill-pools (nor in other places, 13 Rich. II. st. 1, c. 19), from the midst of April, until the nativity of St. John baptist, on pain of having the nets and engines burnt for the first offence; for the second, imprisonment for a quarter of a year; for the third, a whole year; and as the trespass increaseth, so shall the punishment. And overseers shall be assigned to inquire hereof. That is, under the great seal, and by authority of Parliament. 2 Inst. 477.

And stat. 43 Geo. III. c. lxi. s. 1, after reciting, Whereas the periods limited by the said acts of 13 Edw. I. and 13 Rich. II. are not suited to the fisheries for salmon, salmon peal, or salmon kind, or bouges, otherwise sea trout, or to the protection of the spawn or fry of salmon in the rivers commonly called the Teign, Dart, or Plym, in the county of Devon, and have been found very prejudicial to the owners and proprietors of the fisheries in such rivers, and to the public; and whereas it is necessary that provision should be made for the better preservation of salmon, and the spawn, fry, or young brood of salmon, salmon peal, salmon kind, and bouges or sea trout, in the said rivers Teign, Dart, and Plym, and in the several rivulets or streams of water communicating therewith; enacts, That it shall be lawful for the respective owners and proprietors, and persons legally entitled to fish in the said rivers or waters called the Dart, Teign, and Plym, in the said county, or in any of the streams of water or rivulets communicating therewith, and their respective servants and agents at any time in the year between the 4th of March and the 4th of December, within the Teign, and the several rivulets or streams communicating therewith, with legal and proper nets, or hooks and lines, to take, kill, or destroy any salmon, salmon peal, or salmon kind, and to offer to sale any such fish so taken between the said periods within the Teign and the several rivulets or streams communicating therewith; and also at any time between the 15th of February, and the 15th of November within the said rivers Dart and Plym, and the several rivulets or streams communicating therewith, with legal and proper nets, &c., to take, &c., any such salmon, &c., within the said Dart and Plym, and the several rivulets or streams communicating therewith, and to offer the same to sale when so taken between the said last-mentioned periods, within the said last-mentioned river and waters; and that all such fish shall be considered to be in season, and proper to be killed.

But sect. 2 provides, that no such owner or other person, nor any of his servants or agents, nor any other person, shall at any time within the Teign, or any of the waters communicating therewith, on or between the 4th of December, 1803, and the 4th of March, 1804, or at any time or times in any subsequent year on or between the 4th of December and the 4th of March following; and that no such proprietor or other person, nor any of his servants or agents, nor any other person, shall at any time within the said rivers Dart and Plym, or either of them, or any of the waters communicating therewith respectively, on or between the 15th of November, 1803, and the 15th of February, 1804, or at any time or times in any subsequent year on or between the 15th of November and the 15th of February follow-

Sect. 3. No bouges, otherwise called sea trout, shall be taken within the said rivers, or any of the waters communicating therewith, between the 29th of September and the 2nd of February following in any year; and none of the fish hereinbefore mentioned, of whatever kind, shall at any time be pursued, taken, killed, or destroyed, or attempted so to be, or to be otherwise hurt or injured, within any of the said rivers, or the said waters, on a Sunday.

Sea-trout not to be taken but at certain seasons, &c.

Sect. 4. And after the passing of this act, every person who shall pursue, take, kill, or destroy, or endeavour or attempt to pursue, take, kill, or destroy, or be aiding or assisting in the pursuing, taking, killing, or destroying any salmon or other such fish as aforesaid, or spawn, brood, or fry, aforesaid, in any or either of the said rivers, or within any of the several waters communicating therewith, or with either of them; or shall sell or expose to sale any such salmon, or other such fish taken contrary to this act, or between the periods before specified in relation to any such fish as aforesaid, and who shall be thereof convicted before any justice for the said county, either upon view or by confession, or by the oath of one witness, or of any such owner or proprietor, or of other such person legally entitled to fish as aforesaid, or of his agents or servants, shall, for the first offence, forfeit any sum, to be ascertained by such justice, not less than 40s. nor more than 5*l.*, together with such fish, and all the nets, and other instruments used or kept for the purpose of committing any such offence, and for the second offence shall forfeit not less than 40s. nor more than 10*l.*, to be ascertained as aforesaid, together with all such fish, nets, and other instruments as aforesaid; one half of such penalty to go to the informer, and the other half to the poor of the parish or parishes where the offence was committed; such penalty to be levied by distress, by warrant of such justice or justices, rendering the overplus, &c., and for want of such distress, or of payment of such penalty on demand, then such offender shall, for every such offence, be sent to the house of correction of the county where taken, to be kept to hard labour not exceeding six calendar months, nor less than two calendar months; and the said justice or justices shall order such nets, &c. to be seized and immediately cut in pieces or otherwise destroyed or disposed of in his or their presence, as he or they may think proper.

Penalties on persons selling salmon or offering the same for sale.

Sect. 5. All persons who think themselves aggrieved by any judgment of any justice or justices in any case aforesaid may appeal to the justices of the said county of Devon at their next general quarter sessions for the said county, who are hereby empowered finally to determine the same; so that the person appealing enter into a recognizance before such justice or justices with sufficient sureties to abide the event of such appeal and the determination thereon, and so that such person so appealing shall, by himself or his agent give ten days' previous notice in writing of such appeal to the party against whose act such appeal shall be made; and the justices at the said sessions are hereby required to hear and determine the matter of every such appeal, and make such order therein, and award such costs as to them shall seem reasonable; and by their order or warrant to levy the costs so awarded by distress and sale, &c., rendering the overplus, &c., after deducting the charges, &c.; which determination shall be final and conclusive on all

The 58 Geo. III. c. 43, intituled An Act for preventing the destruction of the breed of salmon, and fish of salmon kind, in the rivers of England, contains general regulations extending to all rivers throughout England, for the preservation of salmon. By sect. 1, after reciting, that 'Whereas provision has been made, in various acts of Parliament, for preventing the destruction of salmon, and other fish of the salmon kind, in the several rivers in England named therein, and in estuaries and arms of the sea near the mouths of the said rivers; and it would be of great public advantage if such protection should be afforded generally in all rivers throughout England,' it is enacted, "That, from and after the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace, assembled at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, from time to time to appoint conservators or overseers for the preservation of the salmon, and fish of the salmon kind, and the brood, spawn, and fry thereof, and preventing the destruction thereof, and enforcing for that purpose the provisions of this act within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justices, and within the limits of which they shall be so appointed."

Sect. 2. "That where no provision is made by any act now in force for limiting the times within which it shall be lawful to take salmon, or fish of the salmon kind, in any of the rivers in England, it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace, acting for the several counties, at their several quarter sessions of the peace, and they are hereby required, at the request of any person, such person having first given notice, in some newspaper usually circulated within the county, of his intention to apply to the said quarter sessions in that behalf, to fix certain days, not exceeding one hundred and fifty days in each year, for each river within their respective counties, to be fence days for the several rivers respectively; during which time it shall not be lawful for any person or persons whatever, to take, kill, or destroy, or attempt to take, kill, or destroy, any salmon or salmon trout, or fish of the salmon kind, or any brood, spawn, or fry, of such fish; and the said justices are hereby further empowered, at any general quarter sessions, to vary annually the number of such days, and the periods at which they shall commence, as they shall think fit."

Sect. 3. "That if any person or persons shall at any time hereafter pursue, take, kill, or destroy, or seek or endeavour to take, kill, or destroy, pursue, hurt, or injure any salmon or salmon kind, by laying or using any hot lime or filth, or material or drug pernicious to fish, or using any water in which any green lint or flax has been steeped, or letting off stagnated water, or any water impregnated with any material or drug pernicious to fish; or if any person shall use or employ any such means as aforesaid, or use any fire or light, or white object, or lay down any kind of net, engine, or device, or wilfully do or commit, or cause to be done or committed, any act whatsoever, in any river, water, rivulet, stream, mill dam, mill sluice, cut, pool, or pond, communicating therewith, for the destruction of the brood, spawn, or small fry, of salmon therein, (angling excepted); or if any person shall hereafter make, erect, or set any bank, dam, hedge, or stank, net or nets, or place any fire or fires, light or lights, or any white object or objects, so that the young fry or young salmon be prevented from going down from such rivers, rivulets, or other waters communicating therewith as aforesaid, or any of them, every such person so offending shall for every such first offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds, nor less than five pounds, and for every second and subsequent offence, any sum not exceeding fifteen pounds, nor less than ten pounds, at the discretion of the justice or justices before whom the offender or offenders shall be convicted, and shall also forfeit all the fish, spawn, brood or fry so taken, and all the nets, weapons, lines, instruments, boats, devices, or things used in the taking thereof."

Sect. 4. "That no person shall, at any time after the 1st day of September, 1818, take, kill, or destroy, or knowingly have in his or her possession, either on the water or on the shore, or shall bring to shore, or cry or

carry about, sell, offer or expose to or for sale, or shall exchange for any goods, matter, or thing, any spawn, fry, or brood of fish, or any unsizeable fish, or any kepper or shedder salmon, being unseasonable salmon, commonly called old salmon, or any salmon caught in any river during the periods when fishing for salmon is prohibited under the provisions of any law now in force, or when the same shall be prohibited by any order to be made by the justices at their sessions as hereinbefore provided; and it shall be lawful for any conservator or overseer thereof, or any other person, under the authority of this act, to take and seize all or any such spawn, fry, or brood of fish, or such other fish as aforesaid, wherever the same shall be found, together with all baskets and package in which the same shall be so found or taken, and to deliver the person on whom the same may be found to a constable or other peace officer; and after every such seizure shall be made, the spawn, fry, or brood, or other fish as aforesaid, together with the baskets and package in which the same shall be so seized, shall be delivered into the hands of some constable or other peace officer; and every such constable or other peace officer is hereby authorized and required to take every such offender with whom he shall be so charged for any such offence, into his custody, and also the spawn, fry, or brood of fish, and such other fish as aforesaid, and all baskets and packages in which the same shall be so seized, and which shall be delivered to such constable or other peace officer as aforesaid, and to carry such offender, and all such spawn, fry, or brood of fish, and such other fish as aforesaid, together with the baskets and package as aforesaid, which shall have been delivered to any such constable or other peace officer, with all convenient speed, before some justice or justices, or magistrate of the county, city, or place, where the offence shall be committed, for such offender to be dealt with according to law; and on the conviction of any such offender or offenders for any such offence, before any such justice or justices, or magistrate as aforesaid, every such offender shall forfeit all and every such spawn, fry, or brood of fish, unsizeable fish, and fish out of season, which shall be so seized, together with all baskets or package in which the same shall be so seized; and all such spawn, fry, or brood of fish, or such other fish as aforesaid, together with such baskets and package in which the same shall have been so seized as aforesaid, shall, by order of the justice or justices before whom the same shall be so brought, be delivered to the person or persons who shall have so seized the same, and shall prosecute to conviction any such offender; and every offender who shall be so convicted as aforesaid of any such offence, shall besides forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding 10l. nor less than 5l." Sect. 5. "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to legalize, nor* to demolish, take away, or destroy any net, fish lock, coop, bay, or other work, which shall have been, or may hereafter be, lawfully erected, put, placed, fixed, or used in any such arm of the sea, or estuary or mouth of any river, or in or upon any bank, sand, or shore thereof, or near thereto, or in or near any river, rivulet, brook, stream, pond, pool, or other water, mill lead, mill dam, sluice, or cut, which runs into or otherwise communicates therewith, or to the present modes or methods used for taking and killing fish therein, other than and as are in this act particularly prohibited." Sect. 6. And by the 45 Geo. III. c. 33, certain other provisions are enacted with respect to the rivers in the county and borough of Carmarthen.

45 Geo. 3, c. 33.

The stat. 13 Rich. II. st. 1, c. 19, enacts, that no person shall put in the waters of Thamise, Humber, Ouze, Trent, nor any waters, in any time of the year, any nets called stalkers, nor other nets or engines whatsoever, by which the fry or breed of salmons, lampreys, or any other fish, may in anywise be taken or destroyed; on the like pain.

13 Rich. 2, c. 19.

The waters of Lone, Wyre, Mersee, Rybbyl, and all other waters in Lancashire, shall be put in defence as to taking of salmon from Michaelmas to Candlemas, and in no other time of the year. And conservators shall be appointed in like manner.

By the 17 Rich. II. c. 9, the justices of the peace (and the mayor of London on the Thames and Medway) shall survey the offences in both the acts above-mentioned; and shall survey and search all the wears in such rivers, that they shall not be very strait for the destruction of such fry and brood, but of reasonable wideness after the old assize used or accustomed; and they shall appoint under-conservators, who shall be sworn to make like survey, search, and punishment. And they shall inquire in sessions, as well by their office as at the information of the under-conservators, of all defaults aforesaid, and shall cause them which shall be thereof indicted to come before them; and if they be thereof convict, they shall have imprisonment, and make fine at the discretion of the justices; and if the same be at the information of an under-conservator, he shall have half the fine.

17 Rich. 2, c. 9.

By the 1 Eliz. c. 17, s. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, no person, of what estate, degree, and condition soever he be, shall take and kill any young brood, spawn, or fry of fish; nor shall take and kill any salmon or trouts, not being in season, being kepper or shedder; nor any pike or pikerel not being in length ten inches fish or more; nor any salmon not being in length sixteen inches fish; nor any trout not being in length eight inches fish; nor any barbel not being in length twelve inches: and no person shall fish, or take fish by any device, but only with net or trammel, whereof the mesh shall be two inches and a half broad (angling excepted, and except smelts, loches, minnies, bullheads, gudgeons, and eels); on pain of forfeiting 20s. for every offence, and also the fish, nets, and engines (a).

1 Eliz. c. 17.
Spawn in general,

26 Geo. 3, c. 81.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 81, after 1st June, 1787, an annual bounty (a) is granted for seven years to owners of ships of certain dimensions and constructions (which by stat. 27 Geo. III. c. 10, is extended to all vessels however built), of fifteen tons and upwards, employed in the White Herring Fishery, under certain regulations particularly set forth in those acts; and so far as the same fall under the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, it is thought necessary to insert them as follows:—

(a) And see 5 Geo. IV. c. 64, post, 779.

Sects. 17, 18 order, that, on all barrels and casks in which any fish (except fresh fish) shall be packed, either for exportation or home consumption, the names of the curers of such fish shall be marked and burnt with iron, in fair, large, legible, conspicuous, and permanent characters; and the staves of every barrel in which any white herrings, or wet white fish, shall be packed or put up for exportation, shall not be a less thickness at the bulge than half an inch, and shall be full bound; and, in default thereof, the same may be seized and secured by any officer of excise or customs; and, on proof of the fact on oath before one justice, the same, together with the casks, shall be forfeited.

Sect. 19. And every person who, for seven successive years, shall have followed the occupation of a seaman or fisherman on board any ship or vessel employed in the fisheries of Great Britain, (being a married man), may set up and exercise such trade as he is apt and able for, in any town or place in Great Britain, without molestation by reason of using such trade, as freely, and with the same provisions and regulations, as any mariner or soldier, by 22 Geo. II. c. 44, are authorized to do.

Sect. 43. And whereas, by stats. 1 Geo. I. c. 18, and 9 Geo. II. c. 33, no sort of flat fish nor fresh fish whatsoever, (except turbot and lobsters), could be legally imported or sold in England, which were taken by, bought of, or received from any foreigner, or out of any strange bottom (except protestant strangers) inhabiting this kingdom, on forfeiture of 100*l.* by the person offending; and the master of the vessel in which any such fish shall be illegally imported was also liable to forfeit 50*l.*, to be recovered in the Courts at Westminster. And whereas the great expense and delay attending such prosecutions discourage persons from suing for such penalties, it is therefore enacted, that if upon complaint made on oath before two justices by any officer, it shall appear that he doth know, or is credibly informed, or hath cause to believe, that any fish hath been imported or exposed to sale, in the port of London, contrary to the aforesaid acts, such justices may summon the person accused to appear before them at a time and place specified in the summons; and if he shall not appear, then, on due proof of service of such summons, either personally, or by leaving the same at his usual place of abode whilst he shall be on shore, or, not being on shore, with some person in the vessel to which he belongs, may by warrant cause such person to be brought before them, at such time and place as shall be specified in such warrant, and thereupon, whether such party shall appear upon such summons, or be apprehended, the justices may proceed to hear and determine the matter of the complaint.

Sect. 46. All pecuniary penalties by the said act of 9 Geo. II. c. 33, imposed, may be recovered before two justices, on due proof and conviction of the offence, by confession or oath of one witness; and the whole of such penalties shall go to the informer; and if such penalty shall not, upon conviction, with the costs thereof, be immediately paid, the same shall be levied by distress and sale; and for want of sufficient distress, the offender shall be sent, by the same justices, to the common gaol for one year, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid.

Sect. 47. To the end that the person convicted in any of the penalties last aforesaid may not, by flight after conviction, evade imprisonment, such justices, immediately after conviction, may order such offender into custody, (in case the penalty be not immediately paid), during such time, not exceeding forty-eight hours, as they shall think proper to allow for return of the warrant of distress.

Sect. 48. Provided, that if it shall appear, to the satisfaction of such justices, either by confession or other witness, that such party hath not goods or chattels sufficient to answer the penalty, such justices may, without issuing any warrant of distress, commit the party so convicted; as if such warrant had actually issued, and a return of nulla bona been made thereon.

Sect. 49. Provided also, that if any such offender ordered to be committed shall, before his actual commitment to prison, procure security to be given by two sufficient sureties for payment of the penalty and charges, Fishermen may set up trades.

Certain penalties imposed by 1 Geo. 1, c. 18, and 9 Geo. 2, c. 33, may be recovered by two justices.

All penalties imposed by 9 Geo. 2, c. 33, may be recovered by two justices.

Offenders may be detained for forty-eight hours.

within fourteen days exclusive of the day of conviction, the justices may accept such security; and on non-payment within the time limited, the same, or any other justices, may cause the party convicted, and his sureties, to be apprehended by warrant, and them may commit to the common gaol, for the same time as the person convicted was liable to have been imprisoned if no security had been given, unless the penalty and charges shall be sooner paid.

Appeal.

Sect. 50. Any person so convicted thinking himself aggrieved by the judgment of any justices, may, within three calendar months then next, appeal to the sessions, giving six days' notice to the informer of such his intent, and with two sureties entering into recognizance before one justice to appear and prosecute such appeal, and abide the order or determination of the same Court, and pay the costs awarded at such sessions, (if any); and if such judgment be affirmed, the party appealing shall pay to the informer double costs, to be ascertained by order of the Court.

Sect. 51. In case the person appealing shall have paid the penalty into the hands of the justices by way of deposit, or shall be then imprisoned, such person may appeal within the time aforesaid on his entering (without sureties) into such recognizance aforesaid, and remaining in prison in the mean time, or depositing such penalty with the justices until the merits of the said appeal shall be determined.

Conviction not to be set aside for want of form.

Sect. 52. No conviction or judgment as aforesaid shall be set aside by the sessions for want of form, or through the mis-stating of any fact, circumstance, or other matter, provided the material facts alleged in such conviction or judgment, and on which such conviction shall be grounded, be proved to the satisfaction of the Court; and no such conviction or judgment, nor any order or proceeding of the said Court, shall be removed by certiorari into any other Court.

Witnesses.

Sect. 44. Persons appearing in the complaint to be necessary witnesses may be summoned by the justices to appear before them; and in case of non-appearance, then, on due proof of having been duly summoned, may be apprehended by warrant of such justices, and brought before them; and if any witness shall refuse to be sworn, or to give evidence, or wilfully forswear himself, or prevaricate in his evidence, such justices may, by warrant, commit him to the common gaol for one year without bail.

Written evidence.

Sect. 45. And the examinaiton of every witness shall be taken down in writing, by or before the said justices, and in case the party accused cannot be made to appear at the time of such examination, and such witness cannot be made to attend when such party shall appear; in that case such examination in writing may be read and made use of, and shall have the same effect as if such witness had been examined vivâ voce.

48 Geo. 3, c. 110.

By stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 110, many important regulations are enacted respecting the herring fishery: but they are not inserted in this place, as being too confined in their nature and objects. It may be observed, however, that, by the 57th section of the act, the several penalties and forfeitures thereof may be recovered in the same manner as penalties and forfeitures under the excise laws.

55 Geo. 3, c. 94.

The above statutes, subject to certain alterations, are made perpetual by the 55 Geo. III. c. 94.

Disputes between officers and curers.

Sect. 36 of which act relates to the mode of settling disputes between officers and curers, and enacts, "That, in every such case, any justice of the peace, to whom application shall be made either by the officer or curer, shall appoint two skilful persons, who shall have no interest in the matter in dispute, one to be nominated by the officer and the other by the opposite party; and if either party shall fail to make such nomination before or at the time when he shall be required by authority of the said justice (not being longer than twenty-four hours from the time of being required to make such appointment) so to do, then the said justice shall nominate one skilful person, not interested in the matter in dispute, in his place; and the persons so appointed, upon examination of the matters in dispute, shall certify on their oaths, to be taken before the said justice, their opinion on the matters aforesaid; and if they shall agree in their opinion, the matter in dispute shall be determined accordingly; but if the arbitrators so to be appointed shall differ in opinion thereon, the said justice shall require them to name one other skilful person, not interested in the matter in dispute, which person so nominated shall examine the matters in dispute, and upon such examination shall certify upon oath, to be made before the said justice, his opinion thereon, and the said matter shall then be finally determined accordingly."

The statute 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 79, repeals the bounty of 3*l.* per ton granted by the acts 48 Geo. III. c. 110; 51 Geo. III. c. 101; 52 Geo. III. c. 153; 54 Geo. III. c. 102; and 55 Geo. III. c. 94.

1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 79.

Sect. 2 repeals so much of 48 Geo. III. c. 110, or any other act, as relates to the appointment of a superintendant of the deep sea herring fishery, repealed.

Sect. 3 provides, that the commissioners for the British herring fishery may make regulations for carrying into execution the purposes of this and the recited acts; and orders that no bounty be paid unless the rules be complied with.

By sect. 4, if herrings caught in the Irish fishery shall be produced to the officers of the British fishery, or if caught in the British fishery and produced to the officers of the Irish fishery, for the bounty, the same shall be forfeited, &c.

Sect. 5 enacts, that if any person buying, &c. fresh herrings shall use, or have in possession, any cran or measure of greater content than required by the regulations of the British herring fishery, he shall forfeit the same, and 10*l.*

Sect. 7 extends the regulations, &c. in acts 48 Geo. III. and 55 Geo. III. to the Isle of Man, and provides, that the bounty extended to the Isle of Man shall be paid by the excise in Scotland.

Sect. 8 repeals regulations in act 55 Geo. III. c. 94, regarding herrings imported in barrels from Ireland, or the Isle of Man.

By stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 64, bounties and allowances on British herrings under 55 Geo. III. c. 94, and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 79, are repealed, after July 5, 1825.

5 Geo. 4, c. 64.

And sect. 2, enacts, that, from July 5, 1825, to July 5, 1829, new bounties shall be paid, viz. 4*s.*, 3*s.*, 2*s.*, and 1*s.*, to 5th July in each year successively, for every barrel of herrings caught and cured according to regulations of British fisheries acts, 48 Geo. III. c. 110, 55 Geo. III. c. 94, 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 79, &c., and of 59 Geo. III. c. 109, and 1 Geo. IV. c. 82,—4*s.*, per cwt. on dried cod cured in Great-Britain, until July 5, 1829;—pickled cod, 2*s.* 6*d.* per barrel, under regulations of 1 Geo. IV. c. 103, until July 5, 1829. Bounties in Ireland, 4*s.* per cwt. on dried cod, &c., and 2*s.* 6*d.* on pickled cod, as in Great Britain.

The 3rd section orders that the tonnage bounty to vessels engaged in the white fisheries shall be 20*s.* per ton to 5th July, 1826; 15*s.* to 1827; 10*s.* to 1828; 5*s.* to 1829.

And sect. 4 makes the bounties under this act payable as bounties on fish and on tonnage under recited acts.

Sect. 6 repeals, from July 5, 1825, bounties on salmon, &c. in Great Britain under schedule (C) of 43 Geo. III. c. 69.

By sect. 8, fish are exempted from all duties on exportation.

The 1 Will. IV. c. 54, intituled An Act to revive, continue, and amend, several acts relating to the Fisheries, passed 16th July, 1830, reciting, that, by the 48 Geo. III. c. 110; and by the 55 Geo. III. c. 94; and by the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 79, 'certain regulations were made respecting the British white herring fisheries; and by the said acts various bounties were granted for the encouragement of the said fisheries:' and that by the said act 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 79; and by the 5 Geo. IV. c. 64; and by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 34, 'the said bounties, or such of them as were then existing, have been repealed, such repeal having taken effect upon and from the 5th day of April, 1830: and whereas doubts may arise whether the repeal of the bounties aforesaid hath not rendered ineffectual certain of the provisions and regulations of the before-mentioned acts of the forty-eighth and fifty-fifth years of

1 Will. 4, c. 54.

Nothing in the acts 5 Geo. 4, c. 64, and 7 Geo. 4, c. 34, has repealed the powers of the recited acts of 48 & 55 Geo. 3, and 1 & 2 Geo. 4, so far as they relate to marking or branding barrels of herrings.

Old barrels employed in the fisheries with an old official brand, to be forfeited, with their contents.

The declaration required to be made on oath by recited acts of 48 and 55 Geo. 3, may be made on affirmation.

the reign of his said late Majesty king George the Third, and of the first and second years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Fourth, relative to the placing a mark or character on barrels containing herrings properly cured, and it is expedient to remove such doubts; it is therefore enacted, "That nothing in the said acts passed in the fifth and seventh years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Fourth hath repealed or rendered ineffectual so much of the said acts passed in the forty-eighth and fifty-fifth years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Third, and of the first and second years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Fourth, as relates to the placing a mark or character on barrels or half barrels containing herrings properly cured, save only so far as respects the payment of any bounties therein mentioned; and that, save and except so far as respects the said bounties, the said acts passed in the forty-eighth and fifty-fifth years of the reign of his said late Majesty king George the Third, and in the first and second years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Fourth, with reference to the placing a mark or character on barrels containing herrings properly cured, and every other provision and regulation of the said acts which were in force on the said 5th day of April, 1830, are, and is, and shall be, in full force, virtue, and effect, as though the said acts so passed in the fifth and seventh years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Fourth had not been made."

Sect. 2. "That if any person or persons shall ship or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat about to be employed in the said fisheries, any old barrels, or any old half barrels theretofore employed in the said fisheries, which, at the time of such shipment, shall bear any official brand theretofore affixed thereupon, under and in pursuance of the said acts or any of them, or of this present act, or shall pack any herrings or other fish in any such old barrels or half barrels, all such old barrels or any old half barrels, and the herrings or other fish, shall be forfeited."

Sect. 3. 'And whereas by the said acts passed in the forty-eighth and fifty-fifth years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Third, various oaths were required to be taken for the protection of his Majesty's revenue, and it is no longer necessary that, with a view to that object, such oaths should continue to be administered; it is enacted, "That all persons who, under and by virtue of the said recited acts of the forty-eighth and fifty-fifth years of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Third, were required to make any such declaration or statement on oath, shall henceforth be admitted to make such declaration or statement on their, his, or her affirmation, and without oath; and if any person shall wilfully and corruptly make any such declaration or statement falsely, every such person shall incur and become liable to a fine of not less than 10*l.* nor more than 20*l.*"

Sect. 4. 'And whereas, by the 1 Geo. IV. c. 103, certain bounties were granted for the encouragement of the British cod and ling fisheries, which bounties, by virtue of the said recited acts passed in the fifth and in the seventh years of the reign of his late Majesty, have ceased and determined: and whereas, by the said act passed in the first year of the reign of his late Majesty, certain provisions were made, empowering the commissioners of the herring fishery to make certain regulations respecting the said cod and ling fisheries: and whereas, by an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Fourth, intituled An Act to amend the several acts for the encouragement and improvement of the British and Irish fisheries, the said act of the first year of his said late Majesty was repealed; and it is expedient that the powers vested as aforesaid in the said commissioners (save so far only as respects the payment of the said bounties) should be revived, and be again vested in the said commissioners; it therefore enacts, "That so much of the said act passed in the first year of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Fourth, as authorized the said commissioners to make such regulations as aforesaid, shall be and the same is hereby revived, and shall be continued in force, save only so far as respects the payment of the said bounties; any thing in the said act of the fifth year of his said Majesty's reign to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 5. " That all penalties and forfeitures hereby imposed shall be sued for, recovered, and applied by such and the same persons, in such and the same manner, and to such and the same purposes, as any penalties and forfeitures incurred under the said acts of the forty-eighth and fifty-fifth years of the reign of his said late Majesty king George the Third may be sued for, recovered, mitigated, and applied."

By the 6th section the powers granted to the commissioners of the Irish fisheries by 59 Geo. III. c. 109, shall be vested in the directors of inland navigation. The lord lieutenant may appoint additional directors; who shall not be entitled to any salary.

By sect. 7 the lord lieutenant may employ persons for completing piers begun, or for receiving repayment of loans, &c.

By sect. 8 the lord lieutenant may, for five years, order sums to be issued out of the consolidated fund for the purposes of this act.

By sect. 9 the directors of inland navigation shall have all the powers of commissioners of the fisheries, and the act is not to revive the bounties.

IV. Of the Oyster Fisheries.

THE stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 36, enacts, " That if any person shall steal any oysters or oyster brood from any oyster bed, laying, or fishery, being the property of any other person, and sufficiently marked out or known as such, every such offender shall be deemed guilty of larceny, and, being convicted thereof, shall be punished accordingly; and if any person shall unlawfully and wilfully use any dredge, or any net, instrument, or engine whatsoever, within the limits of any such oyster fishery, for the purpose of taking oysters or oyster brood, although none shall be actually taken, or shall, with any net, instrument, or engine, drag upon the ground or soil of any such fishery, every such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, as the Court shall award, such fine not to exceed 20*l.*, and such imprisonment not to exceed three calendar months; and it shall be sufficient in any indictment or information to describe, either by name or otherwise, the bed, laying, or fishery, in which any of the said offences shall have been committed, without stating the same to be in any particular parish, township, or vill: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from catching or fishing for any floating fish, within the limits of any oyster fishery, with any net, instrument or engine adapted for taking floating fish only."

Stealing oysters, or oyster brood, from oyster beds.

Dredging for oysters within the limits of any oyster fishery.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the stats. 31 Geo. III. c. 51, and 48 Geo. III. c. 144.

V. Rules concerning Fishing in or near the Sea.

By the 9 Geo. II. c. 33, s. 4, no person shall take, kill, or destroy, any lobsters on the coast of Scotland from June 1 to Sept. 1, on pain of 5*l.*; to be recovered by any person who shall inform and sue for the same, on a summary complaint, before two justices of the shire on the coast where the offence shall be committed.

Lobsters.

By stat. 3 Jac. I. c. 12, s. 2, every person who shall set up any new wear along the sea shore, or in any haven, harbour, or creek, or within five miles of the mouth of any haven or creek, shall, on conviction, before one justice or mayor, forfeit for every offence 10*l.*, half to the King, and half to him that shall sue, to be levied by the constables or churchwardens by distress.

3 Jac. 1, c. 12.

Spawn of sea fish.

Sect. 2. Every person who shall willingly take, destroy, or spoil, any spawn, fry, or brood of any sea fish, in any wear or other engine or device whatsoever, shall forfeit for every offence 10*l.* in like manner.

It seems from the case of Bridger, qui tam, v. Richardson, 2 M. & S. 568, that this provision does not comprehend shell fish; and, if it does, it means a taking for destruction, and not a taking of oyster spawn for the purpose of removing it to beds for future growth and maturity, to make it marketable.

Size of nets at sea.

Sect. 2. And every person who shall fish in any haven, harbour, or creek, or within five miles of the mouth of any haven, harbour, or creek of the sea, with any draw net, or drag net, under three inches mesh, viz. one and a half inch from knot to knot (except for the taking of smoulds in Norfolk only), or with any nets with canvas, or other engine or device, whereby the spawn, fry, or brood of sea-fish, may be destroyed, shall in like manner forfeit such net, and also 10*s.* for every offence, half to the poor, and half to him that shall sue.

Sect. 3. But this act shall not extend to any net of lesser mesh only for taking herrings, pilchards, sprats, or lavidnian.

And by 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 18, and by a subsequent statute, if any person shall use at sea on the English coast, any trawl net, drag net, or set net, for catching any fish (except herrings, pilchards, sprats, or lavidnian), which hath the mesh less than three and a half inches from knot to knot; or which hath a false or double bottom, cod, or pouch; or shall put any net upon or behind another, in order to catch or destroy the small fish which would have passed through any single net of three and a half inches mesh, he shall on conviction (after summons) before one justice where the offender resides or shall be found, on oath of two witnesses, in one month after the offence, forfeit the same, and also 20*l.*, half to the informer, and half to the poor; to be levied by distress; for want of sufficient distress, to be committed to gaol for twelve months; and the nets by warrant of such justice to be burned. Persons aggrieved may appeal to the next sessions.

Size of sea fish.

By sect. 7 of the same act, (1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 18), if any person shall bring to shore, or expose to sale, or shall exchange for any other goods, matter, or thing, any fish less than the following sizes from the eyes to the extent of the tail, viz. bret or turbot, sixteen inches; brill or pearl, fourteen; codling, twelve; whiting, six; bass and mullet, fourteen; sole, place, or dab, eight; flounder, seven; he shall forfeit the fish to the poor of the parish, and also 20*s.*, half to the informer, and half to the poor; to be levied in the like manner; for default of payment or of sufficient distress, to be sent to the next house of correction, or other common gaol or prison of the county, city, town, or place, to be severely whipped and kept to hard labour six days, and not longer than fourteen. Persons aggrieved may appeal to the next sessions. The prosecution must be within one month.

But by the 33 Geo. II. c. 27, s. 11, bret or turbot, brill or pearl, although under the said dimensions, may be exposed to sale, so as the same be not sold by retail for above 6*d.* a pound. And if any greater price shall be demanded or taken, or such fish shall not be weighed and measured, if required, the same shall be forfeited, and the offender shall also forfeit 20*s.*, to be recovered, mitigated, and applied as the penalties in the said act mentioned under the last head relating to the spawn of fish, and fish under size and out of season; and the money paid shall be returned to the party who paid the same.

Ships proceeding to the whale fishery.

And 42 Geo. III. c. 22, s. 4, recites, that, whereas, by 26 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 1, it is enacted, that, before any vessel proceed on the Whale Fishery, oath shall be made by the owner and the master, or chief officer of the vessel, before the principal officers of the customs of the port from which such vessel intends to proceed, that it is really and truly their firm purpose and determined resolution, that such vessel shall, as soon as licence shall be granted, forthwith proceed on a voyage to the Greenland Seas, or Davis's Straits, or the seas adjacent, and there, in the approaching season, use the utmost endeavours of themselves and ship's company, to take whales or other creatures living in the sea, and on no other design or view of profit in such voyage, and to import the whale fins, oil, and blubber thereof, into Great Britain; in case of absence from illness or other unavoidable circumstances, such officers may accept an affidavit thereof, sworn by such owner or owners before any justice, in which affidavit shall be declared every matter and thing which by the said recited act such owner is required to declare.

D., late of &c., on &c., at &c., in certain water, to wit, a stream [or, pond] of water there situate, then and there [running through and] being in certain land, to wit, a garden [or, pleasure ground &c., according to the fact], [adjoining and] belonging to the dwelling house of one A. B. there, the said A. B. then and there having a right of fishery in the said water [or, if not a running stream, "owner of the said water"] divers, to wit, one hundred fish, to wit, twenty eels, twenty pike, &c. of the said A. B., of the value of five pounds, then and there being found in the said water in the said land, unlawfully and wilfully, and not by angling in the day time, did take and destroy; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said lord the King, his crown and dignity. [Add other counts, if there be any doubt, or any fact necessary to be stated in the indictment.]

Conviction on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 34, for taking fish in water, &c., not being in land adjoining or belonging to a dwelling-house of owner (a).

— BE it remembered, that, on &c., at &c., C. D. of &c., is convicted before me, to wit, J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, for that the said C. D., on &c., at the parish &c., in a certain pond [or, stream] of water there situate, the private property of A. B. [or, wherein A. B. then had a private right of fishery] the said water not then being water running through or being in any land adjoining or belonging to the dwelling-house of the said A. B., or any person being the owner of such water, or having a right of fishery therein, ten fish, called trout, [according to the fact] of the value of ten shillings, then and there being found, then and there in the said water unlawfully and wilfully did take and destroy, [or, attempt to take and destroy], not by angling in the day time; against the form of the statute in that case made and provided: I the said J. P. do therefore adjudge the said C. D., for his said offence, to forfeit and pay the sum of [five] pounds over and above the value of the said fish so taken as aforesaid, and the further sum of [ten shillings], being the value of the said fish, and also to pay the sum of shillings* for costs; and, in default of immediate payment of the said sums, to be imprisoned in the [and there kept to hard labour] for the space of [see s. 67, title MARRIAGE, Vol. III. p. 553], calendar months, unless the same sums shall be sooner paid; and I direct that the said sum of five pounds shall be paid to J. S., [see s. 66, ante, p. 764, n.] of aforesaid, in which the said offence was committed, to be by him applied according to the direction of the statute in that case made and provided; and that the said sum of ten shillings shall be paid [to the said A. B., or, if he have been examined in proof of the offence, then thus: also to the said J. S., the said A. B. having been examined in proof of the offence aforesaid]; and I order that the said sum of shillings for costs shall be paid to [the complainant]. Given under my hand and seal, the day and year first above mentioned.

Forcible Entry and Detainer (a).

FORCE, in the common law, is most commonly taken in ill part, for unlawful violence. 1 Inst. 161 b.

It seems, that, at the common law, a man disseised of any lands or tenements, (if he could not prevail by fair means), might lawfully regain the possession thereof by force, unless he were put to a necessity of bringing his action, by having neglected to re-enter in due time: And it seems certain, that, even at this day, he who is wrongfully dispossessed of his goods may justify the retaking of them by force (b) from the wrong-doer, if he refuse to re-deliver them; for the violence which happens through the resistance of the wrongful possessor, being originally owing to his own fault, gives him no just cause of complaint, inasmuch as he might have prevented it by doing as he ought. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 1; and 3 Salk. 169. Perhaps, however, as

(a) See, in general, 1 Russ. on Crimes, 283; Com. Dig. Forcible Entry; Bac. Ab. Forcible Entry; 3 Chit. C. L. 1135.

(b) But this, as a general position, seems incorrect; at all events, the force must not be such as to amount to a breach of the public peace. It is laid down by Blackstone in his Commentaries, Vol. III. p. 4, that, "when any one hath deprived another of his goods or chattels personal, or wrongfully detains one's wife, child, or servant, the owner of the goods, and the husband, parent, or master, may lawfully claim and retake them, wherever he happens to find them, so it be not in a riotous manner, or attended with a breach of the peace." The reason for this is obvious, since it may frequently happen that the owner may have this only opportunity of doing himself justice, his goods may be afterwards conveyed away or destroyed, and his wife, children, or servants concealed or carried out of his reach, if he had no speedier remedy than the ordinary process of law. If, therefore, he can so contrive to gain possession of his property again without force or terror, the law favours and will justify his proceeding. But, as the public peace is a superior consideration to any one man's private property, and as, if individuals were once allowed to use private force as a remedy for private injuries, all social justice must cease, the strong hand would give law to the weak, and every man would revert to a state of nature; for these reasons it is provided, that this natural right of recaption shall never be exerted where such exertion must occasion strife or bodily contention, or endanger the peace of society. If, for instance, my horse is taken away, and I find him in a common, a fair, or a public inn, I may lawfully seize him to my use, but I cannot justify breaking open a private stable, or entering on the grounds of a third person to take him, except he be feloniously stolen, but must have recourse to an action at law." And the learned commentator cites 2 Roll. Rep. 55, 208; 2 Roll. Ab. 565. It is conceived, however, that, although the owner were to take his goods, &c., from the wrong-doer in a forcible way, no action would lie against him for the mere re-taking, though, indeed, it would lie for the injury occasioned by any force unnecessarily used in such retaking. See further as to retaking goods, Com. Dig. Pleader, (3 M 39).

Forcible Entry and Detainer.

Lord Kenyon observed, some doubt may arise respecting what Mr. Serjt. Hawkins says, that, at common law, the party may enter with force into that to which he has a legal title. But without giving any opinion concerning that dictum, one way or the other, but leaving it to be proved or disproved whenever that question should arise; all that the Court wished to say was, that their opinion in the principal case left that question untouched, it appearing by the indictment there (which was at common law) that the defendants "unlawfully" entered, and therefore the Court could not intend that they had any title. R. v. Wilson and others, 8 T. R. 364.

But this indulgence of the common law, in suffering persons to regain the lands they were unlawfully deprived of, having been found by experience to be very prejudicial to the public peace, by giving an opportunity to powerful men, under the pretence of feigned titles, forcibly to eject their weaker neighbours, and also by force to retain their wrongful possessions; it was thought necessary by many severe laws to restrain all persons from the use of such violent methods of doing themselves justice. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 2.

However, even at this day, in an action of forcible entry grounded on those laws, if the defendant make himself a title which is found for him, he shall be dismissed without any inquiry concerning the force; for howsoever he may be punishable at the King's suit, for doing what is prohibited by statute, as a contemner of the laws, and disturber of the peace, yet he shall not be liable to pay any damages for it to the plaintiff, whose injustice gave him the provocation in that manner to right himself. Id. s. 3 (a).

Yet, still forcible entry and detainer are offences at the common law; and the prosecutor, if he please, may proceed in that way: but then the indictment ought to express, not only the common technical words with force and arms, but also such circumstances as thereby it may appear upon the face of the indictment to be more than a common trespass: for a man cannot be indicted for a bare trespass. Vide 3 Burr. 1698—1731.

Indeed, there is no doubt but that the offence of forcible entry is indictable at common law, though the statutes give other remedies to the party aggrieved, restitution and damages: and, therefore, in an indictment on the statutes, it is necessary to state the interest of the prosecutor; but I do not know, said Lord Kenyon, C. J., that it has ever been decided, that it is necessary to allege a greater degree of force in an indictment at common law for a forcible entry than in an indictment on the statutes. Therefore, an indictment at common law, charging the defendants with having "unlawfully and with a strong hand" entered the prosecutor's mill, and certain lands and houses, and expelled him from the possession, is good: for the words, "with a strong hand," mean something more than a common trespass. 8 T. R. 357.

(a) There are many cases in which the resumption of possession by the mere act of the party is allowed, as if a tenant omit, at the expiration of his tenancy, to deliver up possession, the landlord may legally break open the outer door and resume possession, though there be furniture therein; and if the landlord put his cattle on the land, and the tenant distrain them as damage feasant, he may be sued. Turner v. Mymott, 7 Moore, 574; 1 Bing. 158, S. C.; and see Taunton v. Costar, 7 T. R. 431; 6 Taunt. 202; 8 B. & C. 4; and it is laid down in Tidd's Prac. 9th ed. 1196, that whenever a party has a right of entry, either by an adverse title or for a condition broken, (Com. Dig. Condition, (O 3), or on the expiration of a term or notice to quit, (7 T. R. 431; 1 Bing. 158; 7 Moore, 574, S. C.), he may lawfully enter and take possession of the premises, if vacant, or turn cattle thereon without bringing an ejectment, provided he can find an opportunity of doing so without using force. If the owner, in resuming possession, be guilty of a forcible entry with a strong hand, or other breach of the peace, he will be liable to an indictment. But the circumstance of the owner of property using too much force to regain possession, but taking care to avoid personal injury to the party resisting, will not enable the latter to sue him. If, however, any unnecessary injury be committed, the owner might be sued. See cases, supra, 8 T. R. 299; Id. 78; 1 Saund. 296.

But the safest and most usual way is to proceed upon the statutes; and therefore, (after having premised that by stat. 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, s. 7, they which keep their possessions with force in any lands and tenements, whereof they or their ancestors, or they whose estate they have in such lands and tenements, have continued their possession in the same by three years or more, be not endangered by force of this statute), we will consider those several statutes, with the interpretation that hath been put upon them, under the following heads: 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 13:—

I. Statutes relating to.

By stat. 5 Ric. II. c. 8, “ And also the King defendeth, that none from henceforth make any entry into any lands and tenements, but in case where entry is given by the law; and in such case not with strong hand, nor with multitude of people, but only in peaceable and easy manner. And if any man from henceforth do to the contrary, and thereof be duly convicted, he shall be punished by imprisonment of his body, and thereof ransomed at the King's will.”

5 Ric. 2, c. 8:
What entry illegal.

But this statute, as observed by Mr. Russell, 1 Russ. Cr. 284, gave no speedy remedy, leaving the party injured to the common course of proceeding by indictment or action, and made no provision at all against forcible detainers; in consequence of which the 15 Ric. II. c. 2, was passed, confirming and extending the former act. Thus—15 Ric. II. c. 2. “ Item, it is accorded and assented, that the ordinances and statutes, made and not repealed, of them that make entries with strong hand into lands and tenements, or other possessions whatsoever, and them hold with force, and also of those that make insurrections, or great ridings, riots, routs, or assemblies, in disturbance of the peace or of the common law, or in affray of the people, shall be holden and kept, and fully executed, joined to the same, that at all times that such forcible entry shall be made, and complaint thereof cometh to the justices of peace, or to any of them, that the same justices or justice take sufficient power of the county, and go to the place where such force is made; and if they find any that hold such place forcibly after such entry made, they shall be taken and put in the next gaol, there to abide convict by the record of the same justices or justice until they have made fine and ransom to the King; and that all the people of the county, as well the sheriffs as other, shall be attendant upon the same justices to go and assist the same justices to arrest such offenders, upon pain of imprisonment, and to make fine to the King. And, in the same manner, it shall be done of them that make such forcible entries in benefices or offices of holy church.”

Justices to commit offender till fine and ransom.

But this statute, as observed by Mr. Russell, 1 Russ. C. 284, gave no remedy against those who were guilty of a forcible detainer after a peaceable entry, nor against those who were guilty of both a forcible entry and a forcible detainer, if they were removed before the coming of a justice of the peace; and it gave no power to the justice to restore the party injured to his possession, and did not impose any penalty on the sheriff for disobeying the precepts of the justices in the execution of the statute. The 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, was therefore passed.

STATUTES RELATING TO.

8 Hen. 6, c. 9.
Provisions extended to cases of forcible detainer.

The office and duty of justices of peace, when any forcible entry is made into lands, or peaceable entry, and after detaining with force.

Justices empowered to restore premises to former possessor.

The justices' precept to the sheriff to return a jury to inquire of forcible entries.

Juror to have 40s. per annum.

The sheriff's penalty for omitting his duty.

8 Hen. VI. c. 9, s. 1, recites the 15 Ric. II. c. 2.

Sect. 2. ' And for that the said statute doth not extend to entries in tenements in peaceable manner, and after holden with force, nor if the persons which enter with force into lands and tenements be removed and avoided before the coming of the said justices or justice, as before, nor any pain ordained if the sheriff do not obey the commandments and precepts of the said justices for executing the said ordinance, many wrongful and forcible entries be daily made into lands and tenements by such as have no right, and also divers gifts, feoffments, and discontinuances, sometimes made to lords, and other puissant persons, and extortioners, within the said counties where they be conversant, to have maintenance, and sometimes to such persons as be unknown to them so put out, to the intent to delay and defraud such rightful possessors of their right and recovery for ever, to the final disherison of divers of the King's faithful liege people, and likely it is daily to increase, if due remedy be not provided in this behalf.' Our lord the King, considering the premises, hath ordained, " That the said statute, and all other statutes of such entries or alienations made in times past, shall be holden and duly executed; joined to the same, that from henceforth, where any doth make any forcible entry on lands and tenements, or other possessions, or them hold forcibly, after complaint thereof made within the same county where such entry is made, to the justices of peace, or to one of them, by the party grieved, that the justices or justice so warned, within a convenient time, shall cause, or one of them shall cause, the said statute duly to be executed, and that at the costs of the party so grieved."

Sect. 3. " And moreover, though that such persons making such entry be present, or else departed before the coming of the said justices or justice, notwithstanding the same justices or justice in some good town next to the tenements so entered, or in some other convenient place, according to their discretion, shall have, or either of them shall have, authority and power to inquire by people of the same county, as well of them that make such forcible entries into lands and tenements, as of them which the same hold with force; and if it be found before any of them, that any doth contrary to this statute, then the said justices or justice shall cause to reseise the lands and tenements so entered or holden as afore, and shall put the party so put out in full possession of the same lands and tenements so entered or holden as before."

Sect. 4. " And also, when the said justices or justice shall make such inquiries as before, they shall make, or one of them shall make, their warrants and precepts directed to the sheriff of the same county, commanding him, on the King's behalf, to cause to come before them, and every of them, sufficient and indifferent persons, dwelling next about the lands so entered as before, to inquire of such entries; whereof every man, which shall be impanneled to inquire in this behalf, shall have land or tenement of the yearly value of forty shillings by year at the least, above reprises. And that the sheriff return issues upon every of them at the day of the first precept returnable 20s., and at the second day 40s., and, at the third time, 100s., and at every day after, double. And if any sheriff or bailiff within a franchise, having return of the King's writ, be slack, and make not execution duly of the said precepts to him directed to make such inquiries, that he shall forfeit to the King 20l. for every default, and moreover shall make fine and ransom to the King."

Sect. 5. " And that as well the justices or justice aforesaid, as the justices of assize, and every of them, at their coming into the country to take assizes, shall have, and every of them shall have, power to hear and determine such defaults and negligences of the said sheriffs and bailiffs, and every of them, as well by bill at the suit of the party grieved, to sue for himself, as for the King, by indictment only to be taken for the King. And if the sheriff or bailiff be duly attainted in this behalf by indictment, or by bill, that he which sueth for himself and for the King, have the one moiety of the forfeiture of 20l. together with his costs and expenses. And that the same process be made against such persons indicted or sued by bill in this behalf, as should be against persons indicted or sued by writ of trespass done with force and arms against the peace of the King."

Sect. 6. "And moreover, if any person be put out, or disseised of any lands or tenements in forcible manner, or put out peaceably, and after holden out with strong hand; or, after such entry, any feoffment or discontinuance in any wise thereof be made, to defraud and take away the right of the possessor; that the party grieved in this behalf shall have assize of novel disseisin, or a writ of trespass against such disseisor; and if the party grieved recover by assize, or by action of trespass, and it be found by verdict, or in other manner by due form in the law, that the party defendant entered with force into the lands and tenements, or them after his entry did hold with force, that the plaintiff shall recover his treble damages against the defendant; and moreover, that he make fine and ransom to the king; and that mayors, justices or justice of peace, sheriffs, and bailiffs of cities, towns and boroughs, having franchise, have in the said cities, towns, and boroughs, like power to remove such entries, and in other articles aforesaid, rising within the same, as the justices of peace and sheriffs in counties and countries aforesaid have."

Sect. 7. "That they which keep their possessions with force in any lands and tenements, whereof they or their ancestors, or they whose estate they have in such lands and tenements, have continued their possessions in the same by three years or more, be not endamaged by force of this statute."

The above provision of the 6th section is still further enforced by the 31 Eliz. c. 11.

31 Eliz. c. 11, sect. 1. 'Whereas there is one good act made and established in the eighth year of the reign of King Henry the Sixth, against such persons as should make forcible entry into lands, tenements, and other possessions, or them should forcibly hold; and one very good proviso or clause, in the said act contained, as ensueth:'

Sect. 3. 'And whereas divers of the queen's majesty's good and loving subjects, and their ancestors, or those whose estate they have, for many years together, above the space of three years or more, have been in quiet possession of their dwelling-houses, and other their lands and possessions; and now of late divers of her Majesty's said subjects, having entries made upon their possessions, having had such quiet and long possession, for disturbing of such enterers, and for keeping of their possession against such enterers, by colour of indictments of forcible entry, or forcible keeping possession, found against them, by means of the oaths of such enterers, have been removed and put out of their dwelling-houses and other their possessions, which they have quietly held by the space of three years together, or longer time, next before such indictments found against them, against the true meaning and intent of the said proviso or clause contained in the said act:'

"For remedy of which inconvenience, and for true declaration and explanation of the law therein, be it ordained, declared, and enacted, by the authority of this present Parliament, that no restitution upon any indictment of forcible entry, or holding with force, be made to any person or persons, if the person or persons so indicted hath had the occupation, or hath been in quiet possession by the space of three whole years together, next before the day of such indictment so found, and his, her, or their estate or estates therein not ended or determined; which the party indicted shall and may allege for stay of restitution, and restitution to stay until that be tried, if the other will deny or traverse the same; and if the same allegation be tried against the same person or persons so indicted, then the same person or persons so indicted to pay such costs and damages to the other party, as shall be assessed by the judges or justices before whom the same shall be tried; the same costs and damages to be recovered and levied as is usual for costs and damages contained in judgments upon other actions."

STATUTES RELATING TO.

8 Hen. 6, c. 9.
What action may be had against him who doth put out, or keep out of possession with force.

They may keep their land by force, who have had three years' possession.

31 Eliz. c. 11.

The proviso in the statute of 8 Hen. 6, c. 9, touching continuance of possessions by three years.

No restitution shall be made, if the party indicted hath been three years in quiet possession, and his estate not ended.

Costs shall be awarded against the party indicted, if his said allegation be found against him.

WHAT IS A FORCIBLE
ENTRY.

21 Jac. 1, c. 15.
Others than freeholders may have restitution.

Doubts having arisen upon the construction of the above acts, whether a lessee for years, or copyholder ousted by the lessor or lord, could have restitution, the same were removed by the 21 Jac. I. c. 15, which enacts, "That such judges, justices, or justice of the peace, as by reason of any act or acts of Parliament now in force are authorized and enabled, upon inquiry, to give restitution of possession unto tenants of any estate of freehold, of their lands or tenements which shall be entered upon with force, or from them withholden by force, shall, by reason of this present act, have the like and the same authority and ability from henceforth (upon indictment of such forcible entries, or forcible withholdings before them duly found) to give like restitution of possession unto tenants for term of years, tenants by copy of court roll, guardians by knights service, tenants by elegit, statute merchant and staple, of lands or tenements by them so holden, which shall be entered upon by force, or holden from them by force."

We will now proceed to notice the construction to be put on these statutes.

II. What is a Forcible Entry.

What is a forcible entry.

A FORCIBLE entry or detainer is committed by violently taking or keeping possession of lands and tenements, with menaces, force, and arms, and without the authority of the law. 4 Bla. Com. 148.

Species of property.

Species of Property—It seems clear, that no one can come within the danger of the above statutes, by a violence offered to another in respect of a way, or such like easement, which is no possession, and there seems to be no good authority that an indictment will lie on this case for a common or office. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 31.

But it may be laid down as a general rule, that a person may be indicted for a forcible entry into any such incorporeal hereditament for which a writ of entry will lie, either by the common law, as for rents; or by statute, as for tithes, &c., see 1 Russ. C. 286; and he might be indicted for a forcible entry into ecclesiastical possessions, such as churches, vicarages, &c. Id.

Nature of right.

Nature of Right—It is immaterial, to create this offence, whether the party had a right to enter or not, for the offence consists in asserting the right in a forcible way to the breach of the peace. The statutes, however, do not extend to a case where the party ousted had the bare custody of the premises for the defendant; 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 32; but they extend to the forcible ouster of one joint tenant, or tenant in common, by another; Id. s. 33; and to all cases where the party in possession has some estate therein.

Nature of the force.

Nature of the Force—It seems certain, that if one who pretends a title to lands barely go over them, either with or without a great number of attendants, armed or unarmed, in his way to the church or market, or for such like purpose, without doing any act, which either expressly or impliedly amounts to a claim of such lands, he cannot be said to make an entry thereinto. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 20.

What a mere trespass or not.

But it seemeth, that if a person enter into another man's house or ground, either with apparent violence offered to the person of any other, or furnished with weapons, or company, which may offer fear; though it be but to cut or take away another man's corn, grass, or other goods, or to fell or crop wood, or to do any other like trespass; and though he do not put the party out of his possession, yet it seemeth to be a forcible entry. Dalt. c. 126.

But if the entry were peaceable, and, after such entry made, they cut or take away any other man's corn, grass, wood, or other goods, without apparent violence or force; though such acts are counted a disseisin with force, yet they are not punishable as forcible entries. Id.

But if he enter peaceably, and there shall by force or violence cut or take away any corn, grass, or wood, or shall forcibly or wrongfully carry away any other goods there being, this seemeth to be a forcible entry punishable by the statutes. Id.

So also shall those be guilty of a forcible entry, who, having an estate in land by a defeasible title, continue with force in the possession thereof, after a claim made by one who had a right of entry thereto. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 23.

WHAT IS A FORCIBLE

If one find a man out of his house and forcibly withhold him from returning to it, and send persons to take peaceable possession of it in the party's absence, this, according to the better opinion, is a forcible entry. 1 Russ. C. 287; 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 26.

In general, it seemeth clear that, to denominate the entry forcible, it ought to be accompanied with some circumstances of actual violence or terror; and therefore that an entry, which hath no other force than such as is implied by the law, in every trespass whatsoever, is not within these statutes. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 25.

Actual violence or terror necessary.

R. v. Wilson and eleven others.—The defendants were indicted for a forcible entry and detainer at common law. The first count stated, that they, with force and arms, unlawfully and injuriously, and with a strong hand, entered, &c. &c. The third count was the same as the first, as to those words; the second and fourth, the same as the first and third, excepting that they omitted the words with a strong hand. There was a demurrer to all these counts; and, in support of the demurrer, it was contended, that a private trespass only was charged upon the face of the indictment, and not a public breach of the peace indictable. Against the demurrer, it was admitted that the second and fourth counts were not maintainable. And by the Court these points were determined:—

Strong hand.

A mere trespass, which is the subject of a civil action, and where the words vi et armis are a matter of form, cannot be converted into an indictable offence;

That the offence of forcible entry is indictable at common law;

In an indictment on the statutes, it is necessary to state the interest of the prosecutor;

It is sufficient to state the same degree of force in an indictment at common law, and in an indictment upon the statutes; but there must be stated that degree of force and violence in fact which constitutes the offence;

The words manu forti mean something more than a common trespass;

It is not sufficient to charge the defendant with having entered vi et armis.

No particular technical words are necessary in such an indictment at common law; all that is required is, that it should appear by the indictment that such force and violence have been used as constitute a public breach of the peace.

And the first and third counts were adjudged good. And at another day Lord Kenyon, C. J., added, that the Court desired that their decision might not be considered as a precedent in other cases to which it did not apply. And that what Hawkins says, (ante, p. 787), that at common law the party may enter with force into that to which he has a legal title, was left untouched by this case, for that here the indictment stated the defendants to have unlawfully entered, and therefore the Court could not intend that they had any title. 8 T. R. 357.

As to the matter of violence; it seems to be agreed, that an entry may be forcible, not only in respect of a violence actually done to the person of a man, as by beating him if he refuse to relinquish his possession, but also in respect of any other kind of violence in the manner of the entry, as by breaking open the doors of a house, whether any person be in or not, especially if it be a dwelling-house, and perhaps also by an act of outrage after the entry, as by carrying away the party's goods; but it seems that an entry is not forcible by the bare drawing up a latch, or pulling back the bolt of a door, there being no appearance therein of its being done by strong hand, or multitude of people; and it hath been holden that an entry into a house through a window, or by opening a door with a key, is not forcible. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 26.

Violence.

An actual assault is not necessary to a forcible entry or detainer. Milner v. Maclean, 2 C. & P. 17.

WHAT IS A FORCIBLE ENTRY.

Terror.

In respect of the circumstances of terror; it is to be observed, that whenever a man, either by his behaviour or speech at the time of his entry, gives those who are in possession just cause to fear that he will do them some bodily hurt, if they will not give way to him, his entry is esteemed forcible; whether he cause such a terror by carrying with him such an unusual number of attendants, or by arming himself in such a manner as plainly intimates a design, or by actually threatening to kill, maim, or beat those who shall continue in possession, or by giving out such speeches as plainly imply a purpose of using force, as if one say that he will keep his possession in spite of all men, or the like. Id. s. 27.

But it seems that no entry shall be judged forcible from any threatening to spoil another's goods, or to destroy his cattle, or to do him any other such like damage which is not personal. Id. s. 28.

However, it is clear that it may be committed by a single person, as well as by twenty. Id. s. 29.

But, nevertheless, all those who accompany a man, when he makes a forcible entry, shall be judged to enter with him, whether they actually come upon the lands or not. Com. Dig. "Forcible Entry," (A 3).

He who barely agrees to a forcible entry made to his use without his knowledge or privity, is not within the statutes, because he did not concur in or promote the force. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 24.

As to when the offence amounts to a riot, see post, 801.

III. What is a Forcible Detainer.

What a forcible detainer.

It seemeth certain, that the same circumstances of violence or terror, which will make an entry forcible, will make a detainer forcible also. And a detainer may be forcible, whether the entry were forcible or not. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 32.

No attempt by the former possessor to re-enter is necessary to constitute a forcible detainer. See 1 Russ. C. 288.

A lessee who, after the end of his term, keeps arms in his house to oppose the entry of the lessor, though no one attempt an entry; or a lessee at will detaining with force after the will is determined, will be guilty of this offence. So will a lessee resisting with force a distress for rent, or forestalling or rescuing the distress. See Com. Dig. Forcible Detainer, (B 2). So will a mortgagor detaining with force after the mortgage is determined, and such like. Id. Ibid. But the mere denying possession in these cases would not amount to a forcible detainer. Id.

The 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, as we have seen ante, 791, does not apply to a person who has been in possession for three years by himself, or any other under whom he claims; but a person in quiet possession for three years, and then disseised by force, and restored, cannot afterwards detain with force within three years after his restitution, for his possession was interrupted. Com. Dig. Forcible Detainer, (B 2).

By 31 Eliz. c. 11, we have seen ante, 791, no restitution is to be given on an indictment of forcible entry and detainer where the party has been three years in quiet possession, before the indictment found, and his estate not determined. See further as to this, post, 797.

IV. How Punishable by Action at Law.

How punished by

THE 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, s. 6, enacts, that if any person be put out or disseised of any lands or tenements in forcible manner, or put out peaceably and after holden out with strong hand, the party grieved shall have assize of novel disseisin, or writ of trespass against the disseisor; and if he recover, he shall have treble damages, and the defendant moreover shall make fine and ransom to the King.

The Party aggrieved shall have Assize, &c.]—But this action, being at the suit of the party, and only for the right, is only where the entry of the defendant was not lawful; for if a man entereth with force, where his entry is lawful, he shall not be punished by way of action; but yet he may be indicted upon the statute, for the indictment is for the force and for the King; and he shall make fine to the King, although his right be never so good. Dalt. c. 129; ante, 787, n.

The act is applicable only to parties in possession as freeholders, and does not apply to persons in possession as tenants from year to year, or others. 8 B. & C. 409. See a form of declaration, 2 Chit. Pl. 5th ed. 865.

Treble Damages]—And this he shall recover as well for the mesne occupation as for the first entry: and albeit he shall recover treble damages, yet he shall recover costs, which shall be trebled also: for the word damages includeth costs of suit. 1 Inst. 257; 10 Co. 115; 1 Ventr. 22; sed vide Hard. 152.

HOW PUNISHABLE BY ACTION AT LAW.

V. How Punishable at the General Sessions by Indictment.

THE party grieved, if he will lose the benefit of his treble damages and costs, may be aided and have the assistance of the justices at the general sessions, by way of indictment on the statute of 8 Hen. VI.; which being found there, he shall be restored to his possession, by a writ of restitution granted out of the same court to the sheriff. Dalt. c. 129.

Indictment at sessions.

If the indictment be not before the justices at sessions, restitution of the property cannot be granted, for justices of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery, though they may inquire of forcible entries, and fine the parties, yet cannot award a writ of restitution. See 3 Bac. Ab. Forcible Entry, (F); 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 36. If, indeed, the indictment be removed into the King's Bench by certiorari, that Court may give restitution. Post, 801.

Elsewhere.

In the caption of which indictment, it will be sufficient to say justices assigned to keep the peace of our lord the King, without shewing that they have authority to hear and determine felonies and trespasses; for the statute enables all justices of the peace, as such, to take such indictments. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 36.

Form of indictment.

It must appear on the face of the indictment that the entry was with more force than in a common trespass; at least, a public breach of the peace must appear. 8 T. R. 361, 362. An averment, that defendant entered with a strong hand will suffice; Styles, 136; Cro. Eliz. 461; but the mere words "force and arms" will not. Id. If the word "disseised," is inserted, it is not also necessary to use the terms expelled or unlawfully, for the last is superfluous, and the first is implied in the word disseised; but, unless the word disseised be used, the indictment at common law should contain the word "expelled." 8 T. R. 357; Cro. Jac. 32; Yelv. 165. It appears also to be sufficient to allege that the defendant on such a day entered and disseised the prosecutor, without adding the words then and there to the disseisin. Cro. Jac. 41, 151.

Statement of force.

An indictment for a forcible detainer is good, without shewing that the defendant's original entry was peaceful. Cro. Jac. 19; but it seems clear that an entry must be shewn, as the act would not apply if the party had been always in possession. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 40. It is said, that a forcible detainer need not be laid as against the peace; but it is not usual to omit this allegation. Cro. Jac. 32, 151.

The tenement in which the force was made must be described with convenient certainty; and the indictment must set forth that the defendant actually entered, and ousted the party grieved; and continueth his possession (a) at the time of finding the indictment; otherwise he cannot have restitution, because it doth not appear that he needeth it. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 37, et seq.

Statement of tenement, &c.

Statement of defendant being in possession.

(a) If a man's wife, children, or servants, do continue in the house or upon the land, he is not ousted of his possession; but his cattle being upon the ground do not preserve his possession. Dalt. c. 132.

INDICTMENT

If it merely state that the defendant forcibly entered a certain "tenement," which may signify any thing which may be held, and even an incorporeal hereditament, it will be defective. 1 Sess. Cas. 357; 1 East, 441; 2 Str. 891. So, to allege that the defendant entered two closes of meadow or pasture, a house, a rood of land, or certain lands belonging to a house, is bad, for the same certainty is required as in a declaration in ejectment. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 37. As to which certainty, see 2 Chit. Pl. 5th ed. 878, n., and the cases there cited.

But an indictment may be void as to such part of it as is uncertain in this respect, and good for so much as is certain; thus, an indictment for forcible entry into a house and certain acres of land, may be quashed as to the land and stand good as to the house. 3 Bac. Abr. "Forcible Entry," (E); and see further, 1 Russ. C. 290.

Statement of party's interest in premises.

Where the indictment is not at common law, it must shew the estate of the party disseised.

An indictment for forcible entry was quashed, for not setting forth that the party was seised or disseised, or what estate he had in the tenement: for if he had only a term for years, then the entry must be laid into the freehold of A. in the possession of B. R. v. Griffith, 3 Salk. 169; 3 Burr. 1732.

An indictment on the 8 Hen. VI. must state that the place was the freehold of the party grieved at the time of the injury; but it seems to be sufficient on the statutes of Richard the Second, to shew who had the possession. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 38. So, an indictment under 21 Jac. I. c. 15, must allege such an estate in him as that statute requires. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 38; Cald. 415.

An indictment for a forcible entry into a copyhold is bad, if it only state that the copyhold was held at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the manor, without saying "by copy of court-roll." Anon. Ventr. 89.

It has been held, that, in an indictment under the 8 Hen. VI., the tenure of the estate will be implied from the word disseised, without other words of freehold. Wroth's case, 3 Leon. 102; and see Palm. 277.

An averment in the indictment merely that the prosecutor was "seised," is sufficient. R. v. Dillon, 2 Chit. Rep. 314.

An indictment at common law, stating that the prosecutor was possessed, will suffice. R. v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 360.

Unless the particular statute require it, it seems unnecessary to shew the quantity of estate which the party injured had in the land, or by what title he claims it; for it is not the title, but the possession, which is in question. Id. And see 2 Roll. Abr. 80, pl. 3; contra, 1 Ventr. 306. And where more is stated than is necessary to prove the offence laid in the indictment, such unnecessary matter need not be proved. Thus, in an indictment for a forcible entry on the possession of a lessee for years, proof of the force and of such possession is sufficient, although the indictment allege that the premises were the freehold of A., and such allegation is not proved. R. v. Lloyd, Cald. 415.

Ouster and continuance thereof.

The indictment, to entitle the party to an award of restitution, must state not only the ouster, but also the defendant's continuance in possession at the time of the finding the indictment. 1 Hawk. P. C. 64, s. 41.

Evidence.

Evidence]—The material averments in the indictment must be alleged as proved. In an indictment on the statutes, proof that the prosecutor holds colourably as a freeholder or leaseholder, will suffice; for the Court will not on the trial enter into the validity of an adverse claim made by the defendant, and which he ought to assert, not by force, but by action. Per Vaughan B., R. v. Williams, Monmouth Summer Assizes, 1828; Talf. Dick. Ser. 239.

Witnesses.

The tenant whose land has been entered upon or withholden by force, is not a competent witness, for he is entitled to restitution if the defendant be convicted. See Id. and R. v. Williams, 9 B. & C. 549, S. C.; R. v. Beran. R. & M., N. P. C. 242.

Punishment.

Punishment]—The statute 5 Rich. II. stat. 1, c. 8, imposes a punishment of imprisonment and ransom at the King's will; and, by the common law, a fine or imprisonment may be imposed on conviction for a forcible entry at common law. See Cald. 415.

RESTITUTION.

Restitution—The foregoing statutes shew in what cases restitution may be awarded. “The same justice or justices before whom an indictment for forcible entry or detainer shall be found, may award restitution, but no other justices, except those before whom the inquest was found, can award restitution, unless the indictment be removed by certiorari into the King’s Bench, and that Court, by the plenitude of its power, can restore, because that is supposed to be implied by the statute, on the ground, that whenever an inferior jurisdiction is erected, the superior jurisdiction must have authority to put it in execution.” 1 Russ. C. 291; 3 Bac. Ab. Forcible Entry, (F). It seems, justices of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, cannot award a writ of restitution. Id. Sed vid. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 51.

The restitution can be to such property only for which a writ of entry will lie. See 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 45, ante, 792.

It can only be to him who was put out of actual possession, and not to one who was only seised in law. R. v. Marrow, C. T. Hardw. 174. He must be alive, and his interest continue up to the time of the actual execution of the writ of restitution; if such be not the case, the defendant may shew the fact, when the writ is prayed for, or apply to the Court to quash the writ, or give an indemnity to the sheriff, and get him to return to the writ the fact as to the death or discontinuance of interest.

The restitution must be awarded within three years after the inquisition. R. v. Harris, 3 Salk. 313.

By the 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, and 31 Eliz. c. 11, ante, p. 791, we have seen, that any one indicted on these acts, may allege quiet possession for three whole years, so as to stay the award of restitution. In such a case the possession must have continued without interruption during three whole years next before the indictment. 3 Bac. Ab. Forcible Entry (G); 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 53. And the possession must be of a lawful estate. Id. As to the plea and costs under this, see post, and 1 Russ. C. 293.

A supersedeas of the restitution may be awarded by the same justices who awarded the restitution, or by the Court of King’s Bench, on a certiorari. 3 Bac. Ab. Forcible Entry, (G); 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 61; 1 Russ. 293.

The Court of King’s Bench may also set aside the restitution, and grant re-restitution. Id. Cro. Jac. 151; Alleyn, 50.

As to how restitution is to be made, see next section.

If possession under a writ of restitution be avoided immediately after execution by a fresh force, the party shall have a second writ of restitution without a new inquisition; but the second writ must be applied for in a reasonable time. R. v. Harris, 1 Ld. Raym. 482.

VI. How Punishable by one Justice.

For a more speedy remedy, it is enacted, by stat. 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, that the party grieved may complain to any one justice, or to a mayor, sheriff, or bailiff, within their liberties. See the act, ante, p. 790.

Punishment, &c., of wrong-doer.

But although one justice alone may proceed in such cases, yet it may be advisable for him, if the time for viewing the force will suffer it, to take to his assistance one or two more justices.

Concerning which power of one justice, it is, as we have seen, ante, p. 790, enacted as follows:—

After complaint made to such justice, by the party grieved, of a forcible entry made into lands, tenements, or other possessions, or forcible holding thereof, he shall, within a convenient time, at the costs of the party grieved, without any examining or standing upon the right or title of either party), take sufficient power of the county and go to the place where such force is made. See stats. 15 Rich. II. c. 2; 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, s. 2, ante, p. 789, 790. Dalt. c. 44.

PUNISHABLE BY ONE JUSTICE.

Complaint by the Party grieved—Yet these words do not enforce any necessity of such a complaint; for it is holden, that the justice may and ought to proceed upon any information or knowledge thereof whatsoever, though no complaint at all be brought unto him by any party grieved thereby. Lamb. 147.

Power of the County—All people of the county, as well the sheriff as other, shall be attendant on the justices to arrest the offenders; on pain of imprisonment and fine to the King. 15 Rich. II. c. 2.

If the doors be shut, and they within the house shall deny the justice to enter, it seems he may break open the house, to remove the force. Dalt. c. 44.

And if, after such entry made, the justice shall find such force, he shall cause the offenders to be arrested.

He shall also take away their weapons and armour, and cause them to be appraised; and after, to be answered to the King as forfeited, or the value thereof. Dalt. c. 44.

Also such justice ought to make a record (a) of such force by him viewed; which record shall be a sufficient conviction of the offenders, and the parties shall not be allowed to traverse it: and this record, being made out of the sessions by a particular justice, may be kept by him; or he may make it indented, and certify the one part into the King's Bench, or leave it with the clerk of the peace, and the other part he may keep himself. For this view of the force by the justice, being a judge of record, maketh his record thereof, in the judgment of the law, as strong and effectual as if the offenders had confessed the force before him; and, touching the restraining of traverse, more effectual than if the force had been found by a jury, upon the evidence of others. (This is as to the fine and imprisonment, but not as to restitution). 15 Geo. II. c. 2; Dalt. c. 44.

And the offenders being arrested, (as before is said), shall be put in the next gaol (b), there to abide convict by the record of the same justice until they have made fine and ransom to the King. 15 Rich. II. c. 2.

Shall be put in the next Gaol—It is said, that the justice hath no power to commit the offender to gaol, unless he do it upon his own view of the fact, and not upon the jury finding the same afterwards. Dalt. c. 44; 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 8.

And if such offenders, being in the house at the coming of the justice, shall make no resistance, nor make shew of any force, then the justice cannot arrest or remove them at all upon such view. Dalt. c. 44.

But, howsoever, if the force be found afterwards by the inquiry of the jury, the justice may bind the offenders to the peace; and if they be gone, he may make his warrant to take them, and may after send them to the gaol until they have found sureties for the peace. Ibid.

Note—Mr. Dalton in this place says, good behaviour, which I have presumed to alter to the peace, as deeming it much the safer; and not being sufficiently satisfied concerning the power of a justice of the peace to bind to the good behaviour in the like cases, which power Mr. Dalton hath enlarged more than all other authors, without any assistance from the commission of the peace, or any act of Parliament, other than had been for above 200 years before.

Until they have made Fine—In the case of R. v. Sir Edm. Elwell, he was brought up upon a habeas corpus, with a return of the cause of his commitment, which was upon a conviction of forcible entry and detainer. And it being moved to discharge him upon exceptions to the commitment, the Court refused to enter into the consideration of them, till the conviction was likewise regularly removed before them. But, by consent, he was bailed in the mean time. And this term the conviction being before the Court, it appeared that there was no fine set by the justices, and it was therefore moved to be quashed. It was agreed on both sides that there should be a fine; but it was insisted, that it being now before the King's Bench by a certiorari, they might set the fine. But, by the Court:—We are not to execute the judgment of an inferior court. The conviction is to be upon view: and they who view the nature of the force are the properest judges what fine to set: and though a certiorari should come before the fine is set, yet it would be no contempt in the justices to complete their judgment by setting one. Lambard, indeed, was of opinion, that the justices could not set the fine at all; but upon what foundation we can never imagine. The justices are not bound to do it upon the spot, but may take a reasonable time to consider of the fine, because, by the words of the act, the commitment is to be, till he has paid the fine. The conviction must be quashed, and the defendant discharged. 2 Str. 794; 2 Ld. Raym. 1514.

The same was likewise solemnly resolved in Leighton's case; and that the justice may assess the same either before the commitment or after. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 8.

And the fine must be assessed upon every offender severally, and not upon them jointly; and the justice ought to estreat the fine, and to send the estreat into the Exchequer, that from thence the sheriff may be commanded to levy it for his Majesty's use. Dalt. c. 44.

But upon payment of the fine to the sheriff, or upon sureties found (by recognizance) for the payment thereof, it seemeth that the justice may deliver the offenders out of prison again at his pleasure. Dalt. c. 44.

And so much concerning removing the force: but the party ousted cannot be restored to his possession by the justice's view of the force, nor unless the same force be found by the inquiry of a jury.

Concerning which it is, as we have seen ante, 790, by stat. 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, s. 3, enacted as follows: And though that the persons making such entry be present, or else departed before the coming of the justice, he may notwithstanding, in some good town next to the tenements so entered, or in some other convenient place by his discretion, (and that though he go not to see the place where the force is, [Dalt. c. 44]), have power to inquire by the people of the county, as well of them that make such forcible entry, as of them which hold the same with force.

Sects. 4, 5. In order to which, the justice shall make his precept (a) to the sheriff, commanding him in the King's behalf to cause to come before him, sufficient and indifferent persons, dwelling next about the lands so entered, to inquire of such entries; whereof every man shall have lands or tenements of 40s. a-year above reprises. And the sheriff shall return issues on every of them, at the day of the first precept returnable 20s., and at the second day 40s., and at the third day 100s., and at every day after double. And the sheriff making default shall, on conviction before the same justice or before the judge of assize, forfeit 20l.; half to the King, and half to him who shall sue, with costs; and moreover shall make fine and ransom to the King.

Before the same Justice—And the justice may proceed against the sheriff for this default, either by bill at the suit of the party, or by indictment at the suit of the King. Dalt. c. 44.

And the defendant also, if he be not present, ought to be called to answer for himself; for it is implied by natural justice in the construction of all laws, that no one ought to suffer any prejudice thereby, without having first an opportunity of defending himself. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 60.

And it seems to be settled at this day, that if the defender tender a traverse of the force, the justice ought not to make any restitution, till the traverse be tried. 3 Salk. 169.

The defendant may also, by the 31 Eliz. c. 11, plead three years' possession; whereby it is enacted, That no restitution upon an indictment of forcible entry, or holding with force, be made to any person or persons, if the person or persons so indicted hath had the occupation, or hath been in quiet possession by the space of three whole years together next before the day of such indictment so found; and his, her, or their estate or estates therein not ended or determined; which the party indicted shall and may allege for stay of restitution, and restitution to stay until that be tried, if the other will deny or traverse the same; and if the same allegation be tried against the same person or persons so indicted, then the same person or persons so indicted to pay such costs and damages to the other party as shall be assessed by the judges or justices before whom the same shall be tried; the same costs and damages to be recovered and levied as is usual for costs and damages contained in judgments upon other actions. This enactment will be found fully set forth, ante, 791.

It hath been holden, that the plea of such possession is good, without shewing under what title or of what estate such possession was; because it is not the title, but possession only, which is material in this case. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 56; sed vide ante, 797. And it was holden by the Court, in Leighton's case, that if the defendant shall either traverse the entry or the force, or plead that he has been three years in possession, the justice may summon a jury for the trial of such traverse, for it is impossible to determine it upon view; and if the justice have no power to try it, it would be easy for any one to elude the statute by the tender of such a traverse, and therefore, by a necessary construction, the justice must needs have this power incidental to what is expressly given him. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 8. And this traverse must be tendered in writing, and not by a bare denial of the fact in words; for thereupon a venire facias must be awarded, a jury returned, the issue tried, a verdict found, and judgment given, and costs and damages awarded; and there must be a record, which must be in writing, to do all this, and not a verbal plea. Dalt. c. 133; 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 58. Upon which traverse tendered, the justice shall cause a new jury to be returned by the sheriff, to try the traverse; which may be done the next day, but not the same day. Dalt. c. 133. And it seemeth he who tendereth the traverse shall bear all the charges of the trial; and not the King or the party prosecuting. Id.

And the 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, s. 3, ante, 790, enacts, If such forcible entry or detainer be found (a) before such justice, then the said justice shall cause to reseise (b) the lands and tenements so entered or holden, and shall restore the party put out to the full possession of the same.

The said Justice—It seems to be agreed that no other justices of the peace, except those before whom the indictment shall be found, shall have any power, either at the sessions or out of it, to make any award of restitution. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 50.

Shall cause to reseise—And the justice may break open the house by force to reseise the same; and so may the sheriff do, having the justice's warrant. Dalt. c. 44.

Reseise—That is, shall remove the force, by putting out all such offenders as shall be found in the house, or upon the lands, that entered or held with force. Dalt. c. 130.

The sheriff, if need be, may raise the power of the county to assist him in the execution of the precept; and therefore, if he make a return thereto, that he could not make a restitution by reason of resistance, he shall be amerced. 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 49.

And shall restore the party put out—And this he may do in his own proper person; or he may make his warrant to the sheriff to do it; Dalt. c. 44; 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 49; and it may be, it seems, done over again if the wrong doer immediately after again dispossess forcibly. See ante, 797.

(a) See form (No. 5), post, 803.

(b) See form (No. 10), post, 805.

And by the 21 Jac. I. c. 15, it is enacted, That such judges, justices, or justice of the peace, as may give restitution unto tenants of any estate of freehold, may give the like unto tenants for term of years, tenants by copy of court roll, guardians by knight's service, tenants by elegit, statute merchant, and staple, of lands or tenements by them so holden, which shall be entered upon by force, or holden of them by force.

PUNISHABLE BY

VII. How Punishable on a Certiorari.

ALTHOUGH regularly the justices only who were present at the inquiry, and when the indictment was found, ought to award restitution, yet if the record of the presentment or indictment shall be certified by the justice or justices into the King's Bench, or the same presentment or indictment be removed or certified thither by certiorari, the justices of that Court may award a writ of restitution to the sheriff, to restore possession to the party expelled; for the justices of the King's Bench have a supreme authority in all cases of the crown. Dalt. c. 44, ante, 797.

a certiorari.

Also, where, upon a removal of the proceedings into the King's Bench, the conviction shall be quashed, the Court will order restitution to the party injured. As in the case of R. v. Jones, a conviction of forcible entry was quashed for the old exception of messuage or tenement, by reason of the uncertainty; but the restitution was opposed on an affidavit that the party's title (which was by lease) was expired since the conviction. But the Court said, they had no discretionary power in this case, but were bound to award restitution on quashing the conviction. 1 Str. 474. Any execution of restitution executed after the teste of the certiorari is avoided, but the justices are not brought into contempt without notice. 3 Bac. Ab. Forcible Entry, (G); 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 61, 62. See post, Riot, Vol. V.

Where a conviction of forcible entry is quashed, the Court must award restitution.

VIII. How Punishable as a Riot.

If a forcible entry or detainer shall be made by three persons or more, it is also a riot, and may be proceeded against as such, if no inquiry hath before been made of the force. Dalt. c. 44. See post, Riot, Vol. V.

I., against the peace of our said lord the King, [and against the form of the statutes in that case made and provided.]*

Note—If it is a freehold, then the party should be said to be seised thereof in his demesne as of fee; and consequently he must be thereof disseised; otherwise it is of a lesser estate, of which he is not properly said to be seised, but possessed thereof at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the manor, or the like, and then he must be expelled, ejected, amoved, or the like.

(a) See the acts, ante, 789 to 792, and observations as to the form of the indictment, ante, 795. This precedent may be adapted to an indictment for the offence at common law by striking out the words “against the form of the statutes, &c.” See other forms, 3 Chit. C. L. 1136; Talf. Dick. Sess. 239; Arch. 386.

(No. 5).

Note—The books upon the office of a justice of the peace generally set forth that the record ought to be in the present tense, and not in the time past, (and herewith do accord the adjudged cases in the Court of King's Bench); yet, nevertheless, they all exhibit the form of a record in the time past, and not in the present. (1 Str. 443). Therefore Dr. Burn took the liberty to alter the same from the record in Id. Raymond of the conviction of Sir Edm. Elwell and others; (see ante, p. 798); adding the fine thereunto, for the want of which that conviction was quashed. And he gave the following form of a record of a forcible detainer, rather than a forcible entry, because the justice for the most part cannot be supposed to be present at the entry, as not having knowledge thereof till after the entry is made.

Record of a forcible detainer upon view.

Kent, } BE it remembered, that, on the      of      , in the      year of the reign of to wit. } our sovereign lord King George &c., at Beckingham, in the county of Kent, aforesaid, Eliz. Elwell complaineth to us, Sir E. Bettenson, baronet, P. Burrell, and W. Passenger, esquires, three of the justices of our said lord the King, assigned to keep the peace in the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, that Sir Edm. Elwell, late of London, baronet, Joseph Billers, late of      , and Daniel Monty, late of , into the messuage of her the said E. E., being the mansion house of her the said E. E., called Langley House, situate within the parish of Beckingham aforesaid, did enter, and her the said E. E., of the messuage aforesaid, whereof the said E. E. at the time of the entry aforesaid was seised as of the freehold of her the said E. E., for the term of her life, unlawfully ejected, expelled, and amoved, and the said messuage from her, the said E. E., unlawfully, with strong hand and armed power, do yet hold and from her detain, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided; whereupon the same E. E. then, to wit, on the said 15th day of September, at the parish of B. aforesaid, prayeth of us, so as aforesaid being justices, to her in this behalf that a due remedy be provided, according to the form of the statute aforesaid; which complaint and prayer by us, the aforesaid justices, being heard, we, the aforesaid E. B., baronet, P. B. and W. P., esquires, justices aforesaid, to the messuage aforesaid, personally have come, and do then and there find and see the aforesaid Ed. E., J. B., and D. M., the aforesaid messuage, with force and arms, unlawfully, with strong hand and armed power detaining, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, according as she, the same E. E., so as aforesaid hath unto us complained; therefore it is considered by us, the aforesaid justices, that the aforesaid Edmund Elwell, Joseph Billers, and Daniel Monty, of the detaining aforesaid with strong hand, by our own proper view then and there as aforesaid had, are convicted, and every of them is convicted, according to the form of the statute aforesaid: whereupon we, the justices aforesaid, upon every of the aforesaid Ed. E., J. B., and
D. M., do set and impose severally a fine of 10*l.* of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be paid by them and every of them severally to our said sovereign lord the King, for the said offences; and do cause them, and every of them, then and there to be arrested; and the same Ed. E., J. B., and D. M., being convicted, and every of them being convicted upon our own proper view, of the detaining aforesaid with strong hand as is aforesaid, by us the aforesaid justices are committed, and every of them is committed, to the gaol of our said lord the King, at Maidstone, in the county of Kent, aforesaid, being the next gaol to the messuage aforesaid, there to abide respectively, until they shall have paid their several fines respectively to our said lord the King, for their respective offences aforesaid. Concerning which the premises aforesaid, we do make this our record. In witness whereof, we, the aforesaid E. B., baronet, P. B., and W. P., esquires, the justices aforesaid, to this record our hands and seals do set, at the parish of B. aforesaid, in the county of Kent aforesaid; on the      day of      , in the      year aforesaid of the reign of our said sovereign lord the now King.

O., B. O., and C. O., convicted of the said forcible holding by mine own view, testimony, and record; commanding you in his said Majesty's name to receive them into your said gaol, and there safely to keep them, and every of them respectively, until they shall have respectively paid the several sums of ten pounds of good and lawful money of Great Britain to our said sovereign lord the King, which I have set and imposed upon every of them separately, for a fine and ransom for their said trespasses respectively. ## Foreign Offences.

(See Admiralty, Vol. I.; Homicide, Vol. III. p. 253).

IT seems, that if a person having committed a felony in a foreign country, comes into England, he may be arrested here, and conveyed and given up to the magistrates of the country against the laws of which the offence was committed. Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34.

Foreign Service.

[3 Jac. I. c. 4; 59 Geo. III. c. 69].

Entering into,
when an offence.

ENTERING into the service of any foreign state without the King's consent, or contracting with it any engagement which subjects the party to an influence or control inconsistent with the allegiance due to his sovereign, such as receiving a pension from a foreign prince without the King's leave, is at common law a high misdemeanor, and punishable accordingly. Such also is disobedience to the King's command to a subject abroad to return home: or to his writ of ne exeat regno to a subject at home, commanding him to continue here. 1 East's P. C. 81; 4 Bla. Com. 122.

And, says Hawkins, it is so high an offence to prefer the interest of a foreign prince to that of our own, that any act is criminal which may but incline a man so to do, as to receive a pension from a foreign prince without the leave of our king. 1 Hawk. c. 22, s. 3.

3 Jac. I. c. 4.

Subjects going out of the realm to serve, &c., a felony.

The serving or procuring others to serve foreign states, has been provided against by several statutes. Stat. 3 Jac. I. c. 4, s. 18, enacts, that "every subject of this realm that shall go or pass out of this realm to serve any foreign prince, state, or potentate, or shall pass over the seas, and shall voluntarily serve any such foreign prince, state, or potentate, not having before his going taken the oath of obedience, shall be a felon."

By sect. 19, "If any gentleman or person of higher degree, or any person which hath borne, or shall bear any office, or place of captain, lieutenant, or any other place, charge, or office, in camp, army, or company of soldiers, or conductor of soldiers, shall after go or pass voluntarily out of this realm, to serve any such foreign prince, state, or potentate, or shall voluntarily serve any such prince, state, or potentate, before that he and they shall become bound by obligation, with two sureties, &c." not to be reconciled to the see of Rome, nor enter into any conspiracy against the King, "he shall be a felon."

In construction of this act, it has been held, that if a party go out of the realm with intent to serve a foreign state, although there be no service in fact; or if a party do actually so serve, though he did not go abroad for that purpose, but on some other occasion, it will be within the act. 1 East's P. C. c. 2, s. 23; 3 Inst. 80.

The trial should be at the place where the party left this kingdom. 3 Inst. 80.

Sect. 8. " If any person in any part of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or in any part of his Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, without the leave and licence of his Majesty for that purpose first had and obtained as aforesaid, shall, by adding to the number of the guns of such vessel, or by changing those on board for other guns, or by the addition of any equipment for war, increase or augment, or procure to be increased or augmented, or shall be knowingly concerned in increasing or augmenting the warlike force of any ship or vessel of war, or cruizer, or other armed vessel, which at the time of her arrival in any part of the united kingdom, or any of his Majesty's dominions, was a ship of war, cruizer, or armed vessel in the service of any foreign prince, state, or potentate, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any colony, province, or part of any province or people belonging to the subjects of any such prince, state, or potentate, or to the inhabitants of any colony, province, or part of any province or country under the control of any person or persons so exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government, every such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon being convicted thereof, upon any information or indictment, be punished by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, at the discretion of the Court before which such offender shall be convicted."

Sect. 9. "Offences made punishable by the provisions of this act, committed out of the united kingdom, may be prosecuted and tried in his Majesty's Court of King's Bench at Westminster, and the venue in such case laid at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex."

Sect. 10. "Any penalty or forfeiture inflicted by this act, may be prosecuted, sued for, and recovered, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of his Majesty's Courts of record at Westminster or Dublin, or in the Court of Exchequer, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, in the name of his Majesty's attorney-general for England or Ireland, or his Majesty's advocate for Scotland respectively, or in the name of any person or persons whatsoever; wherein no essoign, protection, privilege, wager of law, nor more than one imparlance shall be allowed; and in every action or suit the person against whom judgment shall be given for any penalty or forfeiture under this act shall pay double costs of suit; and every such action or suit shall and may be brought at any time within twelve months after the offence committed, and not afterwards; and one moiety of every penalty to be recovered by virtue of this act shall go and be applied to his Majesty, his heirs or successors, and the other moiety to the use of such person or persons as shall first sue for the same, after deducting the charges of prosecution from the whole."

Sect. 11. "If any action or suit shall be commenced, either in Great Britain or elsewhere, against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance of this act, all rules and regulations, privileges and protections, as to maintaining or defending any suit or action, and pleading therein, or any costs thereon, in relation to any acts, matters, or things done, or that may be done by any officer of customs or excise, or by any officer of his Majesty's navy, under any act of Parliament in force on or immediately before the passing of this act, for the protection of the revenues of customs and excise, or prevention of smuggling, shall apply and be in full force in any such action or suit as shall be brought for any thing done in pursuance of this act, in as full and ample a manner to all intents and purposes as if the same privileges and protections were repeated and re-enacted in this act."

Sect. 12. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to subject to any penalty any person who shall enter into the military service of any prince, state, or potentate in Asia, with leave or licence signified in the usual manner from the governor-general in council, or vice president in council, of Fort William in Bengal, or in conformity with any orders or regulations issued or sanctioned by such governor-general or vice president in council."

By the annual mutiny act persons persuading soldiers to desert are made punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both. See tit. Military Law, Vol. III.

Disobedience to letters from the King to a subject commanding him to return from beyond the seas, or to his writ of ne exeat regno, or proclamation commanding the subject to stay at home, is "a high misprision and contempt;" 4 *Blac. ## Forestalling, Ingrossing, and Regrating (a).

[5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 14; 12 Geo. III. c. 71.]

Derivation.

FORESTALLING (forestællan, or forestallan) in the English Saxon, signifieth properly to market before the public, or to prevent the public market; and metaphorically, to intercept in general; and seemeth derived from fore, which is the same as before, and stalle, a standing place or department; from whence sprang the ancient word stallage, which signifieth money paid for erecting a stall or stand for the selling of goods in a fair or market.

Ingrossing is from in, and gross, great or whole.

And regrating, from re, again, and the French grater, to grate or scrape; and signifieth the scraping or dressing of cloth or other goods in order for selling the same again.

Repeal of statutes against offence.

There have been several statutes made from time to time against these offences in general, and also especially with respect to particular species of goods according to their several circumstances; almost all of which, from stat. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 14, and others downwards, made for enforcing the same, are repealed by stat. 12 Geo. III. c. 71. But these offences still continue punishable upon indictment at the common law by fine and imprisonment.

Offence punishable at common law.

And at the common law all endeavours whatsoever to enhance the common price of any merchandize, and all kinds of practices which have an apparent tendency thereto, whether by spreading false rumours, or by buying things in a market before the accustomed hour, or by buying and selling again the same thing in the same market, or by any other such like devices are highly criminal, and punishable by fine and imprisonment. 1 Hawk. c. 80, s. 1.

By the common law, a merchant bringing victuals into the realm may sell the same in gross: but no person can lawfully buy within the realm any merchandize in gross, and sell the same in gross again, without being liable to be indicted for the same. 3 Inst. 196.

The bare ingrossing of a whole commodity, with an intent to sell it at an unreasonable price, is an offence indictable at common law, whether any part thereof be sold by the ingrosser or not. 1 Hawk. c. 80, s. 3.

And so jealous is the common law of all practices of this kind, that it will not suffer corn to be sold in the sheaf; perhaps for this reason, because, by such means, the market is in effect forestalled. 1 Hawk. c. 80, s. 4.

5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 14.

By the stat. of 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 14, these offences were particularly described; which statute, though now repealed as aforesaid, yet may be of use as containing a parliamentary exposition of the respective terms denoting the several particular offences; and is as follows:—

Forestaller.

Whosoever shall buy, or cause to be bought, any merchandize, victual, or any other thing whatsoever, coming by land or by water, toward any market or fair to be sold in the same, or coming towards any city, port, haven, creek, or road from any parts beyond the sea to be sold; or make any bargain, contract, or promise, for the having or buying the same, or any part thereof, so coming as is aforesaid, before the said merchandize, victuals, or other things shall be in the market, fair, city, port, haven, creek, or road, ready to be sold; or shall make any motion by word, letter, message, or otherwise, to any person for the enhancing of the price, or dearer selling of any thing above mentioned; or else dissuade, move, or stir any person coming to the market or fair, to abstain or forbear to bring or convey any of the things above rehearsed to any market, fair, city, port, haven, creek, or road, to be sold as aforesaid—shall be deemed a forestaller.

Sect. 3. Whosoever shall ingross, or get into his hands by buying, contracting, or promise taking, other than by demise, grant, or lease of land or tythe, any corn growing in the fields, or any other corn or grain, butter, cheese, fish, or other dead victuals whatsoever, to the intent to sell the same again, shall be deemed an unlawful ingrosser.

Sect. 2. And whosoever shall by any means regrate, obtain, or get into his hands or possession, in a fair or market, any corn, wine, fish, butter, cheese, candles, tallow, sheep, lambs, calves, swine, pigs, geese, capons, hens, chickens, pigeons, conies, or other dead victual whatsoever, that shall be brought to any fair or market to be sold, and shall sell the same again in any fair or market holden or kept in the same place, or in any other fair or market within four miles thereof, shall be deemed a regrator.

It has been observed, that notwithstanding the repeal of stat. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. the offences of forestalling, ingrossing, and regrating, remain punishable at common law; and indeed lamentable would be the plight of the public and of the state, were there no remedy against practices which have been justly termed most heinous offences against religion and morality, and against the established law of the country.

In the case of R. v. Waddington, 1 East, 143, 145, which was ably argued at the bar, and well considered by the Court, the following were declared to be among the offences at common law, and not done away by the repeal of stat. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. viz.

1. Spreading false rumours with intent to enhance the price of hops.
2. Endeavouring to enhance the price of hops by persuading dealers, &c. not to take their hops to market, and to abstain from selling for a long time.
3. Ingrossing large quantities of hops, by buying with intent to resell the same for an unreasonable profit, and thereby to enhance the price.
4. Getting into hand large quantities, by contracting with various persons for the purchase, with intent to prevent the same being brought to market, and to resell at an unreasonable profit, and thereby greatly to enhance the price.
5. Unlawfully ingrossing by buying large quantities, with like intent.
6. Ingrossing hops then growing, by forehand bargains, with like intent.

To forestall any commodity which is become a common victual and necessary of life, or is used as an ingredient in the making or preservation of any victual, though not formerly used or considered as such, is an offence at common law. R. v. Waddington, 1 East, 143.

But, at the present day, it would probably be holden that no offence is committed unless there is an intent to raise the price of provisions by the conduct of the party, for the mere transfer of a purchase in the market where it is made, the buying articles before they arrive at a public market, or the purchasing of a large quantity of a particular article, can scarcely be regarded as in themselves necessarily injurious to the community, and, as such, indictable offences; a party buying and selling again, does not necessarily increase the price of the commodity to the consumer, for the division of labour or occupations will, in general, occasion the commodity to be sold cheaper to the consumer; see Smith's Wealth of Nations, Vol. II. 309, and Index, title Labour; and many cases may occur in which a most laudable motive may exist for buying large quantities of the same commodity. See the arguments, &c. in 14 East, 406; 15 East, 511. Indeed, in the case of The King v. Rusby, Hilary Term, 40 Geo. III., the Court were equally divided on the question, whether regrating is an indictable offence at common law, and though the defendant was convicted, no judgment was ever passed upon him. ## Forfeiture (a).

THE forfeitures for particular offences may be found under their respective titles: here, it is treated of forfeitures in general. As to the levying and estreating of fines and forfeitures, see ante, title Fines and Forfeitures.

I. Of Forfeiture of Lands and Goods, 814.

[1 Rich. III. c. 3; 17 Edw. II. c. 16; 54 Geo. III. c. 145].

II. Of Loss of Dower, 817.

[1 Edw. VI. c. 12; 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11].

III. Of Corruption of Blood, 817.

I. Of Forfeiture of Lands and Goods.

Forfeiture of lands.

It seems agreed that, by the common law, all lands of inheritance, whereof the offender was seised in his own right, and also all rights of entry to lands in the hands of a wrong doer, are forfeited to the King, by an attainder of high treason, and to the lord of whom they are immediately holden by an attainder of petit treason or felony. 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 1.

But it seems clear that the lord cannot enter into the lands holden of him, upon an escheat for petit treason or felony, without a special grant, till it appear by due process that the King hath had his prerogative of the year, day, and waste. Id. s. 3.

Concerning which year, day, and waste, it is enacted by the 17 Edw. II. c. 16, that the King shall have the goods of all felons attainted, and fugitives, wheresoever they be found. And if they have freehold, it shall be forthwith taken into the King's hands, and the King shall have all profits of the same by one year and one day; and the land shall be wasted and destroyed in the houses, woods, and gardens, and in all manner of things belonging to the same land. And after the King hath had the year, day, and waste, the land shall be restored to the chief lord of the fee, unless that he fine before with the King for the year, day, and waste.

From the 54 Geo. III. c. 145, it appears that no attainder except for high treason, petit treason, or murder, or for abetting the same, shall extend to the disinheriting of any heir, &c. See the act ante, title Attainder, Vol. I.

Copyholds.

All copyhold estates are forfeited to the lord and not to the King, unless there be some act of Parliament or express custom to the contrary. 1 Cruise, 361. But, to entitle him thereto, the attainder must be complete, 3 B. & A. 510, unless there be an express custom entitling him to it on mere conviction. 2 Ventr. 38. And the lord must, it seems, do some act towards seizing the copyhold. In a late case, where a copyholder was convicted of a capital felony, but was pardoned on condition of remaining two years in prison,

(a) As to forfeiture in general, see the law fully collected in 1 Chit. Crim. Law, 727 to 742; Com. Dig. Forfeiture; Bac. Ab. Forfeiture. It is thought fit in this edition not to enlarge much on this title, the same not being peculiarly applicable to the general purposes of this work, and being on a subject of a very intricate nature.

and the lord did not do any act towards seizing the copyhold, it was held that, at the expiration of the two years, the copyholder might sue in ejectment for the land, inasmuch as the pardon restored his competency, and the estate would not vest in the lord without some act done. Doe d. Evans v. Evans, 5 B. & C. 584.

OF FORFEITURE
OF LANDS, &c.

As to forfeiture of goods, it seems agreed that all things whatsoever which are comprehended under the notion of a personal estate, whether they be in action or possession, which the party hath or is entitled to in his own right, and not as executor or administrator to another, are liable to such forfeiture, in the following cases:

Forfeiture of goods.

1. Upon a conviction of treason or felony. 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 13.
2. Upon a flight found before the coroner, on view of a dead body. Id. s. 14; Lambert v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 188; 4 B. & C. 138, S. C.

3. Upon an acquittal of a capital felony, if the party be found to have fled. 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 14.

4. Also a person indicted of petit larceny, and acquitted, yet if it be found he fled for it, forfeits his goods as in case of grand larceny. 1 Hale, 530; 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 14.

But it is certain that the party may in all cases, except that of the coroner's inquest, traverse the finding of the flight. Also it seems agreed that the particulars of the goods found to be forfeited, may be also traversed. 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 14.

5. Upon a presentment by the oaths of twelve men that a person arrested for treason or felony, fled from or resisted those who had him in custody, and was killed by them in the pursuit or scuffle. Id. s. 16.

6. By being waived or left by a felon in his flight, whereby he forfeits the goods so waived, whether they be his own, or the goods of others stolen by him, which shall not be restored to the right owners, but upon a proper prosecution. Id. s. 17.

7. Also a convict within clergy forfeits all his goods, though he be burnt in the hand; yet thereby he becomes capable of purchasing other goods. 2 Hale, 388, 389.

But, on burning in the hand, he ought to be immediately restored to the possession of his lands. 2 Hale, 389.

8. If a person be found felo de se, he shall forfeit his goods and chattels, but not his lands. 3 Inst. 54; 5 Rep. 109.

Upon outlawry in treason or felony, the offender shall lose and forfeit as much as if he had appeared, and judgment had been given against him, as long as the outlawry is in force. Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 5.

Forfeiture upon outlawry.

And those that tarry till the exigent in treason, felony, or petit larceny, forfeit their goods, though they render themselves to justice, and are acquitted; for it was a flight in law. Id.

But where the killing a man in his own defence is in the law no felony, there is no forfeiture unless he fled; for that is a distinct forfeiture, although the party be not guilty of the fact. 1 Hale, 493.

Forfeiture in se
defendendo.

Every description of personal property is in general included in this forfeiture. Co. Lit. 391 a; Noy, 155; 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 9. Choses in action and possession, and rights of action, are forfeited alike to the crown without office found. 2 B. & A. 258; 1 Chit. C. L. 732, 2nd ed. But property which he holds as the personal representative of another, is not, in general, forfeited like his own. 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 9. If a man pledges goods, and afterwards is attainted of felony, the King shall not have the goods pledged without paying the sum for which they were pledged. Bro. Ab. Pledges, pl. 31. See 1 Stark. Rep. 319.

Description of personal property.

It seems agreed that the forfeiture, upon an attainder, either of treason or felony, shall have relation to the time of the offence, for the avoiding of all subsequent alienations of the land, but only to the time of the conviction or flight found, as to chattels; unless the party were killed in flying or resisting, in which case it is said that the forfeiture of the chattels shall relate to the time of the offence. 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 30.

To what time the forfeiture shall relate.

See further as to when the forfeiture begins to run. 1 Chit. C. L. 735.

OF FORFEITURE
OF LANDS, &c.

What is to be done with the felon's goods before forfeiture.

And as to the necessity of office being found, see Doe d. Evans v. Evans, 5 B. & C. 587, n.

But though the goods of an offender be not forfeited till the conviction or flight found by inquest, yet, whether they may be seized upon the offence committed, hath been controverted; concerning which Lord Hale saith thus:—

It seemeth clear, that, at the common law, if a man had committed felony or treason, or though possibly he had committed none, yet if he had been indicted, the sheriff, coroner, or other officer, could not seize and carry away the goods of the offender or party accused.

Again, he could not in that case have removed the goods out of the custody of the offender or party accused, and deliver them over to the constables, or to the villata, to answer for them.

But if the party were indicted, the sheriff or other officer might make a simple seizure of them only to inventory and appraise them, and leave them to the custody of the servants, or bailiff of the party indicted, in case he would give security against their being embezzled; or, in default thereof, he might deliver them to the constable or vill to be answerable for them, but yet so that the party accused and his family have sufficient out of them for their livelihood and maintenance.

And possibly the same law was, though he were not indicted, but de facto had committed a felony, but with this difference, if he had been indicted, this kind of seizure might have been made, whether he committed the felony or not.

But in case there were no indictment, then it is at the peril of him that seizeth, if he committed not the felony.

And then, as to the statute of 1 Rich. III. c. 3, it is as follows:—

No sheriff or other person shall take or seize the goods of any person arrested or imprisoned for suspicion of felony, before he be convicted or attainted, or before the goods be otherwise forfeited; on pain of double value to the party grieved.

Mr. Staundforde thinks this is but in affirmance of the common law, only that it gives a penalty; but it seems to be somewhat more; for this prohibits the seizure of the goods of a party imprisoned, though he were also indicted, but not yet convicted, where unquestionably the common law allowed such a seizure, if the party or his friends did not secure the forthcoming of the goods, where the party was indicted.

But upon this statute these things are considerable: 1. As to persons at large, it seems to me, (says he), that, if they fly not, there can be no seizure at all made whether they are indicted or not; for the statute did not intend a greater privilege to a party imprisoned, than to him that is at large. 2. That if he be at large, and fly for it, yet his goods cannot be seized and removed, whether he be indicted or not indicted. 3. That if he be indicted, and at large, yet the goods cannot be removed, but only viewed, appraised, and inventoried, in the house or place where they lie.

And yet I know not how it comes to pass, says he, the use of seizing the goods of persons accused of felony, though imprisoned or not imprisoned, hath so far obtained, notwithstanding this statute, that it passeth for law and common practice, as well by constables, sheriffs, and other the King's officers, as by lords of franchises, that there is nothing more usual.

Upon the whole, he says, that the opinion of my Lord Coke, in his 3 Inst. 228, hath truly stated the law, at least as it stands upon the statute of 1 Rich. III. viz. 1. That, before the indictment, the goods of any person cannot be searched, inventoried, or in any sort seized. 2. That after the indictment, they cannot be seized and removed, or taken away before conviction or attainder.

But then it may be said, to what purpose may they be searched and inventoried, after indictment, if they may not be removed, but are equally liable to embezzlement as before.

I think (he says) he is not bound to find sureties, neither hath the officer at this day any power to remove them in default of sureties, and commit them to the vill, but only to inventory them, and leave them where he found them, (unless in case of a second capias on stat. 25 Edw. III. c. 14), for the prisoner or party indicted may sell them bond fide; and if he may do so, the vendee may take them, and the villata cannot refuse the delivering of them to the vendee, though the goods had been delivered to them.

But there is this advantage by the viewing and appraising, that thereby the King is ascertained what the goods are, and may pursue them that take or embezzle them by information, (if the party happen to be convict), and try the property with them, whether they are really sold, or sold only fraudulently, without valuable consideration, to prevent the forfeiture. 1 Hale, 363, 4, 5, 6, 7.

OF LOSS OF DOWER.

II. Of Loss of Dower.

ALBEIT a person shall be attainted of felony, yet his wife shall not forfeit her dower. 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, s. 17.

dower in felony.

But on his attainder of treason she shall forfeit her dower. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 11, s. 13. But in some kinds of treason, (particularly with regard to the coin), there is a special saving of the wife's dower by statute.

In treason.

See further as to the loss of dower, 1 Chit. C. L. 738-9.

III. Of Corruption of Blood.

It is agreed that by an attainder of treason or felony (see now 54 Geo. III. c. 145), the blood is so far stained or corrupted, that the party loses all the nobility or gentility he might have had before, and becomes ignoble. 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 47.

Corruption of blood.

Also, that he can neither inherit as heir to an ancestor, nor have an heir. Id. s. 48.

But the King's pardon, though it doth not restore the blood, yet, as to issue born after, hath the effect of a restitution. 1 Hale, 358.

But restitution of blood, in its true nature and extent, can only be by act of Parliament. 1 Hale, 358; 2 Hawk. c. 49, s. 51.

As to the abolition of corruption of blood in all cases, except high treason, petit treason, and murder, see the 54 Geo. III. c. 145, ante, title Attainder, Vol. I.

I. Of Forgery at Common Law.

TO forge," says Sir Edward Coke, "is metaphorically taken from the smith, who beateth upon his anvil, and forgeth what fashion or shape he will." But the common law of England hath declared it an offence to forge thus metaphorically, and defining that offence to be, in the words of Sir William Blackstone, "the fraudulent making or alteration of a writing to the prejudice of another's right," hath always attached to it a certain punishment, as for a misdemeanor. It is also made criminal by the statute law, which, though in general following the common law definition, extends over a greater number and variety of subjects, and attaches a higher penalty to the crime.

FORGERY AT

But, though, as we have said, the common law regards forgery as a crime, and must have regarded it as such before the time of legal memory, the principle does not appear to have been observed, until a comparatively modern date. This is not at all remarkable; for we cannot wonder, if, in these ruder stages of society, the motive of private benefit was found stronger than that of public justice; or a civil remedy preferred to a criminal prosecution. Up to the reign of Elizabeth, we have no record of relief being sought from the grievance of forgery, otherwise than by civil action. This civil remedy was by writ of forger of false deeds, at the suit of the party grieved; and this writ, it may be observed, only extended to the forgery of deeds, such writings alone being then in use; and the subject-matter of the fraud could only be real property, as that was the only species of property whose title was evidenced by writing, in former days. Thus, when the 1 Hen. V. c. 3, was passed, giving an action to the party grieved, such action was confined to lands and tenements as the subject-matter, and to deeds as the means of affecting it. And as the remark is true, that the idea of a possibility of damage, unless very near and impending, is a notion too refined for rude legislators, we find this statute declaring the fabrication of the deed not sufficient—it must be followed by publication. When published, an action immediately lay. Now, whatever may have been the state of opinion as to the crime of forgery at common law, in the time of Henry the Fifth, before the enactment of the statute alluded to, (and no memorials have reached us whereby that can be ascertained), nothing is more certain, than that criminal prosecutions must have immediately fallen into perfect disuse, since the remedy given by the statute was more likely, from the cause mentioned, to gratify the feelings of that age.

In thus glancing at the history of forgery at common law, it will be noticed as remarkable, how little the subsequent doctrines of the Courts, as to the crime, seem to have been influenced, as one would suppose they naturally ought to have been, by the notions which were held concerning it, when treated as a civil injury. These notions, as we have seen, were very confined; they laid it down as merely the forging and publishing, in another's name, a deed relating to real property; and it may be of some importance to observe, how, from this limited state of things, the more enlarged definition of forgery as a crime at common law arose; its penalties were extended; and the civil notions above named became merged, through the agency of circumstances, in the more enlarged ideas that came to be entertained of the serious nature of the offence, and of the high degree of criminality which attended it.

The various frauds, which, as committed through the medium of writing, were very similar in their kind to forgery, though not included in its civil definition, were in those times remediable by writ of deceit. We allude to such, for example, as forging the impression of a seal, personating another in a judicial proceeding, acknowledging a fine in his name, and the like. Now nothing could be more likely than that the idea of these things, as grievances, should be confounded with that of forgery, so similar in its nature, and so similar in its remedy. And such, in fact, was the case. Injuries, such as we have mentioned, in the course of time, began to be placed on the same footing as forgery, and to be regarded, as they really were, only a different species of that offence. The "investing of writing with a fictitious character," was the common attribute of both; the little distinctive character they possessed was gradually wearing away, and the idea of forgery as a crime began then to force itself on the consideration of society. Then came the enactment of the 5th of Elizabeth, c. 14, which, with more wisdom than that of Henry, making it a criminal as well as civil offence, and attaching to it a serious punishment, effectually triumphed over the already much disturbed common law notions of its qualities as a mere civil injury, restored the principle which must have existed before the time of legal memory, put an end to all civil remedies, and established it, as it hath ever since continued, a crime indictable at the common law as a misdemeanor. This statute declared forgery punishable of itself, and the common law now no longer deemed publication necessary; considering the very making, with a fraudulent intention, and without lawful authority, of any instrument which is the subject of forgery, to be of itself a sufficient completion of the offence before publication. Objections had been urged to this on the ground that the publication of the instrument was the medium by which the intent is made manifest; but it is obvious that it may be as plainly proved by other evidence; and many cases are in the books, where, no publication having taken place, circumstances nevertheless existed sufficient to warrant the jury in finding a fraudulent intention. From the causes of extension we have mentioned, the definition now included deeds relating not merely to lands, but to any other subject; and not deeds only, but any other writing then in use, and possessed of a distinctive character. Of such, however, "then in use," there were few not under seal: and this circumstance may account for the doubts entertained by Hawkins, whether, at common law, forgery could be committed of any documents but such as were of a public kind; for, in the infancy of commerce, when no peculiar severity distinguished this offence from common frauds, an accurate discrimination on the subject was of comparatively small importance. These doubts were, however, entirely removed by the decision in Ward's case (to be found in Ld. Raymond's Reports, p. 1461), who was prosecuted by information filed by the attorney-general for forging a release of acquittance on a sum of money, and it was objected, on his behalf, that the matter was not public in its nature, nor under seal. These objections were, however, over-ruled; and it was held, that forgery at common law might be committed in respect of any writing whatever by which another might be defrauded. A distinction, at the same time, was marked out between forgery and fraud; that the last must actually take effect: while the first was complete, though no one was actually injured, if the tendency and intent to defraud were manifest. The sentence of the defendant in this instance was, to pay a fine of 500*l.*, stand in the pillory, and be committed till payment of the sum imposed on him.

From the time of this decision the rule was established, that, at common law, writings of every description—whether of a public or private nature, whether written or printed, whether of record, under seal, or by parol, and whether invested with a legal character or not—are equally the subjects of forgery, being equally within the definition and mischief of the crime. The point has never arisen as to whether the forging impressions of seals are included; but, from what has been said, it may fairly be supposed that they will be found to be so.

Having sketched thus briefly the history of the crime at common law, we see clearly the reasons which tended to remove the fetters with which the civil actions might otherwise have controlled its definition when it came to be considered as a crime. And we cannot therefore wonder that the idea of its being merely "forging and publishing in another's name a deed relating to real property," should be lost in the more extensive one defined by Chief Baron Comyns, as "the fraudulently writing or publishing a false deed, or writing, to the prejudice of the right of another;" by the twelve judges, "the false making a note or other instrument with intent to defraud;" by Sir Wm. Blackstone, "the fraudulent making or alteration of a writing, to the prejudice of another's right;" by Mr. Serjeant Hawkins, "falsely and fraudulently making or altering;" by Mr. Justice Buller, "the making a false instrument with intent to deceive;" by Mr. Baron Eyre, "a false signature made with intent to deceive;" and by Sir Edward East, "a false making, a making malo animo, of any written instrument, for the purpose of fraud and deceit."

In these definitions it will be noticed, that a fraudulent intention seems to be regarded as necessary to the crime. Now, although the civil notions of the grievance were necessarily thus confined—property alone being the subject-matter—yet we cannot suppose that the criminal offence, extended, as we have seen, in every other respect, should be limited in this. An evil intention would, we apprehend, be sufficient; and the words “intent to deceive,” in the last three opinions, with Sir Edward East’s “making male animo,” strongly favour such a supposition.

It is an important thing in the consideration of any law to have previously discerned the causes from which it has arisen, and the means by which it was introduced. Thus far, what has been said above as to the state of the common law regarding this crime, will not be deemed altogether useless to magistrates, though it appears, from late decisions, that their jurisdiction does not extend to the offence. “It hath been settled of late” says Mr. Hawkins, “that they have no jurisdiction over forgery at the common law; the principal reason of which resolution, I apprehend, was, that inasmuch as the chief end of the institution of the office of these justices was for the preservation of the peace against personal wrongs and open violence, and the word trespass in its most proper and natural sense is taken for such kind of injuries, it shall be understood in that sense only in the commission, or, at the most, to extend to such other offences only as have a direct and immediate tendency to cause such breaches of the peace, as libels, and such like, which on this account have been adjudged indictable before justices of the peace.”

Any attempt to explain this extraordinary exception on the ground of principle must, we apprehend, fail. It cannot be asserted, that the terms of their commission are not large enough to cover the crime of forgery. Mr. Hawkins, himself, may be charged with inconsistency on this point, for, in commenting on the word “trespasses” he had stated it in a large sense to comprehend, not only all inferior offences directly against the peace, but also all others which are so only by construction; now all breaches of the law are said to be, constructively, breaches of the peace, and therefore, according to his own definition, forgery ought to be included. Lord Chief Baron Comyns, in his Digest, states, that “they may inquire of any thing done to the fraud or deceit of another;” and forgery is certainly of that kind, though it has no immediate tendency to a breach of the peace. No reason then seems to be assigned by Hawkins in point of principle; we must rest satisfied with the candid opinion of Lord Kenyon (in deciding the case of The King v. Gibbs), that he had always had a general impression on his mind that it was a settled point, that forgery was excepted from the jurisdiction of justices; why excepted, he knew not, but, having been expressly so adjudged, he was resolved not to interfere with the decision.

According to Mr. Barlow, however, it seems to be admitted that a justice of the peace may take an information of forgery, bind over the informers, examine the offender, certify his examination to the proper judges, and commit him to prison in order to abide his trial. Barl. 244.

II. Of Forgery by Statute.

THE statute law, as has been remarked, could add nothing, so far as written instruments are concerned, to the list of offences already cognizable under the common law; but it distinguishes those which it has singled out, by different qualities, by different degrees of guilt, by different means of preventing their perpetration, and by different modes of executive justice.

Any very extended notice of this subject might not be considered judicious here, though we may be allowed to glance briefly at the statute law, more particularly for the purpose of introducing the recent act, which has excited so much public interest.

The first enactment against the crime of forgery, which was passed in the fifth year of the reign of Elizabeth, and which extended only to certain documents connected with real property, did not make it capital. It was not till the reign of William the Third, that, on the establishment of the Bank of England, when the members of that corporation demanded a new and more secure protection for that species of property in which they were principally to deal, the legislature deemed it expedient to attach the punishment of death to the forging of bank securities. Since that period, no crime has been so fertile in statutes as this: and no crime, we believe, was ever visited with such cruel and indiscriminately severe enactments. Statute followed statute in quick and merciless succession, to the number of one hundred and twenty (or thereabouts), sixty-one of which imposed the penalty of death. We may in this place, availing ourselves of the excellent report from the House of Commons, dated 2nd of April, 1824, briefly condense these capital provisions, arranging them under their respective subjects, thus:

1. In General;—2. Bank of England;—3. Public Funds;—4. Exchequer Bills;—5. Stamps;—6. Excise and Customs;—7. Courts of Chancery, Exchequer, and Admiralty;—8. Public Offices;—9. East India and other Companies, Underwriters, and Bankers;—10. Army and Navy;—11. Land Tax.

1. IN GENERAL]—It shall be felony, and without clergy, in the principal, in aiders and abettors, and in accessories before the fact, to forge, or, knowing it to be forged, to utter a deed, will, bill of exchange, promissory note for payment of money, indorsement or assignment of such bill or note, acceptance of such bill, acquittance or receipt either for money or goods, accountable receipt for any security for payment of money, or warrant or order for payment of money or delivery of goods, with intent to defraud any person or corporation. 2 Geo. II. c. 25, s. 1; 7 Geo. II. c. 22; 31 Geo. II. c. 22, s. 78; 18 Geo. III. c. 18; 45 Geo. III. c. 89, s. 1, 8.

2 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 1;

1, 8.

It shall be felony, and without clergy, in the principal, and in accessories before the fact, to acknowledge a fine, recovery, deed enrolled, statute, recognizance, bail or judgment in the name of another without his privity or consent. 21 Jac. I. c. 26, s. 2.

21 Jac. 1, c. 26, s. 2.

It shall be felony to represent, before any person empowered to take bail by an act of the fourth year of King William and Queen Mary, intituled An Act for taking special bails in the country upon actions and suits depending in the Court of King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, at Westminster, or an act of the twenty-seventh year of King George the Third, intituled An Act for taking and swearing affidavits to be made use of in the Court of session of the county palatine of Chester, and for taking of special bail in actions and suits depending in the same Court; another, whereby he may be liable to pay any money for debt or damages to be recovered in the suit wherein he is represented, as if he had acknowledged and entered into the same. 4 Wm. & M. c. 4, s. 4; 27 Geo. III. c. 43, s. 4.

4 Wm. & M. c. 4,
43, s. 4.

2. BANK OF ENGLAND]—It shall be felony without clergy, to forge the seal of the Bank of England, or a bank note, bank bill of exchange, dividend warrant, or a bond under the bank seal, or an indorsement thereon, or to offer, dispose of, or put away, any such instrument or indorsement, or demand the contents or part thereof of the bank, their officers or servants, knowing the same to be forged, with intent to defraud any person or corporation. 45 Geo. III. c. 89, s. 2, 8; 8 & 9 Wm. III. c. 20, s. 36.

45 Geo. 3, c. 89, s.
2, 8; 8 & 9 Wm. 3,
c. 20, s. 36.

It shall be felony and without clergy in the principal, in aiders and assistants, and in accessories before the fact, for any one but the officers, workmen, servants, or agents of the Bank of England, to be appointed for that purpose by the Bank, and for the use of the Bank only, to make or use, or knowingly to have in his custody or possession, without excuse, the proof whereof shall lie upon the accused, any frame, mould, or instrument, for making paper with the words "Bank of England" visible in the substance of such paper, or to make paper with those words visible in its substance, or to cause those words to appear visible in the substance of paper. 13 Geo. III. c. 79, s. 1.

13 Geo. 3, c. 79,
s. 1.

FORGERY BY STATUTE.

8 & 9 Wm. 3, c. 20,
s. 36.

It shall be felony without clergy to forge or counterfeit the common seal of the corporation of the Bank of England, or of any sealed bank bill, made or given out in the name of the said corporation, for the payment of any sum of money or of any bank note of any sort whatsoever, signed for the said corporation, or the altering or rasing any indorsement on any bank bill, or note of any sort, from any evil motive other than a fraudulent intention. 8 & 9 Wm. III. c. 20, s. 36.

3. PUBLIC FUNDS]—It shall be felony and without clergy in the principal, in assistants, and in accessories before the fact, to forge a letter of attorney, or other authority or instrument to transfer, assign, sell, or convey any share or part thereof, of and in any capital stock or stocks of a corporation established or to be established by act of Parliament, or any share or part thereof, of and in annuities, in respect whereof the proprietors of such annuities have or shall have transferable shares in any capital stock or stocks established or to be established by act of Parliament, in proportion to their respective annuities or any share or part thereof, of or in any other transferable annuities established or to be established by act of Parliament, or to receive such annuity, or any dividend attending such share or part thereof; or to forge the name of the proprietor of such share in stock, or person entitled to such annuity or dividend, in or to such pretended letter of attorney, instrument, or authority; or fraudulently to demand or endeavour to have such share in stock or annuities, or part thereof, transferred, assigned, sold, or conveyed, or such annuity, or dividend, or part thereof, received by virtue of such forged letter of attorney, authority, or instrument; or falsely and deceitfully to personate the true proprietor of such share in stock, annuity or dividend, or part thereof, and thereby transfer or endeavour to transfer, the stock or annuity, or receive or endeavour to receive the money of such proprietor, as if such offender were the lawful owner thereof. 4 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 15.

It shall be felony and without clergy in the principal, and in assistants, to make any transfer of any interest, part, or share of or in any stock, annuity, or other funds transferable at the Bank of England, in any of the bank books in which such transfers are made, in the name of one not the owner thereof, with intent to defraud any person or corporation. 33 Geo. III. c. 30, s. 1.

33 Geo. 3, c. 30, s.

It shall be felony and without clergy in the principal, in actors and assistants, and in accessories before the fact, to forge a transfer of any interest, part, or share, of or in any stock, annuity, or other funds, now or hereafter made transferable by act of Parliament at the Bank of England, or of or in the capital stock now or hereafter belonging to the Bank of England, or to utter as true such forged transfer, knowing it to be forged, with intent to defraud any person or corporation. 33 Geo. III. c. 30, s. 2.

33 Geo. 3, c. 30, s.

It shall be felony and without clergy in the principal, and in assistants, to make a false entry, or to alter an entry, in the books of account kept by the Bank of England, wherein the accounts of the owners of stock, annuity, or other funds transferable at the Bank are kept, or in any manner to falsify such accounts with intent to defraud any person or corporation. 33 Geo. III. c. 30, s. 3.

In the enactment of these provisions (as appears from the foregoing merciless list), it does not seem to have been a matter worth much consideration, whether the forgery were that of thousands, or of the receipt of a petty bill, which might have been prevented by ordinary caution. Such a course, repugnant as it was to humanity, was soon felt however to be equally repugnant to the interests of justice. Experience did not prove that a system of such extreme rigour was attended with the most salutary effects. The severity of the law defeated its own objects. When a punishment disproportionate to the crime engages, (and it seldom fails to engage), for the offender, the sympathies of society—their justice and good feeling combine to save him from its infliction. And thus it was in the present matter—men were better contented quietly to endure the loss of property, than to prosecute to the death for what they considered an inadequate cause. When, for offences comparatively trifling, prosecutions were brought, few witnesses were found who would not prevaricate—few juries who would not commit what Sir Wm. Blackstone has well termed a “pious perjury,” rather than convict the offender. In short, that which is the end of all punishment—public utility—suffered in too many instances from this state of the law. The aphorism of Bacon is true—“Express statute cannot regularly be voided by disuse; it falls out that through a disestimation of obsolete laws, the authority of the rest is somewhat embased, and Mezentius' torture ensues, that laws alive are killed with the embracements of laws dead." It became absolutely necessary for the prevention of crime, for the due administration of justice, for the maintenance of that respect still due to some of the laws, that this indiscriminate severity of punishment should be diminished."

1 Wm. 4, c. 66.

The recent statute introduced by Sir Robert Peel, and which is founded on the admirable report, drawn up, we believe, by Mr. Hammond, has done something towards the accomplishment of this humane task, so often and so vainly attempted by many wise and excellent men. That act (the 1st Wm. IV. c. 66), is termed An Act for reducing into one act all such forgeries as shall henceforth be punished with death, and for otherwise amending the laws relative to forgery, was passed 23d July, 1830, and introduces many unequivocal and acknowledged improvements.

The 5th Eliz. c. 14, having been for obvious reasons repealed, the 23rd section of this stat. of 1 Wm. IV. c. 66, provides that the punishments imposed by that act, so far as they had been adopted by other acts, should also be repealed—reciting thus:

The punishments of 5 Eliz. c. 14, so far as they have been adopted by other acts, shall be repealed, and other punishments substituted.

Sect. 23. 'And whereas, by an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled "An Act against forgers of false deeds and writings," it is, amongst other things, provided, that every person convicted of any of the offences first enumerated in that act shall pay to the party grieved his double costs and damages, and shall forfeit to the crown the whole issues of his lands and tenements during his life, and shall also suffer imprisonment during his life: and whereas there are certain acts by which persons convicted of certain offences, mentioned in those acts, are subjected to the same pains and penalties as are imposed by the said act of Queen Elizabeth for the offences first enumerated in that act: and whereas the said act of Elizabeth is hereinafter repealed; and it is expedient to substitute other punishments in lieu of the punishments of that act, so far as the same have been adopted by any other acts; it is therefore enacted, "That every person who shall after the commencement of this act be convicted of any offence which is now subjected, by any act or acts, to the same pains and penalties as are imposed by the said act of Queen Elizabeth for any of the offences first enumerated in that act, shall be guilty of felony, and shall, in lieu of such pains and penalties, be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years,

1 WILL. 4, c. 66.

Among the improvements by this statute may be noticed in especial, that section which supplies a very important omission which had previously been felt in the law. We allude to that which provides for the forging or altering in England documents purporting to be made or actually made out of England, and for the forging or uttering in England bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, &c. purporting to be payable out of England. The state of the law relative to venue is also judiciously altered, and certain changes are made in the nature of the evidence required. These improvements will be found embodied in the following sections:—

Sect. 24 enacts, "That if any person shall commit any offence against this act, or shall commit any offence of forging or altering any matter whatsoever, or of offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged or altered, whether the offence in any such case shall be indictable at common law or by virtue of any statute or statutes made or to be made, the offence of every such offender may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, and laid and charged to have been committed, in any county or place in which he shall be apprehended or be in custody, as if his offence had been actually committed in that county or place; and every accessory before or after the fact to any such offence, if the same be a felony, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling the commission of any such offence, if the same be a misdemeanor, may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, and his offence laid and charged to have been committed in any county or place in which the principal offender may be tried."

All forgers and utterers may be tried in the county where they are apprehended or are in custody.

Sect. 25 enacts, "That in the case of every felony punishable under this act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable with death, or otherwise, in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this act shall, on conviction, be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years."

As to principals in the second degree and accessories.

Sect. 26 enacts, "That where any person shall be convicted of any offence punishable under this act, for which imprisonment may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the Court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for the whole or any portion or portions of such imprisonment, as to the Court in its discretion shall seem meet."

The Court may order hard labour, or solitary confinement for offences against this act.

Sect. 27 enacts, "That where any offence punishable under this act shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty, the same shall be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in the same manner as any other offence committed within that jurisdiction."

As to offences committed at sea.

Sect. 28 declares and enacts, "That where the having any matter in the custody or possession of any person is in this act expressed to be an offence, any person shall have any such matter in his personal custody or possession, or shall knowingly and wilfully have any such matter in any dwelling house or other building, lodging, apartment, field, or other place, open or closed, whether belonging to or occupied by himself or not, and whether such matter shall be so had for his own use or for the use or benefit of another, every such person shall be deemed and taken to have such matter in

Sect. 29 enacts, " That this act shall not extend to any offence committed in Scotland or Ireland."

Sect. 30 provides, declares, and enacts, " That where the forging or altering any writing or matter whatsoever, or the offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off any writing or matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged or altered, is in this act expressed to be an offence, if any person shall, in that part of the united kingdom called England, forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any such writing or matter, in whatsoever place or country out of England, whether under the dominion of his Majesty or not, such writing or matter may purport to be made or may have been made, and in whatever language or languages the same or any part thereof may be expressed, every such person, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling such person, shall be deemed to be an offender within the meaning of this act, and shall be punishable thereby in the same manner as if the writing or matter had purported to be made or had been made in England; and if any person shall in England forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any bill of exchange or any promissory note for the payment of money, or any indorsement on or assignment of any bill of exchange or promissory note for the payment of money, or any acceptance of any bill of exchange, or any undertaking, warrant, or order for the payment of money, or any deed, bond, or writing obligatory for the payment of money, (whether such deed, bond, or writing obligatory shall be made only for the payment of money, or for the payment of money together with some other purpose), in whatever place or country out of England, whether under the dominion of his Majesty or not, the money payable or secured by such bill, note, undertaking, warrant, order, deed, bond, or writing obligatory may be or may purport to be payable, and in whatever language or languages the same respectively or any part thereof may be expressed, and whether such bill, note, undertaking, warrant, or order be or be not under seal, every such person, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling such person, shall be deemed to be an offender within the meaning of this act, and shall be punishable thereby in the same manner as if the money had been payable or had purported to be payable in England."

This statute of 1 Wm. IV. c. 66, does not, however, as had been expected, abolish the capital punishment. Its only purpose is, according to its title, to reduce into one act all such forgeries as shall henceforth be punished with death, and otherwise to amend the laws relative to forgery.

The 1st section recites, " Whereas several offences relating to forged writings, and to other forged and counterfeit matters, and to false personation, false oaths, false entries, and other false matters, are now by virtue of several statutes punishable with death: and whereas it is expedient that none of those offences shall hereafter be punishable with death, unless the same shall be made punishable with death by this act; and also that the statutes concerning such of those offences, whether punishable with death or otherwise, as may more frequently or seriously affect the interests of his Majesty or his subjects, should be amended, and consolidated into this act: ' it is therefore enacted, "That where, by any acts now in force, any person falsely making, forging, counterfeiting, erasing, or altering any matter whatsoever, or uttering, publishing, offering, disposing of, putting away, or making use of any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased, or altered, or any person demanding or endeavouring to receive or have any thing, or to do or cause to be done any act, upon or by virtue of any matter whatsoever, knowing such matter to be falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased, or altered, would, according to the provisions contained in any of the said acts, be guilty of felony, and liable to suffer death as a felon; or where by any acts now in force any person falsely personating another, or falsely acknowledging any thing in the name of another, or falsely representing any other person than the real party to be such real party, or wilfully making a false entry in any book, account, or document, or in any manner wilfully falsifying any part of any book, account, or document, or wilfully making a transfer of any stock, annuity, or fund, in the name of any person not being the owner thereof, or knowingly taking a false oath, or knowingly making a false affidavit or false affirmation, or demanding or receiving any money or other thing by virtue of any probate or letters of administration, knowing the will on which such probate shall have been obtained to have been false or forged, or knowing such probate or letters of administration to have been obtained by means of any false oath or false affirmation, would, according to the provisions contained in any of the said acts, be guilty of felony, and liable to suffer death as a felon; or where by any acts now in force any person making or using, or knowingly having in his custody or possession, any frame, mould, or instrument for the making of paper, with certain words visible in the substance thereof, or any person making such paper, or causing certain words to appear visible in the substance of any paper, would, according to the provisions contained in any of the said acts, be guilty of felony, and liable to suffer death as a felon; then, and in each of the several cases aforesaid, if any person shall, after the commencement of this act, be convicted of any such felony as is hereinbefore mentioned, or of aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring the commission thereof, such person shall not suffer death for the same, unless the same shall be made punishable with death by this act; and if the same shall not be made punishable with death by this act, in such case every person who shall, after the commencement of this act, be convicted of any such felony, or of aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring the commission thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for life or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years nor less than two years: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall affect or alter any acts relating to the coin of this realm, or to any coin of any other realm lawfully current within this realm."

We shall here set out the sections which have consolidated all the capital enactments; they are as follows, and may be advantageously contrasted with the previous code.

Sect. 2 enacts, "That if any person shall forge or counterfeit, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeited, the great seal of the united kingdom, his Majesty's privy seal, any privy signet of his Majesty, his Majesty's royal sign manual, any of his Majesty's seals appointed by the twenty-fourth article of the union to be kept, used, and continued in Scotland, the great seal of Ireland, or the privy seal of Ireland, every such offender shall be guilty of high treason, and shall suffer death accordingly: provided always, that nothing contained in an act passed in the seventh year of the reign of King William the Third, intituled 'An Act for regulating of trials in cases of treason and misprision of treason,' or in an act passed in the seventh year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled 'An Act for improving the union of the two kingdoms,' shall extend to any indictment, or to any proceedings thereupon, for any of the treasons hereinbefore mentioned.

Sect. 4 declares and enacts, "That where by any act now in force any person is made liable to the punishment of death for forging or altering, or for offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any instrument or writing designated in such act by any special name or description, and such instrument or writing, however designated, is in law a will, testament, codicil, or testamentary writing, or a bill of exchange or a promissory note for the payment of money, or an indorsement on or assignment of a bill of exchange or promissory note for the payment of money, or an acceptance of a bill of exchange, or an undertaking, warrant, or order for the payment of money, within the true intent and meaning of this act, in every such case the person forging or altering such instrument or writing, or offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off such instrument or writing, knowing the same to be forged or altered, may be indicted as an offender against this act, and punished with death accordingly."

Sect. 5 enacts, "That if any person shall wilfully make any false entry in, or wilfully alter any word or figure in, any of the books of account kept by the governor and company of the Bank of England, or by the governor and company of merchants of Great Britain trading to the South Seas and other parts of America, and for encouraging the fishery, commonly called the South Sea Company, in which books the accounts of the owners of any stock, annuities, or other public funds, which now are or hereafter may be transferrable at the Bank of England or at the South Sea House, shall be entered and kept, or shall in any manner wilfully falsify the accounts of such owners in any of the said books, with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to defraud any person whatsoever; or if any person shall wilfully make any transfer of any share or interest of or in any stock, annuity, or other public fund which now is or hereafter may be transferrable at the Bank of England or at the South Sea House, in the name of any person not being the true and lawful owner of such share or interest, with intent to defraud any person whatsoever; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That if any person shall forge or alter, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any transfer of any share or interest of or in any stock, annuity, or other public fund which now is or hereafter may be transferrable at the Bank of England or at the South Sea House, or of or in the capital stock of any body corporate, company, or society which now is or hereafter may be established by charter or act of Parliament, or shall forge or alter, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any power of attorney or other authority to transfer any share or interest of or in any such stock, annuity, public fund, or capital stock as is hereinbefore mentioned, or to receive any dividend payable in respect of any such share or interest, or shall demand or endeavour to have any such share or interest transferred, or to receive any dividend payable in respect thereof, by virtue of any such forged or altered power of attorney or other authority, knowing the same to be forged or altered, with intent in any of the several cases aforesaid to defraud any person whatsoever; or if any person shall falsely and deceitfully personate any owner of any such share, interest or dividend as aforesaid, and thereby transfer any share or interest belonging to such owner, or thereby receive any money due to such owner as if such person were the true and lawful owner; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon."

Before concluding this title we shall have a few remarks to make, not perhaps at the present time irrelevant, on the great question of penal jurisprudence, which, since the introduction of this measure, has been so warmly discussed by the two great branches of our legislature, and concerning which they are unfortunately at variance. In the mean time we shall insert the remainder of this act, an act doubtless in very many respects advantageous, and for which—as for many other improvements in the criminal code, embodied in the present work—thanks are due to Sir Robert Peel. On this subject, however, it ought never to be forgotten, that gratitude is preeminently due to a highly enlightened and not less virtuous man, Sir Samuel Romilly, who, by his unwearied and benevolent exertions, gave to public opinion an impulse which will assuredly, at no distant period, establish that enlightened system of justice, for which, even in his life time, he laboured not altogether in vain.

The remainder of the act is as follows:—

Sect. 7 enacts, “ That if any person shall falsely and deceitfully personate any owner of any share or interest of or in any stock, annuity, or other public fund which now is or hereafter may be transferrable at the Bank of England, or at the South Sea House, or any owner of any share or interest of or in the capital stock of any body corporate, company, or society, which now is or hereafter may be established by charter or act of Parliament, or any owner of any dividend payable in respect of any such share or interest as aforesaid, and shall thereby endeavour to transfer any share or interest belonging to any such owner, or thereby endeavour to receive any money due to any such owner, as if such offender were the true and lawful owner, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for life or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years nor less than two years.”

Sect. 8 enacts, “ That if any person shall forge the name or hand-writing of any person as or purporting to be a witness attesting the execution of any power of attorney or other authority to transfer any share or interest of or in any such stock, annuity, public fund, or capital stock as is hereinbefore mentioned, or to receive any dividend payable in respect of any such share or interest, or shall utter any such power of attorney or other authority, with the name or hand-writing of any person forged thereon as an attesting witness, knowing the same to be forged, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years nor less than one year.”

Sect. 9 enacts, “ That if any clerk, officer, or servant of, or other person employed or intrusted by, the governor and company of the Bank of England, or the governor and company of merchants commonly called the South Sea Company, shall knowingly make out or deliver any dividend warrant for a greater or less amount than the person or persons on whose behalf such dividend warrant shall be made out is or are entitled to, with intent to defraud any person whatsoever, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years nor less than one year.”

Sect. 10 enacts, “ That if any person shall forge or alter, or shall offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any deed, bond, or writing obligatory, or any court roll or copy of any court roll relating to any copyhold or customary estate, or any acquittance or receipt either for money or goods, or any accountable receipt either for money or goods, or for any note, bill, or other security for payment of money, or any warrant, order, or request for the delivery or transfer of goods, or for the delivery of any note, bill, or other security for payment of money, with intent to defraud any person whatsoever, every such offender shall be guilty intituled "An Act for the more effectually preventing the forgery of bank notes, bank bills of exchange, and bank post bills;" and an act passed in the same year, intituled "An Act for the better prevention of the forgery of the notes and bills of exchange of persons carrying on the business of bankers;" and so much of an act passed in the forty-third of the same reign, intituled "An Act for preventing the forging and counterfeiting of foreign bills of exchange, and of foreign promissory notes and orders for the payment of money; and for preventing the counterfeiting of foreign copper money," as in anywise relates to any foreign bill of exchange, or foreign promissory note, undertaking, or order for the payment of money; and an act passed in the forty-fifth year of the same reign, intituled "An Act to alter and extend the provisions of the laws now in force for the punishment of the forgery of bank notes, bills of exchange, and other securities, to every part of Great Britain;" and so much of an act passed in the forty-eighth year of the same reign, intituled "An Act for regulating the issuing and paying off of exchequer bills," as relates to any forgery or other capital felony therein mentioned; and an act passed in the fifty-second year of the same reign, intituled "An Act for the further prevention of the counterfeiting of silver tokens issued by the governor and company of the Bank of England, called dollars, and of silver pieces issued and circulated by the said governor and company, called tokens; and for the further prevention of frauds practised by the imitation of the notes or bills of the said governor and company;" and so much of an act passed in the same year, intituled "An Act for the better regulating and preserving parish and other registers of births, baptisms, marriages, and burials in England," as relates to any felony therein mentioned; and so much of an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act for amending the laws respecting the solemnization of marriages in England, as relates to any person who shall knowingly and wilfully insert in the register book any false entry of any matter relating to any marriage, or shall falsely make, alter, forge, or counterfeit any such entry in the register, or any licence of marriage, or shall utter or publish as true any false, altered, forged, or counterfeited register of marriage, or a copy thereof, or any false, altered, forged, or counterfeited licence of marriage, knowing such register or licence of marriage respectively to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited, or shall wilfully destroy any register book of marriages, or any part thereof, or shall cause or procure or assist in the commission of any of the said several offences."

The 5th Eliz. c. 14, having been for obvious reasons repealed, the 23rd section of this stat. of 1 Wm. IV. c. 66, provides that the punishments imposed by that act, so far as they had been adopted by other acts, should also be repealed—reciting thus:

The punishments of 5 Eliz. c. 14, so far as they have been adopted by other acts, shall be repealed, and other punishments substituted.

Sect. 23. 'And whereas, by an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled "An Act against forgers of false deeds and writings," it is, amongst other things, provided, that every person convicted of any of the offences first enumerated in that act shall pay to the party grieved his double costs and damages, and shall forfeit to the crown the whole issues of his lands and tenements during his life, and shall also suffer imprisonment during his life: and whereas there are certain acts by which persons convicted of certain offences, mentioned in those acts, are subjected to the same pains and penalties as are imposed by the said act of Queen Elizabeth for the offences first enumerated in that act: and whereas the said act of Elizabeth is hereinafter repealed; and it is expedient to substitute other punishments in lieu of the punishments of that act, so far as the same have been adopted by any other acts;' it is therefore enacted, "That every person who shall after the commencement of this act be convicted of any offence which is now subjected, by any act or acts, to the same pains and penalties as are imposed by the said act of Queen Elizabeth for any of the offences first enumerated in that act, shall be guilty of felony, and shall, in lieu of such pains and penalties, be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years.

Among the improvements by this statute may be noticed in especial, that section which supplies a very important omission which had previously been felt in the law. We allude to that which provides for the forging or altering in England documents purporting to be made or actually made out of England, and for the forging or uttering in England bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, &c. purporting to be payable out of England. The state of the law relative to venue is also judiciously altered, and certain changes are made in the nature of the evidence required. These improvements will be found embodied in the following sections:—

Sect. 24 enacts, "That if any person shall commit any offence against this act, or shall commit any offence of forging or altering any matter whatsoever, or of offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged or altered, whether the offence in any such case shall be indictable at common law or by virtue of any statute or statutes made or to be made, the offence of every such offender may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, and laid and charged to have been committed, in any county or place in which he shall be apprehended or be in custody, as if his offence had been actually committed in that county or place; and every accessory before or after the fact to any such offence, if the same be a felony, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling the commission of any such offence, if the same be a misdemeanor, may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, and his offence laid and charged to have been committed in any county or place in which the principal offender may be tried."

STATUTE.

1 WILL. 4, c. 66.

All forgers and utterers may be tried in the county where they are apprehended or are in custody.

Sect. 25 enacts, "That in the case of every felony punishable under this act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable with death, or otherwise, in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this act shall, on conviction, be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years."

As to principals in the second degree and accessories.

Sect. 26 enacts, "That where any person shall be convicted of any offence punishable under this act, for which imprisonment may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the Court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for the whole or any portion or portions of such imprisonment, as to the Court in its discretion shall seem meet."

The Court may order hard labour, or solitary confinement for offences against this act.

Sect. 27 enacts, "That where any offence punishable under this act shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty, the same shall be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in the same manner as any other offence committed within that jurisdiction."

As to offences committed at sea.

Sect. 28 declares and enacts, "That where the having any matter in the custody or possession of any person is in this act expressed to be an offence, any person shall have any such matter in his personal custody or possession, or shall knowingly and wilfully have any such matter in any dwelling house or other building, lodging, apartment, field, or other place, open or closed, whether belonging to or occupied by himself or not, and whether such matter shall be so had for his own use or for the use or benefit of another, every such person shall be deemed and taken to have such matter in his custody or possession within the meaning of this act; and where the committing any offence with intent to defraud any person whatsoever is made punishable by this act, in every such case the word "person" shall throughout this act be deemed to include his Majesty or any foreign prince or state, or any body corporate, or any company or society of persons not incorporated, or any person or number of persons whatsoever who may be intended to be defrauded by such offence, whether such body corporate, company, society, person, or number of persons shall reside or carry on business in England or elsewhere, in any place or country, whether under Rule of interpretation as to criminal possession, and as to parties intended to be defrauded.

the dominion of his Majesty or not; and it shall be sufficient in any indictment to name one person only of such company, society, or number of persons, and to allege the offence to have been committed with intent to defraud the person so named, and another or others, as the case may be."

Sect. 29 enacts, " That this act shall not extend to any offence committed in Scotland or Ireland."

Sect. 30 provides, declares, and enacts, " That where the forging or altering any writing or matter whatsoever, or the offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off any writing or matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged or altered, is in this act expressed to be an offence, if any person shall, in that part of the united kingdom called England, forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any such writing or matter, in whatsoever place or country out of England, whether under the dominion of his Majesty or not, such writing or matter may purport to be made or may have been made, and in whatever language or languages the same or any part thereof may be expressed, every such person, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling such person, shall be deemed to be an offender within the meaning of this act, and shall be punishable thereby in the same manner as if the writing or matter had purported to be made or had been made in England; and if any person shall in England forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any bill of exchange or any promissory note for the payment of money, or any indorsement on or assignment of any bill of exchange or promissory note for the payment of money, or any acceptance of any bill of exchange, or any undertaking, warrant, or order for the payment of money, or any deed, bond, or writing obligatory for the payment of money, (whether such deed, bond, or writing obligatory shall be made only for the payment of money, or for the payment of money together with some other purpose), in whatever place or country out of England, whether under the dominion of his Majesty or not, the money payable or secured by such bill, note, undertaking, warrant, order, deed, bond, or writing obligatory may be or may purport to be payable, and in whatever language or languages the same respectively or any part thereof may be expressed, and whether such bill, note, undertaking, warrant, or order be or be not under seal, every such person, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling such person, shall be deemed to be an offender within the meaning of this act, and shall be punishable thereby in the same manner as if the money had been payable or had purported to be payable in England."

This statute of 1 Wm. IV. c. 66, does not, however, as had been expected, abolish the capital punishment. Its only purpose is, according to its title, to reduce into one act all such forgeries as shall henceforth be punished with death, and otherwise to amend the laws relative to forgery.

The 1st section recites, " Whereas several offences relating to forged writings, and to other forged and counterfeit matters, and to false personation, false oaths, false entries, and other false matters, are now by virtue of several statutes punishable with death: and whereas it is expedient that none of those offences shall hereafter be punishable with death, unless the same shall be made punishable with death by this act; and also that the statutes concerning such of those offences, whether punishable with death or otherwise, as may more frequently or seriously affect the interests of his Majesty or his subjects, should be amended, and consolidated into this act: ' it is therefore enacted, "That where, by any acts now in force, any person falsely making, forging, counterfeiting, erasing, or altering any matter whatsoever, or uttering, publishing, offering, disposing of, putting away, or making use of any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased, or altered, or any person demanding or endeavouring to receive or have any thing, or to do or cause to be done any act, upon or by virtue of any matter whatsoever, knowing such matter to be falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased, or altered, would, according to the provisions contained in any of the said acts, be guilty of felony, and liable to suffer death as a felon; or where by any

Sect. 20 enacts, " That if any person shall knowingly and wilfully insert, or cause or permit to be inserted, in any register of baptisms, marriages, or burials, which hath been or shall be made or kept by the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of any parish, district-parish, or chapelry, in England, any false entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, or shall forge or alter in any such register any entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial; or shall utter any writing as and for a copy of an entry in any such register of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, knowing such writing to be false, forged, or altered; or if any person shall utter any entry in any such register of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, knowing such entry to be false, forged, or altered, or shall utter any copy of such entry, knowing such entry to be false, forged, or altered, or shall wilfully destroy, deface, or injure, or cause or permit to be destroyed, defaced, or injured, any such register or any part thereof; or shall forge or alter, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any licence of marriage; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for life or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years nor less than two years."

Sect. 21 provides and enacts, " That no rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of any parish, district-parish, or chapelry, who shall discover any error in the form or substance of the entry in the register of any baptism, marriage, or burial respectively by him solemnized, shall be liable to any of the penalties herein mentioned, if he shall, within one calendar month after the discovery of such error, in the presence of the parent or parents of the child baptized, or of the parties married, or in the presence of two persons who shall have attended at any burial, or, in the case of the death or absence of the respective parties aforesaid, then in the presence of the churchwardens or chapelwardens, correct the entry which shall have been found erroneous, according to the truth of the case, by entry in the margin of the register wherein such erroneous entry shall have been made, without any alteration or obliteration of the original entry, and shall sign such entry in the margin, and add to such signature the day of the month and year when such correction shall be made; and such correction and signature shall be attested by the parties in whose presence the same are directed to be made as aforesaid: provided also, that in the copy of the register which shall be transmitted to the registrar of the diocese, the said rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister, shall certify the corrections so made by him as aforesaid."

Sect. 22. ' And whereas copies of the registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials, such copies being signed and verified by the written declaration of the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of every parish, district-parish, and chapelry in England, where the ceremonies of baptism, marriage, and burial, may lawfully be performed, are directed by law to be made and transmitted to the registrar of the diocese within which such parish, district-parish, or chapelry, may be situated; ' it is therefore enacted, " That if any person shall knowingly and wilfully insert, or cause or permit to be inserted, in any copy of any register so directed to be transmitted as aforesaid, any false entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, or shall forge or alter, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any copy of any register so directed to be transmitted as aforesaid, or shall knowingly and wilfully sign or verify any copy of any register so directed to be transmitted as aforesaid, which copy shall be false in any part thereof, knowing the same to be false, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years nor less than one year."

In the remarks we are about to make before concluding this subject, we would not willingly derogate from the unequivocal and decided improvements effected by the statute set out as above. It clears away from the pages of the statute books much that had disgraced them; it consolidates a great number of acts and reduces them into one; it describes and limits more satisfactorily than hitherto, the nature of the offence; supplies certain important omissions; alters advantageously the state of the law relative to venue; makes certain changes in the nature of the evidence required, and excepts a certain class of offences from the punishment of death. So far this is acknowledged improvement, and yet we are justified in saying that this statute is deficient in that matter, which, beyond every thing else, society had expected from it.

Concluding remarks.

FORGERY BY

Certain offences, we have said, are excepted therein from the punishment of death; but in those particular instances society had already refused to prosecute for an offence attended with such a punishment. More than this had been demanded. Public feeling had long shewn itself strongly opposed to the punishment of death in any case of forgery, and it had become a question of principle, not of degree. They had begun to feel that in fact it was a question about which there was little need to dispute or argue; the end of all punishment is public utility,—and of two modes of punishment, they had a right to demand that most striking in point of public utility. Sir Robert Peel himself avowed, that the certainly and not the fluctuation of punishment, should be the principle of a criminal law; and it had long been clear to the dullest sense, that, whilst this extreme penalty existed, there could be no possible certainly of punishment. They had asked, therefore, justly, for a repeal of that obnoxious law; for they felt the extraordinary truth of the remark, that “where the consequences of crimes are problematical, additional force is given to the passions.” Few will deny that they had a right to ask for the repeal of a penalty so hurtful to the interests of public reparation; for nothing is more certain, than that society can never profit by laws which the sense and feeling of its members revolt from enforcing; and nothing so obvious as that, to effect their object, criminal laws must be in unison with public feeling. It is matter of regret, then, that the framer of the act did not surrender, in this particular instance, his own opinion to the general views of mere policy.

In what way, it may be asked, are we to suppose juries, in a capital case of forgery, will feel, after having heard the sense of one branch of the legislature expressed so decidedly—after having seen the tables of the House of Commons covered with petitions from bankers, and men chiefly interested in the prevention of this crime, praying for the abolition of the punishment of death as a means of such prevention? We think the question easy of answer; they will catch at the slightest, the most trifling pretence, on which to found an acquittal—they will perjure themselves by a “pious” verdict—and justice must be defeated. The maxim, metus ad omnes, pavor ad paucos, such a favourite with our English legislators, is nevertheless a bad one. We oppose to it a remark made by a certain magistrate, who, though not an eminent lawyer, will be recognized as one most deeply versed in human nature. Henry Fielding, in his Treatise on the Causes of the Increase of Crime, observes—that a “single pardon excites a greater degree of hope in the minds of criminals, than twenty executions do of fear.” This is too clearly evident from the experience of facts, and facts are the best arguments.

Thus then the question stands:—A law like the present can never be efficacious, for there is no agreement between that law and the general feeling of the society subject to its influence. They wish for the remission of this punishment, even as a means of creating a new and safer protection to their property. They have demanded it, not as a speculative good, but as a palpable practical advantage, recommended by common justice and common humanity. We are reminded of the words wherewith Cicero once exhorted the senate of Rome, but which our noble senators would meet, we suppose, with derision: “Nolite Quirites hanc scævitiā diutius pati; quæ non modo tot cives atrocissime sustulit, sed humanitatem ipsam adimet consuetudine incommodorum.” is as follows, that is to say—[set out the instrument verbatim], with intention to defraud one A. B.; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said C. D. afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at &c., aforesaid, feloniously did offer, utter, dispose of, and put off, a certain other false, forged, and counterfeited, [name the instrument], which said last-mentioned false, forged, and counterfeited [name it again], is as follows, that is to say—[set out the instrument verbatim]; with intention to defraud the said A. B., (he the said C. D., at the time he so offered, uttered, disposed, and put off the said last-mentioned false, forged, and counterfeited [name the instrument] as aforesaid, then and there well knowing the same to be false, forged, and counterfeited); against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity (a).

(a) In Mr. Archbold's work on the Criminal Law, 2nd ed. 227, there is the greater part of the following note on the form of an indictment for forgery:—

This is not intended as a general precedent, to serve in all cases of forgery; because the form, in each particular case, must depend upon the statute on which the indictment is framed. But with the assistance of it, and upon an attentive consideration of the operative words in the statute creating the forgery, the pleader can find no difficulty in framing an indictment in any case not particularly mentioned hereafter in this section.

The forgery should, in prudence, be alleged in the words of the statute on which the indictment is framed. But if the forgery consist of the alteration of a true instrument, the alteration may either be specially alleged (and this mode is advisable, at least in one set of counts) even where the word "alter" is not in the statute; R. v. Elsworth, 2 East, P. C. 986, 988; or the alteration may be given in evidence under, and will support, a count charging the forgery of the entire instrument.

Care must be taken to set out the forged instrument, in words and figures, correctly; the slightest variance will be fatal, and will entitle the defendant to an acquittal. An indictment for forgery at common law must state what the instrument is in respect of which the forgery was committed, and how the party signing it had authority to sign it. R. v. Wilcox, R. & R. 50. Where the indictment, in setting out the forged instrument, also set out the attestation at the foot of it, as part of the instrument, but appeared in evidence, that when the defendant subscribed the instrument, the attestation was not written on it; it was holden, nevertheless, to be no variance. R. v. Dunn, 2 East, P. C. 976. Where a forged instrument is actually within the meaning of the statute on which you are framing your indictment, but does not sufficiently appear to be so on the face of it, you must not only set out a literal copy of it in the indictment, but you must also add such averments of extrinsic facts as may be necessary to make it appear, upon the face of the record, that the forged instrument is one of those intended by, and described in, the statute. See R. v. Ravencroft, R. & R. 161. Thus, for instance, where, by the usage of a public office, the bare signature of a party upon a navy bill operated as a receipt, an indictment for forging such a receipt, setting forth the navy bill and indorsement, and charging the defendant with having forged "a certain receipt for money, to wit, the sum of twenty-five pounds, mentioned and contained in the said paper, called a navy bill, which forged receipt was as follows, that is to say—'William Thornton, William Hunter,'" was holden bad, because it did not shew, by proper averments, that these signatures imported a receipt. R. v. Hunter, 2 Leach, 624; 2 East, P. C. 928. In like manner, it was holden, that an indictment for forging the word "settled," at the bottom of a bill, must shew, by proper averments, that it is a receipt. R. v. Thompson, 2 Leach, 910, and see Arch. C. L. 29. But where, upon an indictment for forging a receipt, it appeared that the receipt was written at the foot of an account, and the indictment stated the receipt thus, "8 March, 1773. Received the contents above by me. Stephen Withers," without setting out the account at the foot of which it was written, it was holden sufficient. R. v. Testick, 1 East, 181, n. In R. v. Burton, R. & M. C. C. 141, it was held, that an indictment for forging or uttering a receipt in the name of T. S. should shew that T. S. was a person to whom the money might have been paid. In an indictment for forging an instrument in a foreign language—in this case, a Prussian treasury note—a translation of the note must be set forth; and, for this omission, the judgment was arrested. R. v. Goldstein, 3 B. & B. 201; R. & R. 473, S. C.

Frame-Work Knitters.

[6 Geo. III. c. 29.]

AS to the offence of frame-breaking, see 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 3, Falsitious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 727.

Pieces to be marked.

By stat. 6 Geo. III. c. 29, s. 1, all frame-work knitted pieces, and stockings made of thread, cotton, worsted, or yarn, or any mixture of all or any of the said materials, or of any other materials, except such as shall be made of silk only, which shall contain three or more threads, shall be marked with the same number of ileet-holes, and no more, as there are threads contained in each piece or pair; and such ileet-holes shall be made distinctly in one direct line, or in the same course, and shall not exceed the distance of three inches from the two extreme ileet-holes; and no such ileet-holes shall be made or placed within the distance of four inches of any letter, figure, mark, or other device, which shall be put or woven in any such goods or manufactures; and all such ileet-holes shall be made within four inches of the top or end of every such piece or pair; and no ileet-hole, or imitation thereof, shall be made or put in any frame-work knitted piece or pair of stockings, upon any account whatsoever, except as hereinbefore directed.

Sect. 2. Nothing herein shall prevent any manufacturers from using remnants, or materials of any sort, in the welts and tops of stockings only, at any distance not exceeding three inches from the top, although the same shall not contain so great a number of threads as are contained in the legs of such stockings.

Penalty on not marking.

Sect. 3. If any master frame-work knitter or master hosier, or any other person, shall make or work, or cause or procure to be made or wrought, any frame-work knitted goods of any of the materials aforesaid, or any mixture thereof (except such as shall be made of silk only), without being so an ingredient of the offence, in all the statutes upon the subject of forgery; and must, consequently, be charged in the indictment. Where the intent mentioned in the statute is, to defraud any particular corporation, &c., it must of course be so laid in the indictment. But where the intent is described generally, to defraud any person or persons, it is prudent, in the indictment, to charge the offence, in different counts, to have been committed with intent to defraud each of the persons, partnerships, or corporations, that might have been defrauded by it if the forgery had succeeded; as, for instance, if the names of drawer, acceptor, and indorser to a bill of exchange be forged, the indictment may charge it, in different sets of counts, to have been forged and uttered with intent to defraud the drawer, acceptor, indorser, and person to whom it was uttered, respectively.

As to the second count, for knowingly uttering the forged instrument, it is usual and prudent to add it in every case, lest the prosecutor should fail in proof of the actual forgery. But the forgery is of itself an offence, although the forged instrument have never been uttered. See R. v. Elliot, 1 Leach, 173; and see 2 Id. 987.

marked, he shall forfeit the same, and also 5*l.* for each piece of such frame-work knitted goods, or pair of stockings.

FRAME-WORK
KNITTERS.

Sect. 4, 5, 6. Provided that the said penalty of 5*l.* shall not extend to any journeyman, apprentice, servant, or person not making such goods or manufactures on his own account; but such person offending herein shall forfeit not exceeding 40*s.* nor less than 5*s.* for each piece or pair; but if he can prove that the goods by him unduly marked were so marked by direction of his master, or the person by whom he was employed, in that case he shall not be subject to any penalty.

6 Geo. 3, c. 29.

Sect. 7. And if any frame-work knitter, hosier, or other person, shall sell or expose to sale any of the said goods, not duly and truly marked as aforesaid, he shall forfeit the same, and also 5*l.* for each piece or pair.

Selling unmarked goods.

Sect. 8. Provided, that if the person prosecuted for selling or exposing the same to sale shall discover the vender or seller thereof, so as he may be convicted, such person shall be discharged from any penalty or forfeiture inflicted by this act.

Sect. 9. One justice where the offence shall be committed (not being a frame-work knitter, hosier, or proprietor of frames) may convict the offender, on the oath of one witness; and if on such conviction the penalties or forfeitures shall not be forthwith paid, the said justice shall issue his warrant to levy the same by distress, rendering the overplus, if any; and if no goods, or not sufficient, can be found, such justice shall, on oath thereof made to him by the person who shall have the execution of the warrant, commit the offender to the common gaol of the place where the offence shall be committed for any time not exceeding three months, unless the penalties and forfeitures shall be sooner paid and satisfied: all which penalties and forfeitures shall be applied half to the informer and half to the poor.

Penalties how to be recovered.

Sect. 10. Persons aggrieved may appeal to the sessions, giving ten days' notice in writing of his intent to the justice, and within two days after notice entering into recognizance before a justice with two sureties to try the appeal at such sessions; and the justices there, on due proof of such notice and recognizance, shall hear and determine the same, and award costs to either party, as they shall think fit; and their determination shall be final, binding, and conclusive, to all intents and purposes.

Appeal.

Sect. 12. Provided, that nothing herein shall extend to abridge or take away any rights or privileges of the master, wardens, and assistants of the company of frame-work knitters.

Friendly Societies.

THE late act 10 Geo. IV. c. 56, repeals all the prior acts relative to friendly societies, at the same time re-enacting, consolidating, and amending the repealed provisions. The 40th section of the act requires all societies previously enrolled to conform to that act, within three years after the passing of the act, viz. the 19th June, 1829, otherwise their privileges are to cease. The act provides, that societies so previously enrolled, shall have the privileges given them by the prior acts, during the above space of three years, or until they sooner conform themselves to the new act.

It would be of little or no utility to incumber this work by inserting the prior acts. If there be any occasion to refer to them, they will be found in prior editions of this work, and in Chitty's Collection of Statutes, title "Friendly Societies."

We will now proceed to set forth the provisions of the 10 Geo. IV. c. 56, with such notes thereon as may be useful, and within the object of this work.

10 Geo. 4, c. 56.

The 10 Geo. IV. c. 56, is intituled An Act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to Friendly Societies (a).

33 Geo. 3, c. 54.

35 Geo. 3, c. 111.

By sect. 1 reciting, 'It is expedient to amend the laws relating to friendly societies, and to consolidate the same in one act, and to make other provisions respecting friendly societies;' it is enacted, "That an act passed in the thirty-third year of his late Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the encouragement and relief of friendly societies;" and also so much of an act passed in the thirty-fifth year of his said late Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the more effectually carrying into execution an act made in the thirty-third year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled 'An Act for the encouragement and relief of friendly societies,' and for extending so much of the powers thereof as relates to the framing rules and regulations for the better management of the funds of such societies, and the appointment of treasurers, to other institutions of a charitable nature," as relates to friendly societies; and also an act passed in the Parliament of Ireland in the thirty-sixth year of his said late Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the encouragement and relief of friendly societies;" and also an act passed in the forty-third year of his said late Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for enabling friendly societies, intended to be established under an act passed in the thirty-third year of the reign of his present Majesty, to rectify mistakes made in the registry of their rules;" and also an act passed in the forty-ninth year of his said late Majesty's reign, to explain and render more effectual the said recited act made in the Parliament of Ireland in the thirty-sixth year of his said late Majesty's reign; and also an act passed in the forty-ninth year of his said late Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act to amend an act made in the thirty-third year of his present Majesty, for the encouragement and relief of friendly societies;" and also an act passed in the fifty-ninth year of his said late Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the further protection and encouragement of friendly societies, and for preventing frauds and abuses therein;" and also so much of an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled "An Act for consolidating and amending the laws relating to conveyances and transfers of estates and funds vested in trustees who are infants, idiots, lunatics, or trustees of unsound mind, or who cannot be compelled or refuse to act, and the laws relating to stocks and securities belonging to infants, idiots, lunatics, and persons of unsound mind," as relates to friendly societies, for the better security, or for the application, receipt, payment, or transfer of any of the funds thereof; shall be and the same are hereby repealed, except so far as any of the said acts repeal the whole or any part of any other acts, and except as hereinafter is excepted: provided nevertheless, that such repeal shall not invalidate or affect any thing which has been done before the passing of this act in pursuance of any of the said acts."

By sect. 2, reciting that 'Certain friendly societies have been established in Great Britain and Ireland, for raising, by voluntary subscription of the members thereof, separate funds for the mutual relief and maintenance of the said members in sickness, old age, and infirmity; and it is expedient to give protection to such societies and the funds thereby established, and to afford encouragement to other persons to form the like societies;' is enacted, "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any number of persons in Great Britain and Ireland to form themselves into and to establish a society for the purpose of raising from time to time, by subscriptions of the several members of every such society, or by voluntary contributions, or by donations, a stock or fund for the mutual relief and maintenance of all and every the members thereof, their wives or children, or other relations, in sickness, infancy, advanced age, widowhood, or any other natural state or contingency whereof the occurrence is susceptible of calculation by way of average(a); and to and for the several members of each society from time to time to assemble together, and to make, ordain, and constitute, such proper and wholesome rules for the better government and guidance of the same, as to the major part of the members of such society so assembled together shall seem meet, so as such rules shall not be repugnant to the laws of this realm, nor any of the express provisions or regulations of this act; and to impose and inflict such reasonable fines and forfeitures upon the several members of any such society who shall offend against such rules as shall be just and necessary for duly enforcing the same, to be respectively paid to such uses, for the benefit of such society, as such society by such rules shall direct; and also from time to time to alter and amend such rules as occasion shall require, or to annul and repeal the same, and to make new rules in lieu thereof, under such restrictions as are in this act contained."

Sect. 3 enacts, "That every such society so to be established as aforesaid, before any of the rules thereof shall be confirmed by the justices in the manner hereinafter directed, shall, in or by one or more of the rules to be confirmed by such justices, declare all and every the intents and purposes for which such society is intended to be established, and shall also in and by such rules direct all and every the uses and purposes to which the money, which shall from time to time be subscribed, paid, or given to or for the use or benefit of such society, or which shall arise therefrom, or in anywise shall belong to such society, shall be appropriated and applied, and in what shares and proportions, and under what circumstances, any member of such society, or other person, shall or may become entitled to the

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

10 Geo. 4, c. 56.

Any number of persons may form themselves into a society, and raise a fund for their mutual benefit, and make rules, &c.

Power to alter and amend rules.

Societies, in their rules, to declare the purpose of their establishment, &c.

(a) The society should be for the purposes mentioned in the act, namely, for the charitable relief and maintenance of the old, sick, &c., members and their families. Mr. Evans, in his note on the statutes, title "Friendly Societies," says, "There are many societies established amongst journeymen in particular trades, ostensibly for the purposes of the Friendly Society Act, but really for the purpose of supporting illegal combinations; and I have seen the rules of such societies, (which have been inadvertently allowed), containing provisions which were evidently foreign from the purposes of the act. At some sessions, it is the practice not to allow the rules of any society, of which all the members are, by the constitution of the society, to be of the same occupation."

In R. v. The Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 280, the Court of King's Bench refused a mandamus to the defendants, to allow the rules of a society of Roman Catholic secular clergy priests, as not being within the meaning of the act; the object of the society not being confined to the charitable relief and maintenance of its old, sick, and infirm members.

Where rules and principles of a friendly society, enrolled under the act, have been erroneously framed, so as to tend to exhaust its funds, the Court of Chancery will grant an injunction to restrain payments. Reeve v. Parkins, 2 Jac. & W. 390; see also Pearce v. Piper, 17 Ves. 1.

same, or any part thereof; provided that the application thereof shall not in anywise be repugnant to the uses, intents, and purposes, of such society, or any of them, so to be declared as aforesaid; and all such rules, during the continuance of the same, shall be complied with and enforced; and the monies so subscribed, paid, or given, or so arising, to or for the use or benefit of such society, or belonging thereto, shall not be diverted or misapplied, either by the treasurer, trustee, or any other officer or member of such society intrusted therewith, under such penalty or forfeiture as such society shall by any rule impose and inflict for such offence."

Sect. 4 enacts, "That a transcript, fairly written on paper or parchment, of all such rules, signed by three members, and countersigned by the clerk or secretary, with all convenient speed after the same shall be made, altered, or amended, and so from time to time after every making, altering, or amending thereof, shall be submitted, in England and Wales, and Berwick-upon-Tweed, to the barrister at law for the time being, appointed to certify the rules of saving banks (a), and in Scotland to the Lord Advocate, or any of his deputies, and in Ireland, to such barrister as may be appointed by his Majesty's Attorney-general in Ireland, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the said rules of such society, or alteration or amendment thereof, are in conformity to law and to the provisions of this act (b); and that the said barrister or advocate shall give a certificate thereof, or point out in what part or parts they are repugnant thereto; and that the fee payable to such barrister or advocate for perusing the rules, or alterations or amendments of the rules, of each respective society, and giving such certificate as aforesaid, shall not at any one time exceed the sum of one guinea, which, together with the expense of conveying the rules to and from the said barrister or advocate, shall be defrayed by each society respectively; and such transcript, when certified by the said barrister or advocate, shall be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county wherein such society shall be formed, and by him laid before the justices for such county at the general quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, next after the time when such transcript shall have been so certified and returned as aforesaid; and the justices then and there present are hereby authorized and required to allow and confirm the same; and such transcript shall be filed by such clerk of the peace with the rolls of the sessions of the peace in his custody; and a certificate of the enrolment thereof shall, within fourteen days after the end of the said sessions or adjournment thereof, be signed by such clerk of the peace on a duplicate copy, to be provided by and returned to such society, without fee or reward: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to require any rules, alterations, or amendments thereof, to be submitted to such barrister or advocate, if the same, when deposited with the clerk of the peace, are accompanied with an affidavit of being a copy of any of the rules, alterations, or amendments of any other society, which shall have been already enrolled under the provisions of this act in the same county."

Sect. 5 provides and enacts, "That in case any such barrister or advocate shall refuse to certify all or any of the rules so to be submitted for his perusal and examination, it shall then be lawful for any such society to submit the same to the court of quarter sessions, together with the reasons assigned by the said barrister or advocate, in writing, for any such rejection or disapproval of any one or more such rules; and that the justices at their said quarter sessions, shall and may, if they think fit, confirm and allow the same, notwithstanding any such rejection or disapproval by any such barrister or advocate."

Sect. 6 provides and enacts, "That no rules of any society hereafter to be formed, shall be allowed, unless it shall appear to the justices to whom the same are tendered, that the tables of the payment to be made by the members, and of the benefits to be received by them, may be adopted with safety to all parties concerned."

Sect. 7 enacts, "That no such society as aforesaid shall have the benefit of this act, unless all the rules for the management thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by an officer of such society appointed for that purpose, and which book shall be open at all seasonable times for the inspection of the members of such society, and unless all such rules shall be fairly transcribed, and such transcript deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county wherein such society shall be established as aforesaid; but nevertheless nothing contained herein shall extend to prevent any alteration in or amendment of any such rules so entered and deposited and filed as aforesaid, or repealing or annulling the same, or any of them, in the whole or in part, or making any new rules for the management of such society, in such manner as by the rules of such society shall from time to time be provided; but such new rules, or such alterations in or amendments of former rules, or any order annulling or repealing any former rules in the whole or in part, shall not be in force until the same respectively shall be entered in such book as aforesaid, and certified, when necessary, by such barrister or advocate as aforesaid, and until a transcript thereof shall be deposited with such clerk of the peace as aforesaid, who shall file and certify the same as aforesaid; and that no such rule, or alteration in or amendment of any former rule, shall be binding or have any force or effect until the same shall have been confirmed by such justices, and filed as aforesaid."

Sect. 8 enacts, "That all rules from time to time made and in force for the management of such society as aforesaid, and duly entered in such book as aforesaid, and confirmed by the justices as aforesaid, shall be binding on the several members and officers of such society, and the several contributors thereto, and their representatives, all of whom shall be deemed and taken to have full notice thereof by such entry and contribution as aforesaid; and the entry of such rules in such book as aforesaid, or the transcript thereof deposited with such clerk of the peace as aforesaid, or a true copy of such transcript, examined with the original and proved to be a true copy, shall be received as evidence of such rules respectively in all cases; and no certiorari, suspension, advocation, reduction, or other legal process shall be brought or allowed to remove any such rules into any of his Majesty's Courts of record; and every copy of any such transcript deposited with any clerk of the peace as aforesaid shall be made without fee or reward, except the actual expense of making such copy."

Sect. 9 enacts, "That no rule confirmed by the justices of the peace in manner aforesaid shall be altered, rescinded, or repealed, unless at a general meeting of the members of such society as aforesaid, convened by public notice, written or printed, signed by the secretary or president or other principal officer or clerk of such society, in pursuance of a requisition for that purpose by seven or more of the members of such society, which said requisition and notice shall be publicly read at the two usual meetings of such society to be held next before such general meeting for the purpose of such alteration or repeal, unless a committee of such members shall have been nominated for that purpose at a general meeting of the members of such society convened in manner aforesaid, in which case such committee shall have the like power to make such alterations or repeal, and unless such alterations or repeal shall be made with the concurrence and approbation of three-fourths of the members of such society then and there present, or by the like proportion of such committee as aforesaid, if any shall have been nominated for that purpose."

Sect. 10 enacts, "That the rules of every society formed under the authority of this act shall specify the place or places at which it is intended such society shall hold its meetings, and shall contain provisions with respect to the powers and duties of the members at large, and of such com-

Sect. 17 enacts, "That no fee, reward, emolument, or gratuity whatsoever, shall be demanded, taken, or received, by any officer or minister of such Courts for any matter or thing done in such Courts, in pursuance of this act; and that upon the presenting of any such petition, it shall be lawful for the judges of the said Courts respectively, to assign counsel learned in the law, and to appoint a clerk or practitioner of such Court, to advise and carry on such petition on the behalf of such society, who are hereby respectively required to do their duties therein without fee or reward."

Sect. 18 provides and enacts, "That in all cases in which orders shall be made by any of the Courts aforesaid for the transfer of stocks or funds transferrable at the Bank of England, the persons to be named in such orders respectively for making such transfers, shall be the secretary, deputy secretary, or accountant general, of the governor and company of the Bank of England for the time being, or one of them, except in cases where one or more of the trustees in whose name such stocks or funds shall stand, shall be ordered to transfer the same without the concurrence of any other or others of such trustees; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 19 enacts, "That this act shall be, and is hereby declared to be, a full and complete indemnity and discharge to the governor and company of the Bank of England, and their officers and servants, for all acts and things done or permitted to be done, pursuant thereto; and that such acts and things shall not be questioned or impeached in any Court of law or equity, to their prejudice or detriment."

Sect. 20 enacts, "That if any person appointed to any office by any such society, and being intrusted with, or having in his or her hands or possession, by virtue of his or her said office, any monies or effects belonging to such society, or any deeds or securities relating to the same, shall die, or become a bankrupt or insolvent, his or her executors, or administrators, or assignees, or other persons having legal right (a), shall, within forty days after demand made by the order of any such society or committee thereof, or the major part of them assembled at any meeting thereof, deliver over all things belonging to such society to such person as such society shall appoint, and shall pay, out of the estates, assets, or effects of such person, all sums of money remaining due which such person received by virtue of his or her said office, before any of his or her other debts are paid or satisfied; and all such assets, estates, and effects, shall be bound to the payment and discharge thereof accordingly."

Sect. 21 enacts, "That all real and heritable property, monies, goods, chattels, and effects whatever, and all titles, securities for money, or other obligatory instruments and evidences or muniments, and all other effects whatever, and all rights or claims belonging to or had by such society, shall be vested in the treasurer or trustee of such society for the time being, for tices are hereby required, by warrant under their hands and seals, to cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the goods of such person on whom such order shall have been made, or by other legal proceeding, together with such costs as shall be awarded by the said justices, not exceeding the sum of ten shillings, and also the costs and charges attending such distress and sale, or other legal proceeding, returning the overplus (if any) to the owner; and in default of such distress being found, the said justices of the peace shall commit such person so proved to have offended, to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such a period, not exceeding three calendar months, as to them shall seem fit: provided, nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the said society from proceeding by indictment or complaint against the party complained of; and provided also, that no party shall be proceeded against by indictment or complaint, if a previous conviction has been obtained for the same offence under the provisions of this act."

Sect. 26 enacts, "That it shall not be lawful for any such society, by any rule at any general meeting, or otherwise, to dissolve or determine such society, so long as the intents or purposes declared by such society, or any of them, remain to be carried into effect, without obtaining the votes of consent of five sixths in value of the then existing members of such society, to be ascertained in manner hereinafter mentioned, and also the consent of all persons then receiving or then entitled to receive relief from such society, either on account of sickness, age, or infirmity, to be testified under their hands individually and respectively; and for the purpose of ascertaining the votes of such five sixths in value, every member shall be entitled to one vote, and an additional vote for every five years that he may have been a member; provided also, that no one member shall have more than five votes in the whole; and in all cases of dissolution, the intended appropriation or division of the funds or other property of such society shall be fairly and distinctly stated in the proposed plan of dissolution, prior to such consent being given; nor shall it be lawful for such society by any rule to direct the division or distribution of such stock or fund, or any part thereof, to or amongst the several members of such society, other than for carrying into effect the general intents and purposes of such society, declared by them, and confirmed by the justices of the peace as aforesaid, according to the directions of this act; but that all such rules for the dissolution or determination of any such society, without such consent as aforesaid, or for the distribution or division of the stock or fund of such society, contrary to the rules which shall have been confirmed by the said justices at their sessions, and filed in pursuance of this act, shall be void and of none effect; and in the event of such division or misappropriation of the funds of such society, without the consent hereby declared to be requisite, the trustee, or other officer or person aiding or abetting therein, shall be liable to the like penalties as are hereinbefore provided for in cases of fraud."

Sect. 27 provides and enacts, "That provision shall be made by one or more of the rules of every such society, to be confirmed as required by this act, specifying whether a reference of every matter in dispute between any such society, or any person acting under them, and any individual member thereof, or person claiming on account of any member, shall be made to such of his Majesty's justices of the peace as may act in and for the county in which such society may be formed, or to arbitrators to be appointed in manner hereinafter directed; and if the matter so in dispute shall be referred to arbitration, certain arbitrators shall be named and elected at the first meeting of such society, or general committee thereof, that shall be held after the enrolment of its rules, none of the said arbitrators being beneficially interested, directly or indirectly, in the funds of the said society, of whom a certain number, not less than three, shall be chosen by ballot in each such case of dispute, the number of the said arbitrators and mode of ballot being determined by the rules of each society respectively, the names of such arbitrators shall be duly entered in the book of the said society in which the rules are entered as aforesaid; and in case of the death, or refusal, or neglect, of any or all of the said arbitrators to act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said society, or general committee thereof, and they are hereby required, at their next meeting, to name and elect one or more arbitrator or arbitrators as aforesaid, to act in the place of the said arbitrator or arbitrators so dying, or refusing or neglecting to act as aforesaid; and whatever award shall be made by the said arbitrators, or the major part of them, according to the true purport and meaning of the rules of such society, confirmed by the justices according to the directions of this act, shall be in the form to this act annexed, and shall be binding and conclusive on all parties, and shall be final, to all intents and purposes, without appeal, or being subject to the control of one or more justices of the peace, and shall not be removed or removable into any Court of law, or restrained or restrainable by the injunction of any Court of equity; and should either of the said parties in dispute refuse or neglect to comply with, or conform to the decision of the said arbitrators, or the major part of them, it shall and may be lawful for any one justice of the peace residing within the county within which such society shall be held, upon good and sufficient proof being adduced before him of such award having been made, and of the refusal of the party to comply therewith, upon complaint made by or on behalf of the party aggrieved, to summon the person against whom such complaint shall be made, to appear at a time and place to be named in such summons; and upon his or her appearance, or in default thereof, upon due proof, upon oath, of the service of such summons, any two justices of the peace may proceed to make such order thereupon as to them may seem just; and if the sum of money so awarded, together with the sum for costs, not exceeding the sum of ten shillings, as to such justices shall seem meet, shall not be immediately paid, then such justices shall, by warrant under their hands and seals, cause such sum and costs as aforesaid to be levied by distress, or by distress and sale, of the monies, goods, chattels, securities, and effects, belonging to the said party, or to the said society, or other legal proceeding, together with all further costs and charges attending such distress and sale, or other legal proceeding, returning the overplus (if any) to the said party, or to the said society, or to one of the treasurers or trustees thereof; and in default of such distress being found, or such other legal proceeding being ineffectual, then to be levied by distress and sale of the proper goods of the said party, or of the officer of the said society, so neglecting or refusing as aforesaid, by other legal proceedings, together with such further costs and charges as aforesaid, returning the overplus (if any) to the owner: provided always, that whatever sums shall be paid by any such officer, so levied on his or her property or goods in pursuance of the award of arbitrators or order of any justices, shall be repaid, with all damages accruing to him or her, by and out of the monies belonging to such society, or out of the first monies which shall be thereafter received by such society."

Justices shall enforce compliance with the decision of arbitrators.

By order.

By warrant of distress.

Sect. 28 enacts, "That if by the rules of any such society it is directed that any matter in dispute as aforesaid shall be decided by justices of the peace (a), it shall and may be lawful for any such justice, on complaint being made to him of any refusal or neglect to comply with the rules of such society by any member or officer thereof, to summon the person against Reference of disputes to justices, if so directed by the rules of the society.

(a) From this enactment, it seems, magistrates have no jurisdiction to decide the matter in dispute, unless it be given by the express rules of the society. In Pike v. Carter, 3 Bing. 78; 10 Moore, 376; 4 D. & R. M. C. 145, S. C., it was held, on the prior act, 33 Geo. III. c. 54, s. 15, 16, that, to render a justice liable for overstepping his jurisdiction, where the rules of the society provided for a settlement of all disputes by arbitration, it was necessary that the objection to the jurisdiction should be made when the justice heard the charge.

It is clear, the magistrates have no jurisdiction, if the rules of the society have not been duly confirmed and filed. See 8 B. & C. 443.

whom such complaint shall be made, to appear at a time and place to be named in such summons; and upon his or her appearance, or, in default thereof, upon due proof, on oath or affirmation, of the service of such summons, it shall and may be lawful for any two justices to proceed to hear and determine the said complaint according to the rules of the said society (a); and in case the said justices shall adjudge any sum of money to be paid by such person against whom such complaint shall be made, and such person shall not pay such sum of money to the person and at the time specified by such justices, they shall proceed to enforce their award in the manner hereinbefore directed to be used, in case of any neglect to comply with the decision of the arbitrators appointed under the authority of this act."

Sect. 29 enacts, "That every sentence, order, and adjudication, of any justices under this act, shall be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes, and shall not be subject to appeal, and shall not be removed or removable into any court of law, or restrained or restrainable by the injunction of any court of equity, and that no suspension, advocacy, or reduction, shall be competent."

Sect. 30 enacts, "That it shall be lawful for any society established under the authority of this act, from time to time to subscribe the whole or any part of the funds of such society, into the funds of any institution which shall have taken the benefit of an act passed in the last session of Parliament, intituled An Act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to savings banks (b), subject to the provisions in the said last-recited act contained, relating to friendly societies."

Sect. 31 enacts, "That it shall be lawful for any society established under authority of this act, to pay directly into the Bank of England any sum of money not being less than fifty pounds, to the account of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, upon the declaration of the treasurers or trustees of such society, or any two or more of them, that such monies belong exclusively to the society for which such payment is intended to be made; and the cashier or cashiers of the Bank of England are hereby required to receive all such monies, and to place the same to the ac-

(a) The jurisdiction of the magistrates is wholly confined to the subject matter of the complaint laid before them; and therefore, where it appeared that a party had complained to them that he had been deprived of the relief to which he was entitled, and the justices awarded, not only that the steward should give him such relief, but also that the party should be continued a member of the society, it was held that the latter part of the order was illegal. R. v. Soper, 3 B. & C. 857; 5 D. & R. 669, S. C.

By the constitution of the society, it must appear the magistrates had power to make the order. Therefore, it seems, upon an indictment for not obeying an order of two justices, commanding the defendants, as stewards and principal officers of a friendly society, to restore A. B. as a member, it must be shewn, that, by the constitution of the society, the defendants had the power to restore him. R. v. Inge, 2 Smith, 56.

Upon a complaint made on the prior acts by an excluded member, A. and B., the then stewards, were duly summoned, and an order was made by two justices, that such stewards and other members of the society should forthwith reinstate the complainant. The order was served upon A. and B. after they had ceased to be stewards, but it was held still obligatory on them as members of the society, to attempt to reinstate the complainant; and their having ceased to be stewards was no justification of entire neglect on their part. R. v. Gash, 1 Stark. N. P. C. 441.

An order of justices requiring the stewards of a friendly society to re-admit A. B., who had been expelled, recited, that it had appeared to the justices that the rules of the society had been enrolled at the quarter sessions; on the trial of an indictment against the stewards for disobeying such order, it was held, that the recital was not evidence of the enrolment of the rules. R. v. Gilkes and others, 8 B. & C. 439.

If the parties disobey the justices' order when duly made, and due notice thereof given, they might be indicted. See post, Order, Vol. III.; 4 T. R. 202; 2 Burr. 799; 1 T. R. 316. See form of indictment, post, (No. 14), p. 867.

count raised in the names of the said commissioners for the time being, in the books of the Bank of England, denominated 'The Fund for the Friendly Societies;' and in case any such declaration shall not be true, then, and in every such case, the sum so paid shall be forfeited to the said commissioners; and all the clauses and provisions of an act passed in the ninth year of his present Majesty's reign, intituled An Act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to savings banks, with respect to the accounts of banks for savings, and the regulation of receipts, certificates, or order concerning the same, shall be applicable to the monies so paid into the Bank of England, under the authority of this act, as if the same had been repeated herein: provided nevertheless, that every society formed and enrolled previous to the 28th day of July, 1828, under the provisions of an act made and passed in the said fifty-ninth year of his late Majesty's reign, intituled An Act for the further protection and encouragement of friendly societies, and for preventing frauds and abuses therein, shall, on paying money directly into the Bank of England as aforesaid, be entitled to receive receipts bearing interest at the rate of threepence per centum per diem, any thing in this act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: provided also, that no friendly society which already has invested, or may hereafter invest, any money with the said commissioners, shall be entitled to re-deposit any sum or sums of money with them, without the consent of the said commissioners, or, on their behalf, by the comptroller general, or assistant comptroller general under the said commissioners."

Sect. 32 enacts, "That a minor may become a member of any such society, and shall be empowered to execute all instruments, give all necessary acquittances, and enjoy all the privileges, and be liable to all the responsibilities appertaining to members of matured age, notwithstanding his or her incapacity or disability in law to act for himself or herself: provided always, that such minor be admitted into such society by and with the consent of his or her parents, masters, or guardians."

Minors may be members, and have legal authority to act.

Sect. 33 enacts, "That the rules of every such society shall provide, that the treasurers, trustees, stewards, or other principal officer thereof, shall, once in every year at least, prepare, or cause to be prepared, a general statement of the funds and effects of or belonging to such society, specifying in whose custody or possession the said funds or effects shall be then remaining, together with an account of all and every the various sums of money received and expended by or on account of the said society since the publication of the preceding periodical statement; and every such periodical statement shall be attested by two or more members of such society appointed auditors for that purpose, and shall be countersigned by the secretary or clerk of such society; and every member shall be entitled to receive from the said society a copy of such periodical statement, on payment of such sum as the rules of such society may require, not exceeding the sum of 6d."

Societies shall make annual audits and statements of the funds to the members.

Sect. 34 reciting, 'It is desirable, for the better security of such societies, that correct calculations of tables of payment and allowances, dependant on the duration of sickness and the probabilities of human life, may be constructed for their assistance: and whereas, the present existing data on these subjects have been found imperfect and inefficient;' further enacts, "That every such society established, or to be established, under the authority of this act shall, within three months after the expiration of the month of December, 1835, and so again within three months after the expiration of every further period of five years, transmit to the clerk of the peace for the county wherein such society is held, a return of the rate of sickness and mortality experienced by the said society within the before-mentioned period of five years, according to the form prescribed in the schedule appended to this act, a copy whereof shall be annexed to the rules of each society respectively."

Sect. 36 enacts, "That should any such society refuse or neglect to transmit, or cause to be transmitted, the aforesaid returns of sickness and mortality in the manner and within the time hereinbefore directed, the clerk of the peace within each county shall give immediate notice to such society, that unless the said return is made within twenty-one days from the date of such notice, the said society will, and thereupon shall, cease to be entitled to the privileges of this act, unless good and sufficient cause be shewn to the justices, at their then next ensuing general or quarter sessions, why such returns could not be made."

Sect. 37 enacts, "That no copy of rules, power, warrant, or letter of attorney, granted or to be granted by any persons as trustee of any society established under this act, for the transfer of any share in the public funds standing in the name of such trustee, nor any receipts given for any dividend in any public stock or fund, or interest of Exchequer bills, nor any receipt, nor any entry in any book of receipt, for money deposited in the funds of any such society, nor for any money received by any member, his or her executors or administrators, assigns or attornies, from the funds of such society, nor any bond nor other security to be given to or on account of any such society, or by the treasurer or trustee or any officer thereof, nor any draft or order, nor any form of assurance, nor any appointment of any agent, nor any certificate or other instrument for the revocation of any such appointment, nor any other instrument or document whatever required or authorized to be given, issued, signed, made, or produced in pursuance of this act, shall be subject or liable to or charged with any stamp duty or duties whatsoever (b)."

Sect. 38 enacts, "That the word 'society' in this act shall be understood to include friendly society or societies, institution or institutions; the word 'rules' to include rules, orders, and regulations; the word 'county' to include county, riding, division, or place; and the words 'treasurer or trustee' to include treasurers or trustees; and the word 'person' to include persons; and the word 'book' to include books; and the word 'bond' to include bonds; 'name' to include names; 'account' to include accounts; 'member' to include members and honorary members; 'clerk of the peace' to include town clerk; unless it be otherwise specially provided."

Sect. 39 enacts, "That this act shall extend to all friendly societies hereafter to be established, and also to societies already established, as soon as they shall think fit to conform to the provisions thereof."

Sect. 40 enacts, "That, provided societies already enrolled shall not conform to the provisions of this act within the space of three years from the passing of this act, the said societies shall then cease to be entitled to the privileges and provisions of any or either of the hereinbefore repealed acts: provided nevertheless, that the provisions of the hereinbefore repealed acts shall continue in force as to all societies established under any or either of them before the passing of this act for the said space of three years, or until they shall sooner conform to the provisions of this act."

Sect. 41 enacts, "That this act shall be deemed a public act, and shall

B., of the parish of , in the said county, [baker], personally cometh before me, J. P. esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace, acting in and for the said county, and residing in the said county, and upon his oath complaineth unto me, the said justice, for that he the said A. B. is a member of a certain friendly society, called , established and held at the said parish of , in the said county, under and by virtue of the statute in such case made and provided, and made and passed in the tenth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth; that by the rules and regulations of the said friendly society, duly allowed and confirmed, as required by and according to the said statute, it was and is specified that every matter in dispute between the said society or any person acting under them, and any individual member thereof, or person claiming on account of any member, should and shall be made to arbitrators to be appointed according to the provisions of the said statute: that a certain matter of dispute, that is to say, whether &c. [here state shortly the matter in dispute], did, on &c., at &c., arise between the said society [or, "B. F., a person acting under them"] and the said A. B., then being such member thereof as aforesaid [or, "G. H., a person claiming as executor of the said A. B., and on his account"], and that such matter in dispute was, on the said &c., at &c., referred to arbitration, according to the said rules and regulations and the said statute, to certain arbitrators, that is to say, I. J., K. L., M. N., and O. P., then and there named, chosen, and elected by the said society, according to the said act, and not being then or at any other time beneficially interested, directly or indirectly, in the funds of the said society, and the names of the said arbitrators being then and there duly entered in the book of the said society, in which the rules were entered according to the said statute, and that the said I. J., K. L., and M. N., then and there took upon themselves the burthen of the said arbitration, and being the major part of the said arbitrators, did on the [date of award], at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, make their award in writing, bearing date that day and year, of and concerning the matters so referred to them as aforesaid, and as such arbitrators did then and there thereby award and order that R. S. should, on the &c., pay to the said A. B. the sum of &c., [according to the award as the case may be, see the form of the award, ante, 863], and of which said award the said R. S., then and there had notice; and the said A. B., on his oath aforesaid, giveth me the said justice further to understand and be informed that the said A. B., afterwards, on the day and year last aforesaid, there requested the said R. S. to pay him the said A. B. the said sum of      pounds, [as in the award] according to the said award and decision, and comply with and conform to the said award and decision, which the said R. S. then and there wholly neglected and refused to do, and still neglects and refuses so to do, and the said sum of      pounds still remains wholly due and unpaid from the said R. S. to the said A. B.;* wherefore the said A. B. prays the judgment of me the said justice in the premises, and that the said R. S. may be summoned to answer to this complaint according to the directions of the statute in such case made and provided.

lord the King, within the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors, within the said county committed, and residing in the said county, and made an information and complaint upon oath before [me], the said J. P., so being such justice, and which oath [I], the said J. P., did then and there administer to him, the said A. B., by which said information and complaint the said
A. B., on his oath aforesaid, deposed and said, that he, the said A. B., was a member, &c., [here set forth the subject of the complaint, as ante, p. 864, (No. 8), in the past tense, to the asterisk], and thereupon he prayed the judgment of the said J. P. in the premises. And whereas, on this &c., at &c., the said R. S., pursuant to the summons of [me], the said J. P., issued for that purpose, appeared [according to the fact] before us, the said J. P. and S. P., two of the justices of our said lord the King, assigned to keep the peace of our said lord the King, within the said county of Kent, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors, in the said county committed, and residing in the said county, and the said A. B. being then and there present, we, the said justices, did then and there proceed to hear and determine, and did hear and determine, the matter of the said complaint, and make such order thereupon as to us seemed just, according to the statute in such case made and provided. And thereupon we do order and adjudge, by virtue of the said statute, that the said R. S. do pay &c., [according to the award, as the magistrates may think fit]; and we do also award and adjudge that the said R. S. shall also pay to the said A. B.

— THE jurors for our lord the King upon their oath present, that one A. B., before the making of the order hereinafter mentioned, had been and was admitted a member of a certain friendly society, called &c., established and holden at &c., by virtue of a certain act of Parliament made and passed in the Parliament of our lord the late King, George the Fourth, holden at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, in the tenth year of the reign of our said lord the late King, intituled "An act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to friendly societies," the rules, orders, and regulations of which said society were duly confirmed and enrolled, according to the directions of the said act of Parliament. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that, according to one of the said rules, orders, and regulations, it was amongst other things ordained that &c., [here set forth the rule the said society have broken, and concerning which the order was made]. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that, by the said rules, orders, and regulations, it was and is directed that any matter in dispute between the said society and any member thereof should and shall be decided by justices of our lord the King assigned to keep the peace of our said lord the King, in and for the county of . And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said A. B., having been admitted a member of the said society, as aforesaid, before the making of the order hereinafter mentioned, had been, contrary to the said first-mentioned rule, order, and regulation, expelled from the said society, and deprived of certain relief and maintenance, to which he considered himself entitled according to the said first-mentioned rule, order, and regulation, by the stewards of the said society at the time being, and other officers and members thereof, and that the said [defendants] had neglected and refused to comply with the said first-mentioned rule, order, and regulation; and the said A. B. thought himself aggrieved thereby, and thereupon made complaint thereof to J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace, assigned to keep the peace and hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors committed in the said county, and residing in the said county, against E. F., late of , and C. D., late of &c., who then and from thence until and at the time of the disobedience of the order hereinafter mentioned, were stewards of the said society; and the said E. F. and C. D. were thereupon duly summoned by the said justice to appear before him or some other his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, at a convenient time and place named in such summons. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that thereupon, heretofore, to wit, &c., at &c., the said E. F. and C. D. appeared pursuant to the said summons, before J. P. and S. P., being two of the justices of our lord the King assigned to keep the peace of our said lord the King in and for, and residing in the said county, the said A. B. being also then and there present: and the said J. P. and S. P., so being such justices as aforesaid, did then and there proceed to hear and determine the matter of the aforesaid complaint, according to the true purport and meaning of the rules, orders, and regulations of the said society, and the directions of the said act of Parliament, and did thereupon then and there make a certain order in writing, under their hands and seals, directed to the said E. F. and C. D., so being stewards of the said society, and all other persons whomsoever, being officers or members of the said society, whereby, after reciting, that &c. [set forth the recitals], it was ordered &c., [set forth the adjudicatory part of the order], as by the said order of justices fully appears; of which order the said E. F. and C. D., heretofore, to wit, on &c., at &c., had notice. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said E. F. and C. D., so being stewards of the said society, well knowing the premises, but not regarding the said order, nor the said act of Parliament, did not nor would either of them &c., [deny fully the part of the order ordering Indictment against the stewards, &c. of a friendly society, for disobeying an order of justices made on a society established before the 10 Geo. 4, c. 56 (a).

— THE jurors for our lord the King upon their oath present, that one A. B., before the making of the order hereinafter mentioned, had been and was admitted a member of a certain friendly society, called the Royal Oak Society, established at , in the county of , by virtue of a certain act of Parliament made and passed in the Parliament of our lord the King, holden at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, in the thirty-third year of the reign of our said lord the King, intituled "An Act," &c. [insert the title of the act of 33 Geo. III. c. 54], the rules, orders, and regulations of which society were duly confirmed, according to the directions of the said act of Parliament. And the jurors &c., that the said A. B. having been admitted a member of the said society as aforesaid, before the making of the order hereinafter mentioned, had been expelled from the said society, and deprived of certain relief and maintenance, to which he considered himself entitled from the stewards of the said society for the time being, and other officers and members thereof, and the said A. B. thought himself aggrieved thereby, and thereupon made complaint thereof to P. Q. and X. Y., esquires, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace, assigned &c., in the said &c., in which the said society was established as aforesaid, against M. M. late of &c., and W. W. late of &c., who then, and from thence until and at the time of the disobedience of the order hereinafter mentioned, were stewards of the said society, and O. O., late of the same place &c., who then, and during that time, was clerk to the said society; and the said defendants were thereupon duly summoned, according to their respective christian and surnames respectively, by the said justices, to appear before them at a convenient time and place named in such summons, they the said defendants, or some or one of them, appearing to such justices to have the custody of the said rules, orders, and regulations of the said society; and the said defendants had not appeared before the said justices, pursuant to the said summons, to wit, at &c. And the jurors &c., that thereupon, heretofore, to wit, on &c., at &c., the said defendants so being such justices as aforesaid, on proof upon oath of such summons as aforesaid being duly served, did proceed to hear and determine the matter of the aforesaid complaint, according to the true purport and meaning of the said rules, orders, and regulations of the said society, and the directions of the said act [or, acts] of Parliament, and did thereupon then and there make a certain order in writing, under their hands and seals, directed to the said, &c., so being stewards of the said society, and to the said &c., so being clerk thereof as aforesaid, and all other persons whomsoever, being officers or members of the said society, whereby, after reciting, amongst other things, that &c. [recite the order requiring the defendants to attend and produce books &c.], as by the said order of justices fully appears, with which order the said M. M. and W. W., heretofore, to wit, on &c., at &c., were personally served, and of which order they the said M. M., W. W., and O. O., then and there had notice. And the jurors &c., that the said M. M. and W. W., so being stewards of the said society, and the said O. O., &c. so being clerk thereof as aforesaid, well knowing the premises, but not regarding the said order, nor the said act [or, acts, as the case may require] of Parliament, did not nor would, nor did nor would either of them, personally, or otherwise, be or appear before the said justices at the time and place in that behalf above mentioned; nor did nor would then and there produce before them, the said justices, for their inspection, such books, papers, and writings, as aforesaid, or any or either of them, or in any respect comply with, or obey, or regard the same order, as they could, and might, and ought to have done, but wholly refused and neglected so to do, and herein then and there wholly failed and made default, contrary to the form of the said order, and against the peace, &c.

Funeral.

IT is a vulgar error, prevalent among the lower classes, that when once a funeral procession with a corpse passes over another's land, it creates a right of way. Such a notion is both absurd and erroneous, and frequently tends to a breach of good feeling and decency.

As to when funerals are exempt from tolls, see Vol. III. p. 187.

Game. (a)

THE statutes relating to this title are very numerous, and the sense sometime a little perplexed, so that, perhaps, upon a view of the whole, it may seem that about four or five new acts, comprehending the several heads hereafter mentioned, and repealing all the preceding, would conduce to render this branch of our laws more intelligible and useful.

GAME.

After having first premised (in order to avoid frequent repetitions throughout this title), that it is enacted by stat. 8 Geo. II. c. 19, that where any person for any offence against any law in being at the making of the said act, for the better preservation of the game, shall be liable to pay any pecuniary penalty or sum of money, on conviction before a justice of the peace, the prosecutor may either proceed to recover the same in such manner, or he may sue for the same (before the end of the second term after the offence committed, stat. 26 Geo. II. c. 2) by action of debt, or on the case, bill, plaint, or information, in any court of record at Westminster, wherein if he recover he shall have double costs: provided, that the offender shall not be prosecuted both ways; and in case of a second prosecution, he may plead in his defence the former prosecution pending, or the conviction or judgment thereupon had. And by stat. 2 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 5, whereas a moiety of the said penalty by several acts is directed to be applied to the use of the poor of the parish where the offence was committed, by reason whereof inhabitants of the said parish have been disallowed to give evidence, it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for any person to sue for the whole of such penalty to his own use, and if he recover he shall have double costs; such action to be brought within six months after the offence committed. But by stat. 27 Geo. III. c. 29, where any pecuniary penalty or part thereof is given to the poor, the inhabitants of every such parish or place shall be deemed competent witnesses to prove any offences committed therein, notwithstanding that the penalty incurred or any part thereof be given or applicable to the poor of such place, or for the benefit or use thereof; unless such penalty exceed 20*l.* (b). This being premised, we will proceed to treat of this subject under the following heads:—

GAME.

I. Property in Game in General.

Before we take notice of the statutes made for the preservation of the game, it may be requisite to observe how the common law stood herein; which depends upon the difference between tame and wild animals.

Tame animals.

The tame animals, such as horses, cows, sheep, and the like, are such creatures as by reason of their sluggishness and unaptness for motion do not fly the dominion of mankind, but generally keep within the same pastures and limits, and may be easily pursued and overtaken, if by accident they should escape; and therefore the owner hath the same kind of property in them as he hath in all inanimate chattels, and for the violation thereof may bring an action of trespass.

Wild animals.

The wild animals, such as deer, hares, foxes, and such like, are those, which by reason of their swiftness or fierceness fly the dominion of man; and in these no person can have a property, unless they be tamed or reclaimed by him. And as property is the power that a man hath over any other thing for his own use, and the ability that he hath to apply it to the sustentation of his being, when that power ceaseth, his property is lost; and, by consequence, an animal of this kind, which after any seizure escapes into the wild common of nature, and asserts its own liberty by its swiftness, is no more mine than any creature in the Indies, because I have it no longer in my power or disposal. See 3 Bac. Abr. 324.

Taking and killing them.

Hence it appears, that by the common law every man had an equal right to such creatures as were not naturally under the power of man, and that the mere caption of or seizure created a property in them. By immediate taking and killing them, they belong to such person in the same manner as any other chattels, and cannot be taken from him; since the first seizure and caption was sufficient to vest the property of them in him.

Taking and taming them.

Also by taking and taming them, they belong to the owner, as do the other tame animals, so long as they continue in this condition, that is, as long as they can be considered to have the mind of returning to their masters; for while they appear to be in this state, they are plainly the owner's, and ought not to be violated; but when they forsake the houses and habitations of men, and betake themselves to the woods, they are then the property of any man. Chit. G. L. 6, 7.

Inclosing them.

Another way of gaining property in them is by inclosure; and then the beasts must be understood to be mine, as the profits of the soil itself are; and they can no more be taken and carried off than any other profits of the land. Therefore if deer be enclosed in a park or paddock, or conies in a field or warren, they become so much a man's own that no one ought to kill or take them away. And since in this case it is the enclosure that retains them, (for take away the enclosure, and they are in their natural liberty,) therefore the party is said to have right as he hath to any other profits there inclosed, and a distinct and independent right in every animal. Chit. G. L. 6, 7. Darries v. Powell, Will. Rcp. 46; 3 Bac. Ab. 325.

Young ones, &amp;c.

Another way of gaining property in them is on account of their own inability, as when birds build in the trees upon a person's land, or rabbits or other creatures make their burrows or nests, and have young ones there, in which case he has a qualified property in the young ones till they can fly or run away, when the property expires. Till which time it is in some cases trespass, and in others felony, to take them away. 2 Bla. Com. 394; 2 East, P. C. 607.

Ratione soli.

Again: every person has a qualified property in the game whilst upon his own private ground, ratione soli; and if a man start any game upon his own ground, and follow it upon another's, and kills it there, the property remains in himself, for the property consists in the possession, which possession commences by the finding of it on his own land, and is continued by the immediate pursuit. 11 Mod. 75; 2 Bla. Com. 419. So if a stranger starts game in one man's chase, park, or free warren, and hunts it into another's liberty, the property continues in the owner of the chase or warren, this property arising from privilege and not being changed by the wrongful act of a mere stranger. 1 Ld. Raym. 251; 3 Sulk. 290. Or if a man starts game on another's private grounds, and kills it there, the property belongs to him in whose ground it was killed, because it was started there, the property arising ratione soli. Sutton v. Moody, 1 Ld. Raym. 250. Whereas, if after being started there, it is killed on the ground of a third person, the property belongs not to the owner of the first grounds, because the property is local,—nor yet to the owner of the second, because it was not started on his soil,—but it vests in the person who started and killed it, though guilty of a trespass against both owners. 1 Ld. Raym. 251; 2 Bla. Com. 419.

PROPERTY IN GAME.

It is therefore a maxim of the common law that such goods, of which no one can claim any property, belong to the King by his prerogative; and hence it is said all those animals feræ naturæ, which come under the denomination of game, are styled in our laws his Majesty's game; and that which he hath, he may grant to another; and consequently another may prescribe to have the same within such a precinct or lordship. And from hence cometh the right of lords of manors or others unto the game within their respective liberties. But this doctrine, "that the sole property of all the game is vested in the King alone," is controverted by Mr. Christian in his comment on the commentator. 2 Bla. Com. 419, n. 10. See also Chit. G. L. 3; Schultes' Aquatic Rights, 18.

II. Laws as to Game in Particular Places.

And herein—1st, as to Game in Franchised Places—and, 2dly, as to Game in Places not Franchised.

Game in particular places.

1st. IN FRANCHISES]—The franchises or royalties relating to game are ranked in the following order, viz—first, a forest—secondly, a free chase—next, a park—and, lastly, a free warren. (1.) In franchises.

Forests]—A forest (a) is a certain territory of woody grounds and fruitful pastures, privileged for wild beast and fowls of forest, chase, and warren, to rest and abide there in the safe protection of the king for his delight and pleasure; which territory of ground so privileged is meered and bounded with unremovable marks, meers, and boundaries, either known by matter of record or by prescription; and also replenished with wild beasts of venery or chase, and with great coverts of vert for the succour of the said beasts there to abide; for the preservation and continuance of which, there are particular officers, laws, and privileges, belonging to the same, requisite for that purpose, and proper only to a forest and to no other place. Manw. 143. (a)

Forests.

Vert comprehends every thing which bears green leaves in the forest. Manw. 146.

And the lord having the wood in the tenant's land, which is still customary in many manors, was originally for preservation of the vert, for the sustentation of the lord's game there.

Beasts of forest are properly hart, hind, buck, hare, boar, and wolf; but legally all wild beasts of venery. 1 Inst. 233.

As to the hunting, &c. deer in forests, see, post, 932, 933.

Purlieu]—Purlieu comes from the French pur, clear, entire, and exempt, and lieu a place; that is, a place, entire, clear, or exempt from the forest: and signifies those grounds which Henry the Second, Richard the First, or King John, added to their ancient forests, over other men's grounds, and Purlieu.

(a) As to forests in general, see Chit. G. L. 14; Manwood, tit. Chase, Forests; Marquis Downshire, 5 Price, 269; Manw. Com. Dig. Chase. It seems forestal rights, properly so called, are not grant-able to a subject. Attorney General v. Part II. c. 3, 4.

IN PARTICULAR
PLACES.

Parlieu.

were disafforested by the statute of charta de foresta. 4 Inst. 303; Marr. 242.

But nevertheless the parlieu, as to some purposes, is forest still, and is disafforested as to the particular owners of the land, and for their benefit, and not generally to give liberty to any man to hunt the wild beasts and spoil the vert. And if those beasts escape out of the forest into the parlieu, the king hath a property in them still against any man but against the owners of the woods and lands in which they are; and such owners have a special property in them ratione loci, but yet so that they hunt them fairly and not forestall them in their return towards the forest. Marr. 292.

But a parlieu man may not hunt in every man's lands within the parlieu, but in his own lands only; and therefore if he find the beasts of the forest in his woods or lands in the parlieu, in such case he hath property in them against any other man ratione soli (the king only excepted.) And if he begin the hunting in his own lands, then by reason of that property he may pursue his hunting through any man's woods or lands, so that he doth not enter into any forest, chase, park, or warren. And if he kill the beast in another man's land, and out of such privileged place, he may take and carry away the same by reason of the first property. But if the beast recover the forest, he must call back his dogs, for they are then the King's wild beasts again. And if he do not call back and rebuke his dogs, and they kill the beast in the forest, he is a trespasser, though himself never came within the bounds thereof. But if in hunting towards the forest the dogs fasten on it before it is within the bounds thereof, and the dogs still hanging on are drawn by the deer into the forest, and it is killed there, then by reason of the first property which he had ratione soli, and also by the pursuit and possession thereof before it entered the forest, he may lawfully enter and take it. Marr. 294.

Chase.

Chase—A chase (from chasser, to chase) is a privileged place for receipt of deer and beasts of the forest, and is of a middle nature betwixt a forest and park. It is commonly less than a forest and not endowed with so many liberties, as officers, laws, courts, and yet is of a larger compass than a park, having more officers and game than a park. Every forest is a chase, but every chase is not a forest. It differeth from a park in that it is not inclosed; for if it be inclosed, it is a good cause of forfeiture; though it must have certain metes and bounds, but it may be in other men's grounds as well as in one's own. Marr. 49, 147.

Beasts of chase are, the buck, doe, fox, martern, and roe. Marr. 144. And according to Lord Coke all beasts of venery are beasts of chase. Co. Lit. 233 a.

Park.

Park—A park (from the French word parquer, to inclose) is a large parcel of ground privileged for wild beasts of chase by the King's grant, or by prescription. Read. Game.

A park must be inclosed; for if it lie open, it is a good cause of seizure into the King's hands, as a thing forfeited; and the owner cannot have an action against those that hunt in his park, if it lies open. Id.; sed quere, if it be a ground of forfeiture. See Leicester's case, Cro. Jac. 755.

If any one erect a park without the King's grant, a quo warranto may be issued and the park destroyed. Bro. Ab. tit. Action sur le Statute, pl. 48. There may indeed be a park in reputation erected without lawful warrant, and the owner may bring his action against persons killing his deer. Wood's Inst. 207.

The beasts of park properly extend to the buck, doe, fox; but in a common and legal sense to all the beasts of the forest. Read. Game.

The owner or keeper of a lawful park may shoot any dog running after deer in it. 1 Saund. 84, n. 3.

As to chasing, &c. deer in parks, and breaking park palings, see, post, 932, 933.

Deer in a park shall go to the heir, and not to the executor. 1 Inst. 8.

Free warren.

Free Warren—A free warren is a place privileged by prescription or grant of the King, for the preservation of the beasts and fowl of the warren, viz. hares, conies, partridges, and pheasants. Manw. 44. IN PARTICULAR PLACES.

A free warren may lie open, there being no necessity of inclosing it. Read. Game.

Conies in a warren shall go to the heir, and not to the executor. 1 Inst. 8.

A free warren is not forfeited by nonuser; Co. Lit. 2a, 114b; Cro. Jac. 155; but it may be by misuser; Keilw. 148, n.; Cro. Eliz. 54.

In an action of trespass for entering a free warren, and which is sustainable even against the owner of the soil, though damages are under 40s., the plaintiff is entitled to full costs; for, as observed by Blackstone, J. "In actions, instituted merely for breaking free warren, it is impossible the title to the soil can ever come in question; for though both may concur in one person, yet the title to the free warren is always collateral to that of the land; for a man may have a free warren in aliendo solo." Besides, the hare which was hunted was the personal property of the owner of the free warren; and if any injury be done to personal property, that will take it out of the statute, and entitle the plaintiff to full costs. Lord Dacre v. Tebb, 2 Black. Rep. 1151; 2 Chit. G. L. 21, 1166.

The owner of a free warren may lawfully kill any dog which is used to haunt the warren. Wadhurst v. Damone, Cro. Jac. 45; Wright v. Ramscot 1 Saund. 84, n. 3; Vere v. Lord Cawder, 11 East, 568. And see further as to such powers, post, 945, 946.

An action lies for hunting in a free warren, though no game be taken. Lord Dacre v. Jebb, 2 Bla. Rep. 1151; 1 Saund. 346b; 5 Taunt. 442.

Trespass in a free warren will not lie for shooting grouse. Duke of Devonshire v. Lodge, 7 B. & Cres. 36.

General Observations—It is not lawful for any person to make any chase, park, or warren, in his own freehold, or elsewhere, to keep in it any wild beasts or birds of forest, chase, park, or warren, without the King's grant or warrant so to do; and if any man do, he is to be punished in a quo warranto, and the franchise to be seized into the King's hands. Manw. 56. In Rex v. Sir William Lowther, 2 Ld. Raym. 1409; 1 Str. 637; it was moved for leave to file an information in nature of a quo warranto against Sir William Lowther, to show by what authority he had made and set up a warren. But it was denied by the court: because they said it was of a private nature only. And the like motion had been denied before, in the case of the Lord Lisburne; and see, supra.

General observations as to these franchises.

Twenty years undisturbed exercise of a claim of free warren or park will afford presumptive evidence of right in the party so enjoying it. Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 215; Weld v. Hornbay, 7 East, 199; Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East, 488; Yard v. Ford, 2 Saund. 175, n. 2; and see Gray v. Bond, 2 B. & Ald. 667; Pickering v. Noyes, 4 B. & Cres. 639; 7 D. & R. 49, S. C.

The interest in them is therefore affected by rules differing from those which regulate other real property. Chit. G. L. 22.

Franchises of the above description may be destroyed by a reunion with the crown from which they issued, or by the surrender of the person entitled to them, or by his forfeiture in consequence of a breach of trust upon which they were granted, as by misuser. 3 Cruise, 301; Keilw. 148; Cro. Eliz. 54; Bro. Ab. Warren, tit. Extinguishment. Unity of possession and grant does not destroy the prescriptive right. 3 Dyer, 326. See Chit. G. L. 23.

A person may have common in a chase, as well as in a forest, but a forest is governed by the forest law, and a chase and park by the common law. 4 Inst. 314; Manw. 52.

And by the common law (says Blackstone) no person is at liberty to take or kill any beasts of chase, but such as have an ancient chase or park; unless they be also beasts of prey. 2 Bla. Com. 416.

If I find a pheasant in my lands, and I let my hawk fly, I may follow the flight into another man's land by reason of the first property which I had in the pheasant ratione soli; and if my hawk kill the pheasant in another man's land, I may enter and take it, by reason of that property and pursuit: and in that case, I shall not be punished as a trespasser for taking and carrying away the pheasant, but only for entering the ground. But if the pheasant fly into a warren, (which is a privileged place for birds of warren,) and the hawk kill it there, the falconer shall not have the pheasant, but the owner of the warren. And the law is the same in the cases of all wild beasts of the forest and chase. Manw. 389.

If conies are hunted out of the warren, or deer out of the park, and the warrener or parker pursues them, he may retake them; for in parks and warrens, officers are established by authority to have an eye over the game, and to keep it within the boundaries; so that the property is not altered by driving it out of the inclosures, unless it be also out of the pursuit of the officers; for as long as he that is thus trusted doth pursue it, it is not in its natural liberty, but is still belonging to the park or warren. 3 Bac. Abr. 326.

(2.) In places not franchised.

2d. PLACES NOT FRANCHISED]—These places may consist of manors, warrens, decoys, preserves and private grounds in general.

Manors.

Manors]—There are but very few privileges with respect to game in manors, and those privileges are allowed only by statute. See Chit. G. L. 23. The lord of a manor cannot sport in another's soil, whether a freeholder or copyholder, though within his manor, without being subject to an action of trespass. 2 Bla. Com. 39, 419; 11 Mod. 74; and see Broune v. Taylor, 10 East, 189.

The lord of a manor, as such, is authorised to kill game within it. 1 Walk. 45; Mallock v. Eastly, 7 Mod. 482.

By different statutes lords of manors are empowered to authorise gamekeepers to preserve and kill game within the manor. See post, 885 to 890, and Chit. G. L. 24, 25.

The lord has no power, as such, to kill the dog of a qualified person running after game in the manor; Vere v. Lord Caedon, 11 East, 568; though he would have such power if the dog was used by an unqualified person. Kingsworth v. Bretton and another, 5 Taunt. 416; 1 Marsh. 106, S. C.

The lord cannot delegate the power he has under the 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, of taking game from an unqualified person to another person. Bird v. Duke, 7 Taunt. 560.

Hare and rabbit warrens.

Hare and Rabbit Warrens]—A hare or rabbit warren, not being free warrens, have not any peculiar privileges as to game, except those given by statute.

We have already seen such a warren may be made without any license from the King, ante, 876. A person may keep as many hares or rabbits as he likes, though they may be injurious to his neighbour, for being animals feræ naturæ, the latter may kill them when on his own land. 5 Rep. 105; Cro. Eliz. 547; Moore, 453; Cro. Car. 387; Sir W. Jones, 356, S. C.

The legislative provisions giving these warrens some privileges, or rather protecting them from depredations, will be found, post, 935.

Decoys.

Decoys]—A decoy is a place set apart for the taking of wild fowl, and is it seems so far a privileged place, that a party may be sued for knowingly firing a gun or making a noise so near it as to frighten away the fowl, for it is maintained at considerable expense and trouble, and is a means of carrying on a trade. Keble v. Hickringill, 11 Mod. 74, 130; 11 East, 374. And in the case of Carrington v. Taylor, 2 Camp. 258; 11 East, 571, it was held, that firing at wild fowl, to kill and make profit of them, by one who was at the time in a boat on a public river or open creek where the tide ebbs and flows, so near to an ancient decoy on the shore, about 200 yards, as to make the birds there take flight, the defendant having before fired at a great distance from the decoy, which brought out some of the birds from thence, though he did not fire into the decoy pond, was evidence of wilful disturbance of and damage to the decoy, for which an action on the case was maintainable by the owner. Such an action would not lie for frightening rooks from a rookery. Hunnam v. Mockett, 2 B. & Cres. 934; 4 D. & R. 518, S. C.

IN PARTICULAR
PLACES.

Preserves and Private Grounds—Preserves and private grounds have no peculiar common law privileges relating to the game within them. It has therefore been held, that no action will lie for frightening game from a preserve against a person who shoots near it, but upon his own land. Currington v. Taylor, 2 Camp. 258; 11 East, 514, n.

Preserves and private grounds.

We have already seen what property in general the owner of a preserve or private ground has in the game therein, ante, 874, 5. Such owner has in general a property in the game ratione sole whilst upon it, and if started and killed there by a third person, such property is not divested, ante, 874. But it would be otherwise if not killed there. And in a case where a sportsman and his dogs put up a hare in the grounds of one person and pursued it into the lands of another, and a labourer just before it would have been taken, being quite exhausted, took it for the benefit of the hunters, and the owner of the soil took it from the hands of the labourer and killed it, it was held that the sportsman might support an action of trespass against the owner of the soil, Lord Ellenborough observing, on a motion for discharging a rule for a new trial thereon, "I did not understand at the time the rule was granted that the plaintiff, through the agency of his dogs, had reduced the hare into possession; that makes an end of the question. Even though the labourer had first taken hold of it before it was actually caught by the plaintiff's dogs; yet it now appears that he took it for the benefit of the hunters, as an associate of them, which is the same as if it had been taken by one of the dogs. If, indeed, he had taken it up for the defendant before it was caught by the dogs, it would have been different, or even if he had taken it as an indifferent person in the nature of a stakeholder." Churchyard v. Studdy, 14 East, 247, 250.

Property in game.

The occupier of a private ground or preserve may in general prohibit every one, except the owner of a chase or free warren, or him to whom he has granted right of entry, from sporting over his grounds; and if he be himself not disqualified, he has the exclusive privilege of killing game thereon, ante, 874.

If a person give leave to another to hunt over his grounds, it would not give him the liberty of shooting there. Per Gibbs, C. J. Moore v. Lord Plymouth, 7 Taunt. 627; 1 Moore, 346, S. C.

III. Who are Qualified to kill Game, or use Dogs, &c. to kill it.

By the common law any person might kill game, unless in the particular places as already noticed in the preceding section. But this general right was soon taken away by statute.

By common law.

By statute the qualification by estate for killing game in the reign of King Richard II. was 40s. a year; in the reign of King James I. it was advanced to 10l. a year, and after that in some instances to 40l. a year; and at last, in the reign of King Charles II., it was raised to 100l. a year. Not that the laws have become gradually more severe, but as the value of money decreased, the qualification was raised in proportion, the estate continuing nearly the same; for an estate of 40s. a year in the reign of King Richard II. was not much inferior to an estate of 100l. a year in the reign of King Charles II. and the penalty for destroying the game was even more severe then than it now.

Qualification.

As those ancient laws relating to the game are still in force, and are generally enacted so to be by the subsequent statutes, it will be necessary, in order to have a thorough knowledge of this matter, to insert them in their order, because the penalties on each being different, the prosecutor or justices may choose upon which of them they will convict an offender. Thus, by stat.

5 Anne, c. 14, hereafter following, if a person not having 100l. a year shall keep or use dogs or engines to destroy the game, he shall forfeit 5l.; but if such person have not 40s. a year, he may upon stat. 13 Rich. II. st. 1. c. 13, be punished by a year's imprisonment; and so of the rest: provided that no person be prosecuted upon more than one act for one offence.

The first qualification relating to the game was in the 13th year of the reign of Rich. II., by which it is enacted, that no layman which hath not lands or tenements of 40s. a year, nor clergyman if he be not advanced to 10l. a year, shall have or keep any greyhound, hound, nor other dog to hunt: nor shall use ferrets, hays, nets, hare-pipes, nor cords, nor other engines, for to take or destroy hares, nor conies, nor other gentlemen's game, on pain of a year's imprisonment. And the justices of the peace (that is, in their sessions) shall inquire of the offenders in this behalf, and punish them by the pain aforesaid. 13 Rich. II. st. 1, c. 13.

The next qualification by estate or degree to kill game was by statute 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 3, whereby it is enacted, "that all and every person and persons which from or after the 1st day of August (1604) shall have or keep any greyhound for coursing of deer or hare, or setting-dog or dogs, or net or nets, to take pheasants or partridges, except such person or persons which shall be seised in their own right, or in the right of their wives, of lands, tenements, or hereditaments of the clear yearly value of 10l. by the year or more, over and above all charges and reprises, of some estate of inheritance; or of lands, tenements, or hereditaments in his own right, or in the right of his wife, for term of life or lives, of the yearly value of 30l. over and above all charges and reprises, or be possessed of goods or chattels to the full value of 200l. to his own use; or be the son or sons of any knight, or of any baron of parliament, or of some person of higher degree, or the son and heir apparent of any esquire; and being thereof convicted, as aforesaid, shall by the said justices of the peace be committed and imprisoned in manner and form as in and by this present act before is expressed, specified and declared; except such person and persons so offending and thereof convicted as aforesaid do forthwith pay or cause to be paid to the churchwardens of the said parish where the said offence shall be committed, or the party apprehended to the use of the poor of the said parish, the sum of 40s. of good and lawful money of England;" (a) [or after one month after his commitment he become bound by recognizance with two sureties before two justices in 20l. a piece not to offend again in like manner.]

The next qualification relates to deer and conies only, and is provided for by the 3 Jac. I. c. 13, s. 5, by which it is enacted, "that if any person not having manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments of the clear yearly value of 40l. or not worth in goods 200l., shall use any gun or bow, or cross-bow, to kill any deer or conies; or shall keep any buckstall or engine-hayes, gatenets, purse-nets, ferrets, nets, or coney dogs, (except he have grounds inclosed, and used for the keeping of deer or conies, the increasing of which said conies shall amount to the clear yearly value of 40s., or keepers or warreners in their parks, warrens, or grounds belonging to their charge,) in such case any person having lands, tenements, or hereditaments of the clear yearly value of 100l. in fee simple, fee tail, or for life, in his own right or the right of his wife, may take from such person to his own use for ever such guns, bows, cross-bows, buckstalls," &c. &c.

The next qualification (which relates to pheasants and partridges only) is by stat. 7 Jac. I. c. 11, s. 7, and is as follows; "every free warrener, every lord of a manor, and every freeholder seised in his own or his wife's right of lands, tenements, and hereditaments of the clear yearly value of 40l. of some estate of inheritance, or of lands, tenements, and hereditaments in his own or his wife's right, for term of life or lives, of the yearly value of 80*l.* clear, or worth in goods 400*l.*, may by him, or his menial and household servants sufficiently thereto by him authorised, take pheasants and partridges (in the day-time only) in his own or his master's free warren, manor, and freehold, betwixt Michaelmas and Christmas yearly."

(a) This latter paragraph is part of the section 2 of the same act, but it seems doubtful whether it refers only to the offences described in that section, viz. the shooting at, killing, and destroying the game therein described, or can be incorporated with the 3d section, inasmuch as the condition of the recognizance is to be "not to kill, &c. by any of the means in that section 2 aforesaid."

WHO QUALIFIED TO KILL.

The last general qualification by estate or degree to kill game, and which is now most to be regarded, is in stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 3, by which it is enacted, "that all and every person and persons not having lands and tenements, or some other estate of inheritance in his own or his wife's right of the clear yearly value of 100*l.* per annum, or for term of life, or having lease or leases of 99 years, or for any longer term, of the clear yearly value of 150*l.*, (other than the son and heir apparent of an esquire, or other person of higher degree, and the owners and keepers of forests, parks, chases, or warrens, being stocked with deer or conies, for their necessary use, in respect of the said forests, parks, chases, or warrens,) are hereby declared to be persons by the laws of this realm not allowed to have or keep for themselves, or any other person or persons, any guns, bows, greyhounds, setting-dogs, ferrets, coney-dogs, lurchers, hays, uets, lowbels, harepipes, gins, snares, or other engines aforesaid, but shall be and are hereby prohibited to have, keep, or use the same."

100*l.* a year.
c. 25.

We will inquire into the construction put on these statutes as regards a qualification to kill game. 1st, By Possession of an Estate;—2d, By being Son and Heir Apparent of an Esquire, &c.;—3d, By Ownership, or Keeping of a Franchise;—4th, By being Lord of a Manor;—and 5th, By being a Gamekeeper.

(1.) QUALIFICATION BY ESTATE.

ESTATE OF INHERITANCE]—The words of the statute of 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 3, are, "that all and every person and persons not having lands and tenements, or some other estate of inheritance, in his own or his wife's right, of the clear yearly value of 100*l.* per annum, or for term of life, or having lease or leases of 99 years, or for any longer term, of the clear yearly value of 150*l.* other than, &c." shall not be qualified, &c. The clause will be found more at length, supra.

1. Qualification by
ance.

Person and Persons]—In order to qualify tenants in common and joint tenants, the clear yearly value of the estate must be sufficient to qualify every one separately, if the estate were divided. Chit. G. L. 50; Mallock v. Eastley, 7 Mod. 482; Wetherell v. Hall, Cald. 230.

Tenants in common.

Having]—This word means an estate in possession, and not in reversion. Mallock v. Eastley, 7 Mod. 482.

Having in possession.

The circumstance of a deed having been made to give a colourable qualification, is no ground of objection to its validity. Doe d. Roberts v. Roberts, 2 B. & A. 367. It seems questionable whether a conveyance executed by a father to give his son a colourable qualification, and kept in the father's possession during his life without being used or made known to the son, is valid in law. Id. See Cecil v. Butcher, 2 J. & W. 565; and Brackenbury v. Brackenbury, 2 J. & W. 391; Chit. G. L. 58, n.

Lands and Tenements, or other Estate of Inheritance]—Under these words not only land, but property in which game cannot exist is included. Chit. G. L. 60; 2 Bl. Com. 16.

Lands and tenements, or other estate of inheritance.

The act does not expressly mention the nature of the tenure of the estate of inheritance; but as the object of the legislature was merely to require a certain interest in real property, a copyhold of inheritance of the clear yearly value of 100*l.* is a qualification within the act. Wetherell v. Hall, Cald. 230.

A rent charge will give the owner a qualification. Id.

It should seem that lands in Scotland will not give a qualification. Marvell v. Mayre, 1 Bla. Rep. 271, 364.

In wife's right.

In his Wife's Right—R. v. Earnshaw, 15 East, 456. This was a conviction on stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, in which the information set out negatived amongst the other qualifications mentioned in stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25. s. 3, that the said John Earnshaw at the time of the offence committed had "lands or tenements, or any other estate of inheritance of the clear yearly value of £100, or for term of life," &c. or was "in any other manner qualified, employed, licensed, or authorised by the laws of this realm, either to take, kill, or destroy any sort of game whatsoever, or to keep or use any lurcher for that purpose;" but did not go on to negative that the defendant was qualified by having an estate of inheritance of 100*l.* a-year in right of his wife, which is one of the qualifications of the stat. of Car. II. Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J.—It has been settled that all the qualifications for killing game must be specifically negatived in the conviction, and that being so, there is no more reason for dispensing with the terms in which they may be aptly and certainly negatived. Here one of the qualifications mentioned in the statute is omitted to be negatived, namely, that the defendant had an estate of inheritance of the annual value of 100*l.* in right of his wife, we must presume, therefore, that it could not have been truly negatived. It is always safer in these cases to follow the words of the act. Conviction quashed.

Of the yearly value of £100.

*Of the clear Yearly Value of 100*l.* per annum*—Where the estate is mortgaged, if the interest of the sum for which it is mortgaged reduces the rent where the estate is let, or the value where it is in the hands of the mortgagor, under a 100*l.* a-year, the owner of the estate is not qualified to kill game. Wetherell v. Hall, Cald. 230.

On an action of debt against the defendant for the penalty of 5*l.* for using a certain engine called a gun to kill and destroy the game, not being a person qualified so to do, the cause was tried at Durham assizes, 1782, when the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the Court of King's Bench on the following case. The defendant Hall having an estate of 103*l.* a-year, mortgaged a part of it, of the value of 14*l.* a-year, to Robert Kelsey, for 400*l.*; which part being copyhold, he surrendered the same, according to the custom of the manor, to the said Robert Kelsey, who thereupon was admitted tenant. But Kelsey never entered upon the premises, Hall continuing in possession, and paying interest of the mortgage regularly. The question for the opinion of the court was, whether the defendant was duly qualified to use engines to kill and destroy game. For the plaintiff it was contended, 1st, That a legal estate of 100*l.* per annum was necessary to constitute a qualification; whereas here the defendant had only an equitable estate as far as respected the part mortgaged; and 2dly, that the estate should be of the clear yearly value of 100*l.* after all charges on it. After argument, the court decided in favour of the plaintiff on the second ground, saying at the same time, that the first objection could not be supported. Lord Mansfield.—The privilege here is given to property, and the cestui que trust, the mortgagor, is really the owner; the trustee, the mortgagee, is merely nominal. We consider the defendant's interest in this court just as it would be considered in a court of equity; it is an interest subject to the payment of the mortgage, it is a qualification of property; and though it is not necessary that he should have a legal estate, he must have such property in the land as shall produce a clear income of 100*l.* per annum; or it might be carried so far as that he might have nothing, and yet enjoy the privilege. What then are a mortgagor and mortgagee in chancery? one the owner, and the other as having a charge upon the land, and the charge goes along with it. Buller, J.—In the case of rent-charges the cognizance of the justice is admitted; and in many others they must intertere, as in contracts between landlord and tenant. Neither is there any pretence on the part of the defendant to complain of hardship. Possession is prima facie evidence of property. The defendant, therefore, must be presumed to be the entire owner. The hard task lies upon the other party, who must make proof of the contrary. If the justice may receive proof of rent-charges and services, what should prevent his doing the like as to mortgages? The only point then is, whether the words clear yearly value, mean clearly yearly value to the person in possession? The words of this act would of themselves leave little room for doubt; but when explained and supported by the statutes of James in pari materia, the words of which are over and above all charges and reprises, it can no longer admit of a question, but that it must mean clear value to the person in possession; for by the common rule of construction, all statutes upon the same subject are considered as making one system of law, and consequently the words in the two last statutes must be referred to the statute in question. Willes and Ashhurst, Js. concurred. Judgment for the plaintiff. Cald. Cas. 230.

The words "clear yearly value," mean "clear yearly value to the person in possession." S. C. and see Chit. G. L. 65.

The deduction of the property tax on an estate in other respects of the clear annual value of 100*l.* was not when that tax was in force considered as affecting the qualification. Chit. G. L. 68.

On a question arising upon an information before magistrates, as to the defendant's qualification, the magistrates may ground their opinion of his not being qualified on the fact of the defendant's having sworn on a former day under the income tax act, that his annual income did not exceed 50*l.*, and his admission on the hearing that the value had not increased since the time of making such declaration. R. v. Clarke, 8 T. R. 220.

Or for TERM of LIFE]—It was doubted upon these words, in what order of qualification an ecclesiastical living shall be ranked, which a man holds not in his own or his wife's right, but in the right of his church. It is allowed to be a life estate, although it may happen to be determined sooner, as by resignation, deprivation, or accepting another living incompatible. But the question is, whether these words shall belong to the former or the latter part of the sentence? The difficulty seems to be partly occasioned by the disjointed manner of punctuation. But the points are no part of the statute. The statutes themselves are without points; the punctuation is only made by the printer. Abstracted from the punctuation, it should seem that the former part of the sentence respecting the qualification of 100*l.* a-year by an estate of inheritance, ought to terminate with the words per annum; and that a life estate, being of inferior quality, ought to be coupled with leasehold, whereof 150*l.* a-year is necessary to constitute a qualification. And so it was determined in the case of Lowndes, Esq. v. Lewis, clerk, by Lord Mansfield, Ashhurst, J. and Buller, J. against the opinion of Willes, J. that a life estate of less than a 150*l.* per annum is not a qualification to kill game. Cald. 188; and see Chit. G. L. 68, 69.

Estate for life.

An estate pour autre vie is a freehold interest, and gives a qualification. Doe d. Blake v. Luxton, 6 T. R. 289.

Having LEASE for 99 Years of 150*l.* yearly value]—An estate of the value of 150*l.* per annum holden by the party in his own right under a lease for 99 years to trustees, if he and others should so long live, is a sufficient qualification; and leases of this kind have always been so deemed. Earl Ferrers v. Henton, 8 T. R. 506.

Leasehold estate.

As to the yearly value, see ante, 882.

Evidence of Qualification]—In general slight evidence of a qualification is sufficient. It is not necessary for a person to produce his title deeds.

Evidence of qualification of estate in general.

The bare possession of an estate or receipt of the rents and profits, is prima facie evidence of ownership, and throws the onus probandi of the contrary on the opposite party. Wetherell v. Hall, Cald. 230. In the case of

QUALIFICATION AS SON AND HEIR APPA-

Smyth v. Jeffries, 9 Price, 257, the only evidence given by the defendant was the production of certain deeds of lease and release, under which the possession of the defendant's father, who was the purchaser, was proved in a vague and loose manner, but no attempt was made to prove possession by the son, nor were any particulars as to the payment of rent given in evidence, or to whom paid. The plaintiff did not show any evidence to rebut defendant's title, and it was held defendant's title was sufficiently proved by him, post, 889.

(2.) QUALIFICATION BY BEING SON AND HEIR APPARENT OF AN ESQUIRE, &c.

2. Qualification by being

The words of the act 22 & 23 Car. II. which give a qualification on this account, are, "other than the son and heir apparent of an esquire, or other person of higher degree." son and heir apparent

Son and Heir Apparent—The qualification extends only to the eldest son. See Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 44; Cald. 389.

The son can only be qualified whilst his father lives, because the words are son and heir apparent; he ceases to be heir apparent upon his father's death, and, therefore, that species of qualification is then at an end. Christian's G. L. 130. But this seems questionable.

Of an Esquire—Esquire, escuyer, scuterius, called by the Saxons schilt, knaben, or knapen, (from whence cometh the word knave, which anciently signified a servant,) is a name of dignity next above the common title of gentleman and below a knight. Heretofore he was attendant and had employment as a servant, waiting on such as had the order of knighthood, bearing their shields, and helping them to horse, or such like. And this title is of that nature with us now, that to whomsoever either by blood or place in the state, or other eminency, we conceive some higher attribute should be given than that sole title of gentleman, knowing yet that he hath no other honorary title legally fixed on him, we usually style him an esquire in such passages as require legally that his degree or state be mentioned. Seld. Tit. of Hon. 374, 362, 687.

With respect to who is an esquire, Mr. Justice Blackstone says, "it is indeed a matter somewhat unsettled what constitutes the distinction, or who is a real esquire; for it is not an estate, however large, that confers this rank upon its owner. Camden, who was himself a herald, distinguishes them the most accurately; and he reckons up four sorts of them.—1st, The eldest sons of knights, and their eldest sons in perpetual succession.—2d, The eldest sons of younger sons of peers, and their eldest sons in like perpetual succession; both which species of esquires Sir Henry Spelman entitles armigeri natalitii.—3rd, Esquires created by the King's letters-patent or other investiture, and their eldest sons.—4th, Esquires by virtue of their offices, as justices of the peace, and others who bear any office of trust under the crown. To these may be added the esquires of knights of the bath, each of whom constitutes three at his installation; and all Irish peers; for not only these, but the eldest sons of peers of Great Britain, though frequently titular lords are only esquires in the law, and must be so named in all legal proceedings." (a) 1 Blac. Com. 406; see Chit. G. L. 55.

Esquire (Armiger) is a name that is frequently used in divers acts of parliament to denote an estate and degree; all dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons of other nations, or which are not lords of parliament, are to be named esquires; if knights, they are to be termed milites. The sons of all the peers and lords of parliament are, in law, esquires in the life of their fathers. And the eldest son of a knight is an esquire. Wood's Inst. 44.

All persons who are styled esquires under the King's manual, as sheriffs and captains in the army or navy, will be esquires, and their heirs apparent will be qualified to kill game. Christian's G. L. 132.

(a) See Mr. Christian's note upon this latter description of an esquire, post. Vol. III. p. 337, n.

Every barrister is an esquire. 1 Wils. 245.

It should be observed that honours can only be conferred by the crown.

A commission signed by the lord lieutenant of a county, constituting a person captain commandant of a corps of volunteer infantry, and styling him an esquire, does not create such person an esquire so as to qualify his son and heir apparent to kill game; for the lord lieutenant cannot confer honours. Talbot v. Eagle, C. P. 1 Taunt. 510.

The esquire himself is not on account of his being an esquire qualified, see infra.

Or other Person of Higher Degree—It has been decided that these words confine the qualification (without estate) to the son and heir apparent of an esquire, or the son and heir apparent of a person of higher degree, but do not qualify such esquire or person of higher degree himself. R. v. Utley, 1 T. R. 413; Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 44.

Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 44. This was an action against the defendant to recover the penalty of 5*l.* for killing game, not being duly qualified. The defendant had a diploma from the University of St. Andrew's in Scotland, which it was contended gave him a qualification, and that a doctor of physic was of higher degree than an esquire, and therefore qualified; but Lord Mansfield, C. J. thought (in which opinion Ashurst and Buller, Js. concurred, dissentiente Willes, J.) that even if a physician, who had taken his degree in England, were entitled to the privilege contended for, a Scotch diploma does not constitute the person taking out the same a "person of higher degree," so as to qualify his son and heir apparent to kill game.

As to who are of higher degree to esquires, see 1 Bla. Com. 405.

Or of other persons of "higher degree."

(3.) QUALIFICATION BY OWNERSHIP OR KEEPING OF A FRANCHISE.

The words of the act of 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 3, ante, 881, which give a qualification on this account, are, "the owners and keepers of forests, parks, chases or warrens."

As to such franchises in general, see ante, 875 to 878.

3. Qualification by ownership or keeping of franchise.

(4.) QUALIFICATION BY BEING LORD OF A MANOR.

Lord of Manor—It is to be observed, that the 3rd section of the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, ante, 881, makes no mention of lords of manors. The 7 Jac. I. c. 11, s. 7, ante, 880, however, expressly provides, that every lord of a manor may by himself or his menial servants take pheasants or partridges on his manor; and in Mallock v. Eastly, 7 Mod. 482, it was considered that a lord of a manor as such was qualified to kill game within it.

4. Qualification by being a lord of a manor.

(5.) QUALIFICATION BY BEING A GAMEKEEPER.

Gamekeeper, &c.—The 7 Jac. I. c. 11, s. 7, ante, 880 empowers a person having a free warren, and a lord of a manor and freeholder of 40*l.* per annum, or for life of 80*l.* per annum, or having goods of 400*l.* value, to appoint his menial or household servant to take pheasants and partridges in the day time, upon his master's free warren, manor, or freehold between Michaelmas and Christmas.

The 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, post, 943, empowers lords of manors, or other royalties, not under the degree of an esquire, by writing under their hands and seals, to appoint one or more gamekeepers in their respective manors or royalties to seize dogs, &c.

These statutes only authorised an appointment of gamekeeper to preserve the game, not to kill it. This occasioned the 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, which enacts, "that any lord or lady of his or her respective lordship or manor, by writing under his or her hand and seal, to empower his or her gamekeeper or gamekeepers, upon his or her own lordship or manor as aforesaid, to kill hare, pheasant, partridge, or any other game whatsoever; but if the said gamekeeper shall under colour or pretence of the said power and authority to kill game, or take the same for the use of such lord or lady, (a) and afterwards sell and dispose thereof to any person or persons whatsoever, without the consent or knowledge of the lord or lady of such manor or manors that hath given such power or authority in manner as aforesaid, and shall be thereof convicted upon the complaint of such lord or lady of any manor, and upon the oath of one or more credible witnesses, before any one or more of her Majesty's justices of the peace as aforesaid, upon such conviction such gamekeeper shall be committed to the house of correction for the space of three months, and there to be kept to hard labour."

But by stat. 9 Anne, c. 25, s. 1, after reciting and making perpetual the statute 5 Anne, c. 14, it is enacted, that "no lord or lady of a manor shall make, constitute, or appoint above one person to be a gamekeeper within any one manor, with power or authority to kill or destroy the game thereof; and that the name of such person so to be authorised to kill the game shall from time to time be entered with the clerk of the peace (b) for the time being of the county, riding, or division wherein such manor doth lie, such entry to be made and viewed without fee or reward, and a certificate thereof to be granted by the clerk of the peace, upon payment of one shilling for the same. And in case any other gamekeeper, whose name shall not be so entered as aforesaid, who shall not be otherwise qualified by the laws of this kingdom to kill game, shall presume to kill any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, or if any gamekeeper or gamekeepers, or other person or persons whatsoever, not being qualified in his own right to kill game, shall sell, or expose to sale, any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, the respective offender or offenders herein shall, for every offence, incur such forfeitures, pains, and penalties, as are inflicted by the said recited act upon higglers, carriers, innkeepers, or victuallers, forbuying or selling of game; such forfeitures to be recovered by such means, and in such manner and form, and within such time, and to such uses, as are prescribed by the said act; any thing in the said recited act, or in any other law or statute to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding." Prosecution to be within three months after the offence committed. (See stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 2, post, 913, 914.)

Who shall not be otherwise Qualified].—From these words it seemeth clear that a gamekeeper who is qualified in his own right to kill game need not be entered with the clerk of the peace.

The 59 Geo. III. c. 100, s. 3, empowers the lords of extensive manors in Wales, and the stewards of the baron manors there, to appoint several gamekeepers for such manors, confining them to their respective districts, and entering their names with the clerk of the peace. See the provisions at length, post, 887.

To take out a certificate on stamp.

By stat. 25 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 2, every deputation of a gamekeeper shall be registered with the clerk of the peace (b) of the county or place where the manor shall lie, and such gamekeeper shall take out a certificate thereof annually.

The amount of the duty on such certificate will be found specified in stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 93, Sch. (L.), post, 891.

Sect. 9. as aforesaid, in pursuance of this act, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.*, to be recovered and applied as herein after mentioned."

Sect. 14. "That if any lord or lady of a manor in England or Wales, or proprietor of land in Scotland, shall make any new deputation or appointment of a gamekeeper for any manor or lands in the room of the person already appointed, and to whom any such certificate as aforesaid hath been issued, and shall register such new deputation or appointment with the clerk of the peace, or his deputy, or sheriff or steward clerk of the county, riding, shire, stewartry, or place, in which the manor or lands shall be situate, and shall obtain a new certificate thereon, the first certificate granted shall be, and the same is hereby declared to be null and void; and the person acting under the same, after notice to him given of such new and other certificate, shall be liable to the penalties prescribed by this act, in the same manner as if no certificate had been granted to such person."

QUALIFICATION
BY BEING A GAMEKEEPER.

25 Geo. 3, c. 50.

Sect. 17. "That no certificate, obtained under any deputation or appointment of a gamekeeper, shall be pleaded or given in evidence in any case whatsoever, where the person having such certificate shall have used or shall use any greyhound, hound, pointer, setting dog, spaniel, or other dog, or any gun, net, or other engine for the taking or destruction of game, out of or beyond the precincts or limits of the manor or lands for or in respect of which such deputation or appointment was given and made."

Not to extend
manor.

By stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 93, after repealing stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 2, and stat. 3 Geo. I. c. 11, by which no lord of a manor could appoint any person to be a gamekeeper, with power to kill game, unless he was qualified, or a domestic servant, or immediately employed to kill game only for the use of his lord or lady, it is enacted, (sect. 2,) "that it shall be lawful for any lord or lady of any manor to appoint and depute any person whatever, whether acting as a gamekeeper to any other person or not, or whether retained and paid for as the male servant of any other person or not, or whether a qualified person or not, to be a gamekeeper to any such manor, with authority to such person as gamekeeper to kill game within the same for his own use, or for the use of any other person or persons whatever, to be specified in such appointment or deputation, whether qualified or not; and no person so appointed gamekeeper as aforesaid and empowered to kill game for his own use, or for the use of any other person so specified as aforesaid, and not killing any game for the use of the lord or lady of the manor for which such deputation shall be given, shall be deemed or taken to be, or entered or paid for as the gamekeeper or male servant of the lord or lady making such appointment or giving such deputation as aforesaid; any thing in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding."

48 Geo. 3, c. 93.
Lords of manors may appoint gamekeepers, whether qualified or not, &c.

And by sect. 3, "that any person appointed gamekeeper under the authority of this act to kill game for his own use or the use of any other person, shall have the same rights, privileges, power and authority as if he had been legally qualified and appointed to act as gamekeeper, to kill game for the use of the lord or lady of the manor appointing such gamekeeper, under any laws in force immediately before the passing of this act."

Gamekeepers so appointed to have the same rights as if qualified.

And by stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 102, "for further regulating the appointment of gamekeepers in Wales," reciting that "whereas there are now several districts and lands, within the principality of Wales, which are not known to be comprehended within the boundaries of any manors, lordships or royalties; and there are also several other districts and lands within the principality, which formerly belonged to or formed part or parts of such manors, lordships, or royalties, but which have been alienated therefrom or enfranchised by the king or lords for the time being of such manors, lordships, or royalties, and any of such districts and lands are very extensive: and whereas the owner or owners of such districts and lands cannot, nor can any other person or persons appoint any gamekeeper or other servant to kill game on such lands for the use of the owner or owners thereof, without subjecting such gamekeeper or other servant to the penalties imposed by divers acts of parliament made for the preservation of the game; which regulations and enactments have tended greatly to the encouragement of poachers and other idle and disorderly

Sect. 2. "That every such gamekeeper having such appointment as aforesaid, during the continuance of such appointment, shall not be made subject or liable to any penalties imposed by any former statutes of this realm, for having any game in his or their custody or possession, or for coursing, hunting, shooting at or killing game, on or upon any lands mentioned in his or their appointment or appointments, and whereon the person or persons making such appointment or appointments has or have any power, license, or authority to make or grant any appointment or appointments by virtue of this act: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or give, or be construed to extend or give, any power or authority to any person or persons to make or grant any such appointment or appointments, license or licenses, to course, hunt, shoot at or kill game in, over or upon his, her or their lands, situate or being within the precinct or boundary of any manor, lordship, or royalty, unless such lands shall have been enfranchised or alienated therefrom, without the license or consent in writing of the proprietor or proprietors of such manor, lordship, or royalty, having the right to pursue and kill game in, upon or over such lands, first had and obtained; and where in any existing lease or demise, or agreement for demising any lands, the lessor or lessors, landlord or landlords thereof, hath or have not reserved the right or power of hunting, shooting, or sporting, when no such appointment or appointments, license or licenses, shall be valid, so as to authorise any such gamekeeper or gamekeepers, servant or servants, to enter upon any such lands, to preserve, course, hunt, shoot at or kill game thereon, without the consent in writing of the person or persons in the actual possession of such lands first had and obtained."

Sect. 3. "And whereas the manors, lordships, and royalties, within the said principality, are in many instances extremely extensive, and comprehend very large tracts of country: and whereas by an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled, 'An Act for making the act of the fifth year of her Majesty's reign, for the better preservation of the game, perpetual, and for making the same more effectual,' it is among other things enacted, 'that only one gamekeeper shall be appointed to kill game within any one manor: and whereas such restriction hath, on account of the extent of the said manors, lordships, and royalties, been found extremely inconvenient, and tended greatly to the destruction of the game within the said principality; it is enacted, that the lords and ladies of such manors, lordships, and royalties, and the stewards of the crown for such manors, lordships, and royalties as appertain to his Majesty within the said principality, shall be, and they are hereby authorised respectively to nominate and appoint gamekeepers for such districts and divisions of their respect manors, lordships, and royalties, as they shall think fit; and that each and every gamekeeper so appointed shall have the like powers, privileges, and authorities within such district or division as any gamekeeper appointed for the whole of a manor hath or would have by virtue of any act now in force: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorise the appointment of more than one gamekeeper for the same district or division, and that all appointments under this act shall be registered with the clerk of the peace in like manner, and be subject to all other regulations which are enacted with respect to the appointment of gamekeepers of manors by any act now in force."

QUALIFICATION
BY BEING A GAMEKEEPER.

59 Geo. 3, c. 102.

Sect. 4. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every persons and person, who shall or may grant or make any appointment or appointments, license or licenses, by virtue of this act, to revoke, annul, or render void all and every such consent, appointments and appointment, licenses and license, and to grant or make other consent or consents, appointments or licenses in lieu thereof, as often as to him, her, or them, shall seem proper."

Persons granting appointments may annul the same, and grant others in lieu thereof.

Sect. 5. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend the protection of this act to any person or persons killing game without a certificate taken out or purchased, according to the provisions of the act now in force respecting game certificates, or in any manner to affect the rights of his Majesty or his successors, or of any other person or persons, in, to or over any manor, lordship, or royalty, within the said principality."

This act not to extend to persons killing game without certificate.

What Manor, &c. sufficient—Only a lord or lady of a lordship or manor can authorise a gamekeeper to kill game. See the 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, ante, 886. As to who may authorise a gamekeeper to preserve game, see the statute 7 Jac. I. c. 11, s. 7, ante, 880, and 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, post, 943; and see Chit. G. L. 45, 46.

What manor, &c. or title to, sufficient.

The lord of a hundred or wapentake cannot grant a deputation to a gamekeeper. Lord Aylesbury v. Pattison, Dougl. 28. Com Dig., Justice of the Peace, (B.) 46.

A devisee of a manor in trust may appoint a gamekeeper merely to preserve the game, but not for the purposes of an establishment for pleasure to the trustee. Webb v. Earl of Shaftesbury, 7 Ves. 488.

In Calcraft v. Gibbs, 5 T. R. 19, Lord Kenyon, C. J. said, "that the lord of a manor cannot convey to another the power of appointing a gamekeeper, without a conveyance also of the manor itself. Such a power is a mere emanation of the manor, and it is inseparable from it. It is a mere shadow, accompanying the substance."

A college or corporation may appoint a gamekeeper; and it is not necessary that it should appear in the deputation that he was to kill game for the sole use and benefit of the lord of a manor. Although unqualified he is protected, unless it be proved that he killed game otherwise than for the use of the lord. Spurrier v. Vale, 1 Campb. 457. 10 East, 413.

A good colourable title to the manor or lordship will suffice; that is to say, the court will not suffer the title to be tried nor the disputed boundaries of a manor to be settled in an action for penalties under the game laws. See Hawkins v. Bailey, and Blunt v. Grimes, 4 T. R. 681, n.; Phillips v. Davis, East, 179.

In an action for penalties for killing game, to which an appointment under stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, by a lord of the manor, was pleaded as an exemption, the court of King's Bench decided that the true question was, not whether the gamekeeper acted bonâ fide, but whether the person under whose deputation he acted had any colourable title to the manor or not; and that in such a case, evidence of real title is admissible to rebut the presumption of colourable title. Where, therefore, the only evidence of colourable title to the manor is the appointment since 1806 of two gamekeepers, evidence of actual title is held to be admissible, both for the purpose of repudiating the colourable title, and also of showing that it was within the knowledge of the plaintiff that manorial rights had been openly exercised by others, and that he had no ground of claim whatever. Hunt v. Andrews, 3 B. & A. 341.

If there be no colourable title or if the presumption of it be rebutted, the penalties of the game laws will attach upon the gamekeeper, and the circumstance of his acting bonâ fide will constitute no defence. Hunt v. Andrews, 3 B. & A. 341; Calcraft v. Gibbs, 4 T. R. 681; 5 T. R. 19; Wetherall v. Hall, Cald. 230.

Showing a seisin in fact and the exercise of manorial rights is evidence of a colourable title. 4 T. R. 682. Reputation is not evidence of the existence of a manor without a foundation being first laid. Rushworth v. Craven, 1 Mac. & Y. 417.

Books preserved in the office of the clerk of the peace, containing enrolments of ancient deputations of gamekeepers for a certain manor, are admissible in evidence to show that those persons, who caused the enrolments to be made, had exercised rights as lords of the manor; and they are admissible, without proof that the original deputations have been lost, or that the gamekeepers named in them have acted under their authority. 3 B. & A. 341.

Lord need not be an esquire.

The lord of a manor need not, notwithstanding the words of the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, be an esquire, in order to appoint and authorise a gamekeeper to kill or preserve game. See Mallock v. Eastley, 7 Mod. 482; Chit. G. L. 47.

Form of deputation.

The deputation must be on a 35s. stamp, 55 Geo. III. c. 184, sched.; post. Vol. V. p. 607. It must, as we have already seen by the words of the statutes ante, 886, be under the hand and seal of the party making it. It should specify all the powers intended to be given to the gamekeeper consistent with those that may be given. In a late case, where the deputation by its words only authorised the keeper to seize greyhounds, setting dogs, and ferrets, and to do all things belonging to the office of gamekeeper, according to the directions of the acts of parliament, it was held, he was not thereby authorised to seize hounds. Grant v. Hulton, 1 B. & A. 134. So a gamekeeper, under a general deputation to kill game for his own use, cannot seize game in possession of an unqualified person. Bird v. Dale, 1 Moore, 290; post, 945. It does not seem absolutely necessary for the deputation to state, that the gamekeeper is to kill game for the use of the lord only, though this is commonly mentioned in the ordinary appointment of a gamekeeper. See Spurrier v. Vale, 1 Campb. 457; 10 East, 413, S. C.

Discharging, &c.

A gamekeeper guilty of disobedience may be discharged forthwith without notice, unless there has been a special agreement to the contrary. Moore, 8. See post, Serbant, Vol. V. p. 360.

Gamekeeper not to sport off the manor, &c.

His residence in a house by permission of the lord of the manor is lawful only whilst gamekeeper. Lit. Rep. 139; and see 16 East, 33.

The statutes expressly confine the power of the gamekeeper to kill game within the precincts of the manor, and if he kill game or use guns or dogs for that purpose out of the limits of his manor, he is liable, if not qualified in other respects, to the same pecuniary penalties as any other unqualified person. Chit. G. L. 50.

But neither a justice of the peace or any other gamekeeper can legally seize his dogs or guns, &c., although he is sporting for the purpose of killing game in another manor than that for which he has received his deputation; for the power of seizure under stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, extends to those persons only who are not qualified to keep engines for the destruction of game, and gamekeepers are qualified to keep such engines anywhere. Rogers v. Carter, 2 Wils. 387. It was admitted, however, in this case, that if the gamekeeper had actually killed game beyond the limits of his own manor, he would have been liable to the penalty of 5*l.* 2 Selw. N. P. 840. See further as to seizing guns, &c., post, 943.

"II. Every collector, or his deputy or sub-collector, on application to him made by any person residing within the limits of his collection, and on payment to such collector, or his deputy or sub-collector, of the duty hereby made payable, shall give a receipt for the same, which receipt shall be signed by such collector, or his deputy or sub-collector, and made out conformable to such of the forms for certificates in the schedules to this act annexed, as the case may require; and every such receipt shall be a charge on the parish or place for which such collector, or his deputy or sub-collector, shall be appointed, for the sum therein expressed, in like manner and to the like effect as if the said sum had been previously assessed and levied by such collector, or his deputy or sub-collector, under the warrant of the commissioners acting in the execution of this act, for which receipt the said collector, or his deputy or sub-collector, shall be entitled to demand and receive from such person the sum of one shilling over and above the said duty, and no more, which sum shall be deemed the compensation to such collector, and his deputy or sub-collector, for his pains and care in executing this act; and the duty so received shall be paid to the receiver general, or his deputy, at his or their next receipt of duties, in full and without deduction; provided that the receipt given for the duties contained in this schedule shall not be liable to any stamp duty whatever."

"III. Every such receipt, being delivered to the clerk of the commissioners acting for the district where the person aforesaid shall reside, shall be exchanged for a certificate made out in one of the forms in the schedule to this act annexed, marked (N.), corresponding with such receipt, which certificate the said clerk is hereby required, on demand, to make out and deliver gratis to such person, in exchange for the said receipt."

IV. The said receipts so exchanged shall be entered by the clerks in books for that purpose, and after examination by the commissioners, shall be a sufficient authority to cause an assessment to be made on the persons mentioned in such receipts in the sums paid by them, which assessments shall be as binding on the collectors and others acting in the execution of this act, and on the parishes for which such collectors shall have been appointed, as any assessment to be made by the commissioners under the acts under which they act as commissioners; and the commissioners shall return duplicates thereof to the receiver-general, and to the commissioners of taxes.

V. The commissioners for taxes are to cause forms of receipts and certificates to be provided and distributed amongst the clerks, and by them to the collectors, and such clerks and collectors are to be accountable for same.<sup>(a)</sup>

VI. Enacts that the surveyor of the district is to execute the duty of a clerk, where no clerk is appointed, and points out how the collector himself is to be charged if liable.<sup>(a)</sup>

VII. Provides that if a deputation to a servant is revoked in the midst of a year, the master or mistress may obtain a renewed certificate for a servant, free from any duty or fee. It also points out the mode of obtaining the renewal.<sup>(a)</sup>

"IX. Neither the assessment of the duty hereby imposed, nor the payment thereof, nor the certificate delivered, nor any thing herein contained or done in pursuance of this act, shall authorise or enable any person to act in the manner described in this schedule, at any time or times, or in any manner prohibited by any statute in force at and immediately before the passing of this act; nor unless such person shall be duly qualified so to do, under and by virtue of the said statutes; and all penalties and forfeitures, actions and suits, for offences against such statutes, shall and may be prosecuted and maintained for such offences, as if this act had not been made."

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 49, s. 1, enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, whenever any person shall have paid or shall pay the duty imposed by the said recited act of the fifty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty on persons in Great Britain, other than persons acting by virtue of a deputation or appointment, who shall use any dog, gun, net, or other engine for the purpose of taking or killing any game whatever, or any woodcock, snipe, quail, or landrail, or any conies, or shall take or kill by any means whatever, or shall assist in any manner in the taking or killing by any means whatever, any game, or any woodcock, snipe, quail, or landrail, or any cony, such person shall be exempt from the duty imposed by the said recited act passed in the fifty-sixth year of the reign of his said late Majesty on certificates to authorise persons not being gamekeepers to kill game in Ireland, for and during the period in respect whereof such duty shall have been paid in Great Britain, and from all the penalties contained or imposed in the said recited act of the fifty-sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty, or in and by any other act or acts for securing any of the said duties so payable in Ireland as aforesaid; and that every person who shall have paid any of the duties imposed by the said recited act of the fifty-sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty on certificates to authorise persons not being gamekeepers to kill game in Ireland, shall be exempt from the duties imposed by the said recited act of the fifty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty, on persons in Great Britain who shall use any dog, gun, net, or other engine for the purpose of taking or killing any game whatever, or any woodcock, snipe, quail, or landrail, or any cony, and from all the penalties contained in or imposed by the said recited act of the fifty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty, or in or by any other act or acts for securing any of the said duties payable in Great Britain as aforesaid, provided such person shall first pay to the said commissioners of stamps in Great Britain the difference between the duty already paid by him in Ireland, and the duty which would have been payable in respect of such person for any of the purposes aforesaid in Great Britain."

Sect. 2. "That in every case in which any such difference of duty shall be offered to be paid to the commissioners of stamps in Ireland as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of stamps, or their proper officers, and they are hereby authorised and required to receive the amount of such difference of duty, upon the production to the said commissioners, or their proper officers, of the certificate upon which the original duty shall have been paid, and to stamp such certificate with a mark or impression denoting the payment of the additional duty payable thereon in pursuance of this act."

Sect. 3. "That neither the payment of the difference of duty as aforesaid, nor the stamping of the certificate, nor any thing contained or done in pursuance of this act, shall be construed to authorise or enable any person to kill game, or use any dog, gun, net, or other engine, for any of the purposes mentioned in this act, at any time or times, or in any manner prohibited by any law in force at or immediately before the passing of this act, nor unless such person shall be duly qualified so to do under and by virtue of the laws in being; and all penalties and forfeitures, actions and suits, shall and may be prosecuted and maintained for such offences as if this act had not been made."

Anne, c. 14, s. 4.

There are various statutes noticed, ante, 880, 881, inflicting penalties on unqualified persons for killing game, &c. and see also the 4 & 5 Will. III. c. 23, s. 3.(a) The only statute, however, now called into use in this respect

(a) By stat. 4 & 5 W. III. c. 23, s. 3, if any unqualified person shall have, is the statute 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, which we will now proceed to notice. It being a penal act it should be construed strictly. Per Best, J. Hayward v. Horner, 5 B. & A. 317.

5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4. "That if any person or persons, not qualified by the laws of this realm so to do, shall keep or use any greyhounds, setting dogs, hayes, lurchers, tunnels, or any other engines to kill and destroy the game, and shall be thereof convicted upon the oath of one or two credible witnesses, by the justice or justices of the peace where such offence is committed as aforesaid, the person or persons so convicted shall forfeit the sum of 5*l.*; one half to be paid to the informer, and the other half to the poor of the parish where the same was committed; the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice or justices, before whom such person or persons shall be convicted, as aforesaid; and for want of such distress, the offender or offenders shall be sent to the house of correction for the space of three months for the first offence, and for every such other offence four months."

The section concludes with provisions as to seizing the game in offender's possession, and imposes a penalty on gamekeepers selling game. See post, 943 to 947, as to seizing game, and post, 913 to 920, as to selling game.

We will consider the provisions of this act with reference as to, 1st, Who are subject to the Penalty;—2d, The Amount of the Penalty;—and 3d, The Means of enforcing the Payment of it.

(1.) WHO ARE SUBJECT TO THE PENALTY.

If any person—A minor may be convicted for all offences under the game laws: he is answerable for all crimes, offences and trespasses, when he is of sufficient age to distinguish moral right from wrong. But he may be qualified either by estate, or by being the heir apparent of an esquire, or of some person of higher rank. Christ. G. L. 191.

keep, or use any bows, greyhounds, setting dogs, ferrets, coney dogs, hayes, lurchers, nets, tunnels, lowbels, hare pipes, snares, or any other instruments for destruction of fish, fowl, or other game, and shall not give a good account before a justice, to the satisfaction of such justice, how he came by the same, or else shall not in some convenient time (to be set by such justice) produce the party of whom he bought the same, or some other credible person to depose upon oath to such sale thereof, he shall forfeit for every offence not under 5*s.* nor above 20*s.* half to the informer, and half to the poor, to be levied by distress, rendering the overplus, if any be; for want of distress, to be committed to the house of correction not more than one month nor less than ten days, there to be whipped and kept to hard labour. And if any person produced or charged with the said offence shall not before the justice give such evidence of his innocence as aforesaid, he shall be convicted thereof in the same manner as the person first charged therewith, and so from person to person till the first offender be discovered.

Sect. 4. "That all lords of manors or other royalties, or any person or persons authorised by them as gamekeepers, shall and may, within their respective manors or royalties, oppose and resist such offender in the night-time, in the same manner, and be equally indemnified for so doing, as if such fact had been committed within any ancient chase, park, or warren inclosed whatsoever."

Sect. 7. "That no certiorari shall be allowed to remove any conviction made, or any proceeding of, for or concerning any matter or thing in this act, unless the party or parties, against whom such conviction shall be made, shall before the awardance of such certiorari become bound to the person or persons prosecuting, the sum of fifty pounds, with such sufficient sureties, as the justice or justices of the peace, before whom such offender was convicted, shall think fit, with condition to pay unto the said prosecutors (within one month after such condition confirmed, procedendo granted,) their full costs and charges, to be ascertained upon their oaths; and that in default thereof, it shall be lawful for the said justice and justices, and others, to proceed to the due execution of such conviction, in such manner as if no certiorari had been awarded."

Several persons.

So a married woman may be convicted, if she uses a gun or engines to destroy game; or if she uses a greyhound, setting dog, or lurcher, not in company with her husband. Christ. G. L. 191. She may be qualified by lands in her own right; but her husband's qualification will not qualify her, though her's will give a qualification to her husband. Id.

Or persons—In the case of Peshall v. Layton, 2 T. R. 712, Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, that where several unqualified persons offended by going out together and killing a hare, only one penalty can be recovered, though the prosecutor has his election which he will sue. So in the case of R. v. Blew-dale and another, 4 T. R. 809, which was a conviction on stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, sect. 4, for using a greyhound to destroy game without being qualified, for which the defendants were convicted in 5*l.* each, the court, without hearing any argument, said, the conviction could not be supported, for that it was only one offence, and that the magistrate should only have convicted them in one penalty: and they said that this point had been several times decided, in Hardyman v. Whitacre (a) and in other cases. Conviction quashed. But if they were each using a gun, or each setting a snare, or each had a snare in his pocket, they would each be subject to a penalty; because each is guilty of a distinct, separate, substantive act. Christ. G. L. 161. And by 9 Anne, c. 25, post, 914, unqualified persons are subject to separate penalties of 5*l.* for every head of game unlawfully in their possession.

or not.

Not Qualified by the Laws of this Realm so to do—We have already seen ante, 879 to 890, what persons are qualified to sport, &c.

Keeping or using dogs, &c.

Shall keep or use any Greyhounds, Setting Dogs, Hays, Lurchers, Tunnels or any other engine, to kill and destroy the Game—As to what shall amount to a keeping or using a greyhound, &c. to kill and destroy the game, within these words, is always a question of fact to be collected from the whole circumstances accompanying each particular case.

What a keeping.

The mere fact of keeping a sporting dog of the description in the statute will not subject an unqualified person to the penalty, if he can show he did not keep it for the purpose of killing and destroying game. Therefore in a late case, where it appeared from defendant's evidence that at the time the alleged offence was charged to have been committed that the dog (a setter) was tied up and never went out into the field with its master, the defendant was not liable within the act. Hayward v. Horner, 5 B. & Ald. 517. Nor would the mere fact of his keeping of hare pipes, or other instruments peculiarly appropriated and fitted for the destruction of game, make him liable, if he could show that he did not keep them to kill and destroy game. R. v. Gardiner, Andr. 255; 2 Stra. 1098; 14 Vin. Ab. 3. But the fact of such a keeping would in either case afford prima facie evidence that the dog or instrument was to kill and destroy game, and, if not rebutted by evidence to the contrary, would be sufficient to subject defendant to the penalty. See the above cases, and the cases in the note, infra (b).

(a) Bull. N. P. 189. This case of Hardyman v. Whitacre is more fully reported in a note to Barnard v. Gostling, 2 East, 573.

(b) R. v. Filer, 1 Stra. 496. Conviction for keeping a lurcher to destroy game, not being qualified. Exception was taken that it was not shown that he used the dog to destroy game; and it may be he only kept it for a gentleman who was qualified, it being common to put out dogs in that manner. But by the court, the statute is in the disjunctive, keep or use; so that the bare keeping a lurcher is an offence; and so it was determined in the case of R. v. King, 1 Sess. Cas. 88, which was a conviction for keeping a gun. And it was not doubted by the court, whether the keeping was not enough to be shown, but the only question they made was, whether a gun was such an engine as is within that statute? and in that case a difference was taken, as to keeping a dog, which could only be to destroy the game, and keeping a gun, which a man might do for the defence of his house. And the conviction was confirmed.

R. v. Hartley, Cald. 175. This was a conviction on 5 Anne, c. 14, for keeping

The mere fact of keeping a gun or other instrument not peculiarly appropriated and fitted for the destruction of game, is not even prima facie evidence sufficient to subject an unqualified person to the penalty, and he need not, as in the preceding instances, prove that he did not keep it for the purpose of killing and destroying of game. It must be proved against him that he kept it for that purpose, as by proving he used it for that purpose. R. v. Thompson, 2 T.R. 18; R. v. Gardner, Andr. 255; 2 Stra. 1098; 14 Vin. Ab. 3. (a)

UNQUALIFIED

and using a greyhound to kill and destroy the game. On a rule to show cause why this conviction should not be quashed, it was objected, 1st, that it was not sufficiently stated that there had been an using of the greyhound (that is) how and in what manner, and for what purpose. 2d, That it was not expressly and positively averred that he had kept and used a greyhound at all; being only set forth that he kept and used a dog called a greyhound, but that it might be called so, and yet be another kind of dog; that it might be an Italian greyhound, or might be kept for the protection of a house, or other purposes than to kill or destroy the game. By Lord Mansfield, C.J.—“Convictions must certainly be precise, that the court may see whether the offence committed falls within the jurisdiction of the magistrate; and must be quashed if not so. In this act there are two offences described, a keeping and using; and the legislature mean that there may be a keeping to destroy, &c., which is not of necessity to be proved by an using to that purpose; if it were so, it would be tautologous, for such evidence would be a proving of the other offence: the keeping therefore of a dog prohibited being an offence under the act, it is necessary prima facie evidence of a keeping for the purpose prohibited, and it is incumbent upon the defendant to show that it is kept for another purpose, as that in the present case it is a house dog, a favourite dog, or a particular species of greyhound. The description cannot be more precise unless some particular instance of using is shown, which if keeping of itself constitutes an offence, cannot be necessary. As to the other objection, that the averment is defective in stating only that this was a dog called a greyhound, I think it positive enough: it must mean the dog of that species generally known in this country.” The other judges concurred. The defendant discharged, and conviction affirmed. Read v. Phelps, 15 East, 271. Upon the notion to set aside a nonsuit in an action upon stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, for keeping and using a setting dog to kill or destroy game, which nonsuit was granted, because there was no evidence that the dog had been used for killing game, it was said that this evidence was not necessary if from other circumstances the jury might infer that the dog was kept for that purpose, the words in the statute being “keep or use:” but the court, without argument, refused the rule.

Briarly v. Althorpe, 5 B. & Ald. 325, S.C. Trover for a pointer dog, seized by the defendant, lord of the manor and a justice of the peace, as being in the custody of an unqualified person. Cockell, Serjt., for the plaintiff, insisted that the defendant had not, either as lord of the manor or as a justice of the peace, a right to seize the dog; first, as not being a setting dog, nor included within the act 5 & 6 Anne, c. 14; secondly, as not being kept for the purpose of killing game, but as a house dog, and for defence, plaintiff having used the dog to kill game before he sold his estate, which qualified him, but never since, having kept him expressly for the purpose of a house dog. Buller, J.—“The first question is, whether a pointer is a setting dog within the act? I am of opinion a pointer is within the act of parliament. It is a well known rule, in expounding acts of parliament, to consider all the acts in pari materia. Stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, mentions ‘other dogs.’ A setting dog, I think, means any dog who stops at his game. But it is essential that it must be kept or used to kill game. If not, the word greyhound would extend to an Italian greyhound, kept by a lady for her amusement. So ‘hays.’ There is no difference that I know between hays and a cabbage-net; but keeping a cabbage-net or hays to put over cabbages is not unlawful. It must be kept or used to kill game, to entitle the lord to seize. If you (the jury) think the dog was used to kill game in September or October, 1790, being since the plaintiff sold his property, there must be a verdict for the defendant; if not, then the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict.” Verdict for plaintiff, damages 10*l.*

KILL GAME.

What an using.

With respect to what is using of a dog, or gun or other engine, to kill game; in the case of R. v. King, Sess. Cas. 88, Parker, C. J., said, that walking about with intent to kill game is evidence of using the instrument for that purpose.

It is also sufficient to prove that the defendant was beating about for game, and pointed his gun, though he did not fire at any game. Hebden v. Hewley, 1 Chit. Rep. 607. This was an action of debt on 5 Anne, c. 14, against an unqualified person, to recover penalties for using a gun to kill and destroy game. At the trial before Holroyd, J., at Huntingdon Sum. Ass. 1819, it appeared in evidence that the defendant was the gamekeeper of a manor adjoining to that in which the offence was alleged to have been committed. The defendant had gone into the latter manor with a gun and dog, and appeared to be beating about for game. The dog had snapped at a hare, and there was a count in the declaration for destroying that hare, the defendant being charged with having used the dog for that purpose. A covey of birds was put up, and the defendant pointed his gun at them, but he did not fire. Under these circumstances the jury found for the plaintiff. On motion for a rule nisi to set aside the verdict, and enter a nonsuit, it was contended that the evidence in the cause did not satisfy the averment in the declaration, that the defendant "had used a gun to kill and destroy game," because, for any thing that appeared, the circumstance of the defendant having pointed his gun was no more than if he had pointed a stick at the game. Abbott, C. J.—"As this question was left to the jury, I do not see how we can disturb the verdict, and certainly there was evidence sufficient to go to them, upon the question whether the defendant had used the gun to kill and destroy game. The generality of that allegation must be coupled with the circumstroying the game. And it was urged that this is no sufficient charge within this act, or any other of the laws relating to the game; for it is not said that the defendant used the gun for the destruction of game; and a gun is not an instrument so far appropriated to killing game, as that it is criminal for a person to have one in his custody only: and it would have been altogether as well if it had been said that the defendant had in his custody a *can*e for the destruction of the game, which may possibly be used for that purpose. The only offences intended to be prevented by the act are, the keeping of engines appropriated to, and which can only be used in, the destroying of game. A gun is an engine, not for the killing of game, but for the defence of a man's house. And the whole court were clearly of opinion that this conviction was not good. For (as they argued) if the statute is to be construed so largely as to extend to the bare having of any instrument that may possibly be used in destroying game, it will be attended with very great inconvenience, there being scarcely any, though ever so useful, but what may be applied to that purpose. And though a gun may be used in destroying game, and when it is so, doth then fall within the words of the act; yet as it is an instrument proper and frequently necessary to be kept and used for other purposes, as the killing of noxious vermin and the like, it is not the having a gun, without applying it in the destruction of game, that is prohibited by the act: but otherwise it is of lurchers, harepipes and such like, which are peculiarly fitted or disposed for killing game. The bare keeping of these for the purpose of killing game is sufficient to convict an offender; and it will be incumbent upon the defendant himself to prove that he kept them for other purposes. And the conviction therefore was quashed. After which, Strange, S. G., said, that in the case of R. v. King, E. 3 G., Lord Macclesfield said, that he was in the House of Commons when this act was made, and he himself objected to the inserting of the word gun therein, because it might be attended with great inconvenience.

In Wingfield v. Stratford, Say. 15; 1 Wils. 315; Lee, C. J., takes this distinction; "As greyhounds, setting dogs, &c. are expressly mentioned in this statute, it is not necessary to allege that any of these have been used for killing or destroying game, and the rather as they can scarcely be kept for any other purpose than to kill and destroy game. But as guns are not expressly mentioned, and as a gun may be kept for the defence of a man's house, and for other lawful purposes, it is necessary to allege, in order to its being comprehended within the meaning of the words 'any other engines to kill the game,' that the gun had been used for killing the game."

stances proved, and no doubt the learned judge left the case entirely for the consideration of the jury; and as I think he was right in so doing, I am of opinion that we ought to leave the verdict where it is." Bayley, J.—"There was evidence sufficient to go to the jury, whether in fact the defendant was not beating about for game for the purpose of driving it into his own manor, and thereby leaving it within his reach. There are cases which have decided that it is not necessary to prove that the man actually shot the game, but if he is beating about for game, so as to show an intention on his part to shoot it if he has the opportunity, that is a sufficient using of the gun to support an action upon the statute of Anne. In the case of R. v. King, (ante, 900), Parker, C. J., held, that walking about with intent to kill game, is evidence of using the instrument for that purpose. In this case there was evidence sufficient to show that the defendant was beating about in the field where he was seen, and using his gun for that purpose." Rule refused.

UNQUALIFIED

KILL GAME.

And in R. v. Davies, 6 T. R. 177, where the evidence stated in the conviction was, that the witness was satisfied that the defendant did keep and use a gun to kill and destroy the game, from the circumstance of his hearing a gun go off, and observing that it was fired by the defendant, who was then walking about a piece of ground with that apparent intent, the court affirmed the conviction. Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "It is sufficient in convictions, if there were such evidence before the magistrate as in an action would be sufficient to be left to a jury: here we cannot say that there was no evidence of the fact for the consideration of the magistrate."

In all these cases the justice of the peace himself must be satisfied of the intent, from the circumstances stated by the witnesses. He must be satisfied that the party was in pursuit of game, and not of sparrows, larks or fieldfares. Even if he were in pursuit of woodcocks, snipes, or rabbits, and not of hares, pheasants, partridges, or grouse, the justice would have no authority to convict under this statute. Christ. G. L. 157, 158.

A qualified person (who has a certificate) is empowered to take as many of his servants or other unqualified persons to attend him, as he thinks necessary, and for the purpose of assisting him in raising the game, without subjecting such servants or unqualified persons either to the penalty of the statute for sporting without a certificate (see stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 141, ante, 891,) or of 5*l.* under the stat. 5 Anne. Thus in R. v. Taylor, 15 East, 460, it was held that a servant who went out coursing with his master, who was qualified, could not be convicted for using dogs to kill and destroy game. And in Lewis v. Taylor, 16 East, 49, it was held that an unqualified person being out coursing with the qualified owner of greyhounds, although not his servant, and although he took an active part in the sport, was not liable to the penalties imposed by the 5 Anne, c. 14: and Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "There is no evidence against this defendant upon the charge of using a greyhound for killing the game. This is not a solitary amusement, and there is nothing to prevent a qualified person from taking others with him to aid him in the pursuit of the game; and he is the person using the dogs: the others have no other use of them than as his servants, and contemplating with him the pleasure of the chase. If indeed an unqualified man used his own greyhound for the purpose of sporting, though in the same company with a qualified person, the case would admit of a different consideration: but there can be no ground for recovering the penalty against this defendant, who went out with the dogs of another who was qualified, and which other was using them himself: the defendant's picking up the hare after it was killed is no using of the dogs to kill the game." Bayley, J., also observed that the words of the statute of Anne are keep or use any greyhounds, &c.; that this defendant neither kept the dog, nor was it under his controul at the time it was used to kill the hare.

How far unqualified person may sport for a qualified one.

And where an unqualified person, by the orders and in the presence of his master, a qualified person, set on his master's grounds a trap for hares, &c. and afterwards finding a hare therein, carried it according to order to his master, who was not present when the hare was found: it was held that the defendant was not liable to the penalties for using snares to destroy game on the 5 Ann. c. 14, or for exposing game to sale on the 9 Ann. c. 25, post, 914.

Walker v. Mills, 2 Brod. & Bing. 1; 4 Moore, 343, S.C. Debt, on 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, and 9 Ann. c. 25, s. 2, to recover penalties for using a snare to destroy game (the defendant not being qualified), and for exposing a hare to sale. Plea, nil debet. The following facts were the facts as proved before Garrow, B. at the last Sussex assizes. The defendant, a cottager in the employ of a qualified person, was on Sunday morning found with a hare in his possession, which he had just taken out of a trap placed on his master's property. The master stated, that the trap was placed there on the Thursday preceding by his direction, and in his presence, for the purpose of catching hares and rabbits which had annoyed him; that the defendant had received orders from him to bring to his (the master's) residence, whatever might be caught in the trap, and that the defendant had, accordingly, brought the hare in question to him on the Sunday morning on which it was seen in the defendant's possession. The learned judge thought the point new, but having directed the jury that this resembled the case of a qualified person attended by a person unqualified, assisting him in the operations of sporting; that the defendant was acting as servant to his master, and under his directions; and that, therefore, the possession of the hare by the servant must be taken to be the possession of the master; the jury found a verdict for the defendant.

D'Oyley, Serjeant, moved to set aside the verdict and have a new trial, on the ground that the right of a person qualified to kill game did not extend to the protection of persons unqualified, unless the qualified person were actually present; and that a qualified person had no right to send out one unqualified to kill game for him: that the master, in this case, though present at the setting of the trap, was absent when the hare was caught and found in the defendant's possession, and that such possession constituted an exposure to sale, under the 9 Ann. c. 25, s. 2. He cited Molton v. Cheesley (1 Exp. 123.) Dallas, C. J.—“Cases of this sort frequently run into very nice distinctions, and I would not hastily lay down a general rule which might be open to objection. If I had any doubt I would look into the cases that have been referred to; but I have none: nor have I any hesitation in saying that this action is most improperly brought. For what are the circumstances of this case? The defendant was the servant of a qualified man, who, finding his land annoyed by hares and rabbits, ordered this trap to be set, with a view to their destruction. I take it to be perfectly clear, that a qualified person has a right to order a trap to be set for such a purpose, even in his absence; but, in this case, the qualified person was present, and superintended the setting of the trap. In this trap the hare was afterwards caught, and the catching was a catching by the master on his own land. Then as to the possession, the master ordered, that whatever was caught should be brought to him: the hare was brought the moment it was taken, and the possession of the servant in the act of taking the hare to his master, was under the master's direction, and the same as the possession of the master.”

Burrough, J.—“Actions of this kind do a great deal of mischief; there was no pretence for charging this defendant with an illegal taking or possession.”

Richardson, J.—“The trap being set by the master's order, and in his presence, the hare was in effect caught by him. As to the possession, it was proved that he ordered his servant to bring to him whatever might be taken: so that the case falls within the principle of Warneford v. Kendall, 10 East, 19;” post, 916. He also referred to Spurrier v. Vale, 10 East, 413.

But in ex parte Sylvester, 9 B. & Cres. 61, it was held an unqualified person going out with a qualified person as his servant, and shooting game for him, was liable to the penalty imposed by the 5 Ann. c. 14, and for keeping and using a gun to kill game. In that case it appeared the defendant, on the occasion in question, shot with the gun of a qualified person in his presence, and by his order and direction, and for his use, at game, the qualified person himself not having on the same day shot at game or used a gun for that purpose. The above cases of Walker v. Mills, 2 B. & B. 1; Re v. Taylor, 15 East, 460, and Lewis v. Taylor, 16 East, 49, were urged in de-defendant's favour. Sed per Bayley, J. "The principle upon which those two latter cases proceeded was, that the using the greyhounds was the act of the owner and master, and not of those who accompanied him. So also the principle of Walker v. Mills was, that the trap being set by the master's order, and in his presence, must be taken to have been set by him. But we cannot say that of using the gun, neither his hand nor his skill was applied to it. If we were to hold that the firing of the gun was the act of the master, he might in the same manner use twenty guns at the same time. I think we must consider the gun to have been used by the person who actually fired it, and if so, the cases cited are inapplicable, and there can be no doubt that Sylvester was properly convicted." Rule for quashing conviction discharged.

UNQUALIFIED
KILL GAME.

If an unqualified person goes out of his own accord for the purpose of sporting, and meeting with a qualified man, join, without invitation, in the chase, he will be as much liable to the penalty as if he had proceeded alone. Chit. G. L. 73.

A person being unqualified, relying for his defence on being in company with a qualified man, under any circumstances, must give strict evidence, upon the trial of an action or information, of the qualification of the person under whom he claims protection; and unless this is satisfactorily made out, a verdict will be given against him. Clarke v. Broughton, 3 Campb. 328.

Any Greyhounds, Setting Dogs, Hays, Lurchers, Tunnels, or other Engine—In order to subject an unqualified person to a penalty under this act of 5 Ann. for keeping or using a dog, such dog must come within one of these descriptions. Therefore in the case of Reason v. Lisle, Com. 576, in an action for the penalty under this statute, judgment was arrested, because it was stated in the declaration that the defendant did keep and use a dog to kill and destroy the game, without specifying what species of dog; for it might be a mastiff or a lap-dog, and the statute only mentions greyhounds, setting dogs, and lurchers.

What dogs or engines within the act.

So in Hooker v. Wilks, 2 Str. 1126, an action was brought on stat. 8 Geo. I. c. 19, for using a hound to destroy game, and after a verdict for the plaintiff, the judgment was arrested; for the stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, has not the word hound, and the words other engine come after nets, and are applicable only to inanimate things; and this being a penal law, cannot be extended.

So in Grant v. Hulton, 1 B. & A. 134, it was held a gamekeeper is not empowered by stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. to seize a hound belonging to an unqualified person.

Under the term "setting dogs" any dog that stops at his game, as a setter pointer, is included. Briarly v. Althorpe, 5 B. & A. 326, n. ante, 899, n.

To Kill or Destroy—We have already seen that the dog or engine must be kept or used by the unqualified person for the purpose of killing or destroying game in order to subject him to a penalty under this act, ante, 898 to 901.

Dog or engine must be kept or used to kill and destroy game.

It is to be noticed that the statute does not inflict any penalty upon an unqualified person for killing or destroying the game, but rather makes the means by which that is effected the offence, and a conviction or declaration merely for killing game would not be sufficient. R. v. Morgan, 2 Chit. Rep. 3. The defendant was convicted on stat. 5 Ann. c. 14., under a conviction which stated the information to have been, that the defendant "did kill and destroy the game;" and the evidence to have been, that the defendant "did, with certain dogs, called hounds and greyhounds, kill and destroy a hare." Plomer moved to quash the conviction, on the ground that the offence, as stated in the conviction, was no offence against the 5 Ann. c. 14. The evidence of itself certainly brought the offence within the meaning of the statute; but the evidence cannot extend the offence further than that stated in the information. The fact charged in the information is, that the defendant killed a hare and destroyed the game." Now the words of 5 Ann. c. 14, are prohibitory against keeping or using a gun, &c. to kill, and not against killing. The defendant, for all that appears in the information, might have accidentally killed the hare. Killing in the night, or in the snow, is COL. II.

an offence against the statute; but then the offence must be so charged. The conviction was admitted to be bad by the other side, and the court ordered the same to be quashed. Conviction quashed. And see Reg. v. Matthews, 10 Mod. 26.

The 9 Ann. c. 25, s. 2, however, as we shall hereafter see, makes it an offence for any person to have possession of game who is not either himself qualified or entitled to it under a person who is.

within the act.

The Game—We have already seen what in general is deemed game, ante, 874. This act of 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, however, includes only hares, pheasants, partridges, moor, heath game, or grouse. It does not include woodcocks or rabbits. Per Ashhurst, J. in R. v. Thomson, 2 T. R. 18; R. v. Yates, 1 Ld. Raym. 151. Woodcocks and rabbits, snipes, quails, and landrails, are comprehended under the 52 Geo. III. s. 93, relating to taking out game certificates, ante, 891.

(2.) The Amount of the Penalty.

Amount of penalty, and how many be incurred.

Shall forfeit the sum of 5l.—It has been already shown that if several be jointly guilty of the same offence, they are liable under this statute to only one penalty, ante, 898; but if the acts be several and distinct, as if each use a gun or set a snare, each is subject to a distinct penalty. See 2 East, 573: Chit. G. L. 85.

If an unqualified person kill several hares, partridges, &c.; (Reg. v. Matthews, 10 Mod. 26; Marriott v. Shaw, Com. 274; Crepps v. Darden, Corp. 646;) or use a dog and also a gun; (R. v. Lovett, 4 T. R. 152; R. v. Blancy, Andr. 240;) upon the same day, he is only liable to one penalty under this statute.

On a conviction, exception was taken that the person was charged with as many 5l. as he had killed hares in the same day. And the court was of opinion that the offence for which the statute gave the forfeiture, was the keeping of dogs and engines, and not killing the hares. If a man not qualified go hunting, and kill never so many hares on the same day, he would forfeit but one 5l., for it is but one offence; but if a man keep dogs, and go hunting several days, and kill hares, if it were thus laid, that he such a day kept dogs and killed, and then again such a day, &c. by laying it thus severally, the offence is severed, and he shall forfeit 5l. for each offence. Q. v. Matthews, 10 Mod. 26.

In a subsequent case (R. v. Lovett, 7 T. R. 152) Lord Kenyon, C. J. said, "If a person go in pursuit of game with a dog and gun on the same day, he can only be convicted in one penalty."

From a nisi prius report (Molton v. Cheesely, 1 Esp. 123)(a) it might be supposed to have been decided that only one penalty would be incurred under the same act of parliament, but this has been considered as a mistake, and that if two distinct offences be committed against the same act, the defendant will be liable to several penalties.

As this defect in the statute of 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, making no distinction as to the quantity of game destroyed, tended to encourage offenders in their violation of the law, a provision was introduced by stat. 9 Ann. c. 25, (post, 914,) subjecting a party to a penalty of 5l. for every head of game he may have in his possession; and thus the provisions of the legislature are become complete. Chit. G. L. 86, 87.

A defendant may be convicted of several penalties in the same conviction. R. v. Swallow, 8 T. R. 284.

(3.) The Means of enforcing the Penalty.

Means of enforcing
penalty.

The means of enforcing the penalty may be by Action—by Information in the Superior Courts—or by an Information and Conviction before Magistrates.

(1.) By action.

(1.) By ACTION—This penalty, imposed by the 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, as will be seen by the act, ante, 897, like many other penalties, was recoverable only before a magistrate, in which case a moiety of the penalty goes to the informer, and the other to the poor of the parish, and no costs are recoverable, unless in case of an appeal and affirmance of the conviction, which must take place within three months after the offence was committed. But this division of the penalty and restriction as to costs and time of proceeding, together with the minute accuracy required in the form of the conviction, having been found to deter persons from prosecuting offenders, it was afterwards enacted by the 8 Geo. I. c. 19, s. 1, That the informer might proceed by action of debt on the case, bill, plaint, or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record, in which, if he recovers, he shall likewise have double costs, and the whole of the penalty to his own use, and may sue for the same within six months after the offence was committed. 2 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 5, 6. But it is provided, that no offender shall be prosecuted by both of these methods, but only by one, and that in case of any second prosecution, the person so doubly prosecuted may plead in his defence the pendency of the former prosecution or the conviction or judgment had thereon. 8 Geo. I. c. 19, s. 2. And from these advantages, as well as from the proceedings not requiring so much precision as a conviction, it is more frequent, particularly in cases where difficulties may arise, to proceed by action or information in the King's Bench, than before a magistrate, which latter course, however, is more expeditious and less expensive. Chit. G. L. 171, 172.

The 8 Geo. I. c. 19, s. 2, enacts, "that the action shall be brought before the end of the next term after the offence was committed." But the 2 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 6, enacts, "that it shall be brought within six months after the matter done," which means lunar, and not calendar months; Lacon v. Hooper, 1 Esp. Rep. 246; and since the last act it is sufficient to commence the action within six months, though after the end of the second term, nor is it necessary to aver in the declaration, though it must be proved at the trial, that the action was commenced within the time, Lee v. Clark, 2 East, 833, and the record in the action will not of itself afford any inference that the suit was not commenced in due time. Hardyman v. Whitacre, 2 East, 573. See R. v. Bellamy, 1 B. & Cres. 500; 2 D. & R. 727, S.C.; post, 907.

For the rest of the law relative to the pleadings, verdict and costs in an action for the penalty, the reader is referred to Chit. G. L. 173 to 184.

(2.) BY INFORMATION IN THE SUPERIOR COURTS]—The penalty is recoverable not only by information and conviction before magistrates, but also by information in any of the superior courts at Westminster. See the 8 Geo. I. c. 19, s. 1, and 2 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 4, which admit of this mode of proceeding for all penalties incurred under those and prior statutes. See post, Information, Vol. III. and Chit. G. L. 184, &c.

(2.) By information in superior courts.

(3.) BY INFORMATION AND CONVICTION BEFORE A MAGISTRATE]—The words of the 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, allowing this mode of proceeding, are, "That if any person or persons, not qualified by the laws of this realm so to do, shall keep or use any greyhounds, setting dogs, hayes, lurchers, tunnels or any other engines to kill and destroy the game, and shall be thereof convicted upon the oath of one or two credible witnesses, by the justice or justices of the peace where such offence is committed as aforesaid, the person or persons so convicted shall forfeit the sum of five pounds; one half to be paid to the informer, and the other half to the poor of the parish where the same was committed; the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice or justices, before whom such person or persons shall be convicted as aforesaid; and for want of such distress, the offender or offenders shall be sent to the house of correction for the space of three months for the first offence, and for every such other offence four months."

(3.) By information and conviction before a magistrate.

5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4.

The second section, after imposing a penalty upon higglers, &c. for buying or selling game, and directing the mode of proceeding, enacts, "provided that such conviction be made within three months after such offence committed, and that no certiorari shall be allowed to remove any conviction made, or other proceedings of or concerning any matter or thing in this act, into any of the courts at Westminster, upon any pretence whatsoever, unless the party or parties against whom such conviction shall be made; shall, before the allowance of such certiorari, become bound to the person or persons prosecuting the same in the sum of 50*l.* with such sufficient securities, as the justice or justices of the peace, before whom such offender shall be convicted, shall think fit, with condition to pay unto the prosecutors, within fourteen days after such conviction or procedendo granted, their full costs and charges to be ascertained upon their oaths, and that, in default thereof, it shall be lawful for the said justice or justices, or others, to proceed for the due execution of such conviction, in such manner as if no such certiorari had been awarded."

thereon in general.

We have already minutely considered the law as to informations and convictions in general before magistrates, see title Conviction, Vol. I. All that remains to be here noticed are those points peculiarly applicable to an information and conviction under the 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4.

The information.

THE INFORMATION—There must be some information in order to convict the defendant. 1 Saund. 262, n. 1. A verbal information on this fourth section of the act, without oath, will suffice.

The informer must negative every one of the qualifications in the statute of Car. II. ante, 881. And if the information be in writing, it should also negative every one of such qualifications. Id.; R. v. Marriott, 1 Str. 63; R. v. Hill, 2 Ld. Raym. 1415; Chit. G. L. 193, 4.

The information need not state the informer proceeds as well for the poor of the parish as for himself, for the division of the penalty must follow the conviction. R. v. Lovett, 7 T. R. 152; Com. Dig. Action sur le Statut. See further, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 818 to 827.

The information and conviction must take place in the county wherein the offence was committed. The place wherein such offence took place should be described, in order to show it was within the magistrate's jurisdiction. R. v. Edwards, 1 East, 278; 14 East, 267; ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 820. Where part of a penalty is given to the poor of the parish, the offence must be laid in the proper parish, but if otherwise disposed of, the parish is only laid for a venue, and the plaintiff may prove the defendant guilty in any other parish within the county. Clark v. Taylor, 3 Esp. 218. But if the place was extra-parochial, then, as the informer would be entitled to the whole penalty, a mistake might not be material. R. v. Wyatt, 2 Ld. Raym. 1478.

In some places a man may stand in one parish (or county), and shoot into two or three; in such case the place where the offence was committed is where the party stood when he shot, and not where the object was which he shot at. R. v. Alsop, 1 Show. 339.

See further as to venue in general, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 820; Indictment, Vol. III. p. 335.

The summons.

THE SUMMONS—As to the necessity for the defendant's being summoned, and how far a conviction may be justified without it, see in general, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 827. The summons must be personally served to warrant a conviction in defendant's absence. R. v. Colamins, 8 D. & R. 344; R. v. Hall, 5 D. & R. 84.

Hearing of the case and evidence,
&c.

HEARING OF THE CASE AND EVIDENCE, &c.—The observations already made, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 828 to 834, will here apply.

As to what evidence is necessary to convict a party, see ante, 897 to 904.

As to what is sufficient evidence or not of a qualification, see ante, 881 to 890.

It is now settled, that in support of actions, and also of an information before a magistrate, on this act, it is not necessary for the informer to adduce evidence to negative the defendant's qualification. R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206, post, 920. It is advisable, however, for the informer to be prepared, as far as possible, with such negative evidence. Per Chambre, J. 3 B. & P. 307; Chit. G. L. 203. A return under the Income Act, by which the defendant stated that his estate was worth less than 100*l.* a-year, has been held good evidence. R. v. Clark, 8 T. R. 220.

If there be evidence tending to prove the offence, and the magistrate forms his conclusion upon it that the offence has been committed, the Court will not minutely weigh the propriety of such conclusion. R. v. Davis, 6 T. R. 177; ante, title Conviction, Vol. I. p. 834.

Upon the Oath of one or two credible Witnesses—Though the statute directs the conviction to be “upon the oath of one or two credible witnesses,” without adding, or by the confession of the offender; yet a conviction upon his confession before the justice has been held sufficient. R. v. Gage, 1 Stra. 546; 1 T. R. 320; 1 Saund. 262, n. 1. And what is still stronger, it has been held that a confession made to others, and not to the justice, if proved by such persons to his satisfaction, in the presence of the defendant, will be sufficient evidence to convict. Ibid. Where the defendant confesses the charge, it seems to be sufficient only to state in the conviction the information, the defendant’s appearance, the confession, and adjudication. But a confession will extend no farther than to the facts charged in the information; therefore, if the offence be not brought by the information within the act of parliament upon which the conviction is founded, the defendant’s confession will not make the conviction good. R. v. Little, 1 Burr. 605.

Credible Witness—R. v. Stone, 2 Ld. Raym. 1545. A conviction was quashed because the informer was the witness, divers convictions having been quashed for the same reason before. The same adjudged in the case of R. v. Blaney, T. 11 G. 2. Andr. 240. And in stat. 2 Geo. III. c. 19, it is recited that in prosecutions on the act of 8 Geo. III. c. 19, in the courts of Westminster, where a part of the penalty is given to the poor of the parish, the inhabitants of such parish had been disallowed to give evidence; and therefore in that case, to remedy the same, the act give the whole penalty to the prosecutor, in order to enable the inhabitants to give evidence.

A magistrate ought to take very correct minutes of what passes upon every conviction before him, and he ought carefully to preserve them. Christian’s G. L. 199. And see further, ante, Examination, Vol. II. p. 97.

For the rest of the law relative to the proceedings at the hearing of the case and otherwise before the conviction be drawn up, see ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 828 to 834.

THE CONVICTION—For the requisites of convictions in general, see ante, The conviction. Conviction, Vol. I. p. 835 to 846.

The conviction, as well as the information under the 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, Time of for using a gun, &c. must be made within three lunar months after the offence committed. R. v. Bellamy, 1 B. & Cress. 500; 2 D. & R. 727 (a), 5. C. R. v. Tolley, 3 East, 467.

(a) Per Abbott, C. J.—“I am of opinion that a conviction under the 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, must take place within three lunar months after the offence is committed. In this case it did not take place within that time, and therefore must be quashed. The language of the acts of parliament upon the subject of game is by no means free from obscurity. It is our duty, however, to give effect to the intention of the legislature, that can be ascertained: now I think that the intention is made manifest in this instance, by the different parts of the act in question, and also the subsequent stat. of 9 Ann. c. 25. The 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 2, enacts, ‘that if any higgler, &c. shall have in his possession any hare, pheasant, &c. or shall buy, sell, or offer to sell any hare, &c.; every such higgler, &c. shall, upon every such offence, be carried before a justice of the peace; and upon view, or upon the oath of one or more credible witnesses, shall be convicted of the same, and shall forfeit for every hare, pheasant, &c. 5*l.* provided that such conviction be made within three months after such offence committed.’ The conviction for offences described by that section must, there-

Negating qualifications.

The form prescribed by the late act of 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, should be followed, the statute of 5 Anne, c. 14, not prescribing any form.

Great accuracy is required in framing convictions under the game laws. R. v. Corden, 4 Burr. 2279; R. v. Whistler, 2 Ld. Raym. 842; R. v. Chandler, 1 Salk. 378; Chit. G. L. 207; and ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 835.

As to the venue, see ante, 906.

Great care must be observed in describing the offence, so that it may appear it was within the letter and spirit of the statute, and so that defendant may know what charge he has to answer.

A conviction stating the offence to be that the defendant "did kill a hare and destroy the game," would be bad, ante, 903.

There is no objection to saying that the defendant kept a dog called a lurcher for destroying the game, for it must be presumed that the right appellation is given to dogs used by the defendant, though it may be proper to state in more positive terms that the defendant kept a lurcher. R. v. Earnshaw, 15 East, 456; Cald. 175.

It is necessary to state and negative all the qualifications enumerated in the statute of 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, ante, 881. Thus in R. v. Jarvis, 1 Burr. 148, the conviction set forth that the defendant did unlawfully keep and use, and had in his custody and possession, one setting dog and setting net fore, take place within three months after the offence is committed. The third section only provides for discoverers. Then the fourth section enacts, 'that if any person not qualified so to do shall keep or use any greyhounds, &c. or other engines, to kill game, and shall be convicted thereof, upon the oath of one or two credible witnesses by the justices of the peace where such offence is committed, as aforsaid; the person so convicted shall forfeit the sum of 5*l.* one half to be paid to the informer, and the other half to the poor of the parish where the same was committed; the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice before whom such person shall be convicted as aforsaid.' The words 'as aforsaid' are twice used in the fourth section, and in both instances refer to 'convicted.' Now the only mode of conviction before pointed out in the statute, is that mentioned in the second section, and, therefore, by a general reference to that, the fourth section refers as well as to the time within which the conviction must take place, as to the other circumstances of it. Indeed no part of the description of the conviction is wanted in the fourth section, but that of the time within which it is to take place, for it expressly describes the justice before whom, and the witnesses upon whose testimony it is to take place. The fourth section then goes on to enact, 'that it may be lawful for any lord of a manor to empower his gamekeeper to kill game; but if the said gamekeeper shall, under colour or pretence of the said power and authority to kill or take the same for the use of such lord, sell and dispose thereof to any person whatsoever, and shall be thereof convicted before any one justice of the peace as aforsaid, upon such conviction, such gamekeeper shall be committed to the house of correction for the space of three months.' Then comes the 9 Ann. c. 25, which enacts, 'that lords of manors shall appoint but one gamekeeper, whose name is to be entered with the clerk of the peace; and in case any other gamekeeper whose name shall not be entered as aforsaid, who shall not be otherwise qualified by the laws to kill game, shall presume to kill any hare, &c. or sell or expose to sale any hare, &c.; the offender shall for every such offence incur such forfeiture, pains, and penalties as are inflicted by the recited act upon higgler, &c. for buying and selling game, to be recovered by such means, and in such manner and form, and within such time, and to such uses as are prescribed by the said act.' It is reasonable to suppose, that when the legislature, in the 9 Ann. c. 25, imposed upon gamekeepers not duly appointed for killing or selling game, the same penalties as the 5 Ann. c. 14, imposed upon higgler, they understood that the offences mentioned in the 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, were subject to the same limitation of time as those described in the second section. For it would be a singular anomaly if it were necessary that a higgler or a gamekeeper, whose certificate was not duly enrolled, should be convicted within three months after the offence committed; yet that an unqualified person using a gun to kill game, or a gamekeeper selling game without the consent of the lord of the manor by whom he is appointed, might be convicted at any time."

for the destruction of the game; and that he the said Jarvis was not then anywise qualified, empowered, licensed, or authorised, by or according to the laws of this realm to kill game. It was moved to quash this conviction. And by Lord Mansfield, C. J. "It is now settled by the uniform course of authorities, that the qualifications must be all negatively set out; otherwise the justices have no jurisdiction over the persons killing game, or keeping dogs or engines for the destruction of it." Denison, J. concurred, and said "it was a clear case, and that it was fully settled and established, that in these convictions the want of the particular qualifications mentioned in the 22 & 23 Car. II. ought to be negatively set out. If not, the justices have no jurisdiction to convict the defendant as an offender. And the evidence and adjudication ought both of them to be, that he had not the qualifications which are specified in that act, nor any of them." Foster, J. also concurred, and said "that on negative acts of parliament the point is fully settled and established, that the particular qualifications mentioned in the purview of them, must be negatively specified in convictions made upon them." And, by the court unanimously, the conviction was quashed. And see R. v. Hill, 2 Ld. Raym. 1415; 1 Stra. 66; R. v. Earnshaw, 10 East, 456; ante, 882. The case of R. v. Matthews, 10 Mod. 26, is overruled.

Negating quali-

These qualifications being negated by the evidence, would not cure the defect in an omission to negative them in describing the offence. R. v. Wheatman, Dougl. 346.

Nor would the inserting of the word "unlawfully" cure the defect. Hebden v. Bluff, 1 Chit. Rep. 607, n.

The mode of stating the evidence in general will be found, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 839, 840.

Stating the evidence.

The evidence should be set forth, as nearly as possible, in the very words used by the witness. See the general observations on this requisite, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 839, 840. This is expressly provided for in the general form of conviction given by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, ante, Conviction, Vol. I. p. 840. Before this act, a conviction framed according to a precedent inserted in prior editions of this work, and merely stating the effect of the evidence, viz. that the defendant "kept and used a gun to kill and destroy the game," was held sufficient, though the precedent was faulty. But as it was a precedent that had been so frequently adopted, it was considered expedient to allow a continuance of such adoption. R. v. Thompson, 2 T. R. 18. (a) A con-

The words of witness.

(a) R. v. Thompson, 2 T. R. 18. This was a conviction on 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, stating, according to the precedent, the information on 8th Dec. 1786, the appearance of the defendant on the 9th, after being summoned, and the plea of not guilty, and then proceeded as follows: "Nevertheless, on the said 9th day of Dec. in the year aforesaid, at, &c. one credible witness, to wit, R. Taylor of, &c. cometh before me the said justice, and before me the same justice upon his oath, &c. saith that the defendant, on the 7th day of Dec. aforesaid, in the year aforesaid, at, &c. (negating the qualifications of 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 3,) did keep and use a gun to kill and destroy the game; and thereupon the said defendant, &c. before me the same justice, by the oath of one credible witness aforesaid, according to the form of the statute aforesaid, is convicted, and for his offence aforesaid hath forfeited 5*l.* to be distributed, &c." It was objected, that did not appear upon the conviction of that the defendant had been convicted;

it only said, thereupon the defendant on, &c. before me the same justice, by the oath of one credible witness, according to the form of the statute, is convicted, and for his offence hath forfeited, &c., though this was only a conclusion of law, and not an adjudication of the justice. There was nothing to connect it with that which preceded it; such as that "he is convicted of the premises," or "in manner and form aforesaid." But the court were clearly of opinion that there was no ground for that objection; but desired it might be argued again on another objection, which they suggested to the counsel, whether the evidence was sufficiently set forth, so that the court could see by what act the defendant had incurred the penalty; for they observed, that the act of keeping a gun was in itself ambiguous, and it must be shown to be kept for the purpose of killing game, in order to bring the party keeping it within the act; it was not like keeping a greyhound or a snare, which could not be kept for any other purpose, and which viction now framed in that way would be incorrect, and at all events so far that a mandamus would be granted to compel the magistrates to alter it, by setting out the evidence on which it was founded as nearly as possible in the words used by the witness. R. v. Warnford, 5 D. & R. 489; Re Rix, 4 D. & R. 352, ante, Conbition, Vol. I. p. 841.

The evidence need not negative every particular qualification. R. v. Thomas Spencer Crowther, 1 T. R. 125. This was a conviction before a justice on 5 Anne, c. 14, for using a gun. After stating the information, which negatived specifically every one of the qualifications in 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, and which disclosed the fact of the defendant's having used a gun and pointers, and killed a partridge, it stated a summons and the appearance of the defendant; who "having heard the same, and the aforesaid deposition of the said E. Tye having been read over again to the said E. Tye, in the presence and hearing of the said T. S. Crowther, and the said E. Tye having again affirmed his said deposition to be true, in the presence and hearing of the said T. S. Crowther, he the said T. S. Crowther is asked by me, the said justice, if he can say anything for himself, why he, the said T. S. Crowther, should not be convicted of the premises above charged upon him in the form aforesaid: Whereupon, &c." It was moved to quash the conviction on two grounds; 1st, That the evidence on which it was founded was not given in the presence of the defendant, for on his appearing before the justice the wit-was expressly prohibited by the act. After argument, Per Ashurst, J.—If this were a new case, I should most undoubtedly be of opinion that this conviction could not be supported, because I think the evidence should be set forth particularly, that we may judge whether the justice has convicted upon proper evidence. The fact of keeping or using the gun for the purpose of destroying game should appear; but it is only stated here that the defendant kept and used, &c., which is the result of his evidence. Then whether he kept it for the purpose of killing game is likewise a question of law; for an ignorant witness in the country might fancy that a woodcock or rabbit was game. So that it seems to me, that permitting this general evidence to be stated is allowing the witness to give his sentiments on the law as well as on the facts. But as the precedents are usually in this form, and as the conviction in R. v. Hartley (Cald. 95) was similar to the present, it is better to support this conviction than, by quashing it, to overturn all former precedents. Buller, J.—If this precedent had never been adopted, I should have been of opinion that the evidence should have been fully set forth; but after so many convictions have been made in the same form, it would be dangerous to quash the present. The distinction taken in R. v. Filer is good law; it is not an offence to keep or use a gun, unless it be kept or used for the purpose of killing game. But it is here stated by the evidence, "that the defendant did keep and use a gun to kill and destroy the game." As to the other question respecting game, I cannot agree that the witness, in swearing that the defendant used a gun to destroy game, would be swearing to a question of law; because it is settled by act of parliament, and every man is bound to know what is game. If he swear that to be game which is not so in law, he would be guilty of perjury. Game must be understood in its legal sense. Grose, J.—I cannot give my consent to support this conviction. The justice should return particularly all the facts and the conclusion in the conviction; first, the information, the summons, the appearance, or the defendant's default in not appearing; that the information was read to the defendant; that he was asked what he had to plead, the whole of the evidence particularly, and the adjudication. The witness should swear to the facts, and not to the law.

But the next day, when this case was again mentioned, Grose, J. said, As the precedent in Burn, though it seems to me a faulty one, has been recognised by this court in R. v. Hartley, Cald. 95, of which I was not aware before yesterday, I think it must be supported. It might be highly inconvenient to overturn it; and I should be sorry that any opinion of mine should shake the authority of an established precedent; since it is better for the subject that even faulty precedents should not be shaken than that the law should be uncertain.

There was another doubt entertained by the court, namely, whether it sufficiently appeared that the evidence was given in the defendant's presence, but it was overruled. Conviction affirmed. See R. v. Pearce, 9 East, 358, S. P. See R. v. Swallow, 8 T. R. 284, ante, Conbition, Vol. I. p. 840, as to the latter point.

ness only affirmed his former deposition to be true; and R. v. Vipont, 2 Burr. 1163, was cited. 2dly, The qualifications required by 22 and 23 Car. II. c. 25, were not negated by the evidence. The evidence was only general, that what he did was against the form of the statute, &c.; and R. v. Jarvis, 1 Burr. 154, and R. v. Wheatman, Dougl. 345, were cited. In answer it was said, that the deposition of the witness having been read over in the defendant's presence, and affirmed by him to be true, was the same as if he had been re-sworn. That as to the other objection, the information had negated every separate qualification, and was so stated in the conviction, and there was no occasion to prove it by evidence. If the information be specific, a general deposition that he is not qualified, is sufficient to put the defendant upon proving that he was. By the court.—The first objection is good: the witness ought to have been re-sworn in the defendant's presence. As to the other point, there is no case in which it has been directly decided that the evidence should negative every particular qualification. It cannot be so from the nature of the case. Conviction quashed.

ENFORCING
CONVICTION.

Evidence negativating qualifications.

In R. v. Stone, 1 East, 639, Lord Kenyon and Grose, J. were of opinion that the evidence ought to negative each of the qualifications; but the other two judges, Lawrence and Le Blanc, Js., thought it was not necessary to produce further evidence in an information before a magistrate than in an action; and there the witnesses are never required to prove more than the fact of using the dogs and engines; and the onus probandi of proving the qualification, as his defence, is always thrown upon the defendant. The court being equally divided, no order was made.

But in the case R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206, post, 920, the Court of King's Bench determined that the same rule of evidence applies as well to proceedings on informations before magistrates, as to actions for penalties; and therefore a conviction, which specifically negatives the several qualifications mentioned in the statute, is sufficient, without stating evidence to negative these qualifications.

A defendant may be convicted of several penalties in the same conviction. R. v. Swallow, 8 T. R. 284. This was a conviction in the sum of 15*l.* for three penalties under the game laws, the defendant being prosecuted for that he, on three several days, kept and used traps and engines to kill game; the objection was that he was charged with three offences, and the conviction was general, without saying of how many. The words were, "and thereupon he is convicted, and for his several offences aforesaid hath forfeited the sum of 5*l.* for each offence, making together the sum of 15*l.* &c. &c." Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "There is no objection to the conviction on the ground that the defendant has been convicted of several penalties. It is the constant practice in actions on the game laws, and not unfrequent in convictions. Even in indictments for capital offences, several offences are sometimes charged, as burglary and stealing in the dwellinghouse to the value of 40*s.* I by no means wish that magistrates, in drawing up convictions, should set all forms at nought; but they ought not to be entangled in greater forms and ceremonies than the superior courts. The word 'convicted' in this case applies to the several offences with which the defendant was charged, and to the evidence given in support of them; and the words following are, 'and for his several offences aforesaid, &c.' Taking the whole of the adjudication together, it is evident that the magistrate convicted the defendant in the three several offences charged." Conviction affirmed.

We have already considered the amount of the penalty, and how many different penalties the party may subject himself to, ante, 904.

Amount of
penalty.

A conviction adjudging a distribution of part of a forfeiture to the overseers of the poor of a township (where the statute speaks of a parish) cannot be supported. R. v. Priest, 6 T. Distribution of
penalty.

Since the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, it would, it seems, now suffice to state generally in the adjudication that the penalty is "to be paid according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided."

By that act, s. 3, where the merits have been tried, convictions are not to be set aside for defect in form. See the provision and notes thereon, ante. Conviction, Vol. I. p. 837, 848.

LEVYING OF PENALTY]—We have seen, ante, 905, that the 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, directs the penalty to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice or justices before whom the party was convicted, and that for want of such distress the offender or offenders shall be sent to the house of correction for the space of three months for the first offence, and for any further offence four months.

The proceedings in case of a distress have been already fully noticed, ante. Distress under Warrant of Justices, Vol. I., and the reader is referred thereto.

See also the important provisions of the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, ante, Vol. I. p. 1018.

Imprisonment.

A replevin will not lie. R. v. Burchet, 1 Stra. 567; R. v. Sheriff of Leicestershire, 1 Barnardiston, 110; R. v. Monkhouse, 2 Stra. 1184.

If there be goods, they must be distrained upon before the offender can be committed, Hill v. Bateman, before Raymond, C. J. at Westminster, 2 Stra. 710. The defendant, Bateman, being a justice of the peace, had convicted the plaintiff for destroying game, and though (as it was proved) the plaintiff had effects of his own which might have been distrained, which were sufficient to answer the penalty he had incurred, yet the defendant sent him immediately to Bridewell, without endeavouring to levy the penalty upon his goods: and an action of trespass and false imprisonment being brought against Bateman for this commitment, the C. J. was of opinion that the action well lay.

For further information as to imprisoning a party for want of a distress see ante, Commitment in Execution, Vol. I.—Distress, Vol. I. p. 1019.

Appeal and certiorari.

APPEAL AND CERTIORARI]—The 5 Anne, c. 14, gives no appeal against the conviction. See ante, Appeal, Vol. I.

A certiorari lies, as it is not expressly taken away; but by stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 2, [no] certiorari shall be allowed to remove the conviction or other proceedings on this act, unless the party convicted shall, before the allowance thereof, become bound to the prosecutor in 50*l.*, with such sureties as the justice before whom the conviction shall be made shall think fit, to pay the prosecutor's full costs and charges, to be ascertained on their oath, in 14 days after the conviction [confirmed], or procedendo granted. And in default thereof the justice shall proceed in execution of the conviction in such manner as if no certiorari had been awarded.

The word [no] is inserted instead of the words [if any] which are in the act, since that word seemeth necessary to make up the sense; and the word [confirmed] is added for the like reason. And indeed there have been too many inadvertences in the drawing up of this act; for there is false grammar in no fewer than six places, besides other mistakes.

Recognizance.

Upon this act there ought to be a single recognizance of the defendant, and two sureties in 50*l.*; and a recognizance taken in 25*l.* each, is not a compliance with the act. R. v. Dunn, 8 T. R. 218. In practice a recognizance is never required, the bond being considered as supplying the place of a recognizance. Paley, 223. In consequence of this the prosecutor is in a worse condition than in others, for he cannot have an attachment for the costs, that being granted only where there is a recognizance, he must be sued on the bond. Id. n.

This bond is not returned with the certiorari as in the case of a recognizance, but remains with the prosecutor to whom it is given. Paley, 224.

In a note to the case of R. v. Dunn, it is made a query, whether the 5 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 2, the general certiorari act, is applicable to the certiorari given by the statute of Anne; since, as it is there observed, the stat. of Geo. II. refers to judgments and orders, subject to and made upon appeal, and the stat. of Anne gives no appeal in this case. (See the stat. of Geo. II. Certiorari, Vol. I. p. 580.) And this doubt expressed by the reporter seems well founded; and if so, the question whether or not a certiorari issued upon the stat. of Anne be within time cannot arise.

As to costs in general, see Costs, Vol. I. p. 903.

(4.) HOW FAR OFFENCE PUNISHABLE BY INDICTMENT.]—In R. v. Buck, 2 Stra. 679, the Court of King's Bench held, that an indictment cannot be supported for killing a hare without a qualification, the 5 Anne, c. 14, having appointed a summary proceeding before justices of the peace; nor is it an indictable offence to have nets or guns in possession to kill game. R. v. Downing and others, Andr. 303; Chit. G. L. 87.

And although for some purposes several persons, by associating in the commission of an illegal act, may become indictable for a conspiracy, yet several persons cannot be indicted at common law for conspiring simply to kill game; and therefore in R. v. Turner and others, 13 East, 228, where the defendants resolved to go into a preserve, or place set apart for the protection of hares, with arms by night, and take and carry away hares, which they accordingly did, it was held, they could not be indicted for it as for a conspiracy. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. there said he should be sorry to have it doubted, whether persons agreeing to go and sport upon another's ground, in other words, to commit a civil trespass, should be thereby in peril of an indictment for an offence which would subject them to infamous punishment, ante, Vol. I. p. 784.

I. Buying or Selling Game, or having it in Possession.

The statutes now usually resorted to as prohibiting the buying or selling game, or having it in possession, are the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23, s. 3; Anne, c. 14, s. 2; 9 Anne, c. 25; 28 Geo. II. c. 12; and 58 Geo. III. c. 75.

We will point out these provisions and afterwards notice the construction thereof.

The 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23, s. 3, enacts, that "in case any hare, partridge, pheasant, pigeon, fish, fowl, or other game, shall (upon such search or otherwise) be found, the offender shall be carried before some justice of peace of the same county, riding, or division; and if such person do not give a good account how he came by such hare, partridge, pheasant, pigeon, fish, fowl, or other game, such as shall satisfy the said justice, or else shall not in some convenient time, to be set by the said justice, produce the party of whom he bought the same, or some other credible person, to depose upon oath such evidence thereof, that then such person not giving such good account, nor producing any such witness as aforesaid, shall be convicted by the said justice of such offence, and upon such conviction shall forfeit for every hare, partridge, pheasant, pigeon, fish, fowl, or other game, any sum not under 5s. nor exceeding the sum of 20s. to be ascertained by the said justice; one moiety thereof to be paid to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish where the offence was committed; the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods, by warrant under the hand and seal of the justice before whom the offender shall be convicted, rendering the offender, plus, if any be; and for want of distress, the offender or offenders shall be committed to the house of correction, for any time not exceeding one month, and not less than ten days, there to be whipt and kept to hard labour."

4 & 5 W. & M.

The 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 2, enacts, "that if any higgler, chapman, carrier, victualler, or alehouse-keeper, shall from and after the first day of January, 1707, have in his or their custody or possession any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath-game, or grouse, or shall buy, sell, or offer to sell any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath-game, or grouse, every such higgler, chapman, innkeeper, victualler, alehouse-keeper, or carrier, (unless such

By sect. 3 of the same act, "for the better discovery of such higgler, chapman, carrier, innkeeper, alehouse-keeper, and victualler, as shall offer to buy or sell any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse," it is enacted, "that from and after the said first day of May, any person that shall destroy, sell, or buy any hare, pheasant, moor, heath-game, or grouse, and shall within three months make discovery of any higgler, chapman, carrier, innkeeper, alehouse-keeper, or victualler, that hath bought or sold, or offered to buy or sell, or had in their possession any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, so as any one shall be convicted of such offence in manner as aforesaid, such discoverer to be discharged of the pains and penalties hereby enacted for killing or selling such game as aforesaid, shall receive the same benefit or advantage as any other informer shall be entitled to by virtue of this act for such discovery and information."

Sect. 4, amongst other things, ante, 886, enacts, that if a gamekeeper shall sell any game without the consent or knowledge of the lord or lady of the manor, he shall be committed to the house of correction for three months, there to be kept to hard labour. This regulation will not extend to a gamekeeper appointed under the 48 Geo. III. c. 93, ante, 887.

As difficulties occurred in proving a sale, or offering to sale, it was enacted by stat. 9 Anne, c. 25, s. 2, "that if any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, shall be found in the shop, house, or possession of any person or persons whatsoever, not qualified in his own right to kill game, or being entitled thereto under some person so qualified, the same shall be adjudged, deemed, and taken to be an exposing thereof to sale, within the true intent and meaning of this and the said recited act" (stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, above mentioned).

By stat. 28 Geo. II. c. 12, s. 1, (after reciting that doubts had arisen with respect to the meaning of the word "chapman," in the stat. of 5 Anne, c. 14,)(c) for putting an end to same, it is enacted, "that if any person or

Sect. 2. "If any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, shall be found in the shop, house, or possession of any poulterer, salesman, shopmonger, cook, or pastry-cook, the same shall be adjudged, deemed, and taken to be an exposing thereof to sale within the true intent and meaning of this act, and the said recited act, or any other act; which said forfeitures shall be recovered, and such penalties inflicted, by such means and in such manner, and from and within such time, and shall be applied to such uses, as are prescribed by the said recited act, or by any other act or acts since made for the preservation of the game; any thing in the said recited act, or by any other law or statute to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding."

And by stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for any of her Majesty's justices of the peace, in their respective counties, boroughs, cities, towns corporate, or liberty, and the lords and ladies of his, her, or their, or any of their respective manors, within the said manors, to take away any such hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, or any other game, from any such higgler, chapman, innkeeper, victualler, or carrier, or any other person or persons not qualified to kill the same, and (a) shall be found in their custody or possession."

game.

We have seen that the penalties recoverable under the above provisions may be proceeded for by conviction or by action. In proceedings by action the whole penalty in general goes to the informer, and the action may be brought in six months, ante, 905.

These provisions being inefficient to prevent the destruction of game, the 58 Geo. III. c. 75, after reciting that "whereas the selling, exposing, offering to sale, any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, is by law prohibited: and whereas it is expedient, for the more effectual prevention of offences connected with the unlawful destruction and sale of game, to provide by law as hereinafter is enacted;" it is enacted, "that any person or persons whatsoever, whether qualified or not qualified to kill game, shall buy any hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, or any such person or persons who shall so offend, and thereof shall be convicted before any one or more justice or justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates, acting for the county, riding, city, town, borough, division, or place where such offence shall be committed, by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, shall for every hare, pheasant, partridge, moor, heath game, or grouse, so bought as aforesaid, forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.* the half to be paid to the informer, and the other to the poor of the parish where such offence shall be committed; the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods, by warrant under the hand and seal of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, before whom the offender shall be convicted, rendering the overplus of such distress and sale (if any) to the informer or parties, after deducting the charges of making the same; provided that such conviction be made within six calendar months after such offence committed."

Sect. 3. This act of 58 Geo. III. prohibits the buying of pheasants, &c. in all cases, and therefore by a contract for the sale of live pheasants no property passes to the purchaser. Helps v. Glennister, 8 B. & Cres. 553.

Exposing to sale—Warneford v. Kendall, 10 East, 19. Action upon stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, for the penalty of 5*l.* against the defendant for exposing to sale a hare, not being qualified in his own right to kill game, nor entitled thereto under any person so qualified. It was proved that the plaintiff went out coursing, and killed a hare on Shipston manor, when the defendant, who was employed as a carpenter and woodman by Mr. Earl, the lord of the manor, and had directions from him to take poachers, came up and took the hare from the dog, and carried it away, (notwithstanding the plaintiff claimed it,) to Mr. Earl's steward, according to his instructions. Upon the authority of Molton v. Cheeseley, 1 Esp. 123, Lawrence, J. against his own opinion, allowed a verdict for the plaintiff, with liberty to move to set aside the verdict and enter a nonsuit. A rule nisi having been obtained for that purpose, after cause shown, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. said, "the question is whether the possession of the defendant was such as to constitute an offence, and subject him to the penalty under the statute? He did not claim the hare as his property, nor acquire the possession of it for himself, but for his master, on whose manor it was taken; and if this be an offence, no case can be stated in which an unqualified person can innocently come in contact with game. The case of Molton v. Cheeseley must have been imperfectly stated." The other judges agreed, and the rule was made absolute.

In the late case of Walker v. Mills, 2 B. & B. 1; 4 Moore, 343, S. C.; where an unqualified person by the orders and in the presence of his master, a qualified person, set on his master's grounds a trap for hares, &c. and afterwards finding a hare therein, carried it accordingly to his master, who was not present when the hare was found; it was held, defendant was not liable to the penalties for using snares to destroy game, or for exposing same to sale. See the case fully reported, ante, 902.

It has been held in Bluet v. Needs, 2 Com. 522, upon the statutes of 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 2, and 9 Anne, c. 25, that the penalty is 5*l.* for every head of game, and that although it is more correct to describe the offence as an exposing to sale, yet that it is sufficient to allege that the defendant had the game in his possession, as that is in substance by virtue of the 9 Anne, c. 25, an exposing to sale. Jones v. Bishop, Sayer, 64.

It is not material to constitute an offence by a carrier within the 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 2, for having game in his possession as carrier, whether he be qualified or not. If he has the game in his possession in the course of his trade and business of a carrier, it is within the act. If it were not so, an unqualified person would incur the penalty by carrying the game of other people not qualified, and a qualified carrier would not, although each were doing the very same act; it is the act of carrying the game of persons not qualified that constitutes the offence. Accordingly in an information on stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 2, against a carrier between Norwich and London, for having game in his possession as carrier, it was held not necessary to aver that the defendant was not a person qualified to kill game, nor that he had the game in his possession knowingly. The evidence for the prosecution was, that game was found in the defendant's waggon at an intermediate place between Norwich and London: it was held, that there was sufficient prima facie evidence that the defendant had it in his possession as carrier. The evidence for the defendant was, that his book-keeper living at that place did not know of any game having been put in there. Neither the driver of the waggon or his assistant was called as a witness: it was held, that this evidence did not vary the case, and that the defendant was properly convicted of having the game in his possession as carrier. R. v. Marsh, 2 B. & C. 717; 4 D. R. 260, S. C.(a)

to sale.

(a) R. v. Samuel Clark Marsh, 2 B. C. 717; 4 D. & R. 260, S. C. This was a conviction against a carrier, for having game in his possession. The conviction stated, that Edward Howell, Thetford, St. Peter's, in the county of Norfolk, came before A. B. and C. D., justices, and gave them to understand he was informed, that within three months last past, viz. on August 25th, 23, Samuel Clark Marsh, of the city of Norwich, being a common carrier, lawfully had in his hands and custody and possession as such carrier, divers, to wit, 22 partridges and 22 pheasants of the game of England (such partridges and pheasants not having been sent up and delivered nor entrusted to the said S. C. Marsh, as such carrier as aforesaid, or in anywise howsoever, by any person or persons, in any manner qualified to kill game,) contrary to the statute,

The conviction then stated the commissions of the defendant, his appearance, and that he pleaded not guilty. The following evidence, given by two witnesses for the prosecution, was then set out: that defendant was a common carrier, and that his waggon stopped in the parish of Elden, in the county of Norfolk, and that 22 live pheasants, two partridges, and 20 dead ones, were in the waggon, and in the possession of the defendant, as such common carrier. The conviction then set out the evidence of one John Cole, a witness for the defendant, who stated, that he was in the employment of the defendant as book-keeper on the day in question; that his master's waggon stopped that day at Thetford, on its way to London, and that he, Cole, saw the waggon at about six o'clock in the evening; that it stopped about an hour afterwards; that he saw nothing put into it, except a parcel, which he booked (which was not the parcel in question); that the waggon had been in Thetford some time before he saw it, and that he did not know what might have been put into it before he saw it; that James Smith was the driver of the said waggon, who was accustomed to drive it; that he had not seen him since that time; that one Evans was with the said James Smith as helper; that he did not examine the waggon, nor did he know what was in it; that he did not see any Norwich way-bill, nor was he accustomed to see one, unless any goods were left at Thetford; that the said S. C. Marsh lived at Norwich, which is his constant residence; that he never saw him at Thetford, to see what was put into his said waggon; and that it was impossible for the said S. C. Marsh, if his waggoner or book-keeper

But if the information and conviction be against the defendant for having game in his possession, but not as a carrier, or of the description of persons in the act, the defendant must be unqualified, and the same must be negaput any thing into the waggon at Thetford or on the road, to know of it; that the waggon came into Thetford considerably loaded, but that he, John Cole, did not know what was in it; that he was dismissed from his master's service about a week after the 25th of August, on account of the game found in the waggon on that day, and he had not been since employed by the said S. C. Marsh; that he and his father had been book-keepers to S. C. Marsh for forty years before. The conviction then stated, that, inasmuch as the defendant had not adduced any evidence of the said pheasants and partridges having been sent as aforesaid, by any person or persons qualified to kill game, nor any evidence that the defendant was qualified, by the laws of the realm, to kill or destroy game, or to have the said pheasants or partridges in his possession as aforesaid; it appeared to the justices that the defendant was guilty of the premises charged upon him in the information, and that they therefore adjudged him guilty of the offence.—Nolan and Chitty were to have argued in support of the conviction, but the court called upon Scarlett, contra, who contended, that the information ought to have negatived the qualification of the defendant, and also to have averred that he had the game in his possession knowingly. As to the first objection, the uniform course of the precedents of convictions against carriers is to negative the qualification. R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 200, post, 920. It is consistent with this information that the carrier in this case may have been a qualified person, and may actually have sent his own game by his own waggon; and if so, he clearly would not have committed an offence within the act. [Abbott, C. J. Then he would not have had the game in his possession as carrier. Bayley, J. The effect of your argument is, that if the carrier be qualified to kill game, he may carry the game of any person whatever, whereas the 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 2, declares, "that any carrier having game in his possession is guilty of an offence, unless it be sent by a qualified person."] The information ought to have alleged, that the defendant had the game in his possession knowingly. The fact of his having it in his possession without knowledge cannot be an offence. Thirdly, the evidence does not show that he had it in his possession knowingly. The bare fact of the goods having been found in his waggon is not prima facie evidence that he knew them to be there, and the knowledge of the servant is not sufficient; for a master is not criminally responsible for the acts of his servant; and there is no evidence to show that the parcel was put into the waggon at Norwich, where the defendant resided; and if it were put in at an intermediate place, it is impossible that he could have any knowledge of it.—Abbott, C. J. "I am of opinion that this conviction ought to be affirmed. Two objections have been taken to the form of the information. The first is, that it does not negative the qualification of the defendant. The second is, that it does not aver that the defendant had the game in his possession knowingly. As to the first objection, I am of opinion that it is unnecessary in an information against a carrier to negative the qualifications of the defendant. For, whether he be qualified or not, if he has the game in his possession in the course of his trade and business as carrier, it is an offence within the act. If that were not so, an unqualified carrier would incur the penalty by carrying the game of other people not qualified, and a qualified carrier would not, although each were doing the very same act. It is the act of carrying the game of persons not qualified that constitutes the offence. As to the second objection, I am of opinion that it is not necessary that the information should allege that the defendant had the game in his possession knowingly. The 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 2, has no such word. It merely says, 'if the carrier have any pheasant in his possession he shall be convicted.' If it were necessary to aver that the defendant had actual knowledge, it would cast on the prosecutor a burden of proof which could not easily be satisfied, particularly as the carriers themselves, usually residing in one place, cannot have any actual knowledge of that which may be done by their servants in the course of a long journey. I am of opinion that it is not a sufficient defence for a carrier, in any case of this description, to show that he did not know that the particular parcel contained game, although it might be a good defence to show that it was put into the waggon by the servant for his own benefit, and contrary to the orders of and in fraud of his master. As to the evidence, that was ived as in other cases, ante, 908, though the want of the qualification need not be proved by the prosecutor. R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206.

ntirely for the consideration of the justices, but I think there was sufficient evidence to justify the conviction. It appeared that the hampers containing the game were in the defendant's possession, in his waggon employed in his business. That was, therefore, prima facie evidence that the game was in his possession as carrier. And that was not rebutted by the evidence given for the defendant. For it appears merely that the book-keeper at Thetford, at an intermediate place between Norwich and London, did not know of any game having been put into the waggon there. The Norwich way-bill was not produced, and the game may therefore have been put into the waggon at Norwich without the actual knowledge of the defendant. Neither the waggoner nor his helper was called as a witness. The evidence for the defendant left the case, therefore, at where the evidence for the prosecution left it. That being so, I am of opinion that there was evidence that the defendant had the game in his possession as carrier, and, therefore, that this conviction ought to be affirmed. Bayley, J. The general rule as to convictions is this: 'The information must bring the case within the clause imposing the penalty. If that contained the qualification, the information ought to have negatived it. Now, trying this case by that rule, it is not necessary to negative the qualification or to affirm knowledge. The words of the clause imposing the penalty are not, if any unqualified carrier, but any carrier shall have game in his possession, such carrier (unless the game is sent expressly by a person qualified to kill game) shall be convicted.' Then as to knowledge, the clause itself says nothing about it. If that had been introduced, evidence to establish knowledge might have been given on the part of the prosecutor; but under this enactment, the party charged must show a degree of ignorance sufficient to excuse him. Here there was prima facie evidence that the game was in his possession as carrier. It lay on the defendant to rebut this evidence, and in considering how it might be rebutted, we should consider whether it might have been rebutted. The evidence for the defendant was, that a book-keeper living at Thetford, an intermediate place on the journey, did not know of the parcel having been put into the waggon. It might either have been put into the waggon with the assent of the carrier, or in fraud of him by his servants. The way-bill made out at Norwich ought to have been produced to show that it was not put in with the assent of the master, or some evidence should have been given to show that the game was put into the waggon contrary to the order of the defendant, and for the benefit of his servant; and no such evidence having been given, I think the defendant was properly convicted. Littledale, J.—I am of opinion, that it is not necessary in an information against a carrier for having game in his possession to negative the qualification of the defendant. The 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 2, creates this offence, and it does not except the case of a carrier who is himself qualified to kill game. The clause does contain one exception, and that shows that it was not intended that any other exception should be allowed. I think, therefore, that it would not be any defence to a charge against a person for having game in his possession as a carrier to show that he was a person qualified to kill game. If he could show, indeed, that it was his own game, that would negative the fact of his having it in his possession in his character of a common carrier. The fourth section makes it an offence for persons not qualified to keep greyhounds, &c. or other engines to kill or destroy game, but nothing is said in the second section as to the qualification. I doubt much whether it would be any defence upon the merits that the defendant himself did not know that the particular parcel contained game. A master in some cases is answerable criminally for the act of his servant, when the act is done by the servant for the benefit of the master and in the course of his employment. Thus if a servant in the course of his employment sells a libel, the master is subject to an indictment. I think that, in this case, the master was properly convicted. The game was found in his waggon, employed in the course of his business as a carrier. That raises a presumption prima facie that he knew it was there, and that is not rebutted by the evidence given on the part of the defendant. Generally speaking, it is sufficient in an indictment or a declaration founded upon a statute to pursue the words of the statute. Thus in an action of debt for using a gun with intent to destroy game, it is sufficient to aver generally that the defendant is not a qualified person. It has been held necessary, in-

Upon a conviction under stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 2, against a carrier for having game in his possession, it is sufficient if in the information and adjudication, the qualifications mentioned in stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 3, be negatived, without negating them in the evidence. (a) deed, to negative in informations the particular qualifications. It is not necessary to enquire whether that rule were wisely introduced or not, for the word knowingly is not in the act at all. Therefore, according to the rule above laid down, it need not be stated in the information. For these reasons I am of opinion the conviction ought to be affirmed. Conviction affirmed.

(a) R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206. Conviction by two justices upon the stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 2, against a carrier for having game in his possession. The conviction was to this effect: "W. Taylor, of the parish, &c. cometh before me, J. M., one of the justices of our Lord the King, in and for the county of Surry, &c. and then and there giveth me, the said justice, to understand and be informed, that within three months now last past, that is to say, on the 5th day of February now instant, at the parish of Send and Ripley, in the said county, John Turner, of the parish of the Holy Trinity, in Guildford, in the county of Surry, carrier, being a person not then having lands, &c. (negating the qualifications of the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25,) nor then being a person in any manner qualified or authorised by the laws of this realm to kill game, and being then and there a carrier, did then and there unlawfully have in his custody and possession sixteen pheasants and five hares, the same not being sent up or placed in the hands of the said J. Turner by any person or persons qualified to kill game, contrary to the form of the statute, &c. whereby he hath forfeited the sum of 105*l.*, that is, 5*l.* for each pheasant and hare." And the conviction prays, that the defendant may be summoned to answer the premises, and that the informer may have a moiety of the forfeiture. "Whereupon the defendant being summoned on the 10th of February, in the 56th year aforesaid, &c. appeareth before us, the said J. M. and G. M., one other of the justices, &c. and having heard, &c. pleads not guilty. Nevertheless, on the said 10th day of February, at, &c. two credible witnesses, to wit, T. T. and W. S. upon their oath affirm in the presence of the said J. Turner, that within three months next before the said information, to wit, on the said 5th day of February, in the 56th year aforesaid, at, &c. the said J. Turner being a carrier, did have in his custody and possession, in his waggon, at the parish of Send and Ripley, in the county aforesaid, sixteen pheasants and five hares, the same not being sent up or placed in the hands of the said J. Turner by any person or persons qualified to kill game, contrary to the form of the statute, &c. Whereupon the said J. Turner, being asked what he hath to say or offer in his defence, produceth one witness, to wit, G. T., who, being duly sworn, deposeth, in the presence of the said J. Turner, and also of the said W. Taylor, that on the said 5th day of February, at the parish of the Holy Trinity, in Guildford aforesaid, he was present at, and did aid and assist in the packing and loading the said waggon of the said J. Turner, and that at the day and parish last aforesaid, when the said waggon of the said J. Turner left the warehouse of the said J. Turner, in the said parish last aforesaid, there was not in the custody and possession of the said J. Turner, in his said waggon, in the parish last aforesaid, any such quantity of game as is above laid to his charge, or any game whatever; and forasmuch as upon hearing the matters, &c. it appears to us, the said justices, that the said J. Turner is guilty of the premises, it is therefore adjudged by us the said justices, upon the testimony of the said T. T. and W. S., that the said J. Turner, on the said 5th day of February, at the parish of Send and Ripley aforesaid, within three months next before the said information was made before me the said J. M. by the said W. T. as aforesaid, unlawfully had in his custody and possession sixteen pheasants and five hares, contrary to the form of the statute, &c. and that the same were not sent up or placed in the hands of the said J. Turner by any person or persons qualified to kill game, and that the said J. Turner had not then any lands or tenements, or any other estate of inheritance in his own right, or in his wife's right, of the clear yearly value of 100*l.* per annum, &c. (negating the other qualifications); and thereupon we the said justices do convict the said J. Turner of the offence aforesaid, and do adjudge that the said J. Turner, for his said offence, hath forfeited the sum of 105*l.*, that is to say, the sum of 5*l.* for each and every of the said pheasants and hares; and we do adjudge that one half of the said sum be paid to the poor of the parish of Send and Ripley aforesaid, where the said offence was committed, according to the form of the statute, &c. And now it was argued by Scarlett and Ross that the conviction was ill; first, because the justices have neglected to set forth the evidence in support of the information, and have only stated the conclusion which they drew from it. For the justices have repeated the charge alleged in the information, as if it were the evidence given in support of that charge; but it is impossible to conceive that the witnesses should have deposed in the very same form and words as laid in the information. It was incumbent, therefore, on the justices to set forth the particulars of the evidence and not the result of it, in order that the court may see that there is sufficient to warrant the conviction. Secondly, it was objected, that it does not appear that any evidence was given in support of the information, negating the qualifications mentioned in the statute, which is necessary in order to found the jurisdiction of the justices; or if the party be qualified in any one respect, the justices have no jurisdiction. And herein a proceeding before a justice differs from an action. It seems, therefore, that prima facie evidence, at least, ought to be required, though it must be admitted that in R. v. Stone (1 East, 9,) the court were divided in opinion on this point. Lord Ellenborough, C.—The question is, upon whom the onus bandi lies; whether it lies upon the person who affirms a qualification to give the affirmative, or upon the informer who denies any qualification to give the negative. There are, I think, but ten different heads of qualification enumerated in the statute (22 & 23 Car. c. 25, s. 3,) to which the proof may be applied; and, according to the argument of to-day, every person who lays information of this sort is bound to produce satisfactory evidence before the magistrates to negative the defendant's qualification upon each of those several heads. The argument really comes to this, that there would be a moral impossibility of ever convicting upon such an information. If the informer should establish the negative of any part of these several qualifications, that would be insufficient, because it would be said, non est, but that the defendant may be qualified under the other. And does not common sense show, that the burden of proof ought to be cast on the person, who, by establishing any one of the qualifications, will be well defended? Is not the statute of Anne in effect a prohibition on every person to kill game, unless he brings himself within some one of the qualifications allowed by law; the proof of which is easy on the one side, but almost impossible on the other? I remember the decision of R. v. Stone, and the arguments of the learned judges, who held the necessity of giving negative proof, were undoubtedly urged with great force; but I felt at the time, that if they were right, it would in most cases be impossible to convict at all. But in Spieres v. Parker, (1 T. R. 144,) I find Lord Mansfield laying down the rule, that in actions upon the game laws, and I see no good reason why the rule should not be applied to informations as well as actions, the plaintiff must negative the exceptions in the enacting clause, though he throw the burden of proof on the other side. The same was said by Heath, J., in Jelfs v. Ballard, (1 B. & P. 468,) and such I believe has been the prevailing opinion of the profession and the practice. I am, therefore, of opinion, that this conviction, which specifies negatively in the information the several qualifications mentioned in the statute, is sufficient, without going on to negative by the evidence those qualifications. Bayley, J.—I have always understood it to be a general rule, that if a negative averment be made by one party, which is peculiarly within the knowledge of the other, the party within whose knowledge it lies, and who asserts the affirmative, is to prove it, and not he who avers the negative. And if we consider the reason of the thing in this particular case, we cannot but see that it is next to impossible that the witness for the prosecution should be prepared to give any evidence of the defendant's want of qualification. If, indeed, it is to be presumed, that he must be acquainted with the defendant, and with his situation or habits in life, then he might give general evidence what those were; but if, as it is more probable, he is unacquainted with any of these matters, how is he to form any judgment whether he is qualified or not from his appearance only? Therefore, if the law were to require that the witness should depose negatively to these things, it seems to me that it might lead to the encouragement of much hardihood their trades and employments, who follow hunting, fishing, and other game to the ruin of themselves, and damage of their neighbours; it is enacted, that if any such person as aforesaid shall presume to hunt, hawk, fish, or fowl (unless in company with the master of such apprentice, duly qualified by law) such person or persons shall be subject to the penalties of this act, and shall or may be sued and prosecuted for their wilful trespass in such then coming on any person's land, and if found guilty thereof, the plaintiff shall not only recover his damages thereby sustained, but his full costs of suit; any former law to the contrary notwithstanding."

It has been doubted what is meant by "inferior tradesmen." In the case of Burton v. Mingay, 2 Wils. 70, the question was, whether the defendant a surgeon and apothecary, not qualified to kill game, came within the description, and the judges were equally divided. The huntsman of a gentleman of fortune, hunting with his master's hounds and with his orders, is not a dissolute person within the act. Pallant v. Roll, 2 Bla. Rep. 900. A clothier or alehouse-keeper is. Semble, Wickham v. Walter, Barnes, 122. A case occurred at Hertford Assizes in which Lord Ellenborough, C. J. said, that he should direct the jury to find that the defendant was a dissolute person, if he came to kill game for the purpose of selling it, or if he were drunk or abusive, or, if questioned where he lived or what was his name, he gave a false account of himself. Christian's G. L. 98. A qualified person cannot be deemed a person within the act. R. v. George, 6 Mod. 40. See post, 948.

of swearing. The witness would have to depose to a multitude of facts; he must swear that the defendant has not an estate in his own or his wife's right of a certain value; that he is not the son and heir apparent of an esquire, &c.; but how is it at all probable that a witness should be likely to depose with truth to such minutiae? On the other hand, there is no hardship in casting the burden of the affirmative proof on the defendant, because he must be presumed to know his own qualification, and to be able to prove it. If the defendant plead to the information, that he is a qualified person, and require time to substantiate his plea in evidence, it is a matter of course for the justices to postpone the hearing, in order to afford him time and an opportunity of proving his qualifications. But if the onus of proving the negative is to lie on the other party, it seems to me that it will be the cause of many offenders escaping conviction. I cannot help thinking, therefore, that the onus must lie on the defendant, and that when the prosecutor has proved every thing, which, but for the defendant's being qualified, would subject the defendant to the penalty, he has done enough; and the proof of qualification is to come in as matter of defence. As to the objection that this evidence is consistent with the supposition, that the game was in the waggon of the defendant without his knowledge, I think the fact of its being in his waggon raises a presumption the other way, that it was there with his knowledge. If the defendant could have shown by evidence satisfactory to the justices, that he did not know it, that would have presented a very different case; but where the witness has proved that the defendant had it in his custody and possession in his waggon, surely such evidence, being unanswered, warrants this conviction. Holroyd, J.—It is a general rule, that the affirmative is to be proved, and not the negative, of any fact which is stated, unless under peculiar circumstances, where the general rule does not apply. Therefore it must be shown that this is a case which ought to form an exception to the general rule. Now the qualifications mentioned in the statute are peculiarly within the knowledge of the party qualified. If he be entitled to any such estate as the statute requires, he may prove it by his title deeds, or by receipt of the rents and profits: or if he is son and heir apparent, or servant to any lord or lady of a manor appointed to kill game, it will be a defence. All these qualifications are peculiarly within the knowledge of the party himself, whereas the prosecutor has, probably, no means whatever of proving a disqualification. If this be so, instead of saying that the general rule of law ought not to apply to this case, it seems to be the very case to which the rule ought peculiarly to apply. The other objections do not appear to me to be well founded; and, therefore, I think this conviction ought to be affirmed. Conviction affirmed.

VIII. Soldiers killing Game.

SOLDIERS KILLING GAME.

By 11 Geo. IV. c. 7, s. 67, "For the better preservation of game and fish in or near such places where any officers shall at any time be quartered," it is enacted, "That every officer who shall, without leave in writing from the persons entitled to grant such leave, take, kill, or destroy any game or fish within the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and upon complaint thereof shall be, upon oath of one or more credible witnesses, convicted before any justice, shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 5*l*." A similar provision is to be found in the annual Mutiny Acts. The statute, it will be seen, makes no difference whether the officer or soldier be qualified or not.

In respect to the third offence here seems to be an inconsistency. The former part of the act says, if the offender shall not, upon conviction by indictment at the sessions, pay in the court the penalty of 50*l.* he shall be committed to the gaol or house of correction for not less than six months nor more than twelve. The latter part of the act says, the said penalty shall be levied by distress; and if no distress can be had, the offender shall be committed to the gaol or house of correction for three months; with power of appealing to the sessions then next following.

By sect. 1, the stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 90, is repealed, "except so far as the same repeals any other acts."

Sect. 12. "That for the purposes of this act the night shall be considered, and is hereby declared to commence at the expiration of the first hour after sunset, and to conclude at the beginning of the last hour before sunrise." (a)

Sect. 13. "That for the purposes of this act the word 'game' shall be deemed to include hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, heath or moor game, black game, and bustards."

As to the limitation of proceedings, see sect. 3, post, 928.

(a) This time, it will be seen, differs from that stated in the 57 Geo. III. c. 90.

(2.) OFFENCES PUNISHABLE UNDER 9 GEO. IV. c. 69, BY SUMMARY CONVICTION AND APPREHENSION OF OFFENDERS.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 69, s. 1, after reciting the 57 Geo. III. c. 90, "and 9 Geo. 4, c. 69. whereas the practice of going out by night for the purpose of destroying game has nevertheless very much increased of late years, and has in very many instances led to the commission of murder, and of other grievous offences; and it is expedient to repeal the said recited act, and to make more effectual provisions than now by law exist for repressing such practice, it is enacted, that the said recited act shall be and the same is hereby repealed, except so far as the same repeals any other acts; and if any person shall after the passing of this act, by night (b) unlawfully take or destroy any game (c), or any rabbits in any lands, whether open or inclosed, or shall by night unlawfully enter or be upon the land, whether open or inclosed, with any gun, net, engine, or other instrument for the purpose of taking or destroying game, (c) such offender shall, upon conviction thereof before two justices of the peace, be committed for the first offence to the common gaol or house of correction for any period not exceeding three calendar months, there to be kept to hard labour, and at the expiration of such period shall find sureties by recognizance, or in Scotland by bond of caution, of himself in 10*l*. and two sureties in 5*l*. each, or one surety in 10*l*. for his not so offending again for the space of one year next following; and in case of not finding such sureties, shall be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the space of six calendar months, unless such sureties are sooner found; and in case such person shall so offend a second time, and shall be thereof convicted before two justices of the peace, he shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction for any period not exceeding six calendar months, there to be kept to hard labour, and at the expiration of such period shall find sureties by recognizance or bond as aforesaid, himself in 20*l*. and two sureties in 10*l*. each, or one surety in 20*l*. for his not so offending again for the space of two years next following; and in case of not finding such sureties, shall be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the space of one year, unless such sureties are sooner found; and in case such person shall so offend a third time, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted hereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond seas for seven years, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour (d) in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding two years; and in Scotland, if any person shall so offend a first, second, or third time, he shall be liable to be punished in like manner as is hereby provided in each case." (e)

Persons taking or destroying game by night to be committed, for the first offence for 3 months, and kept to hard labour, and to find sureties. (a)

2d offence, six months and kept to hard labour, and to find sureties;

3d offence to be liable to transportation.

Sect. 3. "That where any person shall be charged on the oath of a credible witness, or in Scotland on the application of the procurator fiscal of court, before any justice of the peace, with any offence punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, the justice may issue his warrant for apprehending such person, and bringing him before two justices of the peace, to be dealt with according to law."

Sect. 4. "That the prosecution for every offence punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this act shall be commenced within six calendar months after the commission of the offence; and the prosecution for every offence punishable upon indictment or otherwise than upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, shall be commenced within twelve calendar months after the commission of such offence." (b)

Sect. 5. "That the justices of the peace before whom any person shall be summarily convicted of any offence against this act, may cause the conviction to be drawn up in the following form of words, or in any other form of words to the same effect, as the case may require; that is to say,

"BE it remembered, that on the                      day of                      in the year of our Lord at                      in the county of                      [or riding, division, liberty, city, &c. as the case may be,] A. O. is convicted before us, [naming the justices,] two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, [or riding, &c.] for that he the said A. O. did [specify the offence, and the time and place when and where the same was committed, as the case may be, and on a second conviction state the first conviction;] and we the said justices adjudge the said A. O. for his said first offence to be imprisoned in the and there kept to hard labour for the period of                      and at the expiration of such period to find sureties by recognizance or bond of caution in Scotland, himself in the sum of 10*l.* and two sureties in the sum of 5*l.* each, or one surety in the sum of 10*l.* conditioned that he the said A. O. shall not so offend again for the space of one year next following; and we further adjudge the said A. O. in case he shall not find such sureties as aforesaid, to be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the space of six calendar months, unless such sureties shall be sooner found. Given under our hands the day and year first above mentioned." (c)

Sect. 6. "That any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any such summary conviction may appeal to the next court of general or quarter sessions, which shall be holden not less than twelve days after the day of such conviction for the county, riding, or division wherein the cause of complaint shall have arisen; provided that such person shall give to the complainant a notice in writing of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, within three days after such conviction, and seven clear days at the least before such sessions, and shall also either remain in custody until the sessions, or within such three days enter into a recognizance, or bond of caution in Scotland, with a sufficient surety, before a justice of the peace, conditioned personally to appear at the said sessions, and to try such ap-

(a) See the observations on this section, post, 930.

(b) This latter part is new.

(c) Mr. Carrington observes, p. cxlv. Carr. C.L. "This appears to be a very awkward form of conviction, because this statute, after enacting that the justices may cause the conviction to be drawn up 'in the following form of words, or in any other form of words to the same effect,' gives a form which is not applicable to any but a first offence, because there is inserted in it only the smallest amount of recognizance, and the shortest term of imprisonment, in case the sureties are not found."

peal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded by the court; and upon such notice being given, and such recognizance or bond being entered into, the justice before whom the same shall be entered into shall liberate such person if in custody; and the court at such sessions shall hear and determine the matter of the appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs to either party, as to the court shall seem meet; and in case of the dismissal of the appeal, or the affirmance of the conviction, shall order and adjudge the offender to be dealt with and punished according to the conviction, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded; and shall, if necessary, issue process for enforcing such judgment." (a)

Sect. 7. "That no such conviction or adjudication made on appeal therefrom shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any of his Majesty's superior courts of record, or in Scotland by advocacy or suspension, into any superior court; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same."

No certiorari, &c.

Sect. 8. "That on every conviction under this act for a first or second offence, the convicting justices shall return the same to the next quarter sessions for the county, riding, division, city, or place wherein such offence shall have been committed; and the record of such conviction, or any copy thereof, shall be evidence in any prosecution to be instituted against the party thereby convicted for a second or third offence; and the clerk of the peace shall immediately on such return make or cause to be made a memorandum of such conviction in a register to be kept by him of the names and places of abode of the persons so convicted, and shall state whether such conviction be the first or second conviction of the offending party." (b)

Convictions to be returned to the quarter sessions registered, and may be given in evidence.

Clerk of peace to keep a register.

Sect. 10. "That in Scotland the sheriff of the county within which the offence shall have been committed, shall have a cumulative jurisdiction with the justices of the peace in regard to the same; and the conviction in Scotland may be proved in the same manner as a conviction in any other case, according to the law of Scotland."

Scotland.

Observations—Mr. Carrington observes, in his work on the criminal law, c. cxlvii. that the first section of the above act applies where the party is named, and the scale of punishment is new. Under sect. 3 of the statute 7 Geo. III. c. 90, (now repealed,) persons out in the night with engines to destroy game, were liable to be apprehended and conveyed before a magistrate, "to be dealt with according to law." Before this act, the mere fact of killing game in the night subjected the party to a penalty only. (c) However, should be observed, that though the destroying of both game and rabbits included in this enactment, yet it does not extend to persons going out in the night with intent to destroy rabbits: and another point worthy of consideration is, whether, to constitute a second offence, it is necessary that the party should commit exactly the same species of offence in both instances: in short, if a party killed game in the night the first time, and was it with intent to kill it the second, it might be a question, whether, as this is a penal statute, he could be considered as having committed a second offence. The third offence being a transportable misdemeanor, it is quite clear that one magistrate may commit the party for trial at the assizes or quarter sessions; but as it is a misdemeanor only, there seems to be no doubt that the prisoner is entitled to be admitted to bail. The difficulty mentioned above, as to whether the second offence must be exactly similar to the first, arises equally here. The stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 90, contained the words "forest, chase, park," &c. as well as the words "open or enclosed ground;" but the omission of them in the present statute makes no difference; because in the case of Rex v. Pankhurst, R. & R. C. C. 503, it was held, that those places are either open or enclosed grounds.

Observations.

(a) These provisions are, it seems, new.

(c) See ante, 923.

(b) See in general, ante, Conviction, Vol. I.

Game—(Night Poaching, against 9 Geo. 4, c. 69.) [XI. (3.)]

He also observes, that "the clause respecting the apprehension of offenders is materially different from the enactments on this point, which were contained in the stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 90, (now repealed.) Under that statute any person or persons might apprehend offenders, which is not so now but under the present act it will be seen, that persons having a right or reputed right of free warren or free chase, and lords of manors or reputed manors, or their gamekeepers or servants, may now apprehend offenders: and not merely the owners or occupiers of the land, or persons acting under them; and this not merely at the place where the offence is committed, but in any place to which they may pursue the offender; and also offenders are now to be delivered to a peace officer, to be conveyed before two justices instead of one justice as formerly. It should also be observed, that this clause respecting apprehension only extends to offenders against sect. 1 of this act, and that there is no clause that expressly relates to the apprehension of armed poachers offending against sect. 9 of this act; however, this appears to be of the less consequence, as there could hardly be a case where parties guilty under sect. 9 would not come also within the terms of sect. 1."

The word "found" in the 57 Geo. III. was held to mean "having been seen or discovered." See Att. Gen. v. Delano, 1 Price, 383.

If gamekeepers attempt to apprehend persons armed with offensive weapons, who are poaching in the night, and one of the gamekeepers be shot by one of the poachers, this will be murder in all, unless it be shown that either of the poachers separated himself from the rest, so as to show that he did not join in the act. R. v. Edmeads, 3 C. & P.; see R. v. White. R. & R. C. C. 99.

Where gamekeepers had seized two persons who were poaching in the night, and they having surrendered called to a third, who came up, and he killed one of the gamekeepers: held to be murder in all, though the two struck no blow, and though the gamekeepers had not announced in what capacity they had apprehended them. R. v. Whitorne, Id.

(3.) OFFENCES UNDER 9 GEO. IV. c. 69, PUNISHABLE BY INDICTMENT.*9 Geo. 4, c. 69.

If persons to the number of three, being armed, enter any land for the purpose of taking or destroying game, &c. they shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Jurisdiction of sheriffs in Scotland.

Proving of convictions in Scotland.

Third offences, &c. to be tried in certain courts.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 69, s. 9, it is enacted, "that if any persons, to the number of three or more together, shall by night (a) unlawfully enter or be in any land, whether open or inclosed, for the purpose of taking or destroying game (b) or rabbits, any of such persons being armed with any gun, cross-bow, fire-arms, bludgeon, or any other offensive weapon, each and every of such persons shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof before the justices of gaol delivery, or of the court of great sessions of the county or place in which the offence shall be committed, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years nor less than seven years, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding three years; and in Scotland any person so offending shall be liable to be punished in like manner."

Sect. 10 enacts, "that in Scotland the sheriff of the county within which the offence shall have been committed shall have a cumulative jurisdiction with the justices of the peace in regard to the same; and the conviction in Scotland may be proved in the same manner as a conviction in any other case according to the law of Scotland."

Sect. 11 enacts, "that in all cases in Scotland of a third offence, or in other cases in Scotland where a sentence of transportation may, by the provisions of this act, be pronounced, the offender shall be tried before the high court or circuit court of justiciary."

(a) What is night, see sect. 12, ante, 926.

(b) What is game, see sect. 13, ante, 926.

We have already seen, ante, 927, that a third offence of night poaching, by armed persons, is, by sect. 1 of this act, made a transportable misdemeanor.

We have also seen that the stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 69, s. 2, enacts, "that in case such offender (as ante, 927,) shall assault, or offer any violence with any gun, cross-bow, fire-arms, bludgeon, stick, club, or any other offensive weapon whatsoever, towards any person hereby (ante, 927,) authorised to seize and apprehend him, he shall, whether it be his first, second, or any other offence, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable at the discretion of the court to be transported beyond seas for seven years, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding two years; and in Scotland, whenever any person shall so offend, he shall be liable to be punished in like manner."

As to assaulting deer-keepers or their assistants, see post, 934.

We have seen that, by the 4th section of the act, "the prosecution for every offence punishable upon indictment, or otherwise than upon summary conviction, by virtue of this act, shall be commenced within twelve calendar months after the commission of such offence."

NIGHT
POACHING.

Third offence.
Assaulting game-keepers, &c. in apprehending night poachers, &c.
Transportation or imprisonment.

Observations.]—If several persons are out with intent to kill game, and only one of them is armed, the rest who are unarmed are, it seems, liable to be convicted under the present act, 9 Geo. IV. In R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 368, they were held liable under such circumstances to be convicted on the repealed act, 57 Geo. III.

Observations.

And it seems no answer to a charge, under the 9 Geo. IV., that the prisoners put down their arms and left them before they were seen, if it was received (by the flash of a gun, or otherwise) that some of them were armed before they were seen. R. v. Nash, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 386. So decided on the repealed act.

If several went into a close in the night, to kill game, and one had arms, without the knowledge of the others, the others who were unarmed are not liable to be convicted under the repealed act of 57 Geo. III.; R. v. Southern, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 444; but it seems they would be under the present act.

Upon the repealed statute, 57 Geo. III. c. 90, which is differently worded from the 9th section of the 9 Geo. IV., a prisoner being indicted for having entered a wood, called Kingshoe Spinney, with intent illegally to destroy game, and being found in the said wood, in the night, armed, &c.; and the second count charging that having entered into the said wood with intent, he was found in a certain close, to wit, Kingshoe Close. It appeared that the prisoner was not seen in the wood; he was seen in a close adjoining but shortly before he was seen shots were heard and the flashes were seen in the wood: and the jury found that he was one of the persons who had been firing in the wood. The prisoner being found guilty, it was referred for the opinion of the judges whether it was necessary to prove that the prisoner was seen in the place where the indictment stated him to have been found; and the judges held that as there was evidence to satisfy the jury that the prisoner had been in the wood armed, or one of the party who had been so, it was sufficient. R. v. Charles Worker, R. & M. C. C. 165.

Upon an indictment on the repealed statute, 57 Geo. III. c. 90, for having entered a certain close, situate, &c. in the occupation of Thomas Quaife, with intent then and there to destroy, take and kill game, &c. It appeared that the prisoner was taken in the close in question in the night time, armed with a gun and having two pheasants in his pockets; he was coming in a direction towards a wood, which was a preserve for game, and going towards two other woods, which were also preserves; but the close in which he was taken was not a preserve: the judge left it to the jury to say, whether the defendant when taken, was returning home, or still in the pursuit of game; and, if not, whether his purpose was to kill game in the close mentioned in the indictment: the jury found that the prisoner was still in pursuit of game, but could not say whether in the close or elsewhere. The prisoner being convicted, the judges held the conviction to be wrong, because the entry with intent to kill game being confined by the indictment to the close therein specified, the intent should have been proved as to that particular close. R. v. Thomas Barham, R. & M. C. C. 151.

The indictment.

Indictment]—Where the indictment was for entering a certain wood, called “Old Walk,” belonging to and in the occupation of the Earl of Waldegrave, in the night time, armed, &c. with intent to destroy, take and kill game; and in evidence it appeared that the wood was called “Long Walk,” and was never known by the name of “Old Walk;” the judges held the variance to be fatal. R. v. William Owen and William Prickett, R. & M. C. C. 118.

Where the land was described in one count as “a certain close,” in another as “certain inclosed ground,” but there was nothing in the indictment to show what particular close or what particular inclosed ground was meant, it not being described by name, ownership, occupation, or abutments: the prisoner being convicted, five of the judges held the description of the place insufficient, because the offence was substantially a local offence, and the prisoner was entitled to know to what specific place the evidence was to be directed; three of the judges thought differently. The judgment was arrested. R. v. Thomas Ridley, R. & R. C. C. 515.

Where an indictment alleged that “A. B., C. D., &c. on, &c. at, &c. to the number of three and more together, did, by night, unlawfully enter divers closes and inclosed lands there situate and being, in the occupation of E. F., and were then and there in the said closes and inclosed lands armed with guns, for the purpose of destroying game;” it was held, that it did not contain a sufficient averment that the defendants were by night in the closes armed for the purpose of destroying game. And the judgment given for the crown, at the Chester great sessions, was reversed. Davies and others v. The King, (in error,) 10 B. & C. 89. Et per Lord Tenterden, C. J.—“Assuming the indictment to be sufficient in that respect, it still appears to us that the judgment must be reversed. The phrase used is, that the defendants ‘did by night unlawfully enter divers closes, and were then and there in the said closes,’ &c., not that they ‘by night did unlawfully enter, and,’ &c. If the words ‘by night’ had occurred at the beginning of the sentence, they might have governed the whole, or if they had been at the end of the sentence, they might have referred to the whole, but here they are in the middle of the sentence, and are applied to a particular branch of it, and cannot be extended to that which follows. The two members of the sentence are distinct; the first states the entry into the closes by night, but does not state that the defendants were armed, or the intent with which they entered; the second branch states that they were in the closes armed for the purpose of destroying game, but not that they were there by night. Neither of those branches of the sentence contains all that is requisite to constitute an offence within the statute, and the two being distinct, the indictment is bad, and the judgment must be reversed.”

XII. Laws relative to the Four-footed Game in particular.

Which said laws seem to concern all persons whomsoever, whether qualified or not.

Now the four-footed game, or the game of beasts, are of three kinds, viz.

- (1.) Deer, and herein of Deer stealing, &c.
- (2.) Hares, Hare stealing, &c.
- (3.) Conies.

(1.) Deer, Deer stealing, &c. and other Offences as to.

Deer stealing]—The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 26, enacts, “that if any person shall unlawfully and wilfully course, hunt, snare, or carry away.

Stealing, &c. deer in parks or inclosed parts of

or kill or wound, or attempt to kill or wound, any deer kept or being in the inclosed part of any forest, chase, or purlieu, or in any inclosed land wherein deer shall be usually kept, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as in the case of simple larceny; and if any person shall unlawfully and wilfully course, hunt, snare, or carry away, or kill or wound, or attempt to kill or wound, any deer kept or being in the uninclosed part of any forest, chase, or purlieu, he shall for every such offence, on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding fifty pounds, as to the justice shall seem meet; and if any person, who shall have been previously convicted of any offence relating to deer, for which a pecuniary penalty is by this act imposed, shall offend a second time, by committing any of the offences hereinbefore last enumerated, such second offence, whether it be of the same description as the first offence or not, shall be deemed felony, and such offender, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as in the case of simple larceny."

The general clauses which affect all the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, will be found post, tit. Larceny, Vol. III. p. 550 to 556.

By the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, so much of the Carta de Foresta, as relates to the King's venison; and so much of the stat. 3 Edw. I. c. 20, as relates to trespassers in parks and ponds; and so much of the stat. 3 Edw. I. c. 1, as relates to trespassers in the King's forests of vert and venison, are repealed; and by the same statute, the stat. 21 Edw. I. st. 2, intituled De Malefactoribus in Parcibus, and the 16 Geo. III. c. 30; 42 Geo. III. c. 107, and 51 Geo. III. c. 120, are wholly repealed.

In R. v. Rogers, at Worcester Spring Assizes, 1811, Lawrence, J., decided, that to support an indictment on the now repealed statute, for coursing deer in an inclosed ground, it is necessary, on the part of the prosecution, to call the owner of the deer to prove that he did not give his consent to the prisoner to course them; 2 Campb. 654; but this, it is conceived, is not necessary under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29. In R. v. Allen, R. v. Ayent, and R. v. Hamberlain, R. & M. C. C. 155, on a conviction for taking fish, &c. it was held, that though there must be some evidence to negative the owner's consent, the owner need not be called for the purpose; his non-consent may be inferred from other circumstances, or proved by his agents. See ante, 761.

Persons suspected of having Venison in their possession—The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 27, also enacts, "that if any deer, or the head, skin, or other part thereof, or any snare or engine for the taking of the deer, shall by virtue of a search warrant, to be granted as hereinafter mentioned, be found in the possession of any person, or on the premises of any person with his knowledge, and such person being carried before a justice of the peace shall not satisfy the justice that he came lawfully by such deer, or the head, skin, or other part thereof, or had a lawful occasion for such snare or engine, and shall not keep the same for any unlawful purpose, he shall, on conviction by justices, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds; and if such person shall not under the provisions aforesaid be liable to conviction, then for the discovery of the party who actually killed or stole such deer, it shall be lawful for the justice, at his discretion, as the evidence given in the circumstances of the case shall require, to summon before him every person through whose hands such deer, or the head, skin, or other part thereof, shall appear to have passed; and if the person from whom the same shall have been first received, or who shall have had possession thereof, shall satisfy the justice that he came lawfully by the same, he shall, on conviction by the justice, be liable to the payment of such sum of money as is hereinbefore last mentioned." The 16 Geo. III. c. 30, which was nearly similar in its 4th, 5th, and 6th sections to the above enactment, is wholly repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29.

Setting Engines and Destroying Park Paling, &c.—The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 28, enacts, "that if any person shall unlawfully and wilfully set or use any snare or engine whatsoever, for the purpose of taking or killing deer in any part of any forest, chase, or purlieu, whether such part be inclosed or not, or in any fence or bank dividing the same from any land adjoining, or in any inclosed land where deer shall be usually kept, or shall unlawfully and wilfully destroy any part of the fence of any land where any deer shall be then kept, every such offender, being convicted thereof before a justice of the peace, shall forfeit and pay such sum of money, not exceeding twenty pounds, as to the justice shall seem meet."

See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 28, post, Larceny, Vol. III. p. 550 to 556.

The stat. 16 Geo. III. c. 30, which was nearly similar in its 7th and 8th sections to the above enactment, is wholly repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27.

Felony.

Seizing Dogs, Guns, &c. Assaulting Keepers—By sect. 29 of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, it is enacted, "that if any person shall enter into any forest, chase, or purlieu, whether inclosed or not, or into any inclosed land where deer shall be usually kept, with intent unlawfully to hunt, course, wound, kill, snare, or carry away any deer, it shall be lawful for every person intrusted with the care of such deer, and for any of his assistants, whether in his presence or not, to demand from every such offender any gun, fire arms, snare, or engine in his possession, and any dog there brought for hunting, coursing, or killing deer; and in case such offender shall not immediately deliver up the same, to seize and take the same from him in any of those respective places, or, upon pursuit made, in any other place to which he may have escaped therefrom, for the use of the owner of the deer; and if any such offender shall unlawfully beat or wound any person intrusted with the care of the deer, or any of his assistants, in the execution of any of the powers given by this act, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as in the case of simple larceny."

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, wholly repeals the stat. 16 Geo. III. c. 30, the former statute on this subject.

The 16 Geo. III. did not extend, it seems, to assistant keepers, and no previous demand was necessary before the seizure of guns, &c. R. v. Amy. Russ. & Ry. C. C. 500.

(2.) Hares, Hare stealing.

It is to be remembered that we have already, ante, 896 to 913, treated of those particulars, which are common to this with other species of the game, as to destroying the same by unqualified persons; we would here take notice of such things as belong to hares only, and which for the most part seem generally to concern all persons, whether qualified or not.

And the sessions or leet may inquire thereof; and after inquisition found, they shall for every hare so killed, cess upon every offender 6s. 8d. to be forfeited to the King, if in the sessions; and to the lord of the leet, if in the leet.

Observations, &c.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, wholly repeals the stats. 3 Jac. I. c. 13; 1 Jac. I. c. 13; 5 Geo. III. c. 14; and also the whole of the stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, except so far as relates to "the appointment and powers of keepers, search warrants, and the description of persons who are thereby declared to be persons not allowed to have or keep for themselves or any other person, any guns, bows, greyhounds, or other animals or things therein enumerated," which exceptions appear to extend to the 1st, 2d, and 3d sections of that act.

Repeal of acts.

Taking a rabbit in a wire was sufficient to constitute the offence within the stat. Geo. III. c. 14, s. 6, though the rabbit were not killed, and though the owner never took it away. R. v. Glover, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 269.

(3.) Conies.

We have already noticed the offence of killing, &c. conies in the day or night-time in warrens or grounds lawfully used for the breeding or keeping of conies. See the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 30, supra.

Killing in warrens.

As to the necessary certificate to kill conies, see ante, p. 891.

Certificate.

If conies are out of the warren, no person hath any property in them; and no man may justify killing them if they eat up his corn: but no action lies against the owner of the warren. 5 Rep. 104.

No action against owners of warrens for injury by co-nies.

As to a person that hath a right of common may kill them when they are out of the warren, and destroy the common; but he cannot have an action on the case against the lord, for that would be to create a multiplicity of actions.

Eliz. 548; Cro. Jac. 195; Cro. Car. 388.

CONIES.

For a man cannot have an action for another man's conies breaking into his ground, because they are no longer the other's than while they are in the warren or place where he hath a right to keep them; so that no violation hereby arises to the property of one man by the beasts of another; but the conies, being in their natural liberty, may be lawfully killed by the owner of the soil. 3 Bac. Abr. 326.

But if the lord hath a right to put conies upon the common, and by an excess in the number surcharges the common, and by the number of burrows made by the conies prevents the commoners' cattle from depasturing the common; an action in such case is the proper remedy, and the tenant may not of his own accord fill up the burrows and remove the nuisance. As in the case of Cooper v. Marshall, 1 Burr. 259. By Ld. Mansfield, C. J. "The question in this case is not, whether the act of the lord be or be not hurtful, or how far it may be so: but the question turns upon the remedy, whether it is abateable, whether the commoner can do himself justice? It may be prejudicial to the commoner, yet not injurious; it may be both prejudicial and injurious, yet not abateable. The lord by his grant of common gives every thing incident to the enjoyment of it, as ingress, egress, and the like; and thereby authorises the commoner to remove every obstruction to his cattle's grazing the grass which grows upon such a spot of ground; because every such obstruction is directly contrary to the terms of the grant. A hedge, a gate, or a wall, to keep the commoners' cattle out, is inconsistent with a grant which gives them a right to come in. But the lord still remains owner of the soil; and is not debarred from exercising any act of ownership. The commoner has no right to meddle with the soil. In the present case, the lord has done nothing contrary to the grant. He hath not obstructed the commoner from entering and putting in his cattle. The lord has a right to put conies upon the common. The conies themselves naturally make the burrows. So that they are incident to the right of putting on the conies. If the lord surcharges, the commoner is injured in his right of common, it is true: but what is the commoner's remedy? Not to abate; not to be his own judge in a complicated question, which may admit of nicety to determine. There is a certain line to be drawn. The lord has a right so far, but no farther. Yet the commoner cannot destroy or drive off the conies; nor, consequently, can he destroy the burrows, which is in effect destroying the conies."

XIII. Law relative to the Winged Game in particular.

And herein that which is, strictly speaking, Game, is not the sole subject of consideration.

- (2.) Of Swans.
- (3.) Of Partridges and Pheasants.
- (4.) Of Pigeons.
- (5.) Of Wild Ducks, Wild Geese, and other Water Fowl.
- (6.) Of Heath Fowl, Grouse, and Bustards.
- (7.) Of Herons.

(1.) Hawks and Hawking.

What hawks a man shall bear.

By stat. 11 Hen. VII. c. 17, no man shall bear any hawk of the breed of England, called a nyesse, goshawk, tassel, laner, laneret, or faulcon, on pain of forfeiting his hawk to the king. And if he bring any of them over sea, he shall bring a certificate thereof from the officer of the port; on the like pain of forfeiting the same to the king. And the person that bringeth any such hawk to the king shall have a reasonable reward of the king, or else the hawk for his labour.

SWANS.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, so much of the 34 Edw. III. c. 22, and 37 Edw. III. c. 21, s. 3, as relates to hawks, is repealed.

By stat. 5 Eliz. c. 21, s. 3, if any person shall take away any hawk or hawks or their eggs by any means unlawfully out of the woods or ground of any person, and be thereof convicted at the assizes or sessions on indictment, bill, or information, at the suit of the King, or of the party, he shall be imprisoned three months, and shall pay treble damages; and after the three months expired shall find sureties for his good abearing for seven years, or remain in prison till he doth find such during the said time of seven years.

Taking hawks or eggs out of the woods.

But by stat. 11 Hen. VII. c. 17, no man shall take any ayre, faulcon, goshawk, tassel, laner, or laneret, in their warren, wood, or other place; nor purposely drive them out of their coverts accustomed to breed in, to cause them to go to other coverts to breed; nor slay them for any hurt done by them; on pain of 10*l.*, half to him that will sue before the justices of the peace, and half to the King.

And no manner of person of what condition or degree he be, shall take or cause to be taken on his own ground or any other man's, the eggs of any falcon, goshawk, or laner, out of the nest; on pain (being convicted thereof before the justices of the peace) of imprisonment for a year and a day, and one at the King's will; half to the King, and half to the owner of the ground where the eggs were taken.

By stat. 23 Eliz. c. 10, s. 4, if any manner of person shall hawk in another man's corn, after it is eared, and whilst growing, and before it is shocked, and be convicted at the assizes, sessions, or leet, he shall forfeit 40*s.* to the owner; and if not paid in ten days, he shall be imprisoned for a month.

Hawking in corn.

(2.) Swans.

A swan is a royal fowl; and all those the property whereof is not known, belong to the King by his prerogative. Case of the Swans, 7 Rep. 16.

A royal fowl.

By stat. 22 Edw. IV. c. 6, no person (other than the King's son) unless he have lands of freehold to the value of five marks a-year, shall have any mark or game of swans; on pain of forfeiting the swans, half to the King, and half to any person (so qualified) who shall seize the same.

Qualification to keep swans.

It is felony to take any swans that be lawfully marked though they be at large. Dalt. c. 156.

Stealing swans marked.

As to swans unmarked; if they be domesticated or tame, that is, kept in a boat, or in a pond near to a dwellinghouse, to steal such is also felony.

Swans unmarked.

So it seemeth of swans unmarked, so long as they keep within a man's nor, or within his private rivers; or if they happen to escape from thence, they shall be pursued and taken, and brought in again. Id.

But if swans that are unmarked shall be abroad, and shall attain to their natural liberty, then the property of them is lost; and so long felony cannot be committed by taking them. Id.

And yet such unmarked and wild swans the King's officers may seize (being abroad) for the King's use by his prerogative. Also the King may hunt them, and by consequence another may prescribe to have them, within certain precinct or place. Id. 7 Rep. 18. And see title Larceny, Vol. III. p. 572.

By stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 2, every person who shall take the eggs of any swans out of the nests, or willingly break or spoil them in the nests, and shall be convicted thereof before two justices by confession, or oath of two witnesses, shall be committed to gaol three months, unless he pay to the churchwardens for the use of the poor, 20*s.* for every egg; or after one month his commitment become bound by his recognizance with two sureties in a-piece, before two justices, never to offend again in like manner: which recognizance shall be returned to the next sessions.

Swans' eggs.

PARTRIDGES
PHEASANTS.

But by stat. 11 Hen. VII. c. 17, no person shall take or cause to be taken on his own ground or any other man's the eggs of any swan, on pain (on conviction before the justices of the peace) of imprisonment for a year and a day, and fine at the King's will, half to the King, and half to the owner of the swan.

(3.) Partridges and Pheasants.

Are birds of warren.

Partridges and pheasants are birds of warren, and the law seems peculiarly to protect them, as appears by what follows.

Taking them in another man's ground.

By stat. 11 Hen. 7, c. 17, it is enacted, that no person of what condition he be shall take or cause to be taken any pheasants or partridges by nets, snares, or other engines, out of his own warren, upon the freehold of any other person, without the special license of the owner or possessor of the same, on pain of 10*l.*, half to him that shall sue, and half to the owner or possessor of the ground where they shall be taken.

Taking them with nets, dogs, or engines; or their eggs.

By stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 2, every person who shall shoot at, kill, or destroy any pheasant or partridge with any gun or bow; or shall take, kill, or destroy them with setting dogs and nets, or with any manner of nets, snares, engines, or instruments whatsoever; or shall take their eggs out of the nests or spoil them in the nests, shall on conviction before two justices, by confession or oath of two witnesses, be committed to gaol three months, unless he pay upon conviction to the churchwardens for the use of the poor 20*s.* for every pheasant, partridge, or egg; or after one month after his commitment become bound by recognizance with two sureties before two justices in 20*l.* each not to offend again in like manner. The recognizance to be returned to the next sessions.

And by stat. 7 Jac. I. c. 11, every person who shall take, kill, or destroy any pheasant or partridge with setting dogs and nets, or otherwise with any manner of nets, snares, or engines, shall, on conviction before two justices, by confession or oath of one witness, be committed to the common gaol where the offence shall be committed or the party apprehended, for three months, unless he forthwith pay to the churchwardens or overseers 20*s.* for every pheasant or partridge; and further shall become bound by recognizance of 20*l.* before one justice that he shall not thereafter take, kill, or destroy any pheasant or partridge. The recognizance to be filed at the next sessions.

Selling or buying.

By stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 4, every person who shall sell, or buy to sell again, any partridge or pheasant (except they be reared and brought up in houses, or brought from beyond sea,) shall on conviction at the assizes or sessions, or before two justices out of sessions, forfeit for every partridge 10*s.* and for every pheasant 20*s.*, half to him that will sue, and half to the poor. See further as to buying and selling Game, &c. ante, p. 913 to 920.

Taking in the night.

By stat. 23 Eliz. c. 10, s. 1, if any person, of what estate, degree, or condition soever, shall take, kill, or destroy any pheasants or partridges in the night-time, and be thereof convicted at the assizes, sessions, or leet, he shall forfeit for every pheasant 20*s.* and for every partridge 10*s.*, half to him that shall sue, and half to the lord of the liberty, lordship, or manor, unless such lord shall license or procure the said taking or killing, in which case the said half shall go to the poor, to be recovered by any one of the churchwardens; and if not paid in ten days next after conviction, he shall be imprisoned for one month: and moreover, besides such forfeiture or imprisonment, he shall give bond to some justice of the peace, with good sureties, for the space of two years, not to take, kill, or destroy any partridges or pheasants contrary to the true meaning of this act. See also the 9 Ann. c. 25, s. 3, ante, p. 923.

We have already noticed the provisions of the 9 Ann. c. 25, s. 3, and 13 Geo. III. c. 80, relative to the penalties for taking pheasants, &c. in the night, or on Sunday, or Christmas day, ante, p. 923.

At what time hawking at them shall be prohibited.

By stat. 7 Jac. I. c. 11, s. 2, every person whatsoever, who shall hawk at, destroy, or kill any pheasant or partridge with any kind of hawk or dog, by colour of hawking, between the first of July and the last of August, shall, on conviction before two justices, by confession or oath of two witnesses, in six months after the offence, be committed to gaol for one month, unless he pay upon conviction to the churchwardens or overseers, for the use of the poor, 10s. for every such hawking at any pheasant or partridge, and 20s. for every such pheasant or partridge which he, his hawk, or dog, shall take or kill.

Finally, by stat. 2 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 1, 2, 4, no person shall, upon any pretence whatsoever, take, kill, destroy, carry, sell, buy, or have in his possession or use any partridge between [1st of February and 1st of September, 9 Geo. III. c. 34, s. 3], or any pheasant between February 1st and October 1st, yearly, on pain of forfeiting on conviction by one witness, in any of the courts of record at Westminster, 5*l.* for every such partridge or pheasant, with full costs. But this is not to extend to any pheasant taken in the season allowed by this act, and kept in any mew or breeding place.

Within what times taking them in any kind shall be prohibited.

Prosecutions under this act to be commenced within six months.

J. Rough being convicted on an indictment for stealing a pheasant, value 10s., of the goods and chattels of H. S., all the judges on a second conference in Easter Term, 1779, after much debate and difference of opinion, agreed that the conviction was bad; for in cases of larceny of animals feræ naturæ the indictment must show that they were either dead, tame, or caged; otherwise they must be presumed to be in their original state; and that it is not sufficient to add, "of the goods and chattels of" such an one.

Stealing pheasants.

(4.) Pigeons.

A lord of a manor may build a dove-cote upon his land, parcel of his manor; but a tenant of the manor cannot do it without license. 3 Salk. 248. But any freeholder may build a dove-cote on his own ground. Cro. Jac. 42, 490.

Who may erect a dove-cote.

And it hath been adjudged that erecting a dove-house is not a common nuisance, nor presentable in the leet. Cro. Jac. 490, 491.

Dove-cote not a nuisance.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 33, enacts, "that if any person shall lawfully and wilfully kill, wound, or take any house dove or pigeon, under such circumstances as shall not amount to larceny at common law, every such offender, being convicted thereof before a justice of the peace, shall forfeit and pay, over and above the value of the bird, any sum not exceeding two pence."

Killing, &c. house pigeons.

See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of this act, post, Larceny, Vol. III. p. 550 to 556.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals so much of the stat. 2 Jac. I. c. 27, relates to house doves, pigeons, and deer; and so much of the stat. 4 W. M. c. 23, as relates to pigeons; and wholly repeals the stat. 2 Geo. III. c. 29.

If the pigeons come upon my land, and I kill them, the owner hath no remedy against me; though I may be liable to the statutes which make it illegal to destroy them. Cro. Jac. 492.

Pigeons trespassing.

Doves in a dove-house, young and old, shall go to the heir, and not the executor. 1 Inst. 8.

Pigeons to go to the heir.

(5.) Wild Ducks, Wild Geese, and other Water Fowl.

By stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 2, every person who shall shoot at, kill, or destroy, with any gun, or bow, any mallard, duck, teal, or widgeon, and the same be proved by confession or oath of two witnesses, before two justices, shall be committed to gaol for three months, unless he pay to the churchwardens, for the use of the poor, 20s. for each fowl, or after one month after commitment become bound by recognizance, with two sureties, before two justices, in 20*l.* each, not to offend again in like manner; which recognizance shall be returned to the next sessions.

By stat. 25 Hen. VIII. c. 11, no person, between the last day of May and the last day of August yearly, shall take or cause to be taken any wild ducks, mallards, widgeons, teals, or wild geese, with nets or other engines, on pain of a year's imprisonment, and to forfeit for every fowl so taken 4*l.* half to the king, and half to him that will sue by action of debt; also the justices of the peace may enquire of, hear, and determine the same as in cases of trespass.

Nevertheless, any gentlemen, or any other that may dispend 40*s.* a year of freehold, may hunt and take such wild fowl with their spaniels only, without using a net or other engine except the long bow. Id.

But by a subsequent stat. 9 Anne, c. 25, s. 4, if any person whatsoever [between June 1 and Oct. 1, yearly, 10 Geo. II. c. 32,] shall by hays, tunnels, or other nets, drive and take any wild duck, teal, widgeon, or any other water fowl, in any place or resort for wild fowl in the moulting season, and shall be convicted thereof before one justice, by the oath of one witness, he shall for every such fowl so taken forfeit 5*s.* half to the informer, and half to the poor, by distress and sale, rendering the overplus, above the penalty and charge of distress; for want of distress, to be committed to the house of correction, not exceeding one month nor less than fourteen days, to be whipped and kept to hard labour; and the nets to be seized and destroyed in the presence of the justice.

Destroying their eggs.

By stat. 25 Hen. VIII. c. 11, s. 5, no person from March 31 to June 30 yearly, shall take or destroy the eggs of any mallard, teal, or other water fowl, on pain of a year's imprisonment, and of forfeiting for every egg one penny, half to the king, and half to him that will sue by action of debt; or the justices of the peace may determine the same as in cases of trespass.

(6.) Heath Fowl, Grouse, and Bustards.

Shooting.

By stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 2, every person who shall shoot at, kill, or destroy with any gun or bow any grouse, heath-cock, or moor game, shall, on conviction before two justices where the offence shall be committed or the offender apprehended, by confession or oath of two witnesses, be committed to gaol for three months, unless upon conviction he pay to the churchwardens, for the use of the poor where the offence was committed or the offender apprehended, 20*s.* for every fowl, or after one month after his commitment become bound by recognizance, with two sureties in 20*l.* each, before two justices, not to offend again in like manner; the recognizance to be returned to the next sessions.

Within what times only to be killed.

By stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 1, 2, 4, no person shall, upon any pretence whatsoever, wilfully take, kill, destroy, carry, sell, buy, or have in his possession or use, any heath-fowl, commonly called black game, between Dec. 10 and Aug. 20; nor any grouse, commonly called red game, between Dec. 10 and Aug. 12; nor any bustard, between March 1 and Sept. 1, in any year, on pain of forfeiting, for the first offence, any sum not exceeding 20*l.* nor less than 10*l.*; and for the second and every subsequent offence, not exceeding 30*l.* nor less than 20*l.*; half to the informer, and half to the poor.

Penalties how to be recovered.

Sects. 3, 4, 9. To be recovered in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, on prosecution within six calendar months after the offence committed. Or the same may be recovered before one justice, information on oath being made before him within three calendar months after the offence committed; which said justice may convict the offender by confession or oath of one witness; and on neglect or refusal to pay, shall levy the same by distress and sale, together with all costs and charges attending the same, rendering the overplus. And such justice may order the offender to be detained in safe custody until return may conveniently be had to the warrant of distress, unless the said offender shall give security, by recognizance or otherwise, to the satisfaction of such justice, for his appearance before him on the day

And if no sufficient distress can be had, such justice shall commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding six nor less than three calendar months, unless the forfeiture and all costs and charges attending the prosecution be sooner paid and discharged.

Sects. 6, 7. And the conviction shall be drawn up in this or the like form:

Which conviction the justice shall cause to be written on parchment, and returned to the next sessions, there to be filed and kept amongst the records. And the clerk of the peace shall grant copies thereof on payment of 1s. for each copy.

Sect. 10. If any person shall think himself aggrieved, he may appeal to any general quarter sessions to be holden within four calendar months after the cause of complaint shall arise, giving fourteen day's notice in writing to the justice, and to every other person against whom complaint shall be made; and in four days after such notice entering into a recognizance before a justice with one sufficient surety, conditioned to try the appeal at, and abide the order of, and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such sessions. And the justice having received notice of appeal shall return all proceedings had before him, touching the matter of the said appeal, to the justices at such sessions. And the said justices upon proof of the notice given, and of the entering into such recognizance, shall determine the appeal in a summary way, and award costs to either party, to be levied and recovered as herein before mentioned for the recovery of penalties and forfeitures under this act. And none of the proceedings shall be quashed for want of form, nor removed by certiorari or other process into any of the courts at Westminster.

Appeal.

By stat. 9 Anne, c. 25, if any person whatsoever shall take or kill any moor, heath game, or grouse in the night time, he shall, on conviction before a justice, on the oath of one witness, forfeit 5*l.* half to the informer, and half to the poor, by distress and sale; for want of distress, to be sent to the house of correction for three months for the first offence, and for every other offence four months.

Killing in the night.

And by stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 80, if any person shall knowingly and wilfully kill, take, or destroy, or use any gun, dog, snare, net, or other engine, with intent to kill, take, or destroy, any moor game or heath game, in the night, viz. between the hours of seven at night and six in the morning from the 12th day of Oct. to the 12th day of Feb. and between the hours of nine at night and four in the morning from the 12th day of Feb. to the 12th day of Oct. (or in the day time on a Sunday or Christmas-day,) he shall forfeit for the first offence not exceeding 20*l.* nor less than 10*l.*; for the second offence not exceeding 30*l.* nor less than 20*l.*; for the third and every other subsequent offence 50*l.*: to be levied and recovered as the like penalties for killing any hare in the night, or on a Sunday or Christmas-day, [as is before set forth.] Vide ante, p. 923.

night, or on Sunday or Christmas-day.

By stat. 50 Geo. III. c. 67, it is enacted, that no person shall on any pretence whatever take, kill, or destroy, or attempt to take, kill, or destroy, in the counties of Somerset and Devon, any heath-fowl, commonly called black game, between the 10th of Dec. and the 1st of Sept. in any year, and any person shall for every heath-fowl so taken, killed, or destroyed, and for every attempt to kill, take, and destroy such heath-fowl, contrary to the true intent of this act, be liable to the same forfeitures and penalties, to be recovered in the same manner and subject to the like appeal, and the same provisions in every respect whatever as by the 13 Geo. III. c. 55, are enacted in respect of any offence committed against the said acts.

Black game in the New Forest.

And by stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 112, persons taking or killing in the New Forest any black game between Dec. 10 and Sept. 1, shall be liable to the forfeitures and penalties of stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 55.

Burning ling.

The stat. 4 & 5 Will. III. c. 23, s. 11, relative to the burning of ling, &c. is repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, s. 1, and as to that offence now, see ante, Burning, Vol. I. p. 540.

In stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, there are particular directions concerning the burning of ling, heath, or brakes in Sherwood forest, and other places in Nottinghamshire, which not being of general concern are here omitted.

(7.) Herons.

Shooting herons.

By stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 27, s. 2, every person who shall shoot at, kill, or destroy any heron with gun or bow, shall, on conviction before two justices by confession or oath of two witnesses, be committed to gaol for three months, unless on conviction he pay to the churchwardens for the use of the poor 20s. for each heron, or after one month from his commitment be bound by recognizance with two sureties in 20l. each, before two justices, not to offend again in like manner: the recognizance to be returned to the next sessions.

None shall take but by hawking.

By stat. 19 Hen. VII. c. 11, no person, without his own ground, shall slay, take, or cause to be taken, by means of craft or engine, any heron, unless it be with hawking, or with long bows, on pain of 6s. 8d. to him who shall sue by action of debt; or the sessions may call before them persons suspected, and examine them; and if found in default, may commit them till they have found surety for payment of the forfeiture to the king; and the justices shall have the tenth part of the forfeiture for their labour.

Young herons.

No person, without his own ground, shall take any young herons out of the nest, on pain of 10s. in like manner for every young heron. Id.

Destroying eggs.

And by stat. 25 Hen. VIII. c. 11, if any person from March 31 to June 30, shall take or destroy the eggs of any heron, he shall be imprisoned for a year, and forfeit for every egg 8d. half to the king and half to him that will sue by action of debt, or before the justices of the peace.

(8.) Other Wild Fowl.

25 Hen. 8, c. 11.

In general, by stat. 25 Hen. VIII. c. 11, no manner of person, from the last day of March to the last day of June yearly, shall by day or night take or destroy any eggs of any kind of wild fowl, from or in any nest or place where they shall chance to be laid by any kind of the same wild fowl, on pain of imprisonment for a year, and to forfeit for every egg of a bustard 20d., of a bittour or shoveld, 8d., and of other wild fowl (except crows, ravens, boscards, and other fowl not used to be eaten) 1d.; half to the king and half to him that will sue by action of debt. Also the justices of the peace may determine the same as in cases of trespass. (a)

8 Eliz. c. 15.

(a) With regard to fowl not used to be eaten, together with certain other noxious animals, there were provisions made by an ancient statute, viz. 8 Eliz. c. 15. entitled, "An Act for the preservation of Graine," which it were to be wished might be revived with a proper consideration of the difference of the value of money betwixt that time and the present; by which it was required that the churchwardens should levy by an assessment, and pay for the heads of every three old crows, choughes, or rookes, 1d.; of six young crows, choughes, or rookes, 1d.; and for every six eggcs of any of them, 1d.; for every twelve stares' heads, 1d.; for every head

7 Jac. I, c. 11,
s. 9.

The 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, amongst other things enacts, “that the said gamekeeper or gamekeepers, or any other person or persons being thereunto authorised by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace of the same county, division, or place, may in the daytime search the houses, outhouses, or other places of any such person or persons by this act prohibited to keep or use the same, as upon good ground shall be suspected to have or keep in his or their custody any guns, bows, greyhounds, setting-dogs, ferrets, coney-dogs, or other dogs, to destroy hares or conies, hays, tramels, or other nets, lowbels, hare-pipes, snares, or other engines aforesaid, and the same and every or any of them to seize, detain and keep, to and for the use of the lord of the manor or royalty where the same shall be so found or taken, or otherwise to cut in pieces or destroy, as things by this act prohibited to be kept by persons of their degree.”

The 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23, s. 3, enacts, “that for the more easy conviction of such offenders as by the said laws are prohibited, every constable, headborough, and tythingman, being thereunto authorised by warrant of one or more justice of the peace, under his or their hands and seals, shall and may have full power and authority, and is hereby required to enter into and search in such manner, and with such power, as in and by an act for the more effectual discovery and punishment of deer stealers, made in the third and fourth years of their present majesties’ reign, is provided, in case of venison or kin of any deer, or toyls) (3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14) the house or houses, outhouses, or other places belonging to such houses or suspected persons not qualified as aforesaid; and in case any hare, partridge, pheasant, pigeon, fish, fowl, or vermin, hawkes, fursekytte, moldkytte, busarde, chagge, carmeraunt, or ryingtale, &c.; and for two egges of them, 1d.; for every iron or ospray’s heade, 4d.; for the heade of every wood wall, pye, jay, raven, kyte, or king’s fisher, 1d.; bulfinch, or other bird that devoureth the blowth of fruit, 1d.; for the heade of every hawk or graye, 12d.; and for the heade of every fytchewe, polcate, wesel, stote, wyre, bade, or wilde cat, 1d.; for the heade of every otter or hedgehogge, 2d.; for the heades of three rattes or twelve mice, 1d.; for the heade of every want or oldwarp, one halfpenny.

And by another ancient statute, 24 Hen. VIII. c. 10, every township was required to keep a crow net, to destroy crows, rookes, and choughs.

24 Hen. 8, c. 10.

There is some shadow of these regulations still remaining in some parishes, where they give a reward for destroying several of the above said noxious fowl and vermin. These statutes were suffered to expire, probably because in a short time there would be no need of their continuance; but it might be convenient, nevertheless, to revive such like provisions from time to time; and amongst the rest of the ravenous tribe to set a price now at length upon the head of that distinguished fowl, for the sake of which most of the ancient laws concerning the winged game were enacted, and which it was felony to destroy. But now the current hath received a contrary direction; and the hawk himself destroys more game than gunpowder and hailshot, which hath usurped his empire.

9 Ann. c. 25, s. 4.

The 9 Ann. c. 25, s. 4, enacts, "that the justice or justices of the peace, before whom such person or persons so offending shall be convicted, shall order such hayes, nets, or tunnels, that were used in driving and taking the Decisions, &c.

A magistrate who convicts an unqualified person of killing game under the stat 5 Ann. c. 14, and orders his dog to be brought for the purpose of seizing it, may order the dog to be killed without any formal adjudication of seizure. Kingsnorth v. Bretton and another. 1 Marsh. 106; 5 Taunt. 416, S. C. Gibbs, C. J. there said, "There is no doubt but the magistrate had a right to take the dog into his possession, neither is there any doubt that having so taken it, all the right of the former owner ceased, and the defendants could not be called to an account for any thing done by them afterwards. At the examination of the plaintiff before the magistrate it appeared that he was unlawfully possessed of the dog, and he was therefore ordered to deliver it up; that being done, the magistrate, after he had communicated with his clerk on the subject, ordered it to be killed; undoubtedly, therefore, he meant to exercise the power which had been given him by the statute."

But a justice cannot enter a house for the purpose of seizing, &c., since he can only grant his warrant. Briggs v. Evelyn, 2 H. Bla. 114.

And though a magistrate may, under 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, within his county take any hare, &c. from an unqualified person, either by himself or others, he must exercise his judgment on the question in what case it is to be done, and when he has exercised his judgment on the case, and is satisfied the game is in the hands of an unqualified person, he may use the hands of another to take it; but he cannot delegate to another the jurisdiction given him by that act of judging whether the person in possession of the game is or is not qualified. Bird v. Dale, 7 Taunt. 560; 1 Moore, 290, S. C.

If the lord of a manor is also a justice of the peace, and he takes away game, dogs, or engines from an unqualified person, and an action is afterwards brought against him, he is entitled to notice conformably to stat. 24 Geo. II. c. 44, for it will be presumed he acted as a justice. Briggs v. Sir Frederick Evelyn, 1 H. Bla. 114; and see post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 491.

Park-Keepers and others—We have already noticed the 29th section of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, empowering deer keepers and their assistants to seize guns, &c. ante, 934.

Park-keepers.

Also the 2d section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 64, empowering owners or occupiers of land, lords of manors, and their servants, &c. to apprehend offenders at night poaching, ante, 927.

The statute de malefactoribus in parcis, 21 Edw. I. st. 2, authorising resters, park-keepers, and warreners, to kill trespassers who resist or refuse to yield, is, it seems, repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27.

Park-keepers, by the common law, may take and kill a dog which has chased a deer in his park, to prevent more mischief. Barrington v. Turner, Lev. 28. So a warrener may kill a dog used to infest the warren, whilst running after rabbits in the warren. Wadhurst v. Damne, Cro. Jac. 45; Wright v. Ramscot, 1 Saund. 84. In both cases the park or warren must be a strictly legal one, ante, 876, 877. See further Chit. G. L. 148.

Lords of Manors, &c.—We have already noticed the 5 Ann. c. 14, empowering lords of manors to seize guns, &c. ante, 944. In construction of that act, it has been held in Bird v. Dale, 7 Taunt. 560; 1 Moore, 290, S. C., that it does not empower lords of manors, &c. to delegate to another a general authority to take away game from an unqualified person. The lord must go for himself in each specific case before giving the authority, supra. A lord of a manor has no power as such, or as the owner of private lands to give to another, to kill the dog of a qualified person running after game. Vere v.

Gamekeepers and others—The 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, enacts, "that all lords of manors, or other royalties, not under the degree of an esquire, may from thenceforth, by writing under their hands and seals, authorise one or more gamekeeper or gamekeepers within their respective manors or royalties, who being thereunto so authorised, may take and seize all guns, bows, greyhounds, setting-dogs, lurchers, or other dogs, to kill hares or conies, ferrets, tramels, lowbels, hays, or other nets, hare-pipes, snares, or other engines, for the taking and killing of conies, hares, pheasants, partridges, or other game, as within the precincts of such respective manors shall be used by any person or persons who by this act are prohibited to keep or use the same."

4 & 5 W. & M.

The 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23, s. 4, enacts, "that to the end all keepers and gamekeepers, mentioned in and duly authorised according to the act made in the reign of the late King Charles the Second, may be indemnified in the execution of the said office, all lords of manors or other royalties, or any person or persons authorised by them as gamekeepers, shall and may, within their respective manors or royalties, oppose and resist such offender in the night time, in the same manner, and be equally indemnified for so doing, as if such fact had been committed within any ancient chase, park, or warren inclosed whatsoever."

The deputation of a gamekeeper should specify all the powers given to him under the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 1. And in a late case, where the deputation by its words only authorised the keeper to seize greyhounds, setting dogs, ferrets, and to do all things belonging to the office of gamekeeper according to the directions of the acts of parliament, it was held he was not thereby authorised to seize hounds. Grant v. Hulton, 1 B. & Ald. 134. And under a general deputation under the 48 Geo. III. c. 93, a gamekeeper cannot seize game in possession of an unqualified person. Bird v. Dale, 1 Moore, 290; 7 Taunt. 560, S. C., ante, 945.

If a gamekeeper be uncertain of the qualification of a person whom he finds sporting on his manor, it would be imprudent to incur the risk of an action of trespass by seizing the gun of his own accord, but he should obtain a warrant from a justice of peace, in which case, unless he acted maliciously, he would not be liable to an action, though it should turn out that the person was qualified. Carpenter v. Adams, Comb. 183.

A gamekeeper cannot legally seize a gun, unless the unqualified person be at the time using it for the destruction of game. Wingfield v. Stratford, 1 Wils. 315. Neither can he kill the dog of a person following game within the boundaries of the manor, unless it be actually used at the time by an unqualified person for the purpose of destroying game; for the power of a gamekeeper is very distinguishable from that of a park-keeper or warrenner, who, we have seen, ante, 876, 877, may destroy or kill any dog whilst pursuing deer or rabbits. Vere v. Lord Cawdor, 11 East, 568.

A gamekeeper cannot justify killing the dog of a person following game within the boundaries of the manor.

(a) Vere v. Lord Cawdor and King, 11 East, 568. In this case, which was an action of trespass for shooting and killing a dog of the plaintiff, there was a plea of not guilty, and a special plea that Lord Cawdor was lord of the manor, and the defendant gamekeeper, duly deputed and appointed to preserve the game upon the manor; that the dog was in a close, parcel of the manor, running after, chasing, and hunting divers hares there, and that the defendant, King, as such gamekeeper, in the said close, for the preservation of the said hares, shot and killed the said dog.—To this plea there was a demurrer; and after argument, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. said, The question is, whether the plaintiff's dog incurred the penalty of death for running after a hare in another's ground? And if there be any precedent of that sort, which outrages all reason and sense, it is of no authority to govern other cases. There is no question here as to the right of the game. The gamekeeper had no right to kill the plaintiff's dog for following it. The plea does not even state that the hare was put in peril, so as to induce any necessity for killing the dog in order to save the hare. Per curiam. Judgment for the plaintiff.

And the statute of Charles does not authorise a gamekeeper to seize the gun of another gamekeeper duly appointed, though trespassing out of his proper manor. Rogers v. Carter, 2 Wils. 337.

The statutes do not seem to give any power to the lord of a manor or his gamekeeper in the day-time to seize the unqualified person himself, but merely empower them to seize the dogs and engines, though they have that authority in the night time. Chit. G. L. 156.

As to the powers given to seize night poachers, &c. see ante, 927.

XV. Trespasses in general in Pursuit of Game.

And herein we will slightly notice, 1st, what will amount to a Trespass— 2dly, the Remedies for Trespasses— and 3dly, the Means of preventing them. Division of subject.

(1.) What a Trespass.

The land of every owner or occupier is inclosed and set apart from that of his neighbour, either by a visible or tangible fence, as one field is separated from another by a hedge, wall, &c. or by an ideal, invisible boundary, existing only in contemplation of law, as when the land of one man adjoins to that of another in the same open or common field. Hence every unwarrantable entry upon the land of another is termed a trespass by breaking his close. 2 Schw. N. P. tit. Trespass. What a trespass.

It seems that a person discharging a gun from the outside of a field into, so as the shot must have struck the soil, was guilty of breaking and entering the field. See Pickering v. Rudd, 4 Campb. 220; 1 Stark. N. P. 58; C. per Ellenborough, C. J.

In general no man can come upon another's close to kill or take game without being liable to an action of trespass. 2 Bac. Ab. 613; 2 Bla. Com. 417; Bla. Rep. 900. And in general no person, though he find game upon his own land, has a right to pursue, nor can he justify pursuing it into the land of another, either to kill it or take it when killed, or for any other purpose. Keane v. Clayton, 7 Taunt. 489, post, 950. And in a late case, Baker v. Berkeley, 3 C. & P. 32, it was held that if a stag, hunted by the hounds of, run into the barn of A., B. and his servants have no right to enter the barn to take the stag; and if they do they are trespassers. Pursuing game and beasts of prey, as foxes, &c.

The common law allows persons to enter the lands of others to follow traps of prey, as a fox or badger, for the destruction of them is to the public benefit. Gundry v. Feltham, 1 T. R. 334. But the digging and breaking up the ground to unearth them is held to be unlawful, and the owner of the ground may maintain an action of trespass in that case. Cro. Jac. 321. With respect to the case of Gundry v. Feltham, Mr. Christian observes, that the judgment was only justified by the pleadings, which admitted that the digging after the fox, in that case, was the only means of killing it. Christian's G. L. 114. But in the case of The Earl of Essex, v. Capel, at Hertford m. Ass. 1809, where the subject was properly pleaded upon the record, per Ellenborough, C. J. directed the jury to find for the plaintiff, if they thought from the evidence that the defendant pursued the fox for his own pleasure and amusement, and if they thought the good of the public was not his governing motive. Christian's G. L. 114; Chit. G. L. 31, S. C. And hunters, like all other hunters, may be warned off; and the plaintiff by a judge's certificate will have full costs, though the jury do not give 40s. damages. Id.

(2.) The Remedies for Trespasses.

The remedies for trespasses in pursuit of game may be by action at law, suit in equity, by agreement, or by indictment.

8 & 9 Will. 3,
c. 11, s. 4.

Remedy by Action, &c.—If a person commit a trespass by entering the close of another, he becomes subject to an action of trespass. 2 Bac. Ab. 613; 2 Bla. Com. 117.

On such mere trespass, however, the owner should be cautious before bringing an action, for if he could not prove damages to the amount of 40s. or that the trespass was wilful and malicious, he would not, on a verdict for less than 40s., get more costs than damages. Formerly indeed, before the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 11, s. 4, the plaintiff would not in such a trespass, on a verdict, get more costs than damages, though the trespass were wilful and malicious. That act, however, enacted that in all actions of trespass, where at the trial (a) it shall appear and be certified by the judge under his hand upon the back of the record, that the trespass was wilful and malicious, the plaintiff shall recover not only his damages, but his full costs of suit.

This act does not make it compulsory on the judge to certify, but it is usual to do so where the trespass is in pursuit of game after notice. Reynolds v. Edwards, 6 T. R. 11; 7 T. R. 449; 3 East, 495.

Notice not to trespass.

On this account therefore, independently of others, it is usual and best to give a trespasser, or person about to trespass, notice not to trespass. Such notice may be verbal; it is best however, when practicable, to be in writing. The notice had better be explicit, showing where the party must not trespass. A general printed notice stuck up, purporting to be a notice that "The St. more Association" would prosecute all persons trespassing, but not signed by the plaintiff, nor addressed to the defendant, was held not a sufficient notice not to trespass. Sellon v. Huntsmen of Berkeley Hunt, Chit. G. L. 2 ed. 229.

If personal property, as game, &c., were injured in the trespass, the plaintiff would in an action for it get full costs, though he got less than 40s. damages, unless indeed the judge certified under the 43 Eliz. c. 6.

Inferior tradesmen, &c.
4 & 5 W. & M.
c. 23, s. 10.

The 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23, s. 10, enacts, that if inferior tradesmen, apprentices, or other dissolute persons, shall presume to hunt, hawk, fish, or fowl, they may be sued not only for the penalties on sporting as unqualified persons, but also for their wilful trespass on any person's land, and, if found guilty, the plaintiff shall not only recover his damages, but full costs. In Burton v. Mingay, 2 Wils. 70, the court were equally divided in opinion whether a surgeon and apothecary, not qualified to kill game, was an inferior tradesman within this statute. The huntsman of a gentleman of fortune, hunting with his master's hounds, and with his orders, is not a dissolute person within the act. Pallant v. Roll, 3 Bla. Rep. 900. A clothier, or ale-house keeper, is, semble. Wickham v. Walter, Barnes, 125. A qualified person cannot be deemed a person within the act. R. v. George, 6 Mod. 40. A person who kills game for the purpose of selling it, or if he were drunk or abusive, or if questioned where he lived, or what was his name, he gave a false account of himself, is within the act. Christ. G. L. 98.

Penalty for a trespass.
11 Hen. 7, c. 17,
s. 17.

The 11 Hen. VII. c. 17, s. 17, enacts, that it shall not be lawful to any person, of what condition he be, to take or cause to be taken any pheasants or partridges by nets, snares, or other engines, out of his own warren upon the freehold of any other person, without the assent, agreement, and special license of the owner or possessor of the same, upon pain of forfeiture of 10l., half to the party who will sue for the same by action of debt, or by bill or otherwise, and the other half to the owner or possessor of the said ground upon which the said pheasants and partridges be also taken.

Hunting amongst growing corn.

By stat. 23 Eliz. c. 10, s. 4, no person shall hunt with his spaniels in any ground where corn or other grain shall grow (except in his own ground) at such time as any eared corn shall be growing, nor before it be shocked, on pain of forfeiting to the owner of the grain 40s.

Malicious trespass act.

The malicious trespass act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 24, for the summary punishment of malicious trespasses, and giving a magistrate power to award 5l. satisfaction, (see post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 741.)

(a) The certificate need not be granted at the trial. 2 B. & Cres. 590; 4 D. & R. 147, S. C.

exempts persons committing trespasses not wilful and malicious in hunting, fishing, or in the pursuit of game.

TRESPASSES IN PURSUIT OF.

general.

The amount of the damages to be given in an action must depend on the nature of the case submitted to the jury. In trespass for breaking and entering the plaintiff's closes and sporting there, under circumstances of aggravation, the jury gave 500*l.* damages. The court refused to set aside the verdict. Merest v. Harvey, 1 Marsh. 139; 5 Taunt. 442, S. C. This was an action of trespass for breaking and entering the plaintiff's closes, and with dogs and guns beating and hunting for game. The defendant suffered judgment to go by default, the damages to be assessed before a judge of assize, and which were assessed accordingly before Heath, J. at Thetford Spring Assizes, 1814, to the amount of 500*l.* being the extent of the damages laid in the declaration. On motion for rule to set aside the verdict, on the ground of excessive damages, Heath, J. briefly stated the circumstances, which were that the defendant, who was a magistrate, had committed a trespass before the plaintiff's face, in defiance of the plaintiff's notice, that he was a trespasser, and accompanying the injury with every kind of insult and aggravation. Gibbs, C. J. said, "When a man regards the conduct and principles of a gentleman and of a magistrate, what is to prevent the repetition of such conduct but large damages? what could we say to a man in any inferior station in life, who should so conduct himself? I know not on what principle we could grant a rule in this case, except on the ground that the jury should only have found to the amount of the actual pecuniary damage sustained by the plaintiff; suppose I had a walk before my house, which I had a pleasure in looking at, or in walking upon, could it be allowed that a man should walk there to my annoyance, and then offer me a halfpenny in satisfaction, alleging that I had received no actual damage? This is a much stronger case, for no conduct could have been more outrageous than that of the defendant on this occasion." Heath, J.—"I left it to the jury to say what damages would be a compensation, and it never can be contended that these were too much. I remember a case many years ago, where the jury gave 500*l.* for merely throwing off a man's hat, and the court refused to set aside the verdict." Per curiam. Rule refused.

In Hume v. Oldacre, 1 Stark. 551, it was held, that the jury might give damages not only in respect of the huntsman's own individual trespass, but of the damage done by his followers. And again, in Baker v. Berkeley, 3 W. & P. 32, in trespass for breaking into plaintiff's farm, &c., where the plaintiff received 100*l.* damages, Lord Tenterden, C. J. said, "If a gentleman sends out his hounds and his servants, and invites other gentlemen to go with him, although he does not himself go on the lands of another, but the gentlemen do, he is answerable for the trespass they commit in so doing, unless he distinctly desires them not to go on those grounds; and if (as in the present case) he does not so desire them, I think he is answerable, in point of law, for the damage they do."

Damages by followers.

Remedy by Suit in Equity—A court of equity will, in some cases, interpose to prevent a repetition of trespasses. Ld. Teynham v. Herbert, 2 Atk. 627. See further Chit. G. L. 224, 5.

By suit in equity.

Remedy by Agreement—The owner of land may take a bond to prevent commission of trespasses thereon. Roy v. Duke of Beaufort, 2 Atk. 190. Although unless game be excepted in a demise of the land, the possessory right will vest in the lessee; (Year Book, 14; Hen. VIII. p. 1;) yet a tenant may be restrained by bond or covenant from sporting, and the lord may reserve that right to himself, and make his tenant stipulate to take actions against trespassers; Id.; Roy v. Duke of Beaufort, 2 Atk. 190. A court of equity will restrain an improper use of such a covenant. If one gives leave to another to hunt over his premises, it would not give him the liberty of shooting there. Per Gibbs, C. J., Moore v. Ld. Plymouth, 1 W. & P. 627; 1 Moore, S. C.

By agreement.

As to the effect of a grant to A. and his heirs of a liberty to sport, see 5 Cres. 639; 7 D. & R. 49, S. C.

TRESPASSES IN

Remedy by indictment.

Remedy by Indictment, &c.—No indictment can be supported for a mere civil trespass. 3 Burr. 1701; 8 T. R. 357. Nor can a party be imprisoned for a mere trespass. Id. And see 4 D. & R. 217; 2 B. & Cra. 699, S. C. But an indictment or information in case of a battery might be supported as in other cases. Jenning v. Mott, Burnard. Rep. 16. See ante. Assault, Vol. I.

An indictment will not lie for a conspiracy to commit a civil trespass on property, by agreeing to go into another's preserve to snare hares, though done in the night by defendants armed with offensive weapons to resist any endeavours to apprehend them. R. v. Turner, 13 East, 228; R. v. Marshall, 2 Keb. 594; ante, 913.

(3.) Mode of Preventing Trespasses.

Resisting entry or forcing off land.

If a person attempt to enter by force the property of another, he may be opposed in such attempt by force. 8 T. R. 78; 1 Salk. 141. In the case of Holt v. Wilkes, 3 B. & A. 304, Best, J. said, "Every proprietor of property is allowed to use the force that is absolutely necessary to vindicate it. If he uses more force than is absolutely necessary, he renders himself responsible for all the consequences of the excess. Thus if a man comes on my land, I cannot lay hands on him to remove him off until I have desired him to go off. If he will not depart on request, I cannot proceed immediately to beat him, but must endeavour to push him off. If he is too powerful for me, I cannot use a dangerous weapon, but must first call in aid other assistance. I am speaking of out-door felony, and of cases in which no felony is to be apprehended. It is evident also that this doctrine is applicable only to trespasses committed in the presence of the owner of the property trespassed on."

Seizing, &amp;c. dogs, &amp;c.

The owner of land cannot in general seize a dog which is pursuing game: Athel v. Corbett, Cro. Jac. 463; nor could he shoot it; Vere v. Lord Cardor, 11 East, 568; Carpenter v. Adams, Comb. 183. We have already noticed several statutes giving the owners of land and others powers relative to the seizing of the dogs, &c. of trespassers, ante, 943.

Setting spears.

In the case of Dean v. Clayton, 7 Taunt. 489; 2 Marsh. 577; 1 Moore, 203, S. C., the judges of the Court of Common Pleas were equally divided in opinion whether a private person has a right to set dog-spears to preserve hares in his woods, and prevent them from being killed by dogs and foxes. (6)

(a) Dean v. Clayton, Bart.; 7 Taunt. 489; 2 Marsh. 577; 1 Moore, 203, S. C. Sir William Clayton, the defendant, was owner and occupier of a wood adjoining a wood of B., divided therefrom by a low bank and a shallow ditch, not being a sufficient fence to prevent dogs from passing from B.'s wood into the defendant's wood. There were public footpaths through the defendant's wood, not fenced off therefrom. The defendant, to preserve hares in his wood, and to prevent them from being killed therein by dogs and foxes that came therein in pursuit of hares, kept iron spikes (called dog-spears) screwed and fastened into several trees in his wood, each spike having two sharp ends, and so placed that each end should point along the course of a hare-path, and purposely placed at such a height from the ground as to allow a hare to pass under them without injury, but to wound and kill a dog that might happen to run against one of the sharp ends thereof, the spikes being, from their nature and positions, adapted to effect the purpose for which the defendant fastened them there: none of them was at a less distance than 50 yards from any footpath, and some were from 150 to 160 yards distant therefrom. The defendant kept notices painted on boards placed at the outside of some parts of the wood, that steel-traps, spring-guns, and dog-spears were set in that wood for vermin. The plaintiff, with B.'s permission, was sporting in his wood with a valuable pointer; a hare rose in his wood, and was pursued by the dog thereout, over the bank and ditch, into the defendant's wood, and in the pursuit there, ran against one of the sharp spikes, and was killed. The plaintiff endeavoured, as much as in him lay, to prevent his dog from pursuing the hare into the defendant's wood, but was unable so to do. The plaintiff having brought an action upon the case against the defendant to recover a compensation

It has been satisfactorily established, however, that if a man place dangerous traps, baited with flesh, in his own ground, so near to a highway, or to the premises of another, that dogs passing along the highway, or kept in his neighbour's premises, must probably be attracted by their instinct into the traps; and in consequence of such act his neighbour's dogs be so attracted, and thereby injured, an action on the case lies. Townsend v. Wathen, 9 East, 277. In an action for placing traps baited with flesh and strong-scented articles, by which the plaintiff's dogs were enticed from the public highways to the said traps, and were caught therein and wounded, there was a verdict for the plaintiff; and the Court of King's Bench refused to arrest the judgment, there being no doubt but the action was maintainable. A rule nisi was, however, granted for setting aside the verdict, as against the evidence; and after hearing the grounds of objection against it, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. said, "It appears by the evidence reported, that the traps were placed so near to the plaintiff's court yard, where his dogs were kept, that they might scent the bait, without committing any trespass on the defendant's land. Every man must be taken to contemplate the probable consequences of the act he does; and, therefore, when the defendant caused traps scented with the strongest meats to be placed so near to the plaintiff's house as to influence the instinct of those animals, and draw them irresistibly to their destruction, he must be considered as contemplating this probable consequence of his act. That which might be taken as general evidence of malice against all dogs, coming accidentally within the sphere of attraction which he placed there, must surely be evidence of it against those in particular which were placed nearest to the source of attraction, and within the constant influence of it. What difference is there in reason between drawing the animal into the trap by means of his instinct, which he cannot resist, and putting him there by manual force? If a man knowingly keep a dog accustomed to bite, and any person coming by chance in his way be bitten, an action lies against the owner, though he had no malice against the particular individual. (a) Here there is evidence that the defendant's purpose in setting the traps was to catch dogs in general, as well as vermin; for he afterwards recommended his servant for dogs taken in the traps. The rule, therefore, omnis habitio retro trahitur et mandato equiparatur, applies to this case. With- out therefore, considering what had happened before the plaintiff came to his residence in the defendant's neighbourhood; when he did come, he came to a place where the mischief existed and continued to operate within the sphere where he might lawfully have his dogs, and which in fact did afterwards operate upon them to the plaintiff's prejudice. The other judges agreeing, the rule was discharged.

Until the late act 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 18, it was undecided whether a person could set spring guns in woods or enclosed grounds. It was held, however, in Molt v. Wilkes, 3 B. & A. 304, that a trespasser, having knowledge that there were spring-guns in a wood, although he might be ignorant of the particular spots where they are placed, could not maintain an action for an injury received in consequence of his accidentally treading on the latent wire communicating with the gun, and thereby letting it off. But where a defendant, for the protection of his property, some of which had been stolen, set a spring gun without notice, in a garden completely walled round and at a distance from his house, and the plaintiff, who had climbed over the wall in pursuit of caged fowl, was shot thereby; it was held, an action was maintainable, the defendant liable in damages. Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bingh. 628; 10 & P. 607, S. C.; Joy v. Whitfield, 3 B. & A. 308; 4 Bingh. 644, S. C. Now by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 18, entitled, "An Act to prohibit the set-

7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 18.

On the loss of his dog, the Court of Common Pleas were equally divided in opinion whether the action were maintainable. Gibbs, C. J. and Dallas, J. holding it to be so. II.

that it was not, and Parke and Burroughs, Js. holding that the plaintiff was entitled to recover.

Though stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, makes no distinction between those innkeepers who are qualified by estate and those who are not, it is more safe to allege want of qualification, unless the defendant actually sold the birds, or offered them to sale; in which case, as stat. 28 Geo. II. c. 12, inflicts the penalty, whether the person be qualified or not, it may be proper to omit the whole of what is stated in the conviction respecting qualifications.

(No. 25.)

— } To the Constable of , and others whom this may concern.

HEREAS A. O. of, &c., innkeeper, is on this day of, &c. duly convicted me, J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county, upon the oath of A. W. a credible witness, for that the said A. O. on the day of, &c. at the parish of aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, had in custody and possession [two partridges,] the said A. O. being no way qualified by laws of this realm to have the said [two partridges] in his custody or possession, against the form of the statute in that case made, by reason whereof the said A. O. forfeited the sum of [10l.]: These are therefore to require you to levy the said [10l.] by distress of the goods of the said A. O.; and if within the space of (b) days next after such distress by you taken, the said sum of [10l.] to-with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distress shall not be paid, then you do sell the said goods so by you distrained as aforesaid, and out of the money arising by such sale that you do pay one half of the said sum of [10l.]
 to the said [labourer,] who informed me of the said offence, and the other half to the poor of the parish of aforesaid, within which parish the said offence was committed; returning to the said A. O. the overplus on demand; the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress being first deducted; and if no distress cannot be had of the goods of the said A. O. that you certify the same to me, together with the return of this precept. Given under my hand and seal day of in the year of .

To the Constable of in the said county, and to the Keeper of the House of Correction at , in the said county.
 HEREAS A. O. of in the said county, [innkeeper,] was on the day duly convicted before me, J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justice of the peace and for the said county, upon the oath of A. W. of , a credible witness, that the said A. O. on the day of, &c., at the parish of aforesaid county aforesaid, had in his custody and possession [two partridges,] the said A. O. being no way qualified by the laws of this realm to have the said [two partridges] in his custody or possession, against the form of the statute in that case made, by reason whereof the said A. O. hath forfeited the sum of [10l.]: And whereas on stable of _____ to levy the said sum of [10l.] by distress and sale of the goods of the said A. O. and to distribute the same according as is directed by the said statute. and whereas it duly appears to me, as well on the oath of the said constable of _____ as otherwise, that he the said constable of _____ hath used his best endeavours to levy the said sum on the goods of the said A. O. as aforesaid, but that no sufficient distress can be found whereon to levy the same: these are therefore to require the said constable of _____ aforesaid to carry the said A. O. to the said house of correction aforesaid, and deliver him to the said keeper thereof together with this receipt. And you the said keeper are hereby commanded to receive into your custody the said house of correction him the said A. O. and him there safely to keep for the space of three months, without bail or mainprise; and for your so doing this warrant is your sufficient warrant. Conviction on 58 Geo. 3, c. 75, s. 1, for buying game. (a) — } BE it remembered, that on, &c., at, &c., A. J., of, &c., personally came before me, J. P., clerk, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of _____ and on his oath informed me, that A. O., late of, &c., within the calendar months now last past, on, &c., at _____ the parish of, &c., did buy of E. F. (b) [two] hares, [pheasant, partridge, moor-game, heath-game, or grouse, &c.] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; whereupon the said A. O., after being duly summoned to answer the said charge, appeared before me, &c., [here state the appearance before the magistrate, the defence and the evidence, as is usual in other convictions, see the forms, ante, 956 and 962, and then conclude thus:] Therefore it manifestly appearing to me that he the said A. O. is guilty of the offence charged upon him in the said information, I do hereby convict him of the offence aforesaid, and do declare and adjudge, that he the said A. O. hath forfeited the sum of [10l.] of lawful money of Great Britain, that is to say, the sum of _____ for each of the said [hares] for the offence aforesaid, to be distributed according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided. ## Forms as to Penalties for Killing, &amp;c. Game in the Night or on Sunday. &amp;c.

(No. 29.)

Information on 13 Geo. 3, c. 80, s. 1, for killing game in the night. (c)

[Commencement as usual, stating the information to be on oath, and state the offence thus:] that C. D., late of the parish of _____, in the county aforesaid, [labourer,] within the space of one calendar month now last past, to wit, on, &c., at the hour of eleven in the night of the same day, at the parish of _____, in the county, did knowingly and wilfully kill, [take, or destroy,] a hare, [pheasant, partridge, moor-game, or heath-game,] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; and which is the [first] offence of the said C. D. against the said statute; whereby and by force of the statute in such case made and provided the said C. D. hath forfeited, &c. [as usual to the end. See Information, ante, 955.]

(No. 30.)

Conviction for like offence. (c) — } BE it remembered, that on, &c., C. D., late of, &c., is convicted before me to wit. } J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of _____ for that the said C. D., within the space of one calendar month now last past, to wit, on, &c. [describe the offence as in the information, supra, (No. 29,)] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; and which was the [first] offence of the said C. D. against the said statute. Therefore I do declare and adjudge, that

(a) As to the offence see ante, 915. An information and other proceedings may be readily framed from this conviction and the preceding forms.

(b) Or if the party be not known omit this.

(c) The statute itself gives a very loose form of conviction. See ante, 923, 924.

he said C. D. hath forfeited the sum of _____, of lawful money of Great Britain, the offence aforesaid, to be distributed according to the form of the statute in that made and provided; and also that the said C. D. shall pay the further sum of _____, for the costs and charges previous to and attending this conviction, by me retained at such sum. Given under my hand and seal, the day and year first esaid.
J. P.

(No. 31.)

The description of the offence in this case may be thus:] That the said D., within the space of one calendar month now last past, to wit, on, &c., at the _____ of [eleven] in the night of the same day, at the parish of _____, in the said county, did use a certain gun, [dog, snare, net, or other engine,] with intent then there to kill, take, and destroy a hare, [pheasant, partridge, moor-game, or h-game,] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; which is the [first] offence of the said C. D. against the said statute. [The rest of the information or conviction may be readily collected from the last two preceding forms.]

The like for using a gun, &c. to kill in the night.

(No. 32.)

Commencement as usual, stating the information on oath, ante, 962, and describing the offence according to the fact, which may be thus:] That the said C. D., in the space of one calendar month now last past, to wit, on Sunday [or Christmas] the _____ day of, &c., in the day-time of the same day, at the parish of _____, in the said county, did knowingly and wilfully kill, [take or destroy,] a hare, [pheasant, partridge, heath-game, or moor-game,] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; and which is the [first] offence of the said C. D. against the said statute. [Conclude as usual, stating the adjudication in the indictment, as ante, 994, (No. 30.)]

Information or conviction on 13 Geo. 3, c. 80 s. 6, for killing game on a Sunday. (a)

(No. 33.)

Commence as directed in the last precedent. The offence may be described thus:] That the said C. D., within the space of one calendar month now last past, to wit, on Sunday, [or Christmas-day,] the _____ day of, &c., in the day-time of the same day, at the parish of _____, in the said county, did use a certain gun, [dog, or engine,] for the purpose then and there of killing, [taking or destroying,] a [pheasant, partridge, moor-game, or heath-game,] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; and which is the [first] offence of the said C. D. against the said statute. [Conclude as directed in the last precedent.]

The like for using a gun, &c. on that day.

(No. 34.)

For a third offence the offender may be indicted, ante, 923, 924. See form of indictment for a third offence against 9 Geo. IV. c. 64, post, (No. 28,) most of which assist in the framing of an indictment on the 13 Geo. III. c. 80.

(No. 36.)

Conviction on 9 Geo. 4, c. 60, s. 1, for a first offence in being on land in night-time armed to destroy game. (a)

[Commencement as in last preceding precedent to the *], for that he the said A. O. within six calendar months now last past, to wit, on, &c., at and about the hour of , in the night-time of the said day, at , in the county aforesaid, did, by night as aforesaid, unlawfully enter certain inclosed [or open] land of the A. B. (b) there situate, and was then and there unlawfully in the said land, with certain gun, [net, engine, or instrument, to wit, an instrument called a ], for the purpose of then and there taking and destroying game and rabbits, contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, and we the said justices of the peace, do therefore now adjudge the said A. O. for such his said offence, for which he is now convicted as aforesaid, to be imprisoned in the at , and there kept to hard labour for the period of calendar months, and at the expiration of such period to find sureties by recognizance, himself in the sum of [10l.] and two sureties in the sum of [5l.] each, or one surety in the sum of [10l.,] conditioned that he the said A. O. should not so offend again for the space of one year then next following; and in case he should not find such sureties as aforesaid, he should be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the space of six calendar months, unless such sureties should be sooner found, [see the prior conviction]. We, the said J. P. and S. P., justices as aforesaid, do therefore now adjudge the said C. D. for such his said second offence, for which he is now convicted as aforesaid, to be imprisoned in the at , and there kept to hard labour for the space of calendar months, and at the expiration of such period to find sureties by recognizance, himself in the sum of [20l.] and two sureties in the sum of [10l.] each, or one surety in the sum of [20l.,] conditioned that he the said A. Warrant on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 27, to search for venison or engines, &c. (a)

(No. 47.)

to wit: BE it remembered, that on, &c. at, &c. C. D. late of, &c. is convicted before me J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, for that he the said C. D. on, &c. at the parish of, &c. had in his possession [or on his premises at _____ aforesaid, and with his knowledge] a part of a deer [or snare, &c. see supra]; and upon the said part being found in the possession [and upon the premises] of the said C. D. as aforesaid, by virtue of a certain search warrant, and the said C. D. being brought before me, the said J. P. now here as such justice as aforesaid, the said C. D. doth not satisfy me, the said J. P. that he came lawfully by the said part of a deer, and here a snare or engine for taking deer has been found, that he hath or then had any lawful occasion for such snare or engine, and that he did not keep the same for any unlawful purpose,] but hath altogether failed in so doing; against the form of the statute in that case made and provided: I the said J. P. do therefore adjudge the said C. D. guilty of the said offence to forfeit and pay the sum of [20l.] and also to pay the sum of _____ pence* (c) for costs, and in default of immediate payment to be imprisoned in the county gaol [here kept to hard labour] for the space of _____ calendar months, (d) unless the said sum shall be sooner paid; and I direct that the said sum of [20l.] shall be paid to _____ (e) of _____ aforesaid, in which the said offence was committed, to be by him apportioned according to the directions of the statute in that case made and provided; and that the said sum of _____ shillings for costs shall be paid to [the complainant.] Given under my hand and seal the day and year first above-mentioned. J. P.

Conviction on same statute for not accounting for possession, &c. of venison, &c. (b) hands such venison may have passed.

— to wit. } To the Constable of _____ and others whom this may concern.

WHEREAS lately, upon a part of a deer being by virtue of a search warrant found upon the possession [or the premises] of one C. D. at _____ in the county of _____ and the said C. D. being thereupon brought before me, J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county aforesaid, I was informed and given to understand that E. H. of _____ in the county aforesaid, [labourer,] had had possession thereof of the person from whom the same shall have been first received, or who shall have had possession thereof.] These are, therefore, to require you forthwith to summon the said E. H. to appear before me at _____ in the said county, on, &c. at the hour of _____ o'clock in the forenoon of the same day to answer to the said information, and to satisfy me that he hath come lawfully by the said part of a deer, and to be further dealt with according to law; and be you then there to certify what you shall have done in the premises. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal this _____ day of _____ in the year of our Lord _____ J. P.

Conviction thereon. (a)

— to wit: BE it remembered, that on, &c. at, &c. E. F. is convicted before me, J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, for that on, &c. at, &c. C. D. late of, &c. had in his possession [or on his premises at, &c. and with his knowledge] a part of a deer, and upon the said part being found in his possession [or premises] as aforesaid, by virtue of a search warrant, the said C. D. was on, &c. at, &c. brought before me, the said justice, and was required by me to satisfy me that he came lawfully by such part, when he then and there satisfied me he had come lawfully by the same, and he was not nor is liable to conviction under the statute in that case made and provided; and I the said J. P. was then and there informed and given to understand that E. F. of, &c. had had possession thereof; and thereupon I the said justice then and there duly summoned him to appear before me on, &c. at, &c. for the discharge of the party who actually killed or stole the said deer, to satisfy me that he had come lawfully by the said part of the said deer, and to be further dealt with according to law; and also for that the said E. F. on, &c. at, &c. had possession of the said part of the said deer, and that the said E. F. although duly summoned by me, as such justice aforesaid, hath not appeared before me, or satisfied me that he came lawfully by the said part of the said deer [or that the said E. F. now appeareth before me, having been duly summoned for that purpose, but doth not satisfy me, the said J. P. that he came lawfully by the said part of the said deer]; against the form of the statute in that case made and provided; I the said J. P. do therefore adjudge the said E. F. for his said offence to forfeit and pay the sum of, &c. [Conclude as in the form (No. 47,) ante, 969.]

I. Gaming in general.

Gaming not an offence at common law.

Mr. Dalton says, that playing at cards and dice, and the like, are not prohibited by the common law; neither are they mala in se of their own nature, but only prohibited by statute; Dalt. c. 46; but there must be no cheating: see Da Costa v. Jones, Cowp. 729; 2 Vent. 175; and the playing must, it seems, be innocently and moderately. Bac. Ab. Gaming, (A.) And see per Abbott, C. J., post, 979.

Cock fighting.

Cock fighting is illegal; 3 Camp. 146; and seems indictable. Bac. Ab. Gaming, (A.)

Wagers.

As to what wagers are legal or not, see Chit. jun. Contr. 155.

16 Car. 2, c. 7. The inconvenience of immoderate unlawful use of gaming.

The following are the legislative enactments relative to gaming in general. The 16 Car. II. c. 7, recites that "all lawful games and exercises should not be otherwise used, than as innocent and moderate recreations, and not as constant trades or callings to gain a living, or make unlawful advantage thereby; and whereas by the immoderate use of them, many mischiefs and inconveniencies do arise, and are daily found, to the maintaining and encour-

Sect. 2 enacts, "that if any person or persons of any degree or quality whatsoever, at any time or times after the 29th day of September, which shall be in the year of our Lord God 1664, do or shall by any fraud, shift, cousenage, circumvention, deceit, or unlawful device, or ill practice whatsoever, in playing at or with cards, dice, tables, tennis, bowles, skittles, shovel-board; or any cock-fightings, horse-races, dog-matches, foot-races, or other pastimes, or any other game or games whatsoever, or in or by bearing a share or part in the stakes, wagers or adventures, or in or by betting on the sides or hands of such as do or shall play, act, ride or run as aforesaid, win, obtain, or acquire, to him or themselves, or to any other or others, any sum or sums of money, or other valuable thing or things whatsoever; that then every person and persons, so offending as aforesaid, shall ipso facto forfeit and lose treble the sum or value of money, or other thing or things so won, gained, obtained, or required, the one moiety thereof to our Sovereign Lord the King, his heirs and successors; and the other moiety thereof unto the person or persons offended, or who shall lose the money, or other thing or things so gained, so as every such loser and person grieved in that behalf, do or shall prosecute or sue for the same within six calendar months next after such play; and in default of such prosecution, the same other moiety to such person or persons as shall or will prosecute or sue for the same within one year next after the said six months expired; and that the said forfeitures shall or may be recovered for or recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of His Majesty's courts at Westminster, wherein no essoin, protection, or delay of law shall be allowed; and that all and every such plaintiff or plaintiffs, informer or informers, shall in every such suit and prosecution have and recover his and their treble costs against the person offending and forgoing as aforesaid; any law, statute, custom or usage to the contrary in any thing notwithstanding."

Deceits and counsenges in gaming.

Penalty for.

How to be sued for and recovered.

This statute also takes notice of excessive gaming, without fraud, and subjoins the offenders to pecuniary penalties: see s. 3 of this statute; and 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 2; 2 Geo. II. c. 28; 12 Geo. II. c. 28, post, 985; 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 5, post, 981; and 18 Geo. II. c. 34, post, 977.

Excessive gaming.

By the 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 5, it is enacted, "that if any person or persons whatsoever, at any time or times, after the said first day of May, 1711, do or shall by any fraud or shift, counsenge, circumvention, deceit, or unlawful practice, or ill practice whatsoever, in playing at or with cards, dice, or any the games aforesaid, (i. e. cards, dice, table, or other games whatsoever), or in or by bearing a share or part in the stakes, wagers, or adventures, or in or by betting on the sides or hands of such as do or shall play as aforesaid, win, obtain, or acquire to him or themselves, or to any other or others, any sum or sums of money, or other valuable thing or things whatsoever, or shall at any one time or sitting, win of any one or more person or persons whatsoever above the sum or value of ten pounds; that then every person or persons so winning by such ill practice as aforesaid, or winning at any one time or sitting above the said sum or value of ten pounds, and being convicted of any of the said offences, upon an indictment or information to be exhibited against him or them for that purpose, shall forfeit five times the value of the sum or sums of money, or other thing so won as aforesaid; and in case of conviction by ill practice as aforesaid, shall be deemed infamous, and suffer such corporal punishment as in cases of wilful perjury; and such penalty to be recovered by such person or persons as shall sue for the same by such action as shall be said."

As to winning 10*l.* without fraud, &c. see the 18 Geo. II. c. 34, s. 6, post, 978.

Sect. 6. "And whereas divers lewd and dissolute persons live at great expenses, having no visible estate, profession or calling to maintain themselves, but support those expenses by gaming only," it is enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful for any two or more of her Majesty's justices of the peace in any county, city or liberty whatsoever, to cause to come or to be brought before them every such person or persons within their respective limits, whom they shall have just cause to suspect to have no visible estate, profession or calling to maintain themselves by, but do for the most part support themselves by gaming; and if such person or persons shall not make it appear to such justices that the principal part of his or their expenses is not maintained by gaming, that then such justices shall require of him or them sufficient securities for his or their good behaviour for the space of twelve months; and in default of his or their finding such securities, to commit him or them to the common gaol, there to remain until he or they shall find such securities as aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "That if such person or persons so finding sureties as aforesaid shall during the time for which he or they shall be so bound to the good behaviour, at any one time or sitting, play or bet for any sum or sums of money or other thing, exceeding in the whole the sum or value of 20*s.*, that then such playing shall be deemed or taken to be a breach of his or their behaviour, and a forfeiture of the recognizance given for the same."

Sect. 8 enacts that a person assaulting, &c. another, on account of money won at play, shall forfeit all his goods, and be imprisoned two years. But this enactment is repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31.

Sect. 9. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to prevent or hinder any person or persons from gaming or playing at any of the games aforesaid within any of her Majesty's palaces of St. James or Whitehall during such time as her Majesty, her heirs or successors, shall be actually resident at either of the said two palaces, or in any other royal palaces where her Majesty, her heirs or successors, shall be actually resident during the time of such actual residence, so as such playing be not in any house, lodging or other part of any of the said palaces, the freehold or inheritance whereof is or shall be out of the crown, or is or shall be in lease to any person or persons during such time as such freehold and inheritance shall be out of the crown, or such lease shall continue, and so as such playing be for ready money only."

With respect to what game is within the act, it has been holden that laying above 10*l.* on a horse-race is an illegal bet within the statute of Anne, on the ground that the statute ought to be extended to all sports as well as games, in order to prevent excessive betting. Goodburn v. Marley, 2 Str. 1159; Blaxton v. Pye, 2 Wils. 309. And it has been determined that a wager of 10*l.* to 5*l.* upon a horse-race, is within this statute, although the race was for a legal plate. Clayton v. Jennings, 2 Blac. Rep. 706.

In Lynall v. Longbotham, 2 Wils. 36, the Court of Common Pleas were of opinion that a foot-race, whether the race be upon a given distance or against a certain time, is a game prohibited by 9 Anne, c. 14. And a wager that a person did not find, within such a time, a man who should carry on foot 24 stone weight, ten miles in fifteen hours, has been holden to be within the same principle. Brown v. Beckley, 1 Cowp. 282.

In Jeffreys v. Walter, 1 Wils. 220, the court inclined to think that cricket was a game within the meaning of stat. 9 Anne, c. 14.

Indeed the statute applies to all games, whether of skill or of chance, and it is the playing for money which makes them unlawful; and in a late case a game at bowls was held within the act. Sigel v. Jebb, 3 Stark. 1.

With respect to what is a losing at one time and what a losing at one sitting, in the case of Bines v. Booth, 2 Blac. Rep. 1226, two persons played at cards from Monday evening to Tuesday evening without any interruption, cept for an hour or two at dinner, and one of them won a balance of 17 lineas, this was held to be won at one sitting within the statute. Et per lackstone, J.—"To lose 10*l.* at one time is to lose it by a single stake or t; to lose at one sitting is to lose it in a course of play where the company ver parts, though the person may not be actually gaming the whole time." ures, J.—"The statute is remedial where the action is brought by the party ured, but penal where brought by a common informer."

Upon an indictment on this statute for winning more than 10*l.* at one ting, the defendant may be convicted of winning a less sum than that ted in the indictment. R. v. Hill, 1 Stark. N. P. 359. See post, 978.

Indictment.

The loser is a good witness to prove the loss. R. v. Luckup, M. 9 Geo. II. R. cited Will. 425. n. (c.)

R. v. Luckup, 2 Str. 1048. The defendant was convicted on an informa- 1 upon this act: and it was moved, that a fine should be set upon the endant if he refused to speak with the prosecutor. But by the court— ll the judgment that we can give is, that he is convicted; and a new ion must be brought upon that judgment for the forfeiture." And the endant was discharged without any fine or costs.

Fine.

It seems that if a loser prefer an indictment against a winner, and the nd jury find the bill, the court will not permit an information to be filed inst the defendant, although the indictment was quashed, and of course defendant never tried upon it, for the grand jury may find another bill the same offence. 1 Hawk. c. 32, s. 56; 8 Mod. 187.

persons having jurisdiction as aforesaid committed to the common gaol for the county, city or place where such offence shall be committed, there to remain for the space of six months without bail or mainprize."

Sect. 5. "That from and after the 24th day of June, 1745, no person or persons other than the parties, plaintiff and defendant in the cause shall be incapacitated from being a witness touching any offence committed against the laws for preventing excessive and deceitful gaming by reason of having played, betted or staked at any game prohibited by this or any of the said statutes."

Sect. 6. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to prevent or hinder any person or persons from playing at any game whatsoever, within any of his Majesty's royal palaces wherein his Majesty, his heirs and successors, shall then actually reside."

Sect. 8. "That if any person, after the commencement of this act, shall win or lose at play, or by betting, at any one time, the sum or value of 1*l.* or within the space of twenty-four hours the sum or value of 20*l.*, such person shall be liable to be indicted for such offence within six months after it is committed, either before his Majesty's justices of the King's Bench, at the gaol delivery or grand sessions; and being thereof legally convicted, shall be fined five times the value of the sum so won or lost; which fine (after such charges as the court shall judge reasonable allowed to the prosecutors and evidence out of the same) shall go to the poor of the parish or place where such offence shall be committed."

As to losing by fraud, see the 9 Anne, c. 14, s. 5, ante, 975.

Sect. 9. "That if any person so offending shall discover any other person so offending, so that such person be thereupon convicted, the person so discovering shall be discharged and indemnified from all penalties, by reason of any such offence, if such person so discovering hath not been before convicted thereof, and shall be admitted as an evidence to prove the same."

Sect. 10. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to repeal or invalidate an act made in the ninth year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, intituled, 'An Act for the better preventing excessive and deceitful gaming.'"

In construction of the 8th section of this act, it has been held, that a wager on some matter arising from the game and collateral to it, but not on the event itself, is not an offence within it; 1 Salk. 344; 1 Hawk. c. 92, s. 47, so that a bet on some dispute as to the mode of playing a game is not an offence. 2 H. Bla. 43. Nor is a wager between two persons, that a third will run a certain distance in a specific time, within the statute.

With respect to what is a losing "at one sitting," see 2 Bla. Rep. 1226; ante, 976, 977.

With respect to the indictment, it is said that as the penalty is given to the poor of a parish, the offence should be stated to have been committed within that parish. Stark. 502; 2 Stra. 1048. It is not necessary to prove the precise sum as laid in the indictment, if laid under a videlicet: contra, if the indictment averred that the defendant had won any bills of exchange of a specified amount. R. v. Hill, 1 Stark. 359; and see R. v. Gilham, 6 T. R. 265.

Under this act no action need be brought for the penalty, like under the 9 Anne, c. 14, s. 5, ante, 975.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 4, (the Vagrant Act), every person playing or betting in any open or public place, at or with any table or instrument of gaming, at any game or pretended game of chance, may be treated as a vagrant within the act. Playing at bowls is not within the act. 1 Conj. Rep. 25; post, Vagrant, Vol. V., p. 973.

As to gaming in prisons. see 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 10, post, 1020.

II. Keeping or Haunting Gaming Houses.

It is clearly agreed, that all common gaming houses are nuisances in the eye of the law, being detrimental to the public, as they promote cheating and other corrupt practices; and incite to idleness, and avaricious ways of gaining property, great numbers whose time might otherwise be employed for the good of the community. 1 Hawk. c. 25, s. 6; and see R. v. Dixon, 10 Mod. 336; R. v. Mason, Leach, C. C. 548.

Offence at common law.

And in a late case, R. v. Rogier and another, 1 B. & Cres. 272; 2 D. & R. 1, S. C., the "keeping a common gaming house, and for lucre and gain unlawfully causing and procuring divers idle and evil disposed persons to frequent and come to play together at a game called rouge et noir, and permitting the said idle and evil disposed persons to remain playing at the said house for divers large and excessive sums of money," was held an offence indictable at common law. Et per Abbott, C. J., S. C.—"I have no doubt that the facts stated in this indictment constitute an offence at common law." Hawkins, in the passage which has been cited, (viz. 1 Hawk. c. 25, s. 6,) observes, "It has been said that common gaming houses are nuisances in the eye of the law;" and then he assigns the reason, viz. that they tend to produce certain evil consequences, which is not very different from saying that they are nuisances if those consequences are produced. Since his time many persons have been convicted upon indictments, in which the keeping of such a house has been charged to be an offence at common law. If any confirmation of the authority of Hawkins were wanting, it is to be found in the enactments of the legislature. The 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 5, (a) after reciting, "in order to encourage prosecutions against persons keeping bawdy-houses, gaming houses, or other disorderly houses, enacts, "that if any inhabitant of any parish give notice in writing to a constable, of any person keeping a bawdy house, gaming house, or any other disorderly house, the constable shall go with such inhabitant to a justice of the peace, and there, upon such inhabitant making oath that they believe the contents of the notice to be true, enter into a recognizance to prosecute such offence, and the constable is to be allowed the expenses of the prosecution, and each of the inhabitants is to receive 10*l*." And section 8 recites, "that by reason of the subtilty and crafty contrivances of persons keeping bawdy houses, gaming-houses, or other disorderly houses, it is difficult to prove who is the real owner or keeper thereof, by which means many notorious offenders have escaped punishment;" and then enacts, "that any person who shall appear, or behave himself as master, or as the person having the care or management of any such house, shall be deemed to be the keeper thereof, and shall be liable to be prosecuted as such, although he be not the real owner." These provisions are a legislative declaration that the keeping of a gaming house is an indictable offence. Besides, the 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 2, makes playing at any game unlawful, if more than 10*l*. shall be lost. Now in this case the indictment states, not only that the defendants kept a common gaming house, but that they permitted persons to play there for divers large and excessive sums of money. The playing for large and excessive sums of money would of itself make any game unlawful; and if so, there can be no doubt that this is an offence at common law. Holroyd, J. in the same case, added, that in his opinion the indictment would have been sufficient merely to have alleged, that the defendants kept a common gaming house.

stat. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 9, s. 11, no person shall for his gain, lucre, or reward, keep any common house, alley, or place of bowling, coytynge, colysh, half-bowl, tennis, dicing-table, carding, or any unlawful game then or hereafter to be invented, on pain of forfeiting 40*s*. a-day. It was resolved upon this clause, in the third year of Jac. I., that if the Sect. 14. And all justices of the peace in every shire, mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, and other head officers in every city, town and borough, may enter all such houses, places, and alleys, where such games shall be suspected to be holden, exercised, used, or occupied, and as well the keepers of the same, as also the persons there haunting, resorting, and playing, may take, arrest, and imprison, and keep in prison until the keepers and maintainers of the said plays and games have found sureties to the king's use, to be bound by recognizance or otherwise, no longer to use, keep or occupy any such house, play, game, alley, or place; and also that the persons there so found be in like case bound by themselves, or with sureties, no more to play, haunt, or exercise from thenceforth, in, at, or to any of the said places, or at any of the said games.

And of officers in cities and towns.

Sect. 15. And the mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, constables, and other head officers, within every city, borough, or town, shall make due search weekly, or at the furthest once a month, in all places where any such houses, alleys, plays, or places shall be suspected to be had, kept, and maintained; and if they shall not make such search at the furthest once a month, if the case so require, every such person offending shall forfeit 40s. for each month.

Artificers and servants.

Sect. 16. By the same act, no manner of artificer, or craftsman of any handicraft or occupation, husbandman, apprentice, labourer, servant at husbandry, journeyman, or servant of artificer, mariners, fishermen, watermen, or any serving man, shall play at the tables, tennis, dice, cards, bowls, clash, coyting, logating, or any other unlawful game, out of Christmas, on pain of 20s. for every time; and in Christmas to play at the said games in their masters' houses, or in their masters' presence; and also no person shall at any time play at bowl or bowls in open places out of his garden or orchard, on pain of 6s. 8d. for every time of offending, See R. v. Clarke. 1 Cowp. 35.

Sect. 23. And any nobleman or other person having manors, lands, tenements, or other yearly profits for life, in his own or his wife's right, of 100l. a year, may command or license his servants, or family of his house, to play within the precinct of his house, garden, or orchard, at cards, dice, tables, bowls, or tennis, as well among themselves as others repairing to the same house.

Punishing offenders using unlawful games.

Sect. 16. And all justices of the peace, mayors, bailiffs, sheriffs, and other head officers, and every of them, finding or knowing any person using unlawful games, contrary to this act, may commit every such offender to ward, there to remain without bail or mainprize till he be bound by obligation to the king's use, in such sum as by the discretion of the said justices, mayors, bailiffs, or other head officers, shall be thought reasonable, that they shall not from thenceforth use such unlawful games.

Sect. 6. Provided "that upon such constable or other officer entering into such recognizance to prosecute as aforesaid, the said justice of the peace shall forthwith make out his warrant, to bring the person so accused of keeping a bawdy house, gaming house, or other disorderly house, before him, and shall bind him or her over to appear at such general or quarter session or assizes there to answer to such bill of indictment as shall be found against him or her for such offence; and such justice shall and may, if in his discretion he thinks fit, likewise demand and take security for such person's good behaviour in the mean time, and until such indictment shall be found, heard, and determined, or be returned by the grand jury not to be a true bill." (a)

Sect. 7. If the constable shall neglect or refuse, upon such notice, to go before a justice, or to enter into recognizance, or shall be wilfully negligent in carrying on the prosecution, he shall forfeit 20*l.* to each of the said inhabitants. (a)

Sect. 8. The person appearing or acting as master, or as having the care and management of any gaming house, shall be taken to be the keeper thereof, and liable as such. (a)

Sect. 9. And on trial any person may give evidence against the defendant notwithstanding his being a parishioner or having entered into such recognizance. (a)

Sect. 10. And no indictment for such offence shall be removed by certiorari. (a)

By stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 7, after reciting the above provision of 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 5, and that it is expedient that when any two inhabitants of any parish or place, paying scot and bearing lot therein, shall give notice in writing to any constable of such parish or place of any person keeping a bawdy house, gaming house, or any other disorderly house, in such parish or place, that the overseers of the poor of such parish or place shall have notice thereof; it is enacted, "That a copy of the notice which shall be given to such constable shall also be served on or left at the places of abode of the overseers of the poor of such parish or place, or one of them, and such overseers or overseer of the poor shall be summoned or have reasonable notice to attend before such justice of the peace before whom such constable shall have notice to attend; and if such overseers or overseer of the poor shall then and there enter into such recognizance to prosecute such offender as the constable is in and by the said act required to enter into, then it shall not be necessary for, nor shall such constable be required to enter into such recognizance; but if such overseers or overseer of the poor shall neglect to attend such justice on having such notice, or shall attend, and shall decline or refuse to enter into such recognizance to prosecute, then such constable shall enter into the same, and shall prosecute, and shall be entitled to his expenses, to be allowed as in and by the said act is directed."

By 18 Geo. II. c. 34, s. 1, no person shall keep any house, room, or place for playing, or permit any person within any such house, &c. to play at the

III. Lotteries and Little Bores.

By the 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 17, s. 1, after reciting that all lotteries are common and public nuisances, it is declared that all grants, patents and licenses for them are void and against law.

10 & 11 W. 3, c. 17.
Lottery a nuisance.

Sect. 2. "That from and after the 29th day of December, which shall be the year of our Lord God, 1699, no person or persons whatsoever shall publicly or privately exercise, keep open, show, or expose to be played at, drawn at, or thrown at, or shall draw, play or throw at any such lottery, or any other lottery, either by dice, lots, cards, balls, or any other numbers or figures, or any other way whatsoever; and that every person or persons that shall, after the said 29th day of December, exercise, expose, open or show to be played, thrown or drawn at, any such lottery, play or device, or other lottery, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 500*l.* to be recovered by information, bill, plaint or action at law in any of his Majesty's courts at Westminster, wherein no essoin, wager of law, nor any more than one imparlance shall be allowed; one third part thereof to the use of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, one other third part thereof to the use of the poor of the parish where such offence shall be committed, and the other third part thereof, together with double costs, to the party that shall inform and sue for the same; and the said parties so offending shall likewise be prosecuted as common rogues, according to the statutes in that case made and provided."

Sect. 3. "That every person or persons, that after the said 29th day of December shall play, throw, or draw at any such lottery, play, or device, or her lotteries, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 20*l.* to be recovered by information, bill, plaint, or action at law, in any of his Majesty's courts at Westminster, wherein no essoin, wager of law, nor any more than one imparlance shall be allowed, one third part thereof to the use of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, one other third part thereof to the use of the poor of the parish where such offence shall be committed, and the other third part thereof, together with double costs, to the party that shall inform and sue for the same."

By 9 Anne, c. 6, s. 56, "all justices of the peace, and all mayors, bailiffs, and officers, constables, and other her Majesty's civil officers, within their respective jurisdictions, are hereby empowered and required to use their utmost endeavours to prevent the drawing of any such unlawful lottery, heretofore or hereafter to be set up, by all lawful ways and means; and that every person who after the 8th day of March, 1710, shall set up, or shall, by writing or printing, publish the setting up any such unlawful lottery, with intent to have such lottery drawn, shall forfeit for every such offence 100*l.*, to be recovered by information, bill, plaint, or action at law, in any of her Majesty's courts at Westminster, wherein no essoin, wager of law, nor any more than one imparlance shall be allowed; one third part thereof to the use of her Majesty, her heirs, and successors; one other third part thereof to the use of the poor of the parish where such offence shall be committed; and the other third part thereof, together with full costs, to the party who shall inform and sue for the same."

said games or lotteries in this present act mentioned; and shall be prosecuted and convicted, and the penalties and forfeitures shall be sued for and recovered in like manner as the said penalties and forfeitures are by this act directed to be sued for and recovered."

By s. 3, "all and every person and persons who shall be adventurers in any of the said games, lottery or lotteries, sale or sales; or shall play, set at stake, or punt at either of the said games of the ace of hearts, pharaoh, bes-set and hazard, and shall be thereof convicted in such manner and form as in and by this act is prescribed; every such person or persons shall forfeit and lose the sum of 50*l.*, to be sued for and recovered as aforesaid."

And by 13 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 9, it is enacted, "that the said game of passage, and all and every other game and games invented or to be invented with one or more die or dice, or with any other instrument, engine, or device in the nature of dice, having one or more figures or numbers thereon (backgammon and the other games now played with the backgammon tables only excepted), are and shall be deemed to be games or lotteries by dice, within the intent and meaning of the said in part recited act; and all and every person and persons who shall set up, maintain, or keep any office, table, or place (save and except as in the said in part recited act is provided and declared) for the said game of passage, or for any other such game or games as aforesaid (backgammon and the other games now played with the backgammon tables only excepted), shall severally forfeit, be subject, and liable to all and every the penalties and forfeitures in and by the said in part recited act inflicted upon any person or persons who shall erect, set up, continue, or keep any of the games or lotteries in the said in part recited act mentioned; and all and every person or persons who shall play, set at, stake, or adventure at the said game of passage, or at any other such game as aforesaid (backgammon and the other games now played with the backgammon tables only excepted), save and except as in the said in part recited act is provided and declared, he and they respectively shall severally forfeit, be subject, and liable to all and every the penalties and forfeitures in and by the said in part recited act inflicted upon any person or persons who shall play, set at, stake, or adventure at any of the said games in the said in part recited act mentioned; and all and every such offenders respectively shall be prosecuted and convicted, and the several penalties and forfeitures shall be sued for, and recovered and disposed of in like manner, and to such uses, as the several penalties and forfeitures in either of such cases are by the said in part recited act directed to be sued for, and recovered and disposed of."

And every person who shall set up, maintain, or keep any office, table, or place for the game of passage, or any other such game as aforesaid (except as excepted), shall severally forfeit as in stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 28.

Moreover, by 12 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 4, "every such sale or sales of houses, lands, advowsons, presentations to livings, plate, jewels, ships, goods or other things, by any game, lottery or lotteries, machine, engine, or other device whatsoever, depending upon, or to be determined by chance or lot, shall and are hereby declared to be void to all intents and purposes whatsoever: and all such houses, lands, advowsons, presentations to livings, plate, jewels, ships, goods or other things, set up and exposed to sale in manner and form aforesaid, shall be forfeited to such person or persons who shall sue for the same, by action, bill, plaint, or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record, or at the assizes for any county where the offence shall be committed; in which action, bill, plaint, or information, no essoin, protection, wager of law, or more than one imparlance shall be allowed."

And by 18 Geo. II. c. 34, no person shall keep any house or place for playing, or permit any person within such house to play, at any prohibited game, with cards or dice, under the penalties of 12 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1. (See 18 Geo. II. c. 34, ante, p. 977.)

By 12 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1, 8, in case such offender have not sufficient goods and chattels whereon to levy the said penalties, or do not immediately pay or secure the same, he may be committed to the common gaol for any time not exceeding six months.

By s. 5, "that if any person or persons shall think him, her, or themselves aggrieved by the judgment or determination of any justice or justices of the peace or mayor as aforesaid, upon any conviction of or for any of the offences in this act, such person or persons may appeal from the said judgment of the said justice or justices or mayor to the next general quarter sessions of the peace for the said county, riding, division, city or place where such person or persons was or were convicted; but the person and persons so appealing shall, and he, she and they are hereby directed to give reasonable notice to the prosecutor or prosecutors of such person or persons as shall so appeal, of such his, her, or their intention of bringing and prosecuting such appeal, and shall enter into a recognizance before some justices (a) of the peace for the county, riding, division, city or place wherein the conviction or judgment was made or given, with two sufficient sureties, on condition to try such appeal at the next quarter sessions, which shall be held in and for the county, riding, division, city or place wherein such conviction or judgment was made or given, next and immediately after the bringing such appeal; and every such appeal and appeals shall, by the court at the said next general quarter sessions, to which such appeal and appeals is or are made, be then examined, and the matter then finally heard and determined, and not afterwards; and in case such judgment, determination or conviction as aforesaid, shall be then and here affirmed, the party appealing shall pay unto the prosecutor or prosecutors his, her or their treble costs; and such prosecutor and prosecutors shall have such remedy for the same, as any defendant or defendants hath or have or costs of suit in any other cases by law."

12 Geo. 2, c. 28.
Appeal.

A verbal notice of appeal has been held sufficient under this act. R. v. Is. of Surrey, 5 B. & A. 539; and as to appeals in general, ante, Appeal, Vol. I.

By s. 6, "no such conviction made, or judgment given as aforesaid, by his act, shall be set aside by the said court of quarter sessions for want of form, in case the facts alleged in the said conviction shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said court; nor shall such conviction or judgment be removed or removable by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, unto any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, until such order or other proceedings shall have been first removed to, and judgment and determination given and made thereupon by such court of quarter sessions as aforesaid."

Certiorari.

And by stat. 18 Geo. II. c. 34, s. 4, 5, any person may be summoned as a witness (other than the party accused) notwithstanding his having layed, betted, or staked at any prohibited game; and in case he neglect to appear, or refuse to give evidence, he shall forfeit 50*l.*, to be levied by distress by warrant of the justice issuing such summons; and for want of sufficient distress, he shall be committed to gaol for six months. Vide ante, p. 977.

Sect. 64 repeals stat. 27 Geo. III. c. 1.

In R. v. Liston, 6 T. R. 388, it was decided, that stat. 27 Geo. III. c. 1, which contained an enactment nearly alike to the above stat. 46 Geo. III. c. 148, s. 59, only extended to state lotteries, and did not repeal the summary jurisdiction of magistrates over games of chance or lotteries prohibited by stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 28. It may be questionable whether the above stat. 46 Geo. III. extends to other than state lotteries.

Insuring in the lottery is not gaming within stat. 5 Geo. II. c. 30, s. 12, which will prevent a bankrupt's certificate being allowed. 1 H. Bla. 29.

By stat. 42 Geo. III. c. 119, s. 1, "that all such games or lotteries called Little Goes, shall from and after the passing of this act be deemed and are hereby declared common and public nuisances, and against law."

Sect. 2. "That from and after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and two, no person or persons whatsoever shall publicly or privately keep any office or place to exercise, keep open, show, or expose to be played, drawn, or thrown at or in, either by dice, lots, cards, balls, or by numbers or figures, or by any other way, contrivance, or device whatsoever, any game or lottery called a Little Goe, or any other lottery whatsoever not authorised by parliament, or shall knowingly suffer to be exercised, kept open, shown, or exposed to be played, drawn, or thrown at or in, either by dice, lots, cards, balls, or by numbers or figures, or by any other way, contrivance, or device whatsoever, any such game or lottery in his or her house, room, or place, upon pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 500l., to be recovered in the Court of Exchequer, at the suit of his Majesty's attorney-general, and to be to the use of his Majesty, his heirs and successors; and every person so offending shall be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the true intent and meaning of an act passed in the 17 Geo. II. c. 5, (a) intituled, 'An Act to amend and make more effectual the laws relating to rogues, vagabonds, and other idle and disorderly persons and to houses of correction,' and shall be punishable as such rogue and vagabond accordingly."

Sect. 3. "That every person so offending against this act in manner hereinbefore mentioned, against whom no information shall have been made as aforesaid, shall be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the true intent and meaning of an act passed in the 17 Geo. II. intituled, 'An Act to amend and make more effectual the laws relating to rogues, vagabonds, and other idle and disorderly persons, and to houses of correction;' and also of another act, passed in the 27 Geo. Sect. 5. "That from and after the passing of this act no person or persons whatever shall on or under any pretence, device, form, denomination, or description whatsoever, promise or agree to pay any sum or sums, or to deliver any goods, or to do or forbear doing any thing for the benefit of any person or persons, whether with or without consideration, on any event or contingency relative or applicable to the drawing of any ticket or tickets, lot or lots, numbers or figures, in any such game or lottery, or to publish any proposal for any of the purposes aforesaid; and if any person or persons shall offend in any of the matters aforesaid, he, she, or they shall for every offence be liable to pay the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 6. "That it shall and may be lawful for any person whatever to apprehend on the spot any person or persons so offending, and to convey or cause to be conveyed before any magistrate or justice of the peace residing near the place where such offence shall be committed the person or persons so offending, to be proceeded against under this act; and when any person or persons shall be apprehended or brought before any magistrate or justice aforesaid for any such offence, it shall be lawful for such magistrate or justice to proceed to examine into the circumstances of the case, and upon due proof upon oath or solemn affirmation of any such offence committed against this act, to give judgment or sentence accordingly, and where the party accused shall be convicted of such offence, and such penalty shall not be immediately paid, to commit such offender to prison for any space of time not exceeding six calendar months, nor less than one calendar month, without bail or mainprize, and without appeal, or until such penalty shall be satisfied; and every such penalty, when paid upon conviction, shall go and be applied one-third thereof to his Majesty, one-third thereof to the use of the informer or informers, and the other third thereof to the person or persons apprehending or securing such offender or offenders."

had, in the case of contracts, to the reasonableness of the price and responsibility of the contractors; and every contractor shall give sufficient security for the due performance of his contract to the clerk of the peace, or town clerk, for the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, to be inspected at all reasonable times by any justices, or by any other person contributing to the rate of such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, without fee or reward.

Sect. 46 enacts, "That after such presentment and notice as aforesaid it shall and may be lawful for the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, or the major part of them, and they shall have full power and authority, to purchase any houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, ways, watercourses, and other easements, for the purpose of enlarging or rendering commodious, or for the building or rebuilding any prison, and to direct the property so purchased to be conveyed to such person or persons as the said justices shall think fit, in trust for the purpose aforesaid, under the regulations and directions in this act contained; and such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, ways, watercourses, or other easements, shall, when inclosed and added to such prison, be deemed to be taken to be parts of such prison, and to be within the county, riding, division, city, district, town, or place, to the use of which such prison may be applied, to all intents and purposes whatever, so long as the same shall be used by such county, riding, division, city, district, town, or place, for the purpose of this act, and no longer."

Sect. 47 enacts, "That if it shall at any time happen, that any such gaol or house of correction shall become unsafe or unfit for the custody of the prisoners confined therein, between the several times of holding the general or quarter sessions, it shall and may be lawful for any two or more justices (one of whom shall be a visiting justice for the prison) for the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, to order such repairs and alterations to be immediately done and made, as may be necessary and sufficient for the safe and proper custody of such prisoners, and the upholding of such prison; and such justices shall report the same to the next court of general or quarter sessions, to be holden for such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place; and such court is hereby authorized to order the payment of such sum or sums of money, as shall have been properly expended in such repairs or alterations as aforesaid."

Sect. 48 enacts, "That every gaol, house of correction, or other prison for any county, riding, or division, county of a city, or county of a town, or for any town, liberty, soke, or place, not being a county, but having an exclusive jurisdiction for the trial of felonies or misdemeanors committed therein, which is now built, or shall hereafter be built, together with the ground whereon the same shall stand, and every court, yard, building, and appurtenance thereunto belonging, with every addition that shall hereafter be made thereto, which said gaol, house of correction, or other prison, court, yard, building, appurtenance, or addition, is or shall be situate within the limits of any other county, riding, or division, county of a city, county of a town, or of any other town, liberty, soke, or place, not being a county, but having an exclusive jurisdiction for the trial of felonies or misdemeanors committed therein, shall be deemed, and taken to be, part of the county, riding, or division, county of a city, county of a town, or of the town, liberty, soke, or place, for which the same shall be used as a gaol, house of correction, or other prison, so long as the same shall be so used, and no longer; and the justices of the peace, mayors, jurats, coroners, constables, and other officers of such county, riding, or division, county of a city, county of a town, or of such town, liberty, soke, or place, for which the same shall be used as a gaol, house of correction, or other prison, shall, during the time that the same shall be so used, have as full power and authority therein, as they would have if the same was not situate within the limits of such other county, riding, or division, county of a city, county of a town, or of such town, liberty, soke, or place; any charter, law, or usage, to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 49 enacts, " That in the altering, enlarging, repairing, building, or re-building, of any gaol or house of correction under this act, the justices shall adopt such plans as shall afford the most effectual means for the security, classification, health, inspection, employment, and religious and moral instruction of the prisoners; the building shall be so constructed or applied, and the keepers' and officers' apartments so situated, as may best ensure the safety of the prison, and facilitate the control and superintendence of those committed thereto; distinct wards, and dry and airy cells shall be provided, in which prisoners of the several descriptions and classes hereinafter enumerated may be respectively confined; and it shall be considered as a primary and invariable rule, that the male prisoners shall in all cases be separated from the female, so as to prevent any communication between them: provision shall be made for the separation of prisoners into the following classes; if a gaol—first, debtors and persons confined for contempt of court on civil process; secondly, prisoners convicted of felony; thirdly, those convicted upon trial of misdemeanors; fourthly, those committed on charge or suspicion of felony; fifthly, those committed on charge of misdemeanors, or for want of sureties. If a house of correction—first, prisoners convicted of felony; secondly, prisoners convicted upon trial of misdemeanors; thirdly, those committed on charge or suspicion of felony; fourthly, those committed on charge of misdemeanors; fifthly, vagrants. Places of confinement shall also be set apart in every gaol and house of correction for such prisoners as are intended to be examined as witnesses in behalf of the crown in any prosecutions, and such further means of classification shall be adopted as the justices shall deem conducive to good order and discipline; separate rooms shall be provided as infirmaries or sick wards, for the two sexes, and, as far as is practicable, for the different description of prisoners; and warm and cold baths, or bathing tubs, shall be introduced into such parts of the prison as may be best adapted for the use of the several classes; proper yards shall be allotted to the different classes for air and exercise, and each class shall have the use of a privy, and be furnished with a supply of good water; a separate sleeping cell shall, if possible, be provided for every prisoner; but as the numbers may sometimes be greater than the prison is calculated to contain, under the arrangement required by this act, and as it is expedient that two male prisoners only should never be lodged together, a small proportion of cells or rooms shall be provided for the reception of three or more persons; every prison shall contain rooms and places properly fitted up for the exercise of labour and industry, and also a competent number of cells adapted to solitary confinement, or the punishment of refractory prisoners, and for the reception of such persons as may by law be confined therein; a chapel shall be provided in every prison, in such a convenient situation as to be easy of access to all the prisoners; it shall be fitted up with separate divisions for males and females, and also for the different classes; it shall be strictly set apart for religious worship, or for the occasional religious and moral instructions of the prisoners, and shall never be appropriated to or employed for any other purpose whatsoever; in cases where the justices shall deem it necessary that the chaplain should reside, either occasionally or permanently, within the prison, or near to it, proper apartments shall be provided therein, or in the neighbourhood thereof, for his accommodation."

Sect. 50 enacts, " That in case it shall be expressly presented that the place wherein any old prison is situated is improper, and that the prison ought to be removed to some other part of the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, or that a new gaol or house of correction is necessary, the justices in their general or quarter sessions assembled shall take such presentment into their consideration, and if it shall be resolved by the justices assembled at two successive general or quarter sessions, or by a major part of them, that such old prison ought to be removed, or that such new prison is necessary, it shall be lawful for the justices so assembled to contract for the building of a new gaol or house of correction in any part of the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place which they may deem most eligible; and whenever the site of any prison shall be changed, and the old site shall be no longer necessary for the purpose of a prison, it shall be lawful for the justices so assembled to make sale thereof, (unless it be the property of the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, or of some private individual), for the best price that can be gotten for the same, and to direct the purchase-money to be paid to the treasurer of such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, and to direct the trustee of such lands and hereditaments, his heirs, executors, or administrators (according to the tenure thereof), and the clerk of the peace, or town clerk, to convey the inheritance of such site to the purchaser; and every such conveyance, together with the treasurer's receipt for the purchase-money, shall give a good and valid title to the purchaser; and the purchase-money shall be applied by the treasurer in aid of the rate of such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place; and whenever the building of any court of justice is or shall be so attached to any prison, as to render it impracticable or inconvenient to repair, enlarge, improve, or rebuild the said prison, without also altering or pulling down the building of the said court, then and in such cases it shall be lawful for the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled to cause such courts to be altered or pulled down, or to be rebuilt, either on the same or on any other site, subject to the same provisions as are by this act appointed with respect to gaols."

By stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 1, after reciting that by 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, provision is made for the sale, in certain cases, of the sites of old prisons which are no longer necessary; and it is expedient to extend the same power to cases not therein provided for; it is enacted, "That in case it shall appear to the justices of the peace, who shall be assembled at any general or quarter session of the peace to be henceforth holden for any county, riding, or division in England, that, by reason of any gaol or house of correction for such county, riding, or division, having been lately built or considerably enlarged, any other gaol or gaols, house or houses of correction therein hath or have or shall have become unnecessary, the said justices, or the justices who shall be assembled at the then next general or quarter session to be holden for the same county, riding, or division, shall order notice to be given three times at least in some public newspaper circulating in such county, riding, or division, that the propriety of selling such unnecessary gaol or gaols, house or houses of correction, will be taken into consideration at the next ensuing general or quarter sessions; and in case the justices at such last-mentioned session, or the majority of them, shall resolve that such last-mentioned gaol or gaols, house or houses of correction, ought to be sold, then it shall be lawful for such justices, and they are hereby required, to take such measures for selling the same, together with all outhouses, land, and appurtenances to the same belonging, (unless they, or any part thereof, shall be the property of his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, or of any private individual), for the best price or prices that can be obtained for the same, either by public auction or private contract, and subject to such conditions and in such manner as they shall think proper."

Sect. 2 enacts, "That in case any contract shall, before the passing of this act, have been entered into by or on behalf of the justices of the peace of any county, riding, or division, in England, in which any gaol or house of correction has been lately built or considerably enlarged, for the sale of any other gaol or house of correction therein, and of the outhouses, land, and appurtenances thereto belonging, (not being the property of his Majesty or of any private individual), it shall be lawful for the justices who shall be assembled at any general or quarter session of the peace to be henceforth holden for such county, riding, or division, to order notice to be given, in the manner hereinbefore directed, that the propriety of confirming and completing such contract will be taken into consideration at the next ensuing general or quarter session; and in case the justices at such last-mentioned session, or the majority of them, shall resolve that the contract so entered into ought to be confirmed and completed, either with or without any modification of the conditions thereof, then it shall be lawful for such justices, and they are hereby required, to order that such contract be confirmed and completed accordingly."

Sect. 3 enacts, "That whenever a sale of any gaol or house of correction shall be made, or the contract heretofore entered into for any such sale shall be ordered to be confirmed and completed, pursuant to the directions in this act contained, and the purchase-money for the same paid to the treasurer of the county, riding, or division, hereby authorized to dispose thereof, it shall be lawful for the trustees or trustee of every such gaol or house of correction, if any, and the clerk of the peace of such county, riding, or division, to convey or surrender such gaol or house of correction, with the out-houses, land, and appurtenances thereto belonging, unto and to the use of the purchaser thereof, and his or her heirs, or to such uses as he or she shall direct or appoint; and every such conveyance or surrender, together with the treasurer's receipt for the purchase-money, shall give a good and valid title to the purchaser; and the purchase-money shall be applied by the treasurer towards discharging the expense which shall have been incurred in building or enlarging any gaol or house of correction for the same county, riding, or division, or in aid of the rate of the same, as the justices of the peace for such county, riding, or division, in general or quarter session assembled, shall direct."

Sect. 4 provides, "That if, in the event of any sale being effected or confirmed in pursuance of this act, it shall appear to the justices by whom the resolution for making or confirming such sale shall be entered into, that the property so sold has never been vested in any trustees, or that the trustees thereof are dead, then it shall be lawful for the said justices to order that such property shall be conveyed by the clerk of the peace to the purchaser thereof; and in such case a conveyance thereof by the clerk of the peace, by indenture of bargain and sale, (of which no enrolment shall be necessary) shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes."

IV. Expenses of Building, &c. how defrayed.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 63, after reciting the stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 86, it is enacted, "That upon the application of the major part of the justices of any county, riding, division, city, town, or place in England, in quarter sessions assembled, such major part to consist of five at the least, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, who are authorized and empowered to advance money for public works under the provisions of the said recited act of the third year of the reign of his present Majesty, and of the several acts there-recited, and they are hereby empowered to make advances under the powers, authorities, provisions, and regulations of the said acts, for the building, rebuilding, enlarging, improving, repairing, or fitting up of any gaols or houses of correction in England, in like manner in every respect as gaols and houses of correction had been included in the provisions of the said recited acts; and it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace of any county or of any city, town, or place, in England, authorized to make rates for the repairing of any gaol or house of correction, to receive any sums of money so advanced, and to apply the same to the purposes for which such advances shall be made, and to make rates for the repayment of any sums of money so advanced, in such manner, and in such proportions, and at such times as shall be required by the said commissioners in that behalf, and also to assign the rates so to be made as aforesaid, as a security for the said advances, in such manner and form as the said commissioners shall direct and appoint, so as that all sums so advanced, with interest thereon, at and after the rate specified in the said recited act of the third year aforesaid, shall be fully repaid and satisfied within the period of twenty years from the advancing thereof; and all such rates shall be made, assessed, levied, and recovered in like manner as any county rates may be made, assessed, levied, and recovered, and shall continue in force until all such ad-

Stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 54, enacts, "That when it shall appear that the amount of any estimate, approved by the justices, for the building or rebuilding, repairing or enlarging any gaol or house of correction, under the powers of this act, shall exceed one half of the amount of the ordinary annual assessment for the rate of any county or riding, or of any such division of a county as aforesaid, or of any district, city, town, or place, (such ordinary assessment to be taken on an average of such rate for the last seven years preceding), it shall and may be lawful for the justices, in quarter sessions assembled, from time to time to borrow and take up on mortgage of such rate, by instrument in the form contained in the schedule to this act annexed marked (C) (a), or to the like effect, any sum of money not exceeding the amount of such estimate, in sums not less than 50*l.*, nor exceeding 100*l.* each, at interest, as to the said justices shall appear necessary and expedient for the purposes aforesaid, and to secure every such sum of money so borrowed upon the credit of the said rate; and it shall and may be lawful for the justices so assembled, and they are hereby authorized to treat and agree with any person for the loan of any such sums of money, and by their order to confirm every such agreement; and every such agreement, signed by the chairman and two or more other justices present at the time of making such order, shall be, and the same is hereby declared to be effectual for securing to the person so advancing any such sum of money, every such sum, with the interest for the same, on such terms as in and by such agreement shall be stipulated; and copies or extracts of all such agreements shall be kept with the clerk of the peace; and it shall and may be lawful for every person who shall be entitled to the money thereby secured, and such person is hereby empowered (by indorsing his name on the back of such security), to transfer the same, and his right to the principal money and interest thereby secured, unto any other person; and every such assignee may in like manner transfer the same again, and so toties quoties; and the person to whom such security or any such assignment thereof shall be made, and his executors, administrators, and assigns, shall be creditors upon the said rate in an equal degree one with another, and shall not have any preference with respect to the priority of any monies so advanced."

Sect. 55 enacts, "That the said justices shall, and they are hereby authorized and required to charge the rate to be raised upon such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, not only with the interest of the money so borrowed, but also with the payment of such further sum as shall ensure the payment of the whole of the sum borrowed within fourteen years from the time of borrowing the same: and such sums shall be assessed on the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, in such manner as county rates are directed to be assessed by the laws now in being, and paid and applied under the direction of the justices, in discharge of the interest and of so many of the principal sums on the said securities, as such money will extend to discharge in each year, until the whole of the money for which such securities shall be made, and the interest thereof, shall be fully paid and discharged; and the justices are required to fix one or more day or days in each year on which such payment shall be made, and shall make orders for assessments in due time, so as to provide for the regular payment thereof; and they are hereby required to appoint a proper person to keep an exact and regular account of all the receipts and payments, under the authority of this act, in a book or books, separate and apart from other accounts, and the same to adjust and settle in such manner that it may easily be seen what interest is growing due, and what principal money has been discharged, and what remains due; and the book or books so adjusted and settled to deliver into court at every general or quarter sessions to be held for such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place; and the justices shall, and they are required, at every such sessions, carefully to inspect all such accounts, and to make orders for carrying the several purposes of this act into execution, in such manner as to them shall seem meet; and if at any time it shall appear to the justices, that the person so appointed has neglected such order, and has not duly and without delay applied the money in his hands to the purposes hereby directed, such person shall forfeit half the amount of the money which shall not have been applied to the purposes of this act; and the justices so assembled in sessions as aforesaid, shall direct in what order such securities shall be discharged, by drawing lots or otherwise, as they shall think fit, taking care to discharge, in the first place, all such securities as shall bear the highest rate of interest."

Sect. 56 enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful for the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, and for all bodies politic and corporate, and also for all guardians, committees, husbands, trustees, and attorneys of all persons being infants, lunatics, idiots, under coverture or any other disability, and also for all other persons who are or shall be seized, possessed of, or interested in any houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges, which shall be deemed necessary for the purposes of this act, to contract or agree for, and to sell, convey, and assure such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, and privileges, unto such person as shall be named by the justices at general or quarter sessions, in trust and for the purpose of erecting new prisons or of enlarging old ones, and the yards, courts, and outlets thereunto belonging; and all such contracts, agreements, sales, conveyances, and assurances shall be valid and effectual in law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever; any law, statute, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 57 enacts, "That whenever any lands or hereditaments of the King's Majesty shall be requisite, and shall be contracted for, to be used for the purposes aforesaid, the same, if held by the King's Majesty, his heirs or successors, in the right of his or their royal crown, shall and may be legally conveyed by an instrument, under the hands and seals of the lord high treasurer, or of the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or of any one of them, and if parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, by an instrument under the hand and seal of the chancellor of the same duchy, and if parcel of the Duchy of Cornwall, by an instrument under the hands and seals of the officers of the same duchy, authorized to grant leases under" stat. 3 Geo. 4. c. 78, s. 19, 20.

Sect. 58 enacts, "That whenever any such corporation, guardian, committee, trustee, or attorney, or other person interested in any houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges, contiguous to any gaol or house of correction, which shall be deemed necessary for the purposes of enlarging or rendering more commodious any such gaol or house of correction, upon notice in writing to him, her, or them given, or to the principal officer or officers of such corporation, shall, for the space of twenty-one days after such notice so given or left, neglect or refuse to treat, or shall refuse to accept such price as shall be offered by the justices or their agent, or shall otherwise not agree for the sale of such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges; and whenever, by reason of absence or incapacity, any person shall be prevented from treating for such sale, then and in every such case the justices at the general or quarter sessions next after the termination of such twenty-one days, or at an adjournment thereof, shall, and they are hereby required to cause notice to be given three times at least in some public newspaper circulating within such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, of their intention to take into consideration, at the next ensuing or some subsequent or general quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, the matter of such neglect, refusal, or omission, or prevention to treat, or to accept of the price offered, or to agree for such sale as aforesaid, and the causes and reasons thereof respectively; and the person or persons, or some officer of any corporation so interested as aforesaid, in any such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, and privileges, or some person on their behalf respectively, shall have liberty to attend such meeting, if they shall think fit, and to state to the justices there assembled their reasons for such neglect, refusal, or omission as aforesaid; and in case the justices at such last-mentioned sessions, or the major part of them, shall, after hearing what the parties interested as aforesaid, or their agents, have to allege in behalf of their respective interests, and upon due consideration had of such matter as aforesaid, resolve to proceed to the valuation and purchase of such lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges, notwithstanding such neglect, refusal, or omission, or prevention as aforesaid, then and in every such case the justices at such sessions, or any two or more of them appointed for that purpose, shall cause the value of such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, and privileges, to be inquired into and ascertained by a jury of indifferent men of the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, wherein the same shall be situate, and to that end shall summon before such jury, and examine upon oath (which oath any one of the justices is hereby empowered to administer) any person or persons whomsoever; and such justices, or any two of them, shall, by ordering a view or otherwise, use all ways and means for the information of themselves and of such jury in the premises; and when such jury shall have inquired of and ascertained by their verdict the value of such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, and privileges, the said justices shall thereupon order that the sum which shall so appear to be the value of such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, and privileges, shall be paid in such manner as is hereinbefore directed, touching the money to be paid for such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges, for sale whereof the persons interested shall contract and agree in manner aforesaid; which verdict and order shall be filed of record by the clerk of the peace, or other officer having the custody of the records of the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, and shall be final and conclusive, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, against all parties and persons whomsoever, claiming or to claim in possession, reversion, remainder, or otherwise, their heirs and successors, as well absent as present, infants, lunatics, idiots, and persons under coverture, or any other disability whatsoever, corporations, guardians, committees, husbands, trustees, and attornies, or any other person or persons whomsoever.

Sect. 59 enacts, " That for the summoning and returning such juries, such justices or any two of them may issue their warrant to the sheriff or officer having the returning of writs within the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place within the limits of which the houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges shall be situate, requiring him to impanel, summon, and return an indifferent jury of twenty-four persons, qualified to serve on juries, to appear before the said justices, or any two of them, at such time and place as in such warrant shall be appointed; and such sheriff or officer is hereby required to impanel, summon, and return such number of persons accordingly, and out of the persons so impaneled summoned, and returned, or out of such of them as shall appear upon such summons, the justices, or any two of them, shall and they are hereby empowered and required to draw by ballot and to swear or cause to be sworn, twelve men, who shall be the jury for the purposes aforesaid; and, in default of a sufficient number of jurymen so returned, the said sheriff or officer shall take such other honest and indifferent men of the bystanders, or that can speedily be procured to attend that service, as shall make up the number twelve; and all persons concerned shall have their lawful challenges against any of the persons impaneled when they come to be sworn; and the said justices, or any two of them, shall have power to impose a fine or fines on such sheriff or officer, or his deputy or deputies, making such default in the premises, and on any of the persons who shall be summoned and returned on such jury, and who shall not appear, or appearing shall refuse to be sworn on the said jury, or, being sworn, shall refuse to give or shall not give a verdict, or shall, in any other manner, wilfully neglect his r their duty therein; and also on any person who, being summoned and required to give evidence before the said jury, shall refuse or neglect to appear, or appearing shall refuse to be sworn or to give evidence, so that no such fine be more than 10*l.* nor less than 20*s.* on any one person for one offence."

Sect. 60 enacts, " That in case any jury shall deliver a verdict for more money as the value of the houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges, so to be purchased, than shall have been offered for the purchase thereof by the justices or their agent, to any person capable of contracting for the same, the costs and expenses of summoning and maintaining the jury and witnesses, shall be borne and paid out of the same fund as the expenses of the buildings to be erected; but if such jury shall deliver a verdict for no more, or for less money than the money which shall have been so offered by such justices or their agent, then the costs and expenses of summoning and maintaining the jury and witnesses, shall be borne and paid by the person or persons with whom such controversy or dispute, touching the value of such houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges, shall arise: provided always, that in all cases where any person or persons shall, by reason of absence, have been prevented from treating, such costs and expenses shall be borne and paid out of the same fund as the expenses of the buildings to be erected."

Sect. 61 enacts, " That upon payment of such sum and sums of money to be ascertained and judged, (that is to say) first, in or towards the payment and discharge of any sums due on charges, incumbrances, and liens, any, affecting the several estates respectively, and then to the owners of the said estates respectively, if any shall remain for that purpose, the person or persons who shall be so found and adjudged to be the owners of the said several estates, of and in the said houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, or privileges, respectively, and also the owners of any such incumbrances, charges, and liens, respectively, shall make and execute, or procure to be made and executed, to the person or persons named by such justices, and his or their heirs, a good and sufficient conveyance or conveyances, thereby granting, releasing, or assigning to them, the said houses, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, easements, privileges, and all such estate, right, title, term or interest, therein, or charge, incumbrance, or lien thereon; and immediately upon such payments and entry of such verdicts of the said juries and judgments, sentences and decrees, orders, and other proceedings as aforesaid, the said lands, houses, buildings, and premises, shall vest in the person or persons to be so named by the said justices, and his and their heirs, and he and they shall be deemed in law to be in the actual seisin and possession thereof, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as fully and effectually as if every person having any estate in the premises, in possession, remainder, reversion, or expectancy, or any charge, incumbrance, or lien thereon, was of full age and of sound mind and memory, and had actually and duly conveyed the same to such trustee by lease and release, bargain and sale enrolled, feoffment with livery and seisin, fine and recovery, or by any other legal conveyance whatsoever."

Sect 62 enacts, " That if any money shall be agreed or awarded to be paid for any houses, buildings, lands, tenements, hereditaments, easements, privileges, purchased, taken, or used by virtue of the powers of this act, which shall belong to any corporation, feme covert, infant, lunatic, person or persons under any other disability or incapacity, such money shall, in case the same shall amount to the sum of 200*l.*, with all convenient speed, be paid into the Bank of England, in the name and with the privity of the accountant-general of the high Court of Chancery, to be placed to his account, ex parte the justices of the peace for the county of _____, to the intent that such money shall be applied under the direction and with the approbation of the said Court, to be signified by an order made upon a petition to be preferred in summary way by the person or persons who would have been entitled to the rents and profits of the said houses, buildings, lands, tenements, he-

V. Contracts by Justices having Charge of Gaols in Cities, &c. with Justices having Charge of Gaols of Counties, &c.

5 Geo. 4, c. 85.

By stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 85, passed 21st June, 1824, intituled An Act for amending an act of the last session of Parliament, relating to the building, repairing, and enlarging of certain gaols and houses of correction; and for procuring information as to the state of all other gaols and houses of cor- tion in England and Wales, reciting the passing of stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, is enacted, "That it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace, or any two of them, or for other persons having the government or ordering of any gaol or house of correction, in any city, town, borough, port, or liberty, to contract with the justices of the peace having authority or jurisdiction in and over any gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division, wherein or whereof such city, town, borough, port, or liberty, is situate or adjacent, or with any one or more of them, for the support and maintenance, in such last-mentioned gaol or house of correction, of any prisoners committed thereto, from such city, town, borough, port, or liberty; provided that no such contract be entered into by any justices of the peace of any county, riding, or division, without an order for that purpose being made at some general or quarter sessions, or gaol sessions, having jurisdiction in that behalf, nor by the justices or other persons having the government of the prison of any such city, town, borough, port, or liberty, without an order for that purpose being made at any of the sessions thereof; and every such contract may either be perpetual, or limited to a certain term of years, as the parties shall mutually agree; and during the existence of such contract, every prisoner who would otherwise be confined in the gaol or house of correction of the city, town, borough, port, or liberty, so contracting, may be lawfully committed or removed to and confined in the gaol or house of correction so receiving him or her under such contract; and all prisoners so confined by contract, whether before or after trial, shall be subject in all matters and things to the same rules and regulations, as if they were committed thereto by any of the justices of the county, riding, or division; and, if committed before trial, shall be triable and tried in the same manner as if their offences had been committed in a gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division, not within the city, town, borough, or liberty, from whence such prisoners shall come; save only, that if a gaol or house of correction so receiving under contract a prisoner committed for trial, shall be situate within two miles of the usual place of trial in the city, town, borough, port, or liberty, wherein the offence charged against such prisoner shall be alleged to have been committed, it shall be lawful to try such prisoner in the manner heretofore accustomed, and for the magistrates or other proper officer of such city, town, borough, port, or liberty, to direct the removal of such prisoner for trial, and to do all other things necessary for such trial, or consequent thereon."

Act. 2 enacts, "That the monies to be paid under any such contract as aforesaid, shall be raised in the same manner as monies for defraying the expenses of the gaol or house of correction, for which a substitute shall be provided under such contract; and where such expenses are not wholly defrayed from the same fund, and there shall arise a difference of opinion between the parties interested in the several funds applicable to the several uses of the prison, as to the proportion in which those funds respectively shall contribute to the sum to be paid to the county, riding, or division for the use of its prison, and such difference shall not be adjusted by agreement between themselves, it shall be lawful for either of such parties to apply to the justices of assize of the last preceding circuit, or of the next ensuing circuit, or to one of such justices, who shall by writing under his or his hands or hand, nominate a barrister at law, not having any interest in the question, to arbitrate between the parties; and such arbitrator may if he shall see fit, adjourn the hearing from time to time, and require such further information to be afforded by either of the parties, as shall appear to him meet and necessary; and shall, by his award in writing, define the proportions in which such parties shall contribute towards the expenses; and his award shall be final and conclusive between the parties, and such arbitrator shall also assess the costs of the arbitration, and direct by whom, and out of what fund, the same shall be paid."

Act. 3 enacts, "That during the existence of any such contract, if it shall extend to the whole of the prisoners who would otherwise be confined in a gaol or house of correction of the city, town, borough, port, or liberty, so contracting, such city, town, borough, port, or liberty, shall not be liable to indictment or impeachment for the non-repair of its gaol or house of correction, respectively; and if such contract shall extend to only a certain class or classes of its prisoners, such city, town, borough, port, or liberty shall not be liable to provide the accommodation required to be otherwise provided for the same class or classes of prisoners by the said recited act or by any other act now in force."

Sect. 4 enacts, "That if it shall seem fit to the magistrates or superintending officers of any city, town, borough, port, or liberty, that, instead of altering or building any gaol or house of correction for their separate use or contracting under the provisions aforesaid, it would be more advisable to raise a sum or sums of money in aid of building a new, or of enlarging any county prison, it shall be lawful for them to agree with the justices of the peace, having authority or jurisdiction in and over any gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division, wherein or whereto such city, town, borough, port, or liberty, is situate or adjacent, or with any two or more of them, for the payment to such justices, having such authority as aforesaid, of any sum or sums of money to be by them applied in or towards the altering, enlarging, building, re-building, repairing, or improving, such gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division, aforesaid: provided that no such agreement be entered into by any justices of the peace for any county, riding, or division, without an order for that purpose being made at some general or quarter sessions, or gaol sessions, having jurisdiction in the behalf."

Sect. 5 enacts, "That all monies to be paid under any such agreement as last mentioned, shall be raised in the same manner, and subject to the same conditions, as is directed in respect of monies to be raised for the building or re-building, repairing or enlarging, any gaol or house of correction under the provisions of this act."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That it shall be lawful for such justices of the peace of any such county, riding, or division, entering into any such agreement as last aforesaid, to stipulate in the same (if they shall see fit so to do) that it shall be lawful for such county, riding, or division, at such time or times as shall be in that behalf provided in such agreement, to repay to the said city, town, borough, port, or liberty, the sum or sums of money which shall have been so paid or advanced in or towards the altering, enlarging, building, re-building, repairing, or improving such gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division, aforesaid."

Sect. 7 enacts, "That the chief magistrate of every city, town, borough, port, or liberty, now having a gaol or house of correction, in England and Wales, shall, in the month of October, [1824], report to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, whether any contract has been made with the county, riding, or division, for the use of its prisons, or any of them, by such city, town, borough, port, or liberty, and to what classes of prisoners such contract, if any, shall extend; and if there be no such contract, whether any steps have been taken towards such contract; and if so, in what state the treaty is, and what obstacles there are to its completion; and the chief magistrate of every such city, town, borough, port, or liberty, where no such contract shall be in existence, shall, in the same month of October, transmit to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, a copy of all such rules and regulations as shall be then in force, for the government of every such prison, and a return in the form of the schedule to this act annexed, marked (A), and a statement of the establishment of officers and servants employed therein, specifying the number and description of such officers and servants, the salaries and emoluments of each, and by which such officers and servants are respectively appointed, and a plan of every such prison, drawn upon a scale of one-sixteenth of an inch to a foot; and the said copies and plans shall be carefully preserved in the office of such secretary of state; and such magistrate shall, in every subsequent month of October, until such a contract shall be entered into, transmit to such secretary of state a return in the form of the said schedule, and a copy of all additions to such rules and regulations, or alterations, made therein, and a statement of any increase or diminution in such establishment of officers and servants, or in their respective salaries and emoluments, together with plans, on the scale above mentioned, of any additions to the buildings of such prison, or alterations made in the construction thereof, during the preceding year."

GAOLS IN RIDINGS, &c.
5 Geo. 4, c. 85.

VI. Gaols in Counties divided into Ridings, &c.

By stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 12, passed 23rd March, 1824, and intituled An act to facilitate in those counties which are divided into ridings or divisions, the execution of an act of the last session of Parliament, [viz. stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64], for consolidating and amending the laws relating to the building, repairing, and regulating, of certain gaols and houses of correction in England and Wales, after reciting, that by stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, 'it was amongst other things) enacted, that there should be maintained at the expense of every county in England and Wales, one common gaol, and that the regulations and provisions contained in the said act should extend, in manner therein mentioned, to every such gaol; and whereas, in certain counties in England, there are distinct commissions of the peace for the several ridings and divisions into which such counties are divided, and distinct courts of sessions of the peace are holden for each of such ridings and divisions respectively, and in such counties there are no courts of general or quarter sessions holden for the whole county at large, in consequence whereof the provisions and regulations of the said act cannot in such counties be carried into execution; for remedy thereof, and in order to extend to such counties all the benefits of the said act, it is enacted, "That in every county divided into ridings or divisions, having distinct commissions of the peace, there shall be held from time to time a court of sessions for the gaol of such county, of which court all the justices of the peace of every riding or division of such county shall be members; and any two of such justices shall be able to hold such court; and such court shall possess and exercise the powers and authorities respecting the common gaol of such county, and all matters relating thereto, which are in and by the said recited act vested in the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace for any other county of England; and the justices of the peace for each of such ridings or divisions, are hereby authorized as fully and effectually to perform and execute all the provisions and regulations of the said recited act, with respect to such county gaol, as justices of the peace for the county are in any other county of England authorized to do, with respect to the gaol of their respective counties; and the said court of gaol sessions is hereby empowered to transact and do, within the counties so divided, all such matters and things appertaining to the authority of justices of the peace in sessions assembled, with respect to the county gaol, as are in other counties capable of being done by justices of the peace in their general or quarter sessions assembled; and where by the said act any thing is ordered to be done at any general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, or at any subsequent general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, respecting the county gaol, then such things may be done at such gaol sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, or at one or more subsequent gaol sessions, in such manner and with such public notices as in the said recited act they are ordered or directed to be done by the general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof."

5 Geo. 4, c. 12,
reciting 4 Geo. 4,
c. 64.

In counties divided into ridings or divisions, a court of sessions for the gaol shall be held; and such court shall possess all the powers given by the former act respecting the common gaol of such county.

Act. 2 enacts, "That the sheriff of every county so divided into ridings or divisions, shall, within fourteen days next after the passing of this act, by public notice to be published in the London Gazette, and in some of the public papers most usually circulated within his county, summon the justices of the peace of each of the ridings or divisions into which the same is divided, to meet at some place in or near the county gaol, to be by him specified in such notice, and at a time not exceeding one month after the first publication of such notice, and there to form a court of sessions for the county gaol, for the purpose of carrying into execution the regulations and provisions of the said recited act and of this act; and the said court being so constituted, shall proceed to elect a chairman and a clerk; and the said court, and the chairman thereof, shall proceed to execute all those matters and things which were by the said recited act directed to be done by the court of quarter sessions of the peace held at Michaelmas next after the passing thereof, and by the chairman of that court, and to do all such other matters and things as may be necessary or proper in regard to the county gaol."

Sect 3 enacts, "That the clerk of the gaol sessions shall continue in his office until another shall be elected in his stead by the court of gaol sessions, and shall, with respect to the said recited act and this act, have and enjoy all the powers vested by the said recited act in the clerk of the peace of any county."

Sect. 4 enacts, "That the clerk of the gaol sessions shall, on receiving a precept commanding him so to do, signed by any two justices of the peace acting for any of the ridings or divisions of the county, summon the justices to meet in a court of gaol sessions, by a notice to be published at least twice in some of the public newspapers most usually circulated in the county, which notice shall declare the day, hour, and place, at which such court is to be held; and also that the said clerk, if the court of gaol sessions shall be dissolved without adjournment, or shall adjourn for a longer time than three calendar months, shall, by a like notice to be issued of his proper authority, without any precept in that behalf, summon a court of gaol sessions to be held within three calendar months next after such dissolution or last adjournment."

Sect. 5 enacts, "That the sessions for the county gaol shall be held in some place in the gaol, or within one mile thereof, unless there shall be special reasons for the contrary, which shall be expressed in the precept to be directed to the said clerk as aforesaid; and if it shall be held in the gaol or within such distance thereof as aforesaid, all matters done thereat touching the county gaol, shall be legal, though the sessions be held in some place not within the county."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That the court of gaol sessions shall also elect a treasurer of the monies applicable to the repair of the county gaol, who shall not be the clerk of the said court; and the said treasurer shall receive and pay all monies to be raised for the repair of the county gaol, or to be disbursed by order of the court, and shall give discharges for the monies received, and apply the same as by such court shall be ordered, and shall keep a distinct account of such monies received and paid, and shall, from time to time, when called on by the said court, account upon oath, if required, for all monies so by him received, and deliver in all vouchers respecting the same; and the said court shall from time to time appoint such salaries to such clerk and treasurer respectively as they shall think fit, to be paid out of the monies aforesaid; and such treasurer shall give such security for the faithful performance of his duty, as the court of gaol sessions shall direct."

Sect. 7, after reciting that, 'Whereas it is expedient that all the expenses incurred respecting any county gaol, where the county is so divided as aforesaid, whether arising out of the provisions of the said recited act or of this act, or otherwise, should be discharged out of the county rates; and it is necessary to fix the proportions in which the several ridings or divisions shall contribute to such expenses; and it may also be necessary from time to time to vary the said proportions,' enacts, "That where in any such county there are, at the time of passing this act, any fixed proportions in which such expenses are or have been paid and borne, such proportions shall continue to be acted on, and the contributions shall be paid accordingly, till some alteration shall be made therein by the court of gaol sessions; and that where there are now no such fixed proportions, the said court shall forthwith fix the proportions in which the contribution is to be made; and the said court shall also have power and authority to alter the said proportions from time to time; provided that no such alteration shall be made, unless the intention of making such alteration shall be expressed in the notice whereby the court is summoned, and shall be published for one month at the least before the court shall be held."

Sect. 8 enacts, "That when the court of gaol sessions shall order an alteration to be made in the proportions in which the ridings or divisions of the county are to contribute towards the expenses of the county gaol, or shall negative a proposition for making such alteration, and any riding or division shall be dissatisfied therewith, it shall be lawful for the clerk of the peace of such riding or division, being thereunto authorized by an order of the court of quarter or gaol sessions of such riding or division, to apply to the justices of assize of the last preceding circuit, or of the next succeeding circuit, or to one of such justices, who shall, by writing under their or his hands or hand, nominate a barrister at law, not having any interest in the question, to arbitrate between the ridings or divisions; and such arbitrators shall summon the several clerks of the peace of the ridings or divisions interested in the matter in dispute to appear before him, at a time to be by him appointed, and there to produce all information touching the matter in dispute; and such arbitrator may, if he shall see fit, adjourn the hearing from time to time, and require all such further information to be afforded by either of the parties as shall appear to him meet and necessary; and shall, by his award in writing, determine the proportions in which such ridings or divisions shall contribute towards the said expenses; and his award shall be final and conclusive between the parties for ten years, and until further order shall be made thereon by the court of gaol sessions; and such arbitrators shall also assess the costs* (a) of the arbitration, and shall direct by whom and out of what fund the same shall be paid."

By stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 21, after reciting, 'That whereas, by [stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 12, s. 8], provision is made for settling by arbitration disputes between ridings and divisions as to the proportions in which they shall contribute to the expense of the county gaol, but by reason of some verbal inaccuracies in the said provision there may be some difficulty in acting thereon;' it is enacted and declared, "That the clerk of the peace may be authorized to apply to the justices of assize for the nomination of an arbitrator under [stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 12], by an order of the court, or quarter or general sessions of the riding or division; and that one arbitrator shall be competent to exercise all the powers and authorities given to the arbitrator or arbitrators by the same act; and that such arbitrator shall assess the costs of the arbitration, and direct by whom and out of what fund the same shall be paid."

Stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 12, s. 9, enacts, "That when and so often as the court of gaol sessions shall find it requisite to raise money for the purposes of the said recited act, [4 Geo. IV. c. 64], or of this act, they shall make an order accordingly, and their clerk shall forthwith transmit a copy of such order, signed by the chairman, together with the amount of the sum of money to be paid by virtue of it, according to the then existing proportions, by each riding or division, to the treasurers of the several ridings or divisions of the county; which treasurers shall forthwith, out of the monies in their hands, if those monies shall be insufficient, then so soon as sufficient monies shall come to their hands, pay the sum required to the treasurer of the county gaol, and take his receipt for the same" (b).

Sect. 10 enacts, "That when the monies necessary to be raised for the purposes of the said recited act, or of this act, shall exceed one half of the primary aggregate amount of all the annual assessments for the rates of the several ridings or divisions of any such county, taken on an average of all the rates for the last seven years preceding, the court of gaol sessions may, and is hereby authorized, to mortgage all the rates of such county, by such instrument, and in such ways and means, and under such provisions of redemption, and with the same power of assignment, as in the said recited act

Sect. 11 enacts, "That the court of gaol sessions shall, and is hereby required, to charge all the rates upon the several ridings and divisions of the county in the same manner and for the same purposes as in and by the said recited act the justices in their general or quarter sessions are authorized and required to charge the rates of any county having one rate for the whole; and all the ways, means, and methods by the said recited act directed and allowed, as to the repayment of monies borrowed, and the interest thereof and the accounts respecting the same, shall be kept and observed by the court of gaol sessions respecting the monies borrowed on account of the gaol of any county so divided as aforesaid; provided that all the monies to be raised on the several ridings or divisions of any such county, for repaying money borrowed, or the interest thereof, shall be raised in the same proportions as other monies for the purposes of the said recited act or of the act shall be raised at the time of such money being so raised." [See stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 20, as to power of justices to pay off sums borrowed by borrowing like sums at a lower rate of interest, ante, s. 7].

Sect. 12 enacts, "That all reports and statements directed by the said recited act to be made to the general or quarter sessions, shall be transmitted on or before the first days of January, April, July, and October, to the clerk of the gaol sessions, and be by him laid before the court at the sessions."

Sect. 13 enacts, "That the chairman of the first court of gaol sessions held after the first day of October in each year, shall, within fourteen days after the determination of such sessions, or any adjournment thereof, transmit to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state such account of proceedings, and such copies of rules and regulations, as in and by the said act are ordered to be transmitted by the chairman of the Michaelmas quarter sessions, and shall at the same time, or within three months afterwards transmit such plans as in the said act are mentioned."

Sect. 14 enacts, "That the return directed to be made annually by the keeper of every prison, in the form contained in the schedule annexed to the said recited act, marked (B), shall be annually made by the keeper of every gaol of every county so divided as aforesaid, and delivered to the clerk of the gaol sessions of such county, two weeks at least before the first day of October in each year; and that such clerk shall, on the said first day of October, prepare a general report founded on the report of the visiting justice and that of the chaplain, and on the certificates and reports of the keeper of the said gaol, and on any other report or document respecting the said gaol, and shall lay the same before the next gaol sessions; and such report when approved by such sessions, shall be signed by the chairman thereof and shall be by him, together with a copy of the schedule (B), transmitted to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, for the purposes in the said recited act mentioned."

Sect. 15 enacts, "That, if any matter or thing be done within any county so divided as aforesaid, for which any fine, penalty, or forfeiture is by the said recited act [4 Geo. IV. c. 64] imposed and directed to be paid to the county treasurer, every conviction made in pursuance of the said recited act for such matter or thing, shall be made by one or more justices of the peace of the riding or division in which the offence is committed; and all forfeitures, fines, and penalties thereon accruing, shall be paid to the treasurer of the county gaol, for the purposes of this act."

Sect. 16 enacts, "That, in the case of every county so divided as aforesaid, the common gaol of such county shall, for all purposes relative to the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, be deemed to be within and taken as part of each of the ridings and divisions of which such county is composed, and every justice of the peace for each of such ridings and divisions shall have like power and authority to execute all things appertaining to his office therein, as in any part of the riding or division to which his commission specially extends."

Sect. 17 enacts, "That this act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such, by all judges, justices, and others, without being specially pleaded."

VII. The Treatment of Prisoners for Offences, &c.

AND herein, 1st. Of the general rules and regulations to be observed in gaols, as to offenders, &c.;—2nd. The commitment of offenders;—3rd. The classification of prisoners;—4th. Their food, &c.;—5th. Their employment and labour, &c.;—6th. Their attempt to escape;—7th. Their being refractory;—8th. Their removal, in certain cases;—and 9th. Their discharge, &c.

(1) General Rules and Regulations as to.

Stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 10, after reciting, 'Whereas it is fit and proper to secure an uniformity of practice in the management of the several prisons in which this act shall extend;' enacts, "That the following rules and regulations shall be observed and carried into effect in every such prison in England and Wales, which shall be maintained by any county or riding, or division of a county as aforesaid, as a gaol or house of correction, and in the gaol and house of correction of every district, city, town, or place mentioned in the schedule marked (A), annexed to this act, and in every united and contiguous gaol and house of correction which shall be jointly used in manner aforesaid for the purposes of this act, and in every prison authorized to be continued under this act as aforesaid, in any county or riding, or division of a county, so far as such rules may be applicable or can be applied to the particular description or class of prisoners confined in such prison:—

4 Geo. 4, c. 64.
Rules and regulations to be observed in all gaols.

"1st. The keeper of every such prison shall reside therein; he shall not be an under-sheriff or bailiff, nor shall be concerned in any occupation or trade whatsoever; no keeper or officer of a prison shall sell, nor shall any person in trust for him, or employed by him, sell, or have any benefit or advantage from the sale of any article to any prisoner; nor shall he, directly or indirectly, have any interest in any contract or agreement for the supply of the prison.

Keeper (a).

"2nd. A matron shall be appointed in every prison in which female prisoners shall be confined, who shall reside in the prison; and it shall be the duty of the matron constantly to superintend the female prisoners.

Matron.

"3rd. The keeper shall, as far as may be practicable, visit every ward, and see every prisoner, and inspect every cell, once at least in every twenty-four hours; and when the keeper, or any other officer, shall visit the female prisoners, he shall be accompanied by the matron, or, in case of her unavoidable absence, by some female officer of the prison.

Visiting the wards.

"4th. The keeper shall keep a journal, in which he shall record all punishments inflicted by his authority, or by that of the visiting justices, and the day when such punishments shall have taken place, and all other occurrences of importance within the prison, in such manner as shall be directed by the regulations to be made under this act; which journal shall be read before the justices at every general or quarter sessions, to be signed by the chairman, in proof of the same having been there produced.

Keeper's journal.

"5th. Due provision shall be made in every prison for the enforcement of hard labour, in the cases of such prisoners as may be sentenced thereto, and for the employment of other prisoners. The means of hard labour shall be provided, and the materials requisite for the employment of prisoners shall be purchased, under such regulations as may be made for that purpose by the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled. If the work to be performed by the prisoners be of such a nature as to require previous instruction, proper persons shall be appointed to afford the same.

" 6th. The male and female prisoners shall be confined in separate buildings or parts of the prison, so as to prevent them from seeing, conversing, or holding any intercourse with each other; and the prisoners of each sex shall be divided into distinct classes, care being taken that prisoners of the following classes do not intermix with each other:—

" In Gaols.—1st, Debtors and persons confined for contempt of court on civil process; 2nd, prisoners convicted of felony; 3rd, prisoners convicted of misdemeanors; 4th, prisoners committed on charge or suspicion of felony; 5th, prisoners committed on charge or suspicion of misdemeanors or for want of sureties.

" In Houses of Correction.—1st, Prisoners convicted of felony; 2nd, prisoners convicted of misdemeanors; 3rd, prisoners committed on charge or suspicion of felony; 4th, prisoners committed on charge or suspicion of misdemeanors; 5th, vagrants. Such prisoners as are intended to be examined as witnesses in behalf of the crown in any prosecution, shall also be kept separate in all gaols and houses of correction.

" Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to prevent the justices from authorizing, at their discretion, the employment of any prisoner, in the performance of any menial office within the prison, or for the purpose of instructing others; and provided also, that if the keeper shall at any time deem it improper or inexpedient for a prisoner to associate with the other prisoners of the class to which he or she may belong, it shall be lawful for him to confine such prisoner with any other class or description of prisoners, or in any other part of the prison, until he can receive the directions of a visiting justice thereon, to whom he shall apply with as little delay as possible, and who in every such instance shall ascertain whether the reasons assigned by the keeper warrant such deviation from the established rules, and shall give such orders in writing as he shall think fit, under the circumstances of the particular case.

" 7th. Female prisoners shall in all cases be attended by female officers.

" 8th. Every prisoner sentenced to hard labour shall, unless prevented by sickness, be employed so many hours in every day, not exceeding ten, exclusive of the time allowed for meals, as shall be directed by the rules and regulations to be made under this act, except on Sundays, Christmas Day, and Good Friday, and on any days appointed by public authority for fasting or thanksgiving.

" 9th. Prayers, to be selected from the Liturgy of the Church of England by the chaplain, shall be read at least every morning by the chaplain, the keeper, or by some other person, as by the rules and regulations shall be directed; and portions of the Scriptures shall be read to the prisoners, when assembled for instruction, by the chaplain, or by such person as he may appoint or authorize.

" 10th. Provision shall be made in all prisons for the instruction of prisoners of both sexes in reading and writing, and that instruction shall be afforded under such rules and regulations, and to such extent, and to such prisoners, as to the visiting justices may seem expedient.

" 11th. Prisoners under charge or conviction of any crime shall attend divine service on Sundays, and on other days when such service is performed, unless prevented by illness or by other reasonable cause, to be allowed by the keeper, or unless their attendance shall be dispensed with by one of the visiting justices.

" 12th. No prisoner shall be put in irons by the keeper of any prison, except in case of urgent and absolute necessity; and the particulars of every such case shall be forthwith entered in the keeper's journal, and notice forthwith given thereof to one of the visiting justices; and the keeper shall

RULES AND REGULATIONS.
4 Geo. 4, c. 64.

" 13th. Every prisoner maintained at the expense of any county, riding, division, city, town, or place, shall be allowed a sufficient quantity of plain and wholesome food, to be regulated by the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, regard being had (so far as may relate to convicted prisoners) to the nature of the labour required from or performed by such prisoners, so that the allowance of food may be duly apportioned thereto. And it shall be lawful for the justices to order for such prisoners of every description, as are not able to work, or being able cannot procure employment sufficient to sustain themselves by their industry, or who may not be otherwise provided for, such allowance of food, as the said justices shall from time to time think necessary for the support of health. Prisoners under the care of the surgeon shall be allowed such diet as he may direct. There shall be taken that all provisions supplied to the prisoners be of proper quality and weight. Scales and legal weights and measures shall be provided, open to the use of any prisoners, under such restrictions as shall be made by the regulations of each prison (b).

Food.

" 14th. Prisoners who shall not receive any allowance from the county, whether confined for debt or before trial, for any supposed crime or offence, shall be allowed to procure for themselves, and to receive at proper hours, any food, bedding, clothing, or other necessaries, subject to a strict examination, and under such limitations and restrictions, to be prescribed by the regulations to be made in manner directed by this act, as may be reasonable and expedient, to prevent extravagance and luxury within the walls of a prison; all articles of clothing and bedding shall be examined, in order that it may be ascertained that such articles are not likely to communicate infection or facilitate escape.

Gaol allowance.

" 15th. No prisoner who is confined under the sentence of any court, nor any prisoners confined in pursuance of any conviction before a justice, shall receive any food, clothing, or necessaries, other than the gaol allowance, except under such regulations and restrictions as to the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled may appear expedient, with reference to the several classes of prisoners, or under special circumstances, to be judged of by one or more of the visiting justices.

" 16th. Due provision shall be made for the admission, at proper times and under proper restrictions, of persons with whom prisoners committed for trial may desire to communicate; and such rules and regulations shall be made by the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, for the admission of the friends of convicted prisoners, as to such justices may seem expedient; and the justices shall also impose such restrictions upon the communication and correspondence of all such prisoners with their friends, whether within or without the walls of the prison, as they shall judge necessary for the maintenance of good order and discipline in such prison.

Admission of persons.

" 17th. The surgeon shall examine every prisoner who shall be brought a) If a prisoner in custody for felony break the gaol, this seems to be a neglect of the gaoler, because there wanted either due strength in the gaol that should have secured him, or that due vigilance by the gaoler or his officers, to have prevented it, and therefore it is by law lawful for the gaoler to hamper them with such means as to prevent their escape. 1 Hale, 601. And it is said, that a gaoler is not punishable for keeping even a debtor in irons. 2 Hawk. c. 22, s. 32. But the learned editor of Lord Hale's History observes, that this liberty, even in the case of a felon, (much more in the case of a prisoner for debt), can only be intended where the officer has just reason to fear an escape; as, where the prisoner is unruly, or makes any attempt to that purpose; but otherwise, notwithstanding the common practice of gaolers, it seems altogether unwarrantable, and contrary to the mildness and humanity of the laws of England, by which gaolers are forbidden to put their prisoners to any pain or torment. And Lord Coke, 2 Inst. 381, is express, that by the common law it might not be done. 1 Hale, 601.

The walls and ceilings of the wards, cells, rooms, and passages used by the prisoners throughout every prison, shall be scraped and limewashed at least once in the year: the day rooms, work rooms, passages, and sleeping cells shall be washed or cleansed once a-week, or oftener if requisite. Convenient places for the prisoners to wash themselves shall be provided, with an adequate allowance of soap, towels, and combs.

" 20th. All prisoners shall be allowed as much air and exercise as may be deemed proper for the preservation of their health.

" 21st. No tap shall be kept in any prison; nor shall spirituous liquors of any kind be admitted for the use of any of the prisoners therein, under any pretence whatever, unless by a written order of the surgeon, specifying the quantity and for whose use. No wine, beer, cider, or other fermented liquors shall be admitted for the use of any prisoners, except in such quantities, in such manner, and at such times, as shall be allowed by the rules hereafter to be made in pursuance of this act.

" 22nd. No gaming shall be permitted in any prison; and the keeper shall seize and destroy all dice, cards, or other instruments of gaming.

" 23rd. No money under the name of garnish shall be taken from any prisoner on his or her entrance into the prison, under any pretence whatever.

" 24th. Upon the death of a prisoner, notice thereof shall be given by the keeper forthwith to one of the visiting justices, as well as to the coroner of the district, and to the nearest relative of the deceased, where practicable.

Sect. 11 enacts, " That in case the coroner shall hold an inquest on the body of any prisoner who shall have died within the prison, none of the prisoners confined in that prison shall be a juror on such inquest."

Sect. 12 enacts, " That it shall be lawful for the court of mayor and aldermen of the city of London, so far as respects the prisons within the said city and liberties thereof, and for five justices of the peace in general or quarter sessions assembled, of each county, riding, or division of a county, or of any district, city, town, or place, to which this act shall extend, so far as respects the prisons within their respective jurisdictions, to make such further and additional rules for the government of such prisons respectively, and for the duties to be performed by the officers of the same, as to them may seem expedient; provided, that no such further or additional rules shall be enforced, until the same shall have been submitted, in London and Middlesex, to the two chief justices, and elsewhere to the justices of gaol delivery, or of great sessions respectively, at some gaol delivery or great sessions to be held after the making such rules, and until such chief justice or justices of gaol delivery, or of great sessions respectively, shall have subscribed a certificate or declaration that they do not see any thing contrary to law therein; provided always, that all such rules and regulations shall be consistent with and conformable to the rules and regulations in this act contained: and the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled all, and they are hereby required, from time to time to cause copies of so much of the rules of each prison as relates to the treatment and conduct of prisoners confined therein, to be printed in legible characters, and to be fixed up in conspicuous parts of every prison, so that every prisoner may be enabled to have access thereto; and all rules and regulations made and approved pursuant to the directions of this act, shall be binding upon the sheriff and upon all other persons; provided, that no such rules shall be so construed as to interfere with the right or duty of the sheriff to appoint or move any keeper of a county gaol or other prison subject to the authority of such sheriff."

Sect. 13 provides, "That all the powers and authorities given by this act to justices of the peace in general or quarter sessions assembled, in the several counties, and all other acts to be done and performed by justices of the peace at any sessions in pursuance of this act, shall be exercised and performed, so far as regards the prisons in the city of London and liberties thereof, by the court of mayor and aldermen of the said city, as heretofore has been accustomed, and not by the said mayor and aldermen as magistrates, at the general or quarter sessions of the peace to be holden in and about the said city; any thing in this act contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 15 enacts, "That the chairman of the Michaelmas quarter sessions of the peace, which shall be held next after the commencement of this act, in every county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, to which this act shall extend, shall transmit, within fourteen days after the termination of such session, to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, a true and correct account of their proceedings at such sessions for carrying this act into effect, and also a copy of all such rules and regulations as shall be in force for the government of every prison within the jurisdiction of such justices assembled at such sessions, and shall also transmit at the same time, or within three months afterwards, to such secretary of state, plans of such prisons, drawn upon a scale of one sixteenth of an inch to a foot; and the said copies and plans shall be carefully preserved in the office of such secretary of state; and the chairman of every such succeeding Michaelmas quarter sessions shall transmit, within fourteen days after the termination of such Michaelmas quarter sessions, a true and correct copy of all such alterations to such rules and regulations, or alterations made therein, as shall have been duly sanctioned since the preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions, together with plans, on the scale above mentioned, of any additions to the buildings of such prison, or alterations made in the construction thereof, during the same period."

Stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 6, enacts, "That every person convicted of murder shall, after judgment, be confined in some safe place within the prison, apart from all other prisoners, and shall be fed with bread and water only, and shall have no other food or liquor, except in case of receiving the sacrament, or in case of any sickness or wound, in which case the surgeon of the prison may order other necessaries to be administered; and no person but the gaoler and his servants, and the chaplain and surgeon of the prison, shall have access to any such convict, without the permission in writing of the court or judge before whom such convict shall have been tried, or of the sheriff or his deputy: provided always, that in case the court or judge shall think fit to respite the execution of such convict, such court or judge may, by licence in writing, relax, during the period of the respite, all or any of the restraints or regulations hereinbefore directed to be observed."

Proviso for removal of prisoners.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, it is enacted, "That, at the Michaelmas general quarter sessions which shall be held in every county, riding, or division of a county, in England and Wales, and in the several districts, cities, towns, and places, to which this act shall extend, next after the commencement of this act, and at any subsequent general or quarter sessions to be held from time to time, the justices of the peace there assembled shall proceed in carrying this act into effect; and such justices shall, by orders to be made for that purpose, ascertain and declare to what class or classes of prisoners every such gaol, house or houses of correction, or any part or parts of any of them respectively, shall be applicable; and every such order shall be signed by the chairman of such sessions, and shall be notified by the clerks of the peace to the several justices of the peace, in every such county, riding, or division, district, city, town, or place, respectively; and notice thereof shall be inserted in three of the newspapers usually circulated in such county, riding, or division, or district, city, town, or place, respectively, within three weeks after any such order shall be made at any such sessions; and a copy thereof shall be served upon the keeper of every gaol or house of correction within every such county, riding, division, city, district, town, or place; and after the making of such order, and service of such copy thereof upon such keeper as aforesaid, such class or classes of prisoners as shall be specified in such order, and no other, shall be committed to or detained in any such gaol, house or houses of correction, or any part of any of them respectively, and all persons not coming within the class or description of prisoners who may lawfully be committed to or detained in such prison as shall be ap-appointed by the justices for the confinement of one or more class or classes of prisoners, may be removed to the gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division; and every such gaol or house of correction shall be deemed the legal gaol, prison, or place of confinement, of every person respectively committed to the same, in pursuance of such order as aforesaid; any thing in any act or acts, or any law, custom, or usage, to the contrary notwithstanding; provided always, that no classification of prisoners shall be made in any house of correction appropriated to the reception of any particular class or classes of prisoners, which shall be in any way inconsistent with or contrary to the classification directed by this act."

Sect. 5 enacts, "That where, in any county, riding, or division of a county, or in any of the cities, towns, and places, named in the said schedule (A), any house of correction shall be part of the same building, or enclosed in the same boundary wall, as or shall be contiguous to the common gaol, and shall be under the superintendence of the same keeper and the same visiting justices, it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace of the county, division, city, town, or place, assembled at any general or quarter sessions, from time to time, with the consent of the sheriff of the county for the time being, signified in writing under his hand, to proceed to carry into effect the classification and separation directed by this act in the whole of each united or contiguous building or buildings, instead of in each such house of correction and gaol, and to divide the whole of such building, or united or contiguous buildings, into such number of compartments for the purpose of each separation and classification, as would be required under the regulations of this act, if the same had been one distinct gaol or house of correction; and also at any general or quarter sessions from time to time, by their order or orders, and with such consent of the sheriff as aforesaid, to ascertain and declare what part or parts of the same building, or united or contiguous buildings, shall be considered as the gaol, and what part or parts thereof respectively shall be considered as the house of correction, and shall be appropriated to the confinement of particular classes and descriptions of prisoners, and to direct what classes and descriptions respectively shall be confined in each part or division of such building, or united or contiguous buildings; and all persons to be committed to or detained in the respective parts and divisions so to be ascertained and appropriated of any such building, or united or contiguous buildings, to them respectively applicable, shall be deemed and held to be in legal custody: provided that prisoners for debt may be removed to, and shall always be confined in the part or parts of each building, or united or contiguous buildings, which shall be so ascertained, or be appropriated, as and for the gaol of the county, division, city, town, or place; and such removal shall not be deemed or taken to be an escape." See sect. 6, post, 1046.

Sect. 8 enacts, "That in all cases where any person liable by law to be committed to the house of correction, shall be apprehended within any district, city, town, or place, mentioned in the schedule to this act annexed, and the inhabitants of any such district, city, town, or place, are or shall be contributory to the support and maintenance of the house or houses of correction of the county, riding, or division, in which such district, city, town, or place, is situate, it shall and may be lawful for the justices of the peace of such district, city, town, or place, to commit such person to the use of correction of the county, riding, or division, in which such district, city, town, or place, is situate; and every person so committed shall and may be received, detained, dealt with, and ordered to be set and kept to hard labour or other work, or conveyed and sent away or discharged, and shall be subject and liable to the same correction and punishment, to all intents and purposes, as if committed by any justice or justices of the peace of such county, riding, or division; and in such case it shall not be necessary or required that any other house of correction shall be built or maintained in or out of such district, city, town, or place, and the inhabitants of such district, city, town, or place, shall not be compelled or compellable to the payment of any rate or sum of money whatever, for the building or maintaining of any other house of correction, in or for such district, city, town, or place; any thing in this act contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

By stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 10, reciting, 'Whereas, in some other counties and places to which the said recited act extends, by reason of the small number of prisoners usually confined therein, it may not be necessary to provide the whole number of wards and airing grounds thereby required; but it is necessary to provide that in all prisons some certain means of classification should be secured;' it is enacted, "That in every prison to which the said recited act extends, except Canterbury, Lichfield, and Lincoln, provision shall be made for the following classification, at the least:—

"In all such gaols, the male and female prisoners shall be confined in separate wards or parts of the gaol. The male prisoners shall be divided into five classes: first, debtors and persons committed for contempt of court on civil process; second and third, prisoners convicted, who may be put into either of these classes, as to the visiting magistrates may seem meet, reference being had to the character and conduct of the prisoners, and the nature of their offence; fourth and fifth, prisoners committed for trial, who may also be put into either of these two classes, as to the visiting magistrates may seem meet, reference being had in like manner to the character and conduct of the prisoners, and the nature of their offence.

"The female prisoners shall be divided at least into three classes: first, debtors and persons committed for contempt of court on civil process; second, prisoners convicted; third, prisoners committed for trial.

"In all such houses of correction, the male and female prisoners shall also be confined in separate wards or parts of the house. The male prisoners shall be divided into five classes: first and second, prisoners convicted, who may be put into either of such classes, as to the visiting magistrates may seem meet, regard being had to the character and conduct of the prisoners, and the nature of their offence; third and fourth, prisoners committed for trial, in all houses of correction where such prisoners are received, such prisoners may be put into either of these classes, as to the visiting magistrates may seem meet, regard being had, as already mentioned, to the character and conduct of the prisoner, and the nature of his offence; fifth, vagrants.

"In places where the gaol and house of correction are united, the male prisoners shall be divided into six classes at least: first, debtors and prisoners committed for contempt of court on civil process; second and third, convicted prisoners; fourth and fifth, those committed for trial, such prisoners to be assigned to either of these classes of prisoners convicted or committed respectively, as to the visiting magistrates shall seem meet, regard being always had to the character and conduct of the prisoners, and the nature of their offence; sixth, vagrants.

"The female prisoners, in each of such houses of correction, shall be divided into three classes: first and second, prisoners convicted; the prisoners to be put into either of such classes, as to the visiting magistrates shall seem meet, regard being had to their character and conduct, and the nature of their offence; vagrants shall be assigned to one or the other of these classes, as the visiting magistrates, in their discretion, may see meet; third, where females are committed to any house of correction before trial, they shall be kept in a class by themselves (a)."

By sect. 11, reciting, 'Whereas in some counties of Wales it may be consistent with the due classification of the prisoners, to dispense with some of the wards or airing grounds required by the said recited act [4 Geo. IV. c. 64] and this act,' it is enacted, "That if the court of quarter sessions of any county in Wales, shall, during the present year, present a petition to the lords of his Majesty's privy council, setting forth the whole number of prisoners imprisoned in the common gaol and house or houses of correction of such county, within the last seven years, with the causes of their imprisonment respect-vely, so as to exhibit in which of the classes prescribed by the said recited act or this act, each such prisoner would have been included, and shewing also the greatest number of such prisoners imprisoned in such gaol and house of correction, at any one time in each of the said seven years; and setting forth fully and particularly the then state of such gaol and house of correction, and an estimate of the expense which would be incurred by enlarging such gaol, or such house of correction, to which the petition shall apply, so as to admit of the whole number of wards and airing grounds required by the said act, or this act, and the amount of the county rate for each of the said seven years, and praying a dispensation with some part of the wards or other accommodations required by the said act or this act, which under the circumstances of such county may to such Court appear unnecessary, it shall be lawful for the said lords of the privy council to take such petition into their consideration, and, if they shall see fit, to make an order thereon, directing in what manner and to what extent it shall be sufficient for such county to comply with the provisions of the said act and this act, and making such regulations touching the same as to them shall seem meet; and such county duly complying with such order, shall not be liable to be indicted, or otherwise impeached, for not further conforming itself to the regulations of the said act and this act, in regard to the extent of its prisons, or the wards into which they are divided, or the accommodation to be found therein; any thing in the said recited act or this act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 12 enacts, "That any person confined in any prison to which the said recited act extends, for non-payment of any penalties incurred under the revenue laws, may be assigned to such class of convicted prisoners for whom separate ward is therein provided, as the visiting magistrates in their discretion may think fit, regard being had to the character of the prisoner, and his or her conduct while in prison; and the reasons for assigning such prisoner to any particular class of convicts shall be reported by the visiting magistrates to the quarter sessions."

Proviso respecting prisoners for breach of revenue laws.

Sect. 13 enacts, "That where, in any prison, there shall be only one prisoner belonging to any class in the said act or herein specified, such prisoner may be assigned, with his or her own consent, to any other class of prisoners of the same sex, which the visiting magistrates in their discretion shall think fit."

To prevent solitary confinement.

Sect. 14, reciting, 'Whereas, by stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, it is required, that when the gaol and house of correction are inclosed within the same boundary-wall, it shall be ascertained and declared what part or parts shall be considered as the gaol, and what as the house of correction,' enacts, 'That notwithstanding any thing in the said act contained, it may be lawful for the justices, in their general or quarter sessions, to declare in any such case that such parts of the buildings as shall be appropriated for the chapel, and for the sick wards or infirmaries, shall be common both to the gaol and to the house of correction, and that in that case a double set of wards shall not be necessary.'

Where gaol and house of correction are contiguous, chapel and infirmary may be common to both.

Sect. 15 enacts, "That nothing in the said recited act, or in this act contained, shall oblige any city, town, borough, port, or liberty, to provide its gaol or house of correction accommodation for any class of prisoners who could not be lawfully committed to such prison before the passing of the said recited act; and that nothing in the said recited act, or this act contained, shall alter or affect the liability of any bodies politic or corporate, or of the inhabitants of any parish, township, or place, or of any individuals bound by statute, tenure, custom, prescription, or usage, to repair or contribute towards the repair of any prison, or to maintain or contribute towards the maintenance of the prisoners confined in any prison, or to pay or contribute towards the payment of any expenses whatever connected with any prison, but that all such parties shall remain liable to all such charges as if the said recited act and this act had not been made."

IV. c. 64, s. 38], it was made lawful for one or more visiting justice or justices of any prison to which the same extended, to authorize, by an order in writing, the employment of prisoners committed for trial, with their own consent, in any such work as therein specified,' enacts, "That such consent of every such prisoner shall be freely given, and shall not be extorted or obtained by deprivation or threat of deprivation of any prison or other allowance; and that no prisoner, before conviction, shall, under any pretence, be employed on the tread-wheel, either with or without his consent."

Sect. 17, reciting, 'Whereas, it has been doubted whether prisoners committed to prison for trial, who are unable to maintain themselves otherwise than by being employed in some kind of work or labour in prison, are entitled to receive any prison allowance of food without being required so to employ themselves,' enacts and declares, "That such prisoners shall be allowed such food as may be sufficient for the support of health, without being obliged to perform any kind of work or labour as the condition of such allowance; and that any wages or portion of the same, which may become due to such prisoners from the keeper of any prison, in consequence of any order made by any visiting justice or justices of such prison, or the employment of such prisoners with their own consent, shall be paid to them as directed by such order, in addition to the food so allowed, and without any diminution of such allowance by reason of such payment."

Prisoners committed to gaol for trial, who are able, but refuse to work, are not entitled by law to have any food provided for them by the public; and therefore, where a magistrate reported, as an abuse, to the justices at the quarter sessions, that untried prisoners had been compelled to work at the tread-mill, and the justices at sessions ordered that the tread-mill should be applied to the employment of other prisoners as well as those sentenced to hard labour; and that those committed for trial who were able to work, and had the means of employment offered them by which they might earn their support, but who refused to work, should be allowed bread and water only; this Court refused to grant a mandamus to compel the justices to order such prisoners any other food (a).

As to prisoners being allowed food without being obliged to work.

(a) Rex v. Justices of Yorkshire, 2 B. C. 286. M. Stapylton, Esq., a magistrate for the North Riding of Yorkshire, in his official capacity, visited the house of correction at Northallerton, on the 14th October, 1823, and found that several prisoners committed for trial had been compelled to work upon the tread-mill against their inclinations. On the next day he made his report in writing to the justices, in general quarter sessions assembled, of this state of facts, and required the same to be taken into immediate consideration, and rectified. The sessions took the report into consideration, and made an order that the tread-mill should be applicable both as to hard labour, in the cases of such prisoners as might be sentenced thereto, and to the employment of other prisoners; and also, that persons committed for trial, who were able to work, and had the means of employment offered them, which they might earn their support, but who should obstinately refuse to work, should be allowed bread and water only. Upon an affidavit disclosing these facts, and the belief of Mr. Stapylton that bread and water, unaccompanied by any other article of food, does not afford sufficient nourishment for the due support of human nature, that upon such a diet the health of prisoners cannot be preserved. The following argument on motion for a mandamus to the justices of the peace for the North Riding of Yorkshire, commanding them to inquire into and rectify this abuse, was adopted.—By stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 17, "Any justice is empowered to enter into and examine the state of any gaol, as often as he shall think fit, and is required to report, in writing, any abuse therein, to the next quarter sessions; which abuse, so reported, shall be taken into immediate consideration by the justices at such sessions, and the most effectual measures adopted for inquiring into and rectifying such abuse, as soon as the nature of the case will allow." Now, if this Court see that the justices have not complied with the directions of that section, in rectifying the abuse presented, it will, by mandamus, compel them so to do. By sect. 10, certain regulations are prescribed for the management of prisons; and, by the thirteenth regulation, it is provided, that "every prisoner maintained at the expense of any county, &c., shall be allowed a sufficient quantity of plain and wholesome food, to be regulated by the sessions; regard being had (so far as may relate to convicted prisoners) to the nature of the labour required from, or performed by, such prisoners, so that the allowance of food may be duly apportioned thereto: and the justices may order, for such prisoners of every description as are not able to work, or, being able, cannot procure employment sufficient to sustain themselves by their industry, or who may not be otherwise provided for, such allowance of food

EMPLOYMENT,
LABOUR, &c.

Stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 84, s. 18 enacts, "That it shall be lawful to keep to hard labour every offender under sentence or order of transportation, while as the justices shall think necessary for the support of health." Then sect. 37, reciting that 'Persons are often committed to prison for trial who are willing to be employed in such work as can be conveniently executed in the prison to which they are so committed, and it is fit that such persons should be so employed rather than that they should be obliged to remain idle during their confinement,' enacts, that any visiting justice may "authorize, by an order in writing, the employment of any such prisoners, with their own consent, in any such work; and that the keeper of such prison is to employ such prisoners in such work or labour accordingly, and is to pay to such prisoners any such wages, or portion of the same, and at such periods as shall be directed by such justice." From these two sections it is obvious that such prisoners committed for trial, as have not the means of supporting themselves, and are, consequently, maintainable by the riding, are entitled to a sufficiency of plain and wholesome food; and that the magistrates have no authority to compel such prisoners to work at the tread-mill, or at any other species of employment, against their inclinations. Now, the order of the justices, made subsequently to the reported abuse, is in direct contravention of this act of Parliament. The effect of that order is to compel the untried prisoners to work against their will; for, if they do not work at the employment prescribed, they will have no other allowance than bread and water. That, too, cannot be considered "plain and wholesome food," within the meaning of the 10th section. Such food must necessarily be of a description adequate to the due preservation of health; yet that is negatived by the affidavit. It is true, that no individual case is mentioned in which the allowance of bread and water alone has had a prejudicial effect upon the health of the prisoner, but it is notorious, that many of the diseases afflicting the labouring classes, result from too spare a diet. [Abbott, C. J.—How are we to judge what is "plain and wholesome food?" That is matter upon which the justices are exclusively to decide. Can you refer us to any act of Parliament which makes it compulsory on the county to provide with food persons committed for trial?] The only statutes bearing upon that point are 19 Car. II. c. 4; 31 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 13; and 4

Geo. IV. c. 64. Abbott, C. J.—It appears by the preamble of the 19 Car. II. c. 4, that, before that statute, there was not any sufficient provision made for the relief and setting on work of poor persons committed to gaol for felony and other misdemeanors, and that they actually many times perished before their trial, and that the poor, living then idle and unemployed, became debauched, and came forth instructed in the practices of thievery and lewdness; and that statute then enabled the justices at sessions to provide a stock of materials out of the county rate, for setting on work poor prisoners, and to bestow the profits arising from such labour towards their relief. The statute 31 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 12, extends the provisions of the former statute to all prisoners whatever within the gaols, who may be inclined and willing to work; and, by the recite in the thirteenth section, it appears, that even at that time the health of the prisoners was frequently so affected by want of necessary food as to render them incapable of labour when released; and the justices at sessions are thereby authorized to order money to be paid out of the county rate towards assisting prisoners of every description who are not able to work, or who, being able, cannot obtain employment sufficient to sustain themselves by their industry. It is clear, therefore, that before the last statute, prisoners who were able and unwilling to work were not entitled to be maintained at the public expense; and it is not contended, that that statute casts such a burthen upon the public. There being, therefore, no provision in any act of Parliament to compel the county to provide food for those who are able, but unwilling, to work, we cannot grant a writ of mandamus to compel the justices to order any species of food to be provided for such prisoners. We ought to see clearly that the magistrates have neglected some duty imposed upon them by law before we compel them to act in any particular mode. From the facts now before the Court, it does not appear that labour at the tread-mill is a species of work unfit for the employment of the prisoners. I cannot say that such an employment is contrary to law. The legislature appears to have vested in the county magistrates a discretion as to the management and diet of the prisoners. Bayley, J.—I am of opinion that the public are not bound to find food for those who are able, but who are un-he or she shall remain in the common gaol, if his or her health shall permit, and if one or more of the visiting justices of such gaol shall give a written order to that effect; and that it shall be lawful for one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, if he shall think fit, to order that any such offender be removed from the common gaol to the house of correction, and there kept to hard labour."

And, by sect. 19, "The time during which any offender shall continue in any gaol or house of correction, or in any such place of confinement as filling, to work; and if that be so, the justices have already done more than the law required them to do, by ordering such persons bread and water. Best, —I think that a writ of mandamus might not to issue in this case, because the magistrates have already done more than we could order them to do. If the law requires a certain thing to be done, we may order it to be done by the party upon whom the obligation of doing it is imposed. If he is to act according to his discretion, and he will not do or even consider the matter, we may compel him to put himself in motion to do the thing, but we cannot control his discretion. By the statute 4 Geo. IV. c. 1, s. 17, the justices at sessions are bound, upon its being reported by a magistrate that certain abuses exist in a gaol, to take that report into consideration. In this case a magistrate made a report that prisoners committed for trial were compelled to work on the tread-mill. The justices at sessions took that report into consideration, and determined that the tread-mill should be applicable both as hard labour to such prisoners as were sentenced thereto, and to the employment of all other prisoners. So far they have complied with the act of Parliament, by taking the matter into consideration; but it is said that they have not rectified that which is alleged to be an abuse, because they have directed the tread-mill to be used to the employment of all prisoners, and have also ordered that persons committed for trial, who are able to work, and have means of employment offered them by the magistrates, by which they may gain their support, but who obstinately refuse to work, shall be allowed bread and water only; and it is insisted, that it is not plain and wholesome food for their support, and therefore a violation of the thirteenth regulation. It is, however, for us to decide whether it is or be not sufficient, the quality and quantity of the food being left to the discretion of the magistrates. But what if there is a prisoner to whom work is offered, and who is able to do it, but is not, to have any food at the expense of the county? According to the poor law, he who is able to labour is to be maintained by labour only, and nothing is to be provided for him but a means of employment. Neither humanity nor policy requires that one on whom a charge of felony has been made on oath, should be in a better situation than one who lives unsuspected of crime. The common law made no provision for maintaining prisoners in idleness. And the preamble of the 19 Car. II. c. 4, is a legislative declaration of the mischievous consequences resulting from poor prisoners not having the means of supporting themselves by labour, and from their living in idleness, and that statute, as a remedy for this error, enacts, "That the justices shall provide materials for setting on such prisoners to work." The wise principle of that, as well as all other statutes for the maintenance of the poor was, that employment should be provided for them by which they might support themselves. The 4 Geo. IV. sanctions that principle. The thirteenth regulation enables "the justices to order for such prisoners of every description as are not able to work, or, being able, cannot procure employment sufficient to sustain themselves by their industry, or who may not otherwise be provided for, such allowance of food as they shall think necessary for the support of health." The 37th section enables the magistrates to employ prisoners committed for trial with the consent of such prisoners. This section prevents them from forcing such prisoners to work against their will, but it does not oblige them to find food for such as are able and will not work. An idle person has no right to the maintenance now claimed for him, and therefore we cannot order the magistrates of the county to provide better food for such prisoners than they have already offered them. I do not mean to say that magistrates in all cases would be justified in offering to such prisoners the same severe labour that persons condemned to hard labour are bound to perform. Inasmuch as the object of employment of prisoners committed for trial is support and not punishment, it may perhaps be fit to provide the most profitable and least irksome labour which, consistently with the security of the prisoners and the situation of the gaol, can be provided. Negligent escape.

If the gaoler voluntarily suffer a prisoner to escape, he shall be punished in the same manner as the prisoner ought to have been who escaped; and if he negligently permit him to escape, he shall be punished by fine and imprisonment. And the sheriff shall answer for him. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 22 et seq. 5 Mod. 415, 416.

And if a prisoner charged with felony break a gaol, it is said that this seems to be a negligent escape; because there wanted either the due strength in the gaol that should have secured him, or the due vigilance in the gaoler or his officers, that should have prevented it. 1 Hale, 600.

The principal gaoler is only fineable for the voluntary escape of a felon suffered by his deputy; for no one shall suffer capitally for any crime, but he who is actually guilty of it. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 27.

But for a negligent escape suffered by his bailiff, the sheriff is as much liable to answer, as if he had actually suffered it himself; and the court may charge either the sheriff or bailiff for it; and if a deputy gaoler be not sufficient to answer a negligent escape, his principal must answer for him. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 29.

Sect. 52 enacts, "That whenever any contagious disease, or other emergency, shall render necessary the immediate removal of the prisoners, or any of them, confined in any gaol or house of correction, and that, previous thereto, it shall be impossible to obtain for such purpose the order of the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, it shall and may be lawful for the visiting justices of such prison, and they are hereby empowered to issue an order under their hands and seals, to the keeper of every such prison, to remove such prisoners, or any of them, to such other prison or other place of confinement within their jurisdiction, as shall be specified in such order."

Sect. 53 provides and enacts, "That every such removal shall be subject to all such restrictions, as to its duration, as is hereby required and directed, and that every such order of visiting justices shall be laid before the justices assembled at the general or quarter sessions of the peace which shall be held next after such order shall have been made; provided also that the prisoners confined in any common gaol of any county, city, town or place, shall not be removed without the consent of the sheriff of such county, city, town, or place; provided also, that no removal made under the authority of this act shall be deemed or taken to be an escape; and that nothing herein contained shall extend to discharge the sheriff or other officer from being answerable for the actual escape of any prisoner in his custody."

By stat. 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 9, if any person shall be committed to any prison for any criminal or supposed criminal matter, he shall not be removed from thence, unless it be by habeas corpus, or some other legal writ, or where he is removed from one prison or place to another within the same county, in order to his trial or discharge, or in case of sudden fire or infection, or other necessity, on pain that the person making out and signing or countersigning any warrant for such removal, and the person executing the same, shall forfeit, for the first offence, 100*l.*, and for the second, 200*l.*, to the party grieved, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in the King's Courts at Westminster.

And by stat. 24 Geo. ## (9) Discharge of Prisoners, and Allowance, &amp;c., on.

Stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 16 enacts, that "If the said visitors shall at any time observe, or be satisfactorily informed, of any extraordinary diligence or merit in any prisoners under their inspection, they shall report the same to the justices of peace for the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, at their next or any subsequent general or quarter session to be holden for the county or place in which such prison is situate, in order that such justices may, if they shall think proper, recommend any such offender to the royal mercy, in such degree or upon such terms as to them shall seem meet; and if his Majesty shall thereupon be graciously pleased to shorten the duration of such prisoner's confinement, such prisoner shall upon his or her discharge, together with necessary clothing, receive such sum of money for his or her subsistence, as the visiting justices for the time being shall think proper; so as such sum shall not exceed 20*s.*, nor be less than 5s., in case such offender shall have been confined for the space of one year, and so in proportion for any shorter term of confinement; and such sums of money, as also the expense of such clothing, shall be paid out of the county rate, or other rate applicable to the expenses of prisons."

Sect. 39, after reciting that 'Whereas it is desirable that prisoners discharged from prison should be supplied with the means of returning to their families, or to their place of settlement, or to some place of employment, where they may be engaged in a life of honest labour for their maintenance, and prevented from pursuing evil courses,' enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful for any one or more of the visiting justice or justices of any prison to which this act shall extend, from whence any prisoner shall be discharged, to direct that such moderate sum of money shall be given and paid to any and every such prisoner so discharged, who shall not have the means of returning to his or her family or place of settlement, or resorting to any place of employment or honest occupation, as in the judgment of such justice or justices shall be requisite and necessary for such purpose, under all the circumstances attending the case of any such prisoner; and that such sum of money shall be paid by the keeper of such prison, to or for the use of such prisoner, for the purpose aforesaid; and that all such sums shall be provided for, either out of such bequests or benefactions as aforesaid, or in such manner as is by this act directed with respect to the expense of the support and maintenance of the prisoners in such prisons respectively."

Stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 22, after reciting that 'Whereas it is desirable that more effectual means should be afforded, whereby prisoners discharged from prison should be enabled to return to their place of settlement,' enacts, "That when any prisoner discharged from prison shall be desirous of being supplied with the means of so returning, it shall and may be lawful for any two visiting justices of such prison, upon application from such prisoner, to take the examination in writing upon oath of such prisoner, as to his or her last legal place of settlement; and upon such examination, and such other evidence as the said visiting justices may be able to procure, it shall be lawful for the said visiting justices, if they shall so think fit, to afford to such prisoner the means of returning to his or her place of last legal settlement, in the manner hereinafter directed."

Sect. 23 enacts, "That it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace of each and every county, riding, or division, in England, in their general or quarter sessions assembled, to cause engraved copper plates, or printed forms of passes, to be provided, according to the form in schedule (B), annexed to this act, bearing his Majesty's arms, and sealed with the county seal, or with a seal to be specially provided for that purpose; and the said justices may cause the same to be issued to the keepers of the several prisons within their respective counties, ridings, or divisions, for the use of the visiting justices of each such prison, whenever any prisoner or prisoners discharged from, or about to be discharged from such prison, shall apply to be furnished with the same; and the said visiting justices shall, if, after a due consideration of the circumstances, they shall deem it expedient, fill up the blanks in every such pass, and certify the same, and make out a route in the proper column for the purpose, of each such prisoner, and for the child or children, if any, of each such prisoner, specifying the place to which such prisoner and such child or children is or are going, and the time to which the said pass is (except in cases of sickness or unavoidable accident) limited, in order that such prisoner may receive such allowances as are authorized by this act, not exceeding 1½d. per mile for such prisoner, and 1d. per mile for each child, which, from being in a state of nurture, or without other protection, may have been confined in prison with such prisoner."

Sect. 24. "That upon the production of such pass to any overseer of the poor of any place through which such discharged prisoner shall proceed, according to the route specified in such pass, he shall, out of any money in his hands applicable to the relief of the poor, pay such discharged prisoner an allowance not exceeding the rate per mile specified in such pass as aforesaid, for the number of miles to the next city, town, or place to which he

X. Gaolers and inferior Officers.

14 Edw. 3.

19 Hen. 7, c. 10.

THE gaol itself is the King's; but the keeping thereof is incident to the office of sheriff, and inseparable from it, except such gaols whereof any persons have the keeping by inheritance or succession. This will be found from the 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 10, and 19 Hen. VII. c. 10, which enact—That every sheriff within every county within this realm of England, have the custody, rule, keeping, and charge of every the King's common gaols, prisons, and prisoners in the same, in every of the said counties where he is sheriff, during the time of his office, except all gaols whereof any person or persons, spiritual or temporal, or body corporate, have the keeping, of estate of inheritance or by succession. And see 2 Inst. 589.

And therefore, the sheriffs shall put in such keepers for whom they will answer. 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 10.

3 Geo. 1, c. 15.

But by stat. 3 Geo. I. c. 15, s. 10, none shall buy the office of gaoler, on pain of 500*l.*, half to the king, and half to him that shall sue.

A gaoler, in fact, is as much punishable for a misdemeanor in his office, as if he was a rightful gaoler. 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 23.

When a sheriff quits his office, the custody of the county gaol can only belong to his successor. 1 Ld. Raym. 136.

XI. Fees to Gaolers.

By stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 50, intituled An Act for the abolition of gaol and fees, connected with the gaols in England, after reciting 'Whereas it is expedient, for the better government of gaols and bridewells in England, that fees and gratuities payable at the same, for the entrance, commitment, discharge of any prisoner, should be abolished,' enacts, "That, from and after the 1st day of October next, all fees and gratuities paid or payable by any prisoner, on the entrance, commitment, or discharge, to or from prison, shall absolutely cease, and the same are hereby abolished and determined."

Act. 2. 'And whereas in some places such fees and gratuities as afore-mentioned are payable to the gaoler or his servants, and are to him or them as a salary,' enacts, "That it may be lawful for the justices of the peace for any county, city, or town, assembled in general or quarter sessions, to make such allowances to the aforesaid gaoler or servants, as may to them seem fit, in lieu of salary or compensation for the fees or gratuities, payable by prisoners, now abolished by this act." And see 32 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 2, post, 1049.

Act. 3 enacts, "That the said justices of the peace for any county, city, or town, may direct the said allowances to be paid out of any county rate, or town rate, now by law authorized to be made and levied."

Act. 4. 'And whereas it is customary for clerks of the assize, clerks of the peace, clerks of the court, or their deputies, or other officers in the courts of assize or session, to demand and take from persons indicted, divers fees in the way of fees;' enacts "That every prisoner who now is or hereafter shall be charged with or indicted for any felony, or as an accessory thereto, or with or for any misdemeanor, before any court holding criminal jurisdiction within that part of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, called England, against whom no bill of indictment shall be found by grand jury, or who, on his, her, or their trial shall be acquitted, or who shall be discharged by proclamation for want of prosecution, shall be immediately set at large, without payment of any fee or sum of money, for or in respect of his, her, or their discharge, to any person or persons whomsoever; except only in such cases wherein the prisoner shall have been charged, and shall then stand charged with any process authorizing the detention of the prisoner: provided always, that if it shall happen that any prisoner shall so stand charged with any process authorizing his detention as aforesaid, shall have been discharged in supposed obedience to this act, by reason that the sheriff or other officer entitled to have detained him was, at the time of such his discharge, ignorant that there was any such charge against him, it shall in such case be lawful for such sheriff or other officer, receiving information of such charge, presently to retake the prisoner so charged as aforesaid, and thereupon forthwith to detain him in custody

GAOLERS.

55 Geo. 3, c. 50

Fees usually paid to clerks of court, assize, &c., abolished.

County treasurers to pay allowances for places not usually assessed to county at large.

Indemnification for fees to clerks of peace.

Clerks of assize to deliver account of fees.

Officers exacting fees.

Misdemeanor.

Liberates to debtors granted free of expense, compensation made to sheriffs for same.

upon such charge, in such manner as the said sheriff or other officer might have done if such prisoner had not been set at large; and that, upon his being so retaken, the said prisoner shall be deemed, for the purpose of that suit, to have been in custody continually from the time when he so first stood charged as aforesaid."

Sect. 5 enacts, "That all such fees as have been usually paid or payable to the several clerks of assize, and clerks of the peace, clerks of the court, or their deputies, in that part of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England, in any of the cases aforesaid, shall absolutely cease, and the same are hereby abolished and determined; and, from and after the passing of this act, no clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, clerk of the court, or their deputies, shall ask, demand, take, or receive any sum or sums of money, from any of the said prisoners as fees, for or in respect of his, her, or their discharge."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That in lieu and satisfaction of such lawful fees so abolished as aforesaid, the treasurers, or other proper officers, of the several counties in England, or of such districts, hundreds, ridings, or divisions of a county as are not usually assessed to the county at large, and of such cities, towns corporate, cinque ports, liberties, franchises, and places, as do not pay to the rates of the several counties in which they are respectively situated, shall, on receiving a certificate signed by one or more judge or justice of the peace, before whom such prisoner shall have been discharged as aforesaid, (which certificate the judge or justice is hereby required to give), pay out of the rates of such county, or of such district, hundred, riding, or division, or out of the public stock of such city, town corporate, cinque port, liberty, franchise, or place, such lawful sum as has been usually paid upon that occasion, for every prisoner discharged as aforesaid, to such clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, or clerk of the court, or their respective deputies; which several sums so paid in pursuance of this act shall be respectively allowed to the said treasurer and officers by the justices before whom their accounts shall be passed."

Sect. 7 enacts, "That each and every clerk of the peace, or his or their deputy or deputies, and all and every officer who shall claim any fees or indemnification for the same, by virtue of any of the provisions hereinbefore contained, for and in respect of any such prisoners, shall deliver at each and every session of the peace, or at some adjournment thereof, an account of all fees so due to him, or for which he shall claim any indemnification; which account shall be verified upon oath in court, before the chairman of such sessions."

Sect. 8 enacts, "That the clerks of assize shall, at each and every assize to be holden, deliver in to the judge of the assize who shall sit for the trial of such prisoners, an account of such fees as shall be due to him for and in respect of such prisoners; which account shall be verified upon oath before such judge to whom such account shall be delivered."

Sect. 9 enacts, "That from and after the passing of this act, any clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, clerk of the court, or their deputies or other officers, exacting such fees, shall be rendered incapable of holding his or their offices, and be guilty of a misdemeanor."

Sect. 10. 'And whereas it hath been customary in some places for the sheriff or under-sheriff to demand for the liberate granted to any debtor on his discharge, a fee or gratuity;' enacts, "That such liberate shall be granted to such debtor free of all expenses; and that it shall be in the power of the justices of the peace for each county, city, or town, assembled in quarter session, subject however to the approbation of the judges of assize, to make such compensation to the sheriff or under-sheriff, out of the county, city, or town rate, as shall to them seem fit."

Sect. 11. 'And whereas there are several cities, towns corporate, and places within this kingdom, which do not contribute to the payment of any county rate, and have no town rate, or public stock; and doubts may arise whether such cities, towns corporate, and places, can be legally rated and assessed towards the payment of the salaries, allowances, and compensations of such fees and gratuities,' enacts, " That in all such cases the fees, allowances, and compensations, in lieu of fees and gratuities heretofore directed to be made, shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid, in such cities, towns corporate, and places, by a separate rate and assessment to be made by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the several parishes and precincts within such cities, towns corporate, and places, by such and the like ways, methods, and means, as the rates for the relief of the poor are, can, or may be raised, levied, and collected, in such cities, towns corporate, and places."

stat. 12. ' And whereas it may happen that the sums of money to be paid in the said cities, towns corporate, and places, or some or one of them, to answer and pay such salaries, allowances, and compensations hereinbefore directed to be made in lieu of fees and gratuities by this act abolished, may be so small, that it may not be convenient to make an equal separate rate and assessment for the same, upon the said parishes and precincts in such cities, towns corporate, and places,' it is enacted, " That in such cases, in the case mentioned, and when and as often as the same shall happen, the fees, allowances, and compensations shall and may, by order of the said judge or judges, or justices in sessions assembled as aforesaid, be paid out of the monies from time to time raised for the relief of the poor in the said several cities, towns corporate, and places; and the treasurers or persons from time to time having the management of the said monies raised for the relief of the poor in the same cities, towns corporate, and places respectively be hereby authorized and required to pay the said sums of money so ordered to be paid by the said judge or judges, or justices, of the said last-mentioned monies, when and as often as the same shall be so ordered: provided always, that the order for such allowances as may be made by the justices of the peace assembled in general or quarter sessions, be approved by the judge or judges of assize on the first circuit ensuing after such warrant shall have been made out by the justices of peace assembled in general or quarter session for any county, city, or town, and that such order shall not be deemed or taken as a legal order without such warrant from the judge or judges of assize: provided always, that should there be more than one in the same district, the payments are to be made and levied in such rates and proportions as the respective parishes pay to the rate."

stat. 13 enacts, " That any gaoler, who shall, from and after the 1st day of October next, exact from any prisoner any fee or gratuity for or on account of the entrance, commitment, or discharge of such prisoner, or who shall detain any prisoner in custody for non-payment of any fee or gratuity, shall be rendered incapable of holding his office, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by fine and imprisonment."

stat. 14 enacts, " That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend to the King's Bench prison, his Majesty's prison of the Fleet, the House of Correction, and the Palace Courts."

Majesty's principal secretaries of state; and one or more of the visiting justices so appointed shall personally visit and inspect each prison at least twice in each quarter of a year, and oftener if occasion shall require, shall examine into the state of the buildings, so as to form a judgment of the repairs, additions, or alterations which may appear necessary, strict regard being had to the classification, inspection, instruction, employment, and labour required by this act, and shall further examine into the behaviour and conduct of the respective officers, and the treatment, behaviour and condition of the prisoners, the means of setting them to work, the amount of their earnings, and the expenses attending the prison, and of all expenses within the same, and, in matters of pressing necessity, and within the powers of their commission as justices, shall take cognizance thereof, and proceed to regulate and redress the same; and if the said visitors shall at any time observe, or be satisfactorily informed of, any extraordinary dilatoriness or merit in any prisoners under their inspection, they shall report the same to the justices of peace for the county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place at their next or any subsequent general or quarter sessions to be holden for the county or place in which such prison is situate, under that such justices may, if they shall think proper, recommend any offender to the royal mercy, in such degree or upon such terms as to them shall seem meet; and if his Majesty shall thereupon be graciously pleased to shorten the duration of such prisoner's confinement, such prisoner shall, upon his or her discharge, together with necessary clothing, receive such sum of money for his or her subsistence, as the visiting justices at the time being shall think proper; so as such sum shall not exceed 20s., or less than 5s., in case such offender shall have been confined for the term of one year, and so in proportion for any shorter term of confinement; and such sums of money, as also the expense of such clothing, shall be paid out of the county rate, or other rate applicable to the expenses of prisons."

Stat. 17 provides and enacts, "That it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace for any county, riding, or division, district, city, town, or place, of his own free will and pleasure, and without being appointed a visitor, to visit into and examine any prison of such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place, at such time or times and so often as he shall see fit, and if he shall discover any abuse or abuses therein, he is hereby required to report them in writing at the next general or quarter sessions of the county or adjourned sessions, which shall be holden for such county, riding, division, district, city, town, or place; and then and so often as a report of any abuse or abuses in any such prison shall be made by the visiting justices, or either of them, or by any other justice of the peace for such county, riding, or division, district, city, town, or place, the abuse or abuses so reported shall be taken into immediate consideration by the justices of the peace for such county, riding, or division, district, city, town, or place, at the next general or quarter sessions at which such report shall be made; and they are hereby required to adopt the most effectual measures for inquiring into and rectifying such abuse or abuses as soon as the nature of the case shall require."

Stat. 18 provides, "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to authorize or empower any visiting or other justice of the peace to converse or hold any intercourse or communication, except as is hereinafter mentioned, with any person who may be committed by lawful authority to any such gaol or other prison, there to be kept in safe and close confinement; but that, nevertheless, it shall and may be lawful for any visiting justice, so appointed as aforesaid, to visit and inspect, at all times when he shall think proper, the apartment or place in which such person shall be kept or confined in any prison, and also to see such person, to hear or receive any representation from him or her as to his or her treatment in such prison, and to inquire and examine into the same; any law herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Stat. 23 enacts, "That at every general or quarter sessions, the visiting Sect. 72 enacts, "That no order made touching any of the matters in this act contained, nor any conviction of any offender against this act, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed or removeable by certiorari, by any other writ or process whatsoever into any of his Majesty's Courts of record at Westminster; and that where any distress shall be made for any fine, penalty, or sum of money to be levied by virtue of this act, the distress itself shall not be deemed to be unlawful, nor the party making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, warrant of distress, or other proceedings relating thereto; nor shall such party be deemed a trespasser ab initio, on account of any irregularity which shall be afterwards done by the party distraining, but the person aggrieved by such irregularity shall and may recover full satisfaction for the special damage (if any) in an action upon the case; but no plaintiff shall recover in any action for such irregularity as aforesaid, if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made by or on behalf of the party distraining before such action brought.

Sect. 73 enacts, "That if any suit or action shall be prosecuted against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this act, such person may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done by authority of this act; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his or her action after issue joined, or if upon demurrer or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall recover double costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant hath by law in other cases; and though a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff in any such action, such plaintiff shall not have costs against the defendant, unless the judge before whom the trial shall be shall certify his approbation of the action, and of the verdict obtained thereupon."

Sect. 75 enacts, "That all actions, suits, and prosecutions to be commenced against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this act shall be laid and tried in the county where the facts were committed, and shall be commenced within six calendar months after the fact committed, and not otherwise."

Officer may not carry his prisoner to any tavern or other public house, without his consent, &c.

By the stat. 32 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1, commonly called the Lords' Act, it is enacted, "That no sheriff, under-sheriff, bailiff, serjeant at mace, or other officer or minister whatsoever, shall at any time or times hereafter convey or carry, or cause to be conveyed or carried, any person or persons by him or them arrested, or being in his or their custody by virtue or colour of any action, writ, process, or attachment, to any tavern, alehouse, or other public victualling or drinking house, or to the private house of any such officer or minister, or of any tenant or relation of his, without the free and voluntary issent of the person or persons so arrested or in custody; nor charge any person or persons with any sum of money for any wine, beer, ale, victuals, tobacco, or any other liquor or things whatsoever, save what he, she, or they shall call for, of his, her, or their own free accord; nor shall use or procure him, her, or them, to call or pay for any such liquor or victuals, except what he, she, or they shall particularly and freely ask for; nor shall demand, take, or receive, or cause to be demanded, taken, or received, directly or indirectly, any other or greater sum or sums of money than is or shall be by law allowed to be taken or demanded for any arrest taking, or for detaining, or waiting till the person or persons so arrested in custody shall have given an appearance or bail, as the case shall require, or agreed with the person or persons at whose suit or prosecution, he, she, or they shall be taken or arrested, or until he, she, or they shall be sent to the proper gaol belonging to the county, riding, division, city, town, or place where such arrest or taking shall be; nor shall exact or take any reward, gratuity, or money for keeping the person or persons so arrested or in custody out of gaol or prison; nor shall carry any such person to any gaol or prison within four and twenty hours from the time of such arrest, unless such person or persons so arrested shall refuse to be carried to some safe and convenient dwelling-house of his, her, or their own nomination or appointment, within a city, borough, corporation, or market town, in case such person or persons shall be there arrested; or within three miles from the place where such arrest shall be made, if the same shall be made out of any city, borough, corporation, or market town, so as such dwelling-house be the house of the person arrested, and be within the county, riding, division, or liberty, in which the person under arrest was arrested; and then and in any such case it shall be lawful to and for any such sheriff, or other officer or minister, to convey or carry the person or persons so arrested, and bring them to be carried to such safe and convenient dwelling-house as afore-mentioned, or to such gaol or prison as he, she, or they may be sent to, by virtue of any writ, action, writ, or process against him, her, or them."

Act. 2 enacts, "That no sheriff, under-sheriff, bailiff, serjeant at mace, or other officer or person, shall at any time or times hereafter, take or receive any other or greater sum or sums for one or more nights' lodging, or for a day's diet, or other expenses of any person or persons under arrest, on any writ, action, attachment, or process, other than what shall be allowed as reasonable in such cases by some order or orders already made, or which shall hereafter be made by the justices of the peace at some general or quarter sessions which shall be held for the county, riding, division, city, town, or place where such arrest or taking shall be, who are hereby authorized and required, with all convenient expedition, to make some standing order or orders for ascertaining such charges and expenses within their respective counties, ridings, divisions, cities, towns, and jurisdictions, if the same hath not already been there made; and if any such order or orders hath not already been there made, such justices for the time being, at their next or next general or quarter sessions, are hereby authorized and required to make or alter the same, from time to time, as they shall see occasion; and they are hereby required to cause a copy of every such order, and of every alteration or alteration thereof, signed by the clerk of the peace of every such county, riding, division, city, town, or place respectively, to be put and kept in some conspicuous place in the sessions house, or some other proper place, of every such respective county, riding, division, city, town, or place, which justices shall order, so as the same may be there seen and examined on any occasion may require."

Act. 3 enacts, "That all and every sheriff, under-sheriff, and bailiff of any county, riding, division, city, town, or place, and also the respective secondaries and clerk sitters in the respective compters in London, and all other persons intrusted with the execution of process, or who shall enter any actions, or make any warrant or warrants, or any writ or process, in order to have the same executed, shall deliver a printed copy of the several clauses contained in this act relating to the execution of process, to the sheriff, under-sheriff, bailiff, serjeants, and other officers and persons who shall be employed

XIX. King's Bench and Marshalsea Prisons.

y stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 113, after reciting stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, whereby justices, at the general sessions, were directed to rate every parish to a uin sum, in manner therein expressed; and that all surplusage of money h should remain in the stock of any county, should, by the discretion e justices of the peace in their quarter sessions, be bestowed for the reof the poor hospitals in that county, and for other charitable purposes:
reciting stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 20, passed in aid of stats. 43 Eliz. c. 2, and eo. II. c. 29, and that the sums secured to be paid by the said acts are ufficient for the relief of the poor prisoners confined in the said King's ch and Marshalsea prisons; and that no adequate relief has been prod for the poor prisoners confined in the Fleet prison; and that Bethlehem ital is a charity for the reception and cure of lunatics and distracted per-from all parts of the kingdom, and from his Majesty's fleets and armies; any surplus which shall remain of the monies provided by this act, after ving the poor prisoners in the said prisons, may with great propriety be owed towards the relief of the said hospital: the said acts so far as the relate or apply to the yearly sums provided for the relief of the poor ners confined in the King's Bench and Marshalsea prisons, and also 11 Geo. II., are repealed.

ct. 2 enacts, "That every treasurer of every county and division of a ty mentioned in the schedule to this act annexed, shall, on or before irst day of August in every year, pay out of the public stock or rates of county and division of a county respectively, the several sums of money fied in the schedule to this act annexed, in manner following; that is y, the sums for the relief of the prisoners confined in the King's Bench Marshalsea prisons, to be paid to the treasurer for the county of Surry; the sums for the relief of the prisoners confined in the Fleet prison, to aid to the treasurer or chamberlain of the city of London."

ct. 3 enacts, "That the treasurer for the time being of the county of y shall, from time to time, pay the sums of money to be received by from the said treasurers, and also the sums to be paid out of the public or rates of the said county of Surry, for the relief of the prisoners in King's Bench and Marshalsea prisons, to such sufficient person or per-residing near the said prisons respectively, at such times and in such icer as the justices of the peace for the county of Surry, or the major of them, at their general quarter sessions, shall from time to time order irect."

ct. 4 directs as to whom the chamberlain of London is to pay the y.

ct. 5 enacts, "That receipts signed by the treasurer for the time being e county of Surry, and the treasurer or chamberlain for the time being e city of London, for any monies payable to them respectively by virf this act, shall be sufficient discharges for the same; and that receipts signed by any person or persons appointed by the justices of the peace of the county of Surry, and city of London respectively, at their quarter sessions respectively, to receive any monies payable by virtue of this act, shall be sufficient discharges to the treasurer for the county of Surry, and the treasurer or chamberlain of the city of London respectively."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That if any treasurer shall neglect or refuse to pay over any such respective sums of money as ought to be paid by him to the treasurer of the county of Surry, and the treasurer or chamberlain of the city of London respectively as aforesaid, or any treasurer of the county of Surry, or treasurer or chamberlain of the city of London, shall neglect or refuse to pay over such respective sums of money as ought to be paid by him respectively by virtue of this act, then and in any such case, upon the certificate or certificates, on oath, of the treasurer or treasurers, person or persons, to whom the same respectively ought to be paid, being delivered to either of his Majesty's Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, or to the Court of Marshalsea, of such neglect or refusal, it shall be lawful for the said Courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Marshalsea, or either of them, to make a rule on every such treasurer so neglecting or refusing as aforesaid, requiring such treasurer to pay the money so reported or certified to be due as aforesaid; and obedience to such rules respectively shall and may be enforced by the said Courts, in such manner and by such ways and means as rules of the said Courts respectively are usually enforced."

Sect. 7 enacts, "That every person who now is or hereafter shall be elected or appointed treasurer of any county, or division of a county, named in the schedule to this act annexed, shall, within one calendar month after the 1st day of August, or within one calendar month after his election or appointment respectively into such office of treasurer, transmit his name and place of abode to the clerk of the crown, in his Majesty's said Court of King's Bench, to be by him entered or registered in a book to be kept for that purpose, for which entries no fee or reward shall be taken; and in case any such treasurer shall neglect or refuse to transmit his name or place of abode as aforesaid, that then, upon the report of the said clerk of the crown, made to the said Court of King's Bench, of such neglect or refusal, every such treasurer shall be liable to be proceeded against in the same manner as in case of neglecting or refusing to pay such money as aforesaid."

Sect. 8 enacts, "That from time to time, and as often as there shall be occasion for the said Courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Marshalsea, respectively, to make any rule or rules as aforesaid, on any of the said treasurers in pursuance of this act, the whole cost and charge of making such rule or rules, and all subsequent charges arising therefrom, shall be paid by the treasurer whose default or neglect shall cause the making of such rule."

Sect. 9 enacts, "That the sum and sums of money, provided by this act, shall from time to time be distributed by the person or persons to whom the same respectively shall be directed to be paid as aforesaid, by weekly payments, for the relief of such prisoners as shall from time to time be ordered to be relieved, in manner hereinafter mentioned."

Sect. 10 enacts, "That it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace for the county of Surry, to order such relief as he shall think proper, to be given to any prisoner confined in the said King's Bench or Marshalsea prisons, and for any alderman or justice of the city of London, to order such relief as he or they shall think proper, to be given to any prisoner confined in the said Fleet prison; but subject, nevertheless, to the provisions hereinafter contained, and to any rules, orders, and regulations, which shall be made as reinafter is mentioned; provided always, that the sum to be given to any prisoner shall not exceed 6d. per diem."

Sect. 11 enacts, "That no prisoner, who shall be charged in execution debt, shall be relieved by virtue of this act, after the first day of the term next following the time when he or she shall be charged in execution."

Sect. 12 enacts, "That no prisoner shall be ordered to be relieved by virtue of this act, until he or she shall first have made oath before a judge one of the Courts of law at Westminster, or of the Marshalsea, or a commissioner appointed by one of the said judges to take affidavits, that he or she is not worth 10*l.* in all the world, and that he or she cannot subsist himself or herself without the relief or assistance provided by this act; and any such prisoner shall wilfully forswear or perjure himself or herself in taking any such oath as aforesaid, and shall be lawfully convicted thereof, or she so offending shall suffer such punishment as by law may be inflicted on persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury."

Sect. 13 enacts, "That no prisoner shall be relieved by virtue of this act, who shall have become supersedeable, or entitled to be discharged, under any act for the relief of insolvent debtors."

Sect. 14 directs as to the appropriation of surplus monies.

Sect. 15 enacts, that accounts are to be kept and verified upon oath.

The magistrate is to fill up the description, and to insert in the column marked A. the names of the places through which the discharged prisoner is to travel, and in the column marked B., (in words), the allowance per mile which he (or she) is ceive; and also to write the number of children in words, in the proper column in the following form; and when there are no children, to strike out that part of the form. In case of any mistake, the magistrate should make the necessary alterations with a pen, and write his name opposite thereto. The overseer of the poor will insert in the column marked C. the distance of the place to which he advances the allowance; in that marked D., the sum he gives the discharged prisoner; and in that marked E., will sign his own name, specifying the place for which he acts. He is also to take before a magistrate any person that presents a pass in which there are alterations other than with the pen, as above directed.

Gleaning.

It is a vulgar error to suppose that there is in general a right of gleaning on another's lands. And trespass lies against any person who gleans without the owner's consent, and without any particular custom, since no such right exists at common law. Steel v. Houghton, 1 H. Bla. 51; Worger v. Manning, Id. 53; Gould, J., diss. Parishioners or other inhabitants of a particular parish or district may, in some places, have a right by particular custom to glean on lands within that parish or district at proper times, and under proper restrictions; but that custom, like all others against common law right, must be clear and undisputed. Such a custom could extend to non-parishioners or inhabitants of the parish or district.

R. v. Price, 4 Burr. 1925, on a motion for an information against a justice of the peace for a misdemeanor in oppressively committing some poor inhabitants of the parish of C. for felony in gleaning in a field belonging to a farmer of that place, (which they insisted they had a right to do by law, and by the usage and custom of that parish); oath was made by the farmer before the justice, that these people had stolen his barley in the straw, and he now swore that he had forbidden them, and yet they took it by hands, and that he had suffered the loss of about twenty bushels of barley by their carrying it off two days together. Per curiam—"We are of opinion, said the justice, in this case, so far from acting with any design of oppression or malice, or any bad intention, has behaved with lenity, and it would be very wrong to punish a justice by the extraordinary method of an information, when he has acted fairly and impartially; therefore, we discharge the rule with costs, as stealing under the colour of leasing or gleaning is to be justified—there was no contest between the farmer and the poor at leasing; his only objection and his forbidding is confined to the stealing of it. As to the right of gleaning, it will be time enough to determine the point when it comes directly in question; but here the farmer had not abandoned his corn, and he has sworn that they stole it."

Gunpowder (a).

[16 Car. II. c. 21; 1 Jac. II. c. 8; 12 Geo. III. c. 61; 46 Geo. III. c. 121; 54 Geo. III. c. 152, c. 159; 1 Wm. IV. c. 44.]

Erecting powder mills near a town, a nuisance.

IT seemeth, that erecting powder mills, or keeping powder magazines near a town is a nuisance by the common law; for which an indictment or information will lie. In R. v. Williams, Easter, 12 Wm., there was an indictment against Roger Williams, for keeping four hundred barrels of powder near the town of Bradford, and he was convicted accordingly. And, in R. v. Taylor, Trinity, 15 Geo. II., 2 Str. 1167, the Court granted an information against the defendant as for a nuisance, on affidavits of his keeping great quantities of gunpowder near Maldon in Surry, to the endangering of the church and houses where he lived. (Or rather it should have been expressed to the endangering of the lives of his Majesty's subjects). See tit. Nuisance, Vol. III. p. 911, 912.

16 Car. I. c. 21. Who may make gunpowder.

By stat. 16 Car. I. c. 21, (passed in 1640, being the last statute of force in that King's reign), all subjects may take and sell gunpowder, and bring into the kingdom saltpetre, brimstone, or any other material for the making of it.

(a) See 2 Chit. Commercial Law, 337. As to Fireworks, see tit. Fireworks ante.

And, by a statute made in the first year of the reign of King James the second (which is also somewhat remarkable), it is enacted—"That if any person shall obtain a grant for the sole making or importing of gunpowder, shall incur a præmunire."

GUNPOWDER.

1 Jac. 2, c. 8.

By stat. 12 Geo. III. c. 61, s. 1, (which reduces into one and repeals all former acts relating to the making, keeping, and carrying of gunpowder), no person shall use, or cause to be used, any mill or other engine for making gunpowder in any place, except in mills and other places where the manufacture of gunpowder shall be actually carrying on at the time of the commencement of this act, or where it shall afterwards become lawful to carry on such manufacture by licence for that purpose as hereinafter directed, on pain of forfeiting all gunpowder manufactured otherwise, and 2*s.* for each pound thereof.

12 Geo. 3, c. 61.

In what places gunpowder may be made.

Act. 2. No person shall, for the making of gunpowder, use any mill or engine worked with a pestle, commonly called a pestle mill; on pain of forfeiting all gunpowder manufactured therein, and 2*s.* for each pound.

No pestle mill shall be used in making.

Act. 3. No person shall, in any mill or engine, make, at any one time, or any single pair of millstones, any quantity of gunpowder, or material to be made into gunpowder, exceeding forty pounds; on pain of forfeiting all above forty pounds, and also 2*s.* for each pound.

What quantity shall be made at one time.

Act. 5. Provided, that nothing in this act shall extend to the powder now erected in the parishes of Battle, Crowhurst, Saddlecomb, and Hail, in the county of Sussex, so far as relates to the making of such fine grained gunpowder only, as is known by the name of Battle powder.

Exception of Battle powder.

Act. 6. No person shall dry, or cause, &c., at any one time in any one house or place, used for the drying of gunpowder, any quantity exceeding one hundred weight; on pain of forfeiting all above that weight, and 2*s.* for each pound.

What quantity shall be dried at one time.

Act. 7. No person shall keep in any corning-house, drying-house, dust-house, or other place used in making gunpowder, or in any building adjoining or belonging thereto, (except magazines or storehouses constructed with stone or brick, and situate fifty yards at least from the gunpowder mill), any greater quantity of gunpowder than shall be necessary for the immediate work then carrying on in such house or other place; on pain of forfeiting all the gunpowder above such necessary quantity, and 2*s.* for each pound.

What quantity shall be kept in or near the place of making.

Act. 8. Every person and persons keeping or using any mill or other engine for making gunpowder, shall, besides the magazines or storehouses near their mills, have a good and sufficient magazine remote from their respective mills, for the purpose of receiving and safe keeping all the gunpowder made at such mills, as soon as the same can from time to time be conveniently removed thereto, (which last-mentioned magazine shall be constructed with brick or stone near the river Thames, and below Blackwall, or in any other convenient place to be licensed by the justices as hereinafter directed), on pain of forfeiting 25*l.* for every month during which he shall make gunpowder without having such magazine, and 5*l.* for every week during which he (not being hindered by stress of weather, or other just impediment), shall wilfully neglect or delay removing, with due diligence, gunpowder made at such mill from thence, or from the magazine or house adjoining thereto, to the magazine so to be situate remote from the mill.

Magazines to be kept remote from the mill.

Act. 10. Every such maker who shall keep, or permit to be kept, any charcoal within twenty yards of any mill or other engine for making gunpowder, or of any drying, corning, or dusting-house, or magazine, or storehouse adjoining thereto belonging, shall forfeit 5*l.* for every week during which it shall be so kept.

Charcoal not to be kept near the mill.

Act. 11. No person, being a dealer in gunpowder, shall keep at any one time more than two hundred pounds of gunpowder, and not being such, more than fifty pounds, in any house, mill, magazine, storehouse, warehouse, shop, cellar, yard, wharf, or other building or place occupied by him,

With permits gunpowder may be kept.

What quantities may be kept.

GUNPOWDER.

12 Geo. 3, c. 61.

(all buildings and places adjoining each other being deemed one house within the act), or on any river or other water (except in carriages loading or unloading, or passing on the land, or in ships, boats, or vessels loading or unloading, or passing on any river or other water, or detained there by the tide or bad weather), within the cities of London or Westminster, or within three miles of either of them; or within any other city, borough, or market town, or one mile thereof; or within two miles of any palace or houses of residence of the King, or any of the King's gunpowder magazines; or half a mile of any parish church; or in any other part of Great Britain, except in mills or other places at the commencement of this act used for the making of gunpowder, and in the places where it shall be lawful to make gunpowder, or to keep greater or unlimited quantities of gunpowder by force of this act; on pain of forfeiting all beyond the quantity hereby allowed to be kept, and the barrels in which such shall be, and also 2s. for every pound beyond such allowed quantity (a).

Sect. 12. Provided, that it shall be lawful for any person to keep, for the use of any mine or colliery, any quantity not exceeding three hundred pounds weight, in any magazine or warehouse, so as the same be within two hundred yards of such mine or colliery, and not within any of the limits hereinbefore particularly described.

The sessions to license the erecting of mills or magazines.

Sect. 13. And whereas it may be necessary to have some places appointed, in which it may be lawful to erect new mills or other engines for making gunpowder, with proper magazines and offices adjoining thereto, and to have magazines for keeping unlimited quantities of gunpowder in places where there are no mills; it shall therefore be lawful for the justices in sessions, from time to time, to license the erecting or having such mills and offices, or such magazines for keeping unlimited quantities in places not being within London or Westminster, or any other limits hereinbefore particularly described, the person applying having first given fourteen days' notice in writing of the intention to make such application, as also of the place or places proposed for such purposes respectively, to an overseer or churchwarden of the parish or place wherein it is proposed to erect such new mill and offices or magazine, or of an adjoining parish, if the place be extra-parochial; which overseer or churchwarden shall cause such notice to be publicly read on the Sunday next ensuing in the parish church after divine service.

Sect. 14. And if the justices in the said sessions shall refuse to grant such licence, or to appoint pieces of ground for magazines remote from mills, the party aggrieved may apply to the said justices then present for a special state of the case, and the justices shall certify such case, together with the proofs offered for and against the application, in order that the said case and proceedings may be removed by certiorari into the court of King's Bench; and the justices in their return to the certiorari shall state such special case. And if the court of King's Bench shall be of opinion that the justices ought not to have refused such licence or appointment, they shall order the justices to grant or to make such at their next sessions, and shall award costs on the writ of certiorari as they shall think fit.

No person liable to pay any penalty till six months after adjudication by justices.

Sect. 15. Provided, nevertheless, that no person shall be liable to any penalty or prosecution under this act for keeping unlimited quantities of gunpowder, without such licence of the justices, in any magazine remote from any gunpowder mill, and already built and used for that purpose, in any place not being within London and Westminster, and the other limits hereinbefore described, until the expiration of six calendar months after an

(a) The exception in this section against keeping more than certain quantities of gunpowder in places within certain limits, "or in any other part of Great Britain," following the specified places, is to be taken as a new division of locality; and if the offence be shewn to have been committed within the limits of that general provision, the information need not go on to negative that it was not within any of the places particularly excepted. R. v. Motters. l. B. & A. 362.

judication by the justices that the same is dangerous; and they shall not have power to make such adjudication, except on complaint to them by the householder of the parish or place in which the magazine shall be, and after summons of the owner and examination of witnesses.

Sect. 16. And the justices in sessions, on application by such maker, may point proper and convenient pieces of ground, not being in London or Westminster, or other the limits aforesaid, and not exceeding one acre in any one place, with the use of convenient roads thereto, on which they may erect magazines for keeping any quantity, after having agreed with the owner for the purchase of the same. And if such owner shall not agree, or by reason of any impediment cannot agree, the justices shall issue a warrant to the sheriff, to impanel and return a jury to appear before them at a time and place appointed in the warrant, who shall upon their oaths inquire into the true value of the said pieces of ground, with the use of such convenient roads thereto; and the justices may send for any persons interested, and examine any parties or witnesses upon oath; and the verdict of the jury shall be kept amongst the records of the sessions: and the judgment of the said justices thereon shall be final. And the sum of money so to be adjudged, not exceeding thirty years' purchase, shall be paid to the owner of the ground; and upon such payment, or in case of refusal to accept the money, then upon leaving the same with the justices for the benefit of the owner, the inheritance of the ground, and the use of the said roads thereto, shall be vested in the purchaser, his heirs and assigns, for the purpose aforesaid, and not otherwise.

Sect. 18. No person shall carry at any one time more than twenty-five barrels of gunpowder in any waggon, cart, or other carriage by land; or more than two hundred barrels in any barge, boat, or other vessel by water, except in vessels with gunpowder imported from, or to be exported to, any place beyond the sea, or going coastwise); and the barrels in which it shall be carried shall be close joined and hooped, without any iron about them, and so secured that no part of the gunpowder be scattered in the passage; and each barrel shall contain no more than one hundred pounds of gunpowder: and when conveyed by land shall be entirely closed in a leathern bag, or a bag commonly called a saltpetre bag; and every carriage in which gunpowder shall be conveyed by land shall have a complete covering of lead, painted cloth, tarpaulin, or wadmilt tilts over all the gunpowder therecontained: also no gunpowder shall be conveyed in any barge, boat, or other vessel by water, (except in vessels for importation, or exportation, or going coastwise as aforesaid), that hath not a close deck; and as soon as gunpowder is put on board such vessel, all such gunpowder shall be covered with raw hides or tarpaulins.—And all gunpowder carried in greater quantity or in other manner than is hereinbefore prescribed, and the barrels in which such gunpowder shall be, may be seized by any person, who shall have the same authority to remove such gunpowder and barrels, and for the purpose to use, during the space of twenty-four hours after seizure, the carriage or vessel in which such gunpowder shall be seized, and the tackle, beasts, and accoutrements belonging thereto, on paying a recompence for the use thereof, and to detain the same, as is hereinafter given to persons searching under a justice's warrant; and such seizure shall be for his use on conviction of the offender (a).

Sect. 19. And when any barge, boat, or vessel having stale, condemned, or returned gunpowder on board, arrives at the wharf, quay, or other place

What quantities shall be carried at one time.

) It must appear on a conviction upon this section, that the person to whom gunpowder is adjudged was the person who seized it. The justices have no jurisdiction to adjudge the forfeiture, unless upon a seizure; and for this purpose it should be made to appear that there was a seizure and a person seizing. Its being stated in the adjudicating part of a conviction, that the gunpowder is forfeited "to the use of G. I, the person who seized the same," is insufficient. R. v. Thomas Smith, 5 M. & S. 133.

Sect. 20. If any person having the care or management of any barge, boat, or other vessel, (except ships for importation, exportation, or going coastwise, as aforesaid), loaded with gunpowder, or any other person on board the same, shall bring, have, or use, or permit, &c., any charcoal or other combustible matter, or any fire or lighted candle, or shall smoke, or wittingly permit any person to smoke, on board the same, he shall forfeit 5*l*.

Sect. 21. But stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 152, repeals so much of this 12 Geo. III. c. 61, s. 21, as enacts, that no person shall load, take in, carry, or convey, in any waggon, cart, or other land-carriage laden with gunpowder, or in any barge, boat, or vessel laden with gunpowder on any river, (except in the case of vessels laden with gunpowder for importation from, or exportation to, places beyond sea, or going coastwise), any other lading of any kind whatsoever.

Stat. 12 Geo. III. c. 61, s. 22, provides, that none of the aforesaid provisions concerning the conveying, loading, or unloading, shall extend to any other carriage or vessel than such as shall carry a quantity of gunpowder exceeding one hundred weight.

Sect. 23. And any justice, on demand made and reasonable cause assigned upon oath, may issue his warrant for searching, in the day-time, any house, mill, magazine, storehouse, warehouse, shop, cellar, yard, wharf, or other place, or any carriage, ship, boat, or vessel, in which such gunpowder is suspected to be made, kept, or carried contrary to this act; and all gunpowder found on such search to be made, &c., contrary to this act, and also the barrels, shall be immediately seized by the searcher, who shall with all convenient speed remove the same to such proper place as he shall think fit; and, in case of gunpowder seized in any carriage or vessel, may use for the purpose of removal, during the space of twenty-four hours after seizure, such carriage or vessel, with the tackling, beasts, and accoutrements belonging thereto, (paying afterwards to the owner a sufficient recompence for the use thereof, to be settled by the justices before whom the complaint shall be heard), and may detain such gunpowder and barrels till it shall be adjudged on hearing before two such justices whether the same shall be forfeited.

Sect. 24. No master of any vessel in the Thames outward bound shall receive on board more than twenty-five pounds of gunpowder (except for the King's service) before the arrival of such vessel at or below Blackwall; and the master of every vessel coming into the Thames shall (except in case of the King's service) put on shore in proper places all the gunpowder on board above twenty-five pounds, either before the arrival of such vessel at Blackwall, or within twenty-four hours, (if the weather will permit), and all not afterwards have on board more than twenty-five pounds (except for the King's service), on pain of forfeiting all the gunpowder found on board above twenty-five pounds, and the barrels containing the same, and so 2s. for every pound above the quantity of twenty-five pounds.

Sect. 25. And the master, wardens, and assistants, of the corporation of Trinity-house of Deptford Strond, shall appoint searchers, who may, between sun-rising and sun-setting, enter any ship or vessel (except his Majesty's ships) in the Thames above Blackwall, and search for unlawful quantities of gunpowder; and shall have the same powers of seizing, removing to proper places, and retaining, all such gunpowder and barrels, as are hereinbefore given to persons searching by a justice's warrant.

Sect. 26. All penalties on this act shall be recoverable before two justices, on conviction of the offender by confession or oath of one witness, and be distributed, half to the King and half to the informer; and where the penalty is pecuniary, it shall be levied by distress and sale, rendering the overplus, after deducting the penalty and expenses; and for want of sufficient distress, the offender shall be committed to the house of correction, to be kept to hard labour not exceeding six months, nor less than one year.

Sect. 27. Prosecution to be commenced within fourteen days after seizure of the gunpowder, or commission of the offence, where there shall not be any seizure.

Sect. 29. Provided that this act shall not extend to any mills or other buildings erected for making gunpowder in any lands belonging to his Majesty, or to the keeping of gunpowder at any of his Majesty's storehouses or magazines, or to hinder the trial of gunpowder by his Majesty's officers, or the keeping of gunpowder at the magazines now erected at Barking Creekmouth, in the county of Essex, Erith Level in the county of Kent, or magazines near Liverpool, or the city of Bristol, or to the carriage of gunpowder to or from the King's magazines under a special order from the Lord of ordnance, or to the carriage of gunpowder with forces on their march, or with the militia during their annual exercise, or which shall be for the use of such forces or militia.

Sect. 30. Also, this act shall not extend to hinder any person from carrying an unlimited quantity of gunpowder in such close decked vessels, and in such manner as is hereinbefore directed, from any vessels lying below Blackwall, or from such magazines lying below Blackwall, and going to any place beyond sea or coastwise.

By stat. 46 Geo. III. c. 121, that part of stat. 1 Jac. II. c. 8, which prohibits the importation of gunpowder is repealed.

By 54 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 6, it is enacted, "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the said lord high admiral, or three or more of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid for the time being, and he and they is and are hereby authorized and empowered, from time to time, by order or notice in writing under his or their respective hand or hands, or the hand of his or their secretary, to prohibit the breaming of any ships or vessels, lighters, barges, boats, or other craft, at any place or places on shore, where it may to them seem proper and necessary to prohibit the same, and also to order at what place or places, within or near all any of such ports, harbours, havens, roads, roadsteads, sounds, channels, creeks, bays, and navigable rivers in this kingdom as aforesaid, no private vessels of war, transports or other private or merchant ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, shall come, or be laden with or having on board thereof any quantity or quantities of gunpowder, exceeding five pounds weight in the whole; and also to appoint fit and proper places, either afloat or on shore, where all gunpowder, exceeding five pounds weight in the whole, shall and may be left and deposited, by and from, or taken and received into, such ships or vessels, lighters, barges, boats, or other craft; all which orders, notices, and appointments of such places shall be notified in the London Gazette; and that the master-general or principal officers of his Ma-

1 Will. 4, c. 44.

By the stat. 1 Will. IV. c. 44, intituled An Act to regulate, for one year, the importation of arms, gunpowder, and ammunition into Ireland, and the making, removing, selling, and keeping of arms, gunpowder, and ammunition in Ireland, reciting, 'It is expedient that provision should be made for the further and more effectual attainment of the purposes of an act made in the third year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, for regulating the importation of arms, gunpowder, and ammunition into Ireland, and the making, removing, selling, and keeping of arms, gunpowder, and ammunition in Ireland, which will expire at the end of this present session of Parliament;' it is enacted, "That, from and after the commencement of this act, it shall not be lawful for any person to import or bring into Ireland any cannon, mortar, ordnance, blunderbuss, gun, pistol, or other arms, or any lock, stock, barrel, or other part of any gun, pistol, or other arms, or any sword, sword blade, bayonet, pike, pike head, spear, spear head, weapon of war, or any part of any such weapon, or any instrument serving the purposes of any such weapon, or any cannon balls, musket balls, or pistol balls, or any gunpowder, brimstone, saltpetre, or other material or ingredient used in the making of gunpowder, or any military accoutrements, without having first obtained a licence for that purpose, pursuant to the directions of this act, under the hand of the lord lieutenant, or her chief governor or governors of Ireland, or his or their chief secretary, or, in his absence, of his under secretary, for the time being, which licence shall specify the number and particular kind of arms, ordnance, guns, pistols, or other arms, or of locks, stocks, barrels, or other parts thereof, or pikes, swords, sword blades, bayonets, pikes, spears, spear heads, weapons of war, or parts of any such weapons or instruments serving the purposes of such weapons, or accoutrements, and the quantity of gunpowder, brimstone, saltpetre, or other material for making gunpowder, thereby licensed to be imported or brought."

No ordnance, arms, gunpowder, &amp;c., shall be imported into Ireland without licence from the lord lieutenant.

Sect. 2 provides, "That it shall be lawful for any subject of his Majesty coming into Ireland to land such arms as such subject shall have actually carried for personal defence, and as are usually carried for that purpose, and other, upon registering such arms, and the name and usual place of abode of such person, with the chief officer of the port where such person shall land, and obtaining from such officer a licence for landing the same, which licence shall be granted without any fee or reward."

Sect. 3 enacts, "That if any person shall, contrary to the provisions of this act, import or bring any cannon, mortar, ordnance, gun, blunderbuss, pistol, or other arms, or any stock, lock, barrel, or other part of any gun, pistol, blunderbuss, or other arms, or any balls, sword, sword blade, bayonet, pike, pike head, spear, spear head, weapon of war, or instrument serving the purposes of any such weapon, or any accoutrements, gunpowder or ammunition, brimstone or saltpetre, or other material for making gunpowder, without such licence for the importation thereof, as aforesaid, or if any ship, vessel, or boat shall be found in any port, harbour, or creek in Ireland, having on board any such article for the importation or bringing of which such licence shall not have been obtained, all such articles, and also such ship, vessel, or boat, with all her furniture and apparel, shall be forfeited to his Majesty, and shall and may be seized by any justice of the peace, or peace officer, or by any officer of his Majesty's excise or customs; and all such articles not licensed to be imported as aforesaid, shall, when so seized, be deposited in such place or places as shall be appointed for the purpose by the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland; and every importer or bringer thereof, whether owner thereof or not, shall, for every such importation or bringing, forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds; and the master or person commanding the ship or other vessel in which any such unlicensed article shall be imported or brought, or shall be found, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds; and any person so offending, may be arrested under the warrant of any justice of the peace, and committed by such justice to the common gaol of the county or place in which such offence shall be committed, there to remain until such offender enter into a recognizance before such or some other justice, with two sufficient sureties, in the sum of one hundred pounds, conditioned to abide such order or judgment as may by law be made or given against such offender in respect of such offence, until such offender shall be discharged by due course of law."

Sect. 4 enacts, "That, from and after the commencement of this act, no person shall make or manufacture any gunpowder in Ireland, nor shall keep any gunpowder, or any cannon or other ordnance, unless such person shall obtain a licence for such purposes respectively, under the hand of the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or his or their chief secretary, or, in his absence, of the under secretary, for the time being; and every such licence shall be in force for one year from the granting thereof, and no longer; and the place where such gunpowder is to be made or manufactured, and every store or place belonging to such manufacturer or other person, in which any gunpowder, cannon, or other ordnance is to be kept, shall be set forth and described in such licence, together with the name of the person superintending the work at the mills of any such maker

Persons may land arms for personal defence, on registering the same.

Arms, &c., imported without licence, to be forfeited, as also the importing vessels.

Penalty on importer, 100*l.*, and on master of vessel, 50*l.*

Offenders may be arrested, and bound before justice of peace with sureties.

No person in Ireland shall manufacture gunpowder, or keep gunpowder, cannon, or ordnance, without an annual licence of lord lieutenant, &c.

or manufacturer of gunpowder; and if such maker or manufacturer of gunpowder shall have any office or place of delivery separate from such mills, the name of the person to whom the gunpowder shall be consigned at such office, and the place where such office is situated, shall also be set forth and described in such licence; and if any person shall, after the commencement of this act, make or manufacture any gunpowder in Ireland, without having obtained such licence as is required by this act for that purpose, or if any person not duly authorized to manufacture, or to keep, or to sell, or deal in gunpowder, shall keep in his or their custody any greater quantity of gunpowder than two pounds weight, or if any person, not licensed to keep cannon or other ordnance, shall keep any such cannon or ordnance in his or her custody, every such person shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of fifty pounds; and all gunpowder, and all materials for making the same, and all cannon or other ordnance, found in the possession of, or in any house or other place belonging to such offender, shall be forfeited; and it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace to seize, or by warrant to cause to be seized, any gunpowder (exceeding the quantity of two pounds weight), or any cannon or ordnance, in the custody or possession of any person in Ireland, unless a licence for manufacturing, or keeping, or dealing in, or selling the same respectively, duly granted and in force, shall, upon demand, be produced by the person in whose custody or possession such gunpowder, cannon, or ordnance shall be, and shall be so seized."

Sect. 5 enacts, "That, from and after the commencement of this act, no person, not being duly licensed to manufacture gunpowder as aforesaid, shall deal in or sell gunpowder, by retail or otherwise, in Ireland, unless he shall have obtained a licence for that purpose, under the direction of this act, from the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or his or their chief secretary, or, in his absence, the under secretary, for the time being; and such licence shall be in force for one year from the granting thereof, and no longer; and any person who shall deal in or sell gunpowder, by retail or otherwise, without having obtained such licence as is required by this act, shall forfeit, for every time such person shall sell any gunpowder, the sum of fifty pounds; and all gunpowder, and every cask or vessel in which the same shall be contained, found in the possession of such person, shall be forfeited and seized by any justice of the peace, or any person authorized thereto by warrant from any such justice."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That no licence to deal in or sell gunpowder required by this act, shall be granted to any person not having been licensed under the said act of the third year of his Majesty's reign, unless the person applying for such licence shall produce a certificate under the hands of two justices of the peace, assembled at some quarter sessions of the peace for the county, or county of the city, or county of a town in which the person requiring such licence shall reside, or at some adjournment of such quarter sessions, or under the hand of the clerk of the peace at such sessions or adjournment, in pursuance of an order made at such sessions or adjournment, setting forth that the person applying for such licence is a proper person to be licensed to deal in and sell gunpowder: provided always, that, notwithstanding such certificate or any other matter, it shall be lawful for the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or such chief or under secretary, to refuse such licence, if he or they respectively shall think proper so to do."

Sect. 7 provides and enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful for the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or, in his absence, for his under secretary, for the time being, by an order in writing under his hand, from time to time, whenever, and so often as shall seem expedient, and for such period of time as shall be expressed in such order, to recal, annul, suspend, or prohibit the acting under the authority of any licence to deal in and sell gunpowder granted under this act, or under any act heretofore in force in that behalf; and the party to whom such order shall relate, shall be served with notice of the same by the delivery of a copy thereof to such party in person, or by a copy thereof being left at the shop or warehouse of such party, and the said order being shewn to some person above the age of twelve years, of or belonging to such party; and each service shall, by the person making the same, be verified by affidavit of each person in writing, before any justice of the peace, or magistrate having jurisdiction where the party so served shall reside; and such justice of the peace is hereby authorized, empowered, and required to administer an oath for the purpose of taking the said affidavit; and such affidavit, when sworn, shall be transmitted to the chief secretary, or, in his absence, to the under secretary of the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, together with the original order, the copy of which shall be so delivered or left; and any person so licensed and served with such order who shall, at any time whilst such order shall be in force, deal in or sell gunpowder, shall forfeit the sum of 500*l.*, and all gunpowder in the possession of such person; and such gunpowder so forfeited shall and may be seized to the use of his Majesty, by or under the warrant of any justice of the peace, or by any officer of his Majesty's revenue of customs or excise."

Sect. 8 enacts, "That whenever any maker of or dealer in gunpowder shall sell or dispose of any quantity of gunpowder to any person licensed to deal in or sell or to keep gunpowder, the person so selling or disposing of gunpowder, or his or her known clerk or manager, shall indorse on the licence of the person to whom the same shall be sold or disposed of, the quantity sold or disposed of, and the time when, and shall sign his name thereto, or shall, for every neglect therein, forfeit the sum of 20*l.*; and if any person shall sell or deliver any greater quantity of gunpowder than two pounds weight, to any person not producing a licence duly granted for the dealing in or selling gunpowder, or for the keeping of a greater quantity of gunpowder than two pounds weight, every person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit 20*l.*"

Sect. 9 enacts, "That it shall be lawful for the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or, in his absence, for his under secretary, upon the production of any licence for dealing in and selling gunpowder so indorsed, to grant a licence for removing and conveying the quantity of gunpowder mentioned in such indorsement from the person so selling the same to the person so licensed."

Sect. 10 enacts, "That if any person shall, within any period of two calendar months, sell or deliver to any one and the same person, not duly licensed to deal in or sell or to keep gunpowder, a greater quantity thereof than two pounds weight, every person so offending shall, for each such offence, forfeit the sum of 20*l.*"

Sect. 11 enacts, "That it shall not be lawful for any person to remove or cause to be removed from any part of Ireland, either by inland carriage or coastways, any cannon, mortar, ordnance, gun, pistol, or other arms, or any lock, stock, barrel, or other part of any gun, pistol, or other arms, or any balls or bullets, or any gunpowder exceeding the weight of two pounds, any brimstone or saltpetre, without a licence for removing and conveying the same, granted by the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or, in his absence, by his under secretary; and it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace or any officer of the revenue of customs or excise, upon information on oath, to search for and seize all such cannon, mortar, ordnance, gun, pistol, or other arms, locks, stocks, barrels, or other parts of arms, balls, bullets, gunpowder, or other articles hereinbefore mentioned, which shall be in progress of removal, or shall be removed, without such licence, or without producing such licence on demand of any justice of the peace, or of any officer of excise or customs, and the same shall be forfeited to his Majesty, together with the cart, car, or other vehicle, on which the same shall be put for conveyance, and every horse or other beast employed in drawing or carrying the same, and the ship, boat, or other vessel conveying the same; and every person who caused the same to be removed shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*

Sect. 12 provides, "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to prevent any person from carrying arms for the defence of his person, or for sporting, as by law he might before the passing of this act."

Sect. 13 enacts, "That it shall not be lawful for any person, not by law authorized to keep and carry arms, to keep any quantity of gunpowder whatever, whether such person shall or shall not have any licence relating to gunpowder; and that any person herein offending shall be dealt with as if he had not any licence."

Sect. 14 provides, "That it shall and may be lawful for any maker of and dealer in arms, in the cities or liberties of Dublin or Cork, being licensed as hereinafter mentioned, to send arms to persons in the said cities respectively, in the day time, either uncovered, or in packages conspicuously marked with the words* 'arms,' without obtaining a licence for so removing the same."

Sect. 15 enacts, "That every person licensed to deal in or sell gunpowder shall, within forty-eight hours after receiving any gunpowder by virtue of any licence for the removal thereof, give notice of the arrival thereof to the next justice of the peace or other magistrate; and thereupon it shall be lawful for such justice or magistrate to enter into the house of such person, and to view and examine such gunpowder, and the licence for the removal of such gunpowder, and the licence of such dealer, with the indorsement made thereon by the person who sold such gunpowder; and such person shall declare and shew to such justice or magistrate, if required, all the stock of gunpowder in his or her possession; and if any such person shall not give such notice, or shall not permit such justice or magistrate to view or examine such licences respectively, or such gunpowder, or shall not declare and shew to such justice or magistrate all his or her stock of gunpowder, every such person for each such offence shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*.; and if any gunpowder, not so declared or shewn, shall be found in the possession of such person, the same shall be forfeited, and shall be seized to the use of his Majesty, by or under the order of such justice or magistrate."

Sect. 16 enacts, "That if any licence to deal in, or sell, or to keep gunpowder, shall be made use of for procuring gunpowder for the use of any other person than the person named in such licence, or if any gunpowder bought in the name of any person so licensed shall, with the knowledge of such person, be carried, brought, or delivered to any other than the person so licensed, the person so licensed shall forfeit the sum of 200*l*.; and the licence before granted to such person shall be void."

Sect. 17 enacts, "That every maker or manufacturer of gunpowder, and every person dealing as a factor or agent in selling the same, in Ireland, shall, within thirty days after the commencement of this act, return an account to the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, or, in his absence, to the under secretary, of all the stock of gunpowder in his or her possession, describing the place or places where the same shall be kept, and the packages containing the same, and shall verify such return by affidavit at the foot of such return, to be sworn before any magistrate, and shall provide a book in which such quantity shall be entered; and shall, from time to time, in the first week of every calendar month, and also upon the completing the manufacture of any quantity or quantities of gunpowder, or receiving the same to be sold, (as the case may be), make a like return, verified as aforesaid, and like entry; and every such maker or manufacturer shall also enter separately in such book, an account of every parcel of gunpowder sold or disposed of, with the time when, and to whom; and it shall be lawful for any person authorized by the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or, in his absence, by his under secretary, at all reasonable times to have access to such book, and to examine the stock of such maker or seller of gunpowder, or such factor or agent, and compare and balance the same with the account kept in such book; and if it shall appear that any fraud had been committed, or that any gunpowder had been sold, sent, or disposed of contrary to the provisions of this act, the person licensed shall forfeit 50*l.*, and the licence to such person shall become void, and such person shall be disabled in future to make, manufacture, or sell gunpowder."

Sect. 18 enacts, "That if any maker or manufacturer of gunpowder, or collector or agent selling gunpowder, shall not make such returns as aforesaid, or shall not keep such book, or shall omit to make therein any entry required by this act, or shall refuse to permit any person thereto authorized to inspect the same, or to examine the stock of gunpowder of such maker, manufacturer, factor, or agent, every such offender shall, for every such offence, respectively forfeit the sum of 20*l.*"

Sect. 19 provides, "That every person duly licensed to manufacture gunpowder may send, at any time between sun-rise and sun-set, any quantity thereof to his office or place of delivery mentioned in the licence granted to him, or to his Majesty's stores, and not elsewhere, without obtaining a licence for the carriage or removal of the same; provided that, with every quantity of gunpowder so sent, the maker or his superintendent shall send a manifest, expressing the quantity sent, and whether in barrels, half barrels, or quarter barrels, and the places from which and to which it is sent, such manifest shall be dated and signed by the maker of such gunpowder, or his superintendent."

Sect. 20 enacts, "That if any greater quantity of gunpowder than what is expressed in such manifest, shall be so sent, or if the gunpowder therein mentioned shall be sent to any other place than to such office or place of delivery, or to his Majesty's stores, the same shall be forfeited to his Majesty, and the person sending the same shall forfeit 500*l.*"

Sect. 21 enacts, "That all gunpowder exceeding five pounds weight, which shall be removed from any part of Ireland, to any other part of the same, shall be made up in casks with the word 'gunpowder' marked thereon in large letters, upon pain of forfeiting the same to his Majesty; and that it shall be lawful for any person to seize and carry to his Majesty's stores, any quantity of gunpowder exceeding five pounds weight, and not made up and marked; and the person who shall have caused such gunpowder to be carried without being so made up or marked, shall forfeit, for every such offence, the sum of 500*l.*"

Sect. 22 enacts, "That no person shall make, construct, amend, repair, keep for or expose to sale in Ireland, any cannon or other ordnance, or any gun, musket, pistol, or other arms, or any lock, barrel, stock, or other part of any gun, pistol, or arms, or any bayonet, sword, sword blade, spear, spear head, pike, pike head, or instrument serving for a pike or pike head, or other military weapon, without a licence from the chief secretary of the said lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or, in his absence, his under secretary, which licence shall be granted to any known gunsmith or sword cutler, if it shall seem fit to such secretary or under secretary; and if any person shall make or construct, mend, alter, or repair, keep for or expose to sale, any cannon or other ordnance, or any gun, musket, pistol, or other arms, or any lock, barrel, stock, or other part of any gun, pistol, or other arms, or any bayonet, sword, sword blade, spear, spear head, pike, pike head, or instrument serving for a pike or pike head, or other military weapon, without having obtained such licence, every such article and with such person, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any justice of the peace or magistrate, or officer of customs or excise, or by any person authorized thereto by the warrant of any justice of the peace or magistrate, and every such offender shall forfeit a sum of 100*l.*; and such licence shall be of force for one year, and no longer, from the time of granting thereof."

Sect. 23 enacts, "That every person who shall make, repair, or sell any cannon, ordnance, gun, pistol, or other fire-arms, or any locks, barrel, stock, or other part of any gun, pistol, or other fire-arms, or any sword, bayonet, spear, pike head, spear, spear head, or instrument serving for a pike or pike head, or any other military weapon, shall keep a book, in which he or she shall enter or cause to be entered, a monthly account of all such articles made, sold, or repaired by such person, and to and for whom the same were sold or repaired, and the respective times when; and shall monthly return to the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or, in his absence, to his under secretary, a copy of such account, verified on oath before any magistrate; and it shall be lawful for any person empowered for that purpose by the chief secretary, or, in his absence, by his under secretary, at all reasonable times, on demand, to have access to such book to examine the same; and if any person making, repairing, or selling any such article, shall not keep such book, or shall not truly enter therein such account as aforesaid, or shall omit to make any such return as aforesaid, verified as aforesaid, or shall not, after demand, produce such book to such person as shall be authorized as aforesaid, or shall not permit such person to examine the same, every person offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit 20%."

Sect. 24 enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice of the peace or magistrate, to enter and search, or to grant a warrant to any person or persons to be by him named to enter and search, any house, place, ship, boat, or vessel where or in which such justice or magistrate shall, from information on oath, have reasonable grounds to suspect any arms, ammunition, or gunpowder, to be deposited for any purpose contrary to this act."

Sect. 25 enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, at any time, by order under his hand, or signified by the chief secretary, or, in his absence, by the under secretary, to annul and make void any licence granted under this act."

Sect. 26 enacts, "That all pecuniary forfeitures inflicted by this act, shall go and be paid to the use of his Majesty, his heirs, and successors, and may be recovered by information to be filed in the name of his Majesty's attorney-general, in any of his Majesty's courts of record in Dublin; and any forfeiture of any article or thing which by virtue of this act shall and may be seized, shall be sued for, recovered, and applied in the manner and form, and by the ways and means, and with the powers and authorities prescribed, directed, or appointed in and by any law relative to his Majesty's revenue of excise, as if the same were particularly mentioned and expressed, and re-enacted in this present act, with the like remedy of appeal to and for any party who shall think him or herself aggrieved or injured, as in and by any law relating to his Majesty's revenue of excise is provided."

Sect. 27 provides, "That it shall and may be lawful for the lord lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, at his and their discretion, to remit or mitigate any penalty or forfeiture sued for under this act, and to order the restoration of any ship, vessel, or boat, or of any arms, gunpowder, or ammunition, or other article, seized under the authority of this act."

Sect. 28 provides, "That in any case in which it shall be made appear to the satisfaction of the commissioner and assistant commissioners of customs acting in Dublin, or the collector of the customs at that port, or the collector of the customs at any other port in Ireland, that any seizure has been made of any ship, vessel, or boat, or of any arms, gunpowder, ammunition, or other article, or that any penalty or forfeiture has been incurred by the owners, or by the master or commander of any ship, vessel, or boat, or by any other person or persons, for any offence against this act, contrary to the intentions, and without the privity, consent, or concurrence of the person or persons liable in any manner to suffer by any such seizure, penalty, or forfeiture, it shall and may be lawful for such commissioner and assistant commissioners, and for any such collector of the customs as aforesaid, at the port in which such circumstances shall take place, to order any ships, vessels, or boats, to be restored in any such manner, and on such terms and conditions as such commissioner and assistant commissioners of customs, or as such collector of customs, shall think fit to direct, and also to remit or mitigate any penalty or forfeiture, as they shall see reason to acquit any party of blame in respect of such offence, or more or less to attribute the Commission of such offence to neglect of duty in any such party; and every forfeiture, and every penalty or part thereof so remitted, shall be null and void; and no suit or action shall be brought or maintained by any person whatever on account of any such seizure or detention, or of the imposing of any such forfeiture or penalty."

GUNPOWDER.

1 WILL. 4, c. 44.

Sect. 29 enacts, "That in case any action or suit shall be commenced against any person or persons for any matter or thing done or executed in pursuance of this act, such action or suit shall be commenced within three calendar months next after the alleged cause of action shall accrue; and the defendant or defendants in such action may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence, on any trial to be had thereon, and prove that the same was done under the authority of this act; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuited, or discontinue his or their action or prosecution, or if judgment shall be given against such plaintiff or plaintiffs, on demurrer or otherwise, such defendant or defendants shall have double costs awarded to him or them against such plaintiff or plaintiffs."

Limitation of actions.

Sect. 30 enacts, "That this act shall commence and take effect from the first day of this present session of Parliament, and shall be and remain in force for the term of one year from and after the passing thereof, and from thence until the end of the then next session of Parliament."

Commencement and continuance of act.

Sect. 31 enacts, "That this act may be altered, amended, or repealed by any act or acts to be made in this present session of Parliament."

Act may be amended.

The Habeas Corpus Act, 31 Car. II. c. 2, & 56 Geo. III. c. 100.

THE 31 Car. II. c. 2, is the most highly remedial act which stands upon statute book. 2 B. & P. 539.

The 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 1, recites, 'Whereas great delays have been used by sheriffs, gaolers, and other officers to whose custody any of the King's subjects have been committed for criminal, or supposed criminal, matters, in making returns of writs of habeas corpus to them directed, by standing out an alias and pluries habeas corpus, and sometimes more, and by other shifts, to avoid their yielding obedience to such writs, contrary to their duty and the known laws of the land, whereby many of the King's subjects have been, and hereafter may be, long detained in prison, in such cases where, by law, they areailable, to their great charges and vexation:

Sect. 2. 'For the prevention whereof, and the more speedy relief of all persons imprisoned for any such criminal, or supposed criminal, matters; it is enacted, "That whensoever any person or persons shall bring any habeas corpus directed unto any sheriff or sheriffs, gaoler, minister, or other person whatsoever, for any person in his or their custody, and the said writ shall be served upon the said officer, or left at the gaol or prison with any of the under officers, under keepers, or deputy of the said officers or keepers, that the said officer or officers, his or their under officers, under keepers, or deputies, shall, within three days after the service thereof as aforesaid, (unless the commitment aforesaid were for treason or felony, plainly and specially expressed in the warrant of commitment), upon payment or tender of the charges of bringing the said prisoner, to be ascertained by the judge or court that awarded the same, and indorsed upon the said writ, not exceeding 12*d.* per mile, and upon security given by his own bond to pay the charges of carrying back the prisoner, if he shall be remanded by the court or judge to which he shall be brought according to the true intent of this present act, and that he will not make any escape by the way, make return of such writ; and bring, or cause to be brought, the body of the party so committed or restrained, unto or before the lord chancellor, or lord keeper of the great seal of England for the time being, or the judges or barons of the said court from whence the said writ shall issue, or unto and before such other person or persons before whom the said writ is made returnable, according to the command thereof; and shall then likewise certify the true causes of his detainer or imprisonment, unless the commitment of the said party be in any place beyond the distance of twenty miles from the place or places where such court or person is or shall be residing; and if beyond the distance of twenty miles, and not above one hundred miles, then within the space of ten days, and if beyond the distance of one hundred miles, then within the space of twenty days, after such delivery aforesaid, and not longer."

Sect. 3. "And to the intent that no sheriff, gaoler, or other officer, may pretend ignorance of the import of any such writ;" it is enacted, "That all such writs shall be marked in this manner, per statutum tricesimo primo Caroli Secundi Regis, and shall be signed by the person that awards the same; and if any person or persons shall be or stand committed or detained as aforesaid, for any crime, unless for felony or treason plainly expressed in the warrant of commitment, in the vacation time, and out of term, it shall and may be lawful to and for the person or persons so committed or detained (other than persons convict or in execution by legal process) or any one on his or their behalf, to appeal or complain to the lord chancellor or lord keeper, or any one of his Majesty's justices, either of the one bench or of the other, or the barons of the Exchequer of the degree of the coif; and the said lord chancellor, lord keeper, justices, or barons, or any of them, upon view of the copy or copies of the warrant or warrants of commitment and detainer, or otherwise upon oath made that such copy or copies were denied to be given by such person or persons in whose custody the prisoner or prisoners is or are detained, are hereby authorized and required, upon request made in writing by such person or persons, or any on his, her, or their behalf, attested and subscribed by two witnesses who were present at the delivery of the same, to award and grant an habeas corpus under the seal of such court whereof he shall then be one of the judges, to be directed to the officer or officers in whose custody the party so committed or detained shall be, returnable immediate before the said lord chancellor, or lord keeper, or such justice, baron, or any other justice or baron of the degree of the coif of any of the said courts; and upon service thereof as aforesaid, the officer or officers, his or their under officer or under officers, under eeper or under keepers, or their deputy, in whose custody the party is so committed or detained, shall, within the times respectively before limited, bring such prisoner or prisoners before the said lord chancellor or lord keeper, or such justices, barons, or one of them, before whom the said writ made returnable, and in case of his absence, before any other of them, with the return of such writ, and the true causes of the commitment and detainer; and thereupon, within two days after the party shall be brought before them, the said lord chancellor or lord keeper, or such justice or person before whom the prisoner shall be brought as aforesaid, shall discharge the said prisoner from his imprisonment, taking his or their recognizance, with one or more surety or sureties, in any sum according to their discretions, having regard to the quality of the prisoner and nature of the offence, for his or their appearance in the court of King's Bench the term following, or at the next assizes, sessions, or general gaol-delivery of and for such county, city, or place where the commitment was, or where the offence was committed, or in such other court where the said offence is properly cognizable, as the case shall require, and then shall certify the said writ with the return thereof, and the said recognizance or recognizances to the said court where such appearance is to be made; unless it shall appear unto the said lord chancellor or lord keeper, or justice or justices, or person or barons, that the party so committed is detained upon a legal process, order, or warrant, out of some court that hath jurisdiction of criminal matters, or by some warrant signed and sealed with the hand and seal of any of the said justices or barons, or some justice or justices of the peace, for such matters or offences for the which by the law the prisoner is not deliverable."

Sect. 4 provides and enacts, "That if any person shall have wilfully neglected, by the space of two whole terms after his imprisonment, to pray a habeas corpus for his enlargement, such person so wilfully neglecting shall not have any habeas corpus to be granted in vacation time, in pursuance of this act."

Persons neglecting two terms to pray a habeas corpus, shall have none in vacation time, in pursuance of this act.

Sect. 5 enacts, "That if any officer or officers, his or their under officer or under officers, under keeper or under keepers, or deputy, shall neglect or refuse to make the returns aforesaid, or to bring the body or bodies of the prisoner or prisoners, according to the command of the said writ, within the respective times aforesaid, or upon demand made by the prisoner, or person in his behalf, shall refuse to deliver, or within the space of six hours after demand shall not deliver, to the persons so demanding, a true copy of the warrant or warrants of commitment and detainer of such prisoner, which he and they are hereby required to deliver accordingly; all and every the head gaolers and keepers of such prisons, and such other person whose custody the prisoner shall be detained, shall, for the first offence, be fined to the prisoner or party grieved the sum of 100*l.*, and for the second offence the sum of 200*l.*, and shall and is hereby made incapable to hold or execute his said office; the said penalties to be recovered by the prisoner or party grieved, his executors or administrators, against such offender, his executors or administrators, by any action of debt, suit, bill, plaint, or information, in any of the King's courts at Westminster, wherein noessoign, protection, privilege, injunction, wager of law, or stay of prosecution by non vult ulterius prosecute, or otherwise, shall be admitted or allowed, or any more than one imparlance; and any recovery or judgment in the suit of any party grieved shall be a sufficient conviction for the first offence; and any after recovery or judgment at the suit of a party grieved for any offence after the first judgment, shall be a sufficient conviction to bring the officers or person within the said penalty for the second offence."

Officers how to be proceeded against for not obeying such writs.

Sect. 6. "For the prevention of unjust vexation by reiterated commitments for the same offence," enacts, "That no person or persons, which shall be delivered, or set at large, upon any habeas corpus, shall, at any time hereafter, be again imprisoned or committed for the same offence, by any person or persons whatsoever, other than by the legal order and process of law."

Persons set at large not to be re-committed but by order of court.

Sect. 7 provides and enacts, "That if any person or persons shall be committed for high treason or felony, plainly and specially expressed in the warrant of commitment, upon his prayer or petition in open court, the first week of the term, or first day of the sessions of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, to be brought to his trial, shall not be indicted some time in the next term, sessions of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery. after such commitment, it shall and may be lawful to and for the judges of the Court of King's Bench, and justices of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, and they are hereby required, upon motion to them made in open court, the last day of the term, sessions, or gaol delivery, either by the prisoner, or any one in his behalf, to set at liberty the prisoner upon bail, unless it appear to the judges and justices, upon oath made, that the witnesses for the King could not be produced the same term, sessions, or general gaol delivery; and if any person or persons committed as aforesaid, upon his prayer or petition, in open court, the first week of the term, or first day of the sessions of oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery, to be brought to his trial, shall not be indicted and tried the second term, sessions of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, after his commitment, or upon his trial shall be acquitted, he shall be discharged from his imprisonment."

Sect. 8 provides, "That nothing in this act shall extend to discharge out of prison any person charged in debt, or other action, or with process in any civil cause, but that, after he shall be discharged of his imprisonment for such his criminal offence, he shall be kept in custody according to the law, for such other suit."

Sect. 9 provides and enacts, "That if any person or persons, subjects of this realm, shall be committed to any prison, or in custody of any officer or officers whatsoever for any criminal, or supposed criminal matter, that the said person shall not be removed from the said prison and custody into the custody of any other officer or officers, unless it be by habeas corpus, or some other legal writ; or where the prisoner is delivered to the constable, or other inferior officer, to carry such prisoner to some common gaol, or where any person is sent, by order of any judge of assize, or justice of the peace, to any common workhouse or house of correction, or where the prisoner is removed from one prison or place to another within the same county, in order to his or her trial or discharge in due course of law, or in case of sudden fire or infection, or other necessity; and if any person or persons shall, after such commitment aforesaid, make out and sign, or countersign, any warrant or warrants for such removal aforesaid, contrary to this act; as well he that makes, or signs, or countersigns, such warrant or warrants, as the officer or officers that obey or execute the same, shall suffer and incur the pains and forfeitures in this act before mentioned, both for the first and second offence respectively, to be recovered in manner aforesaid by the party grieved."

Sect. 10 provides and enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any prisoner and prisoners as aforesaid to move and obtain his or their habeas corpus, as well out of the High Court of Chancery, or Court of Exchequer, as out of the Courts of King's Bench or Common Pleas, or either of them; and if the said lord chancellor or lord keeper, or any judge or judges, baron or barons, for the time being, of the degree of the chief, of any of the Courts aforesaid, in the vacation time, upon view of the copy or copies of the warrant or warrants of commitment or detainer, or upon

CORPUS, &c.
31 Car. 2, c. 2.

Sect. 11 declares and enacts, "That an habeas corpus, according to the true intent and meaning of this act, may be directed and run into any county palatine, the cinque ports, or other privileged places, within the kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, or town of Berwick upon Tweed, and the islands of Jersey or Guernsey; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Counties palatine and privileged places.

Sect. 17 provides and enacts, "That no person or persons shall be sued, impleaded, molested, or troubled, for any offence against this act, unless the party offending be sued, or impleaded for the same within two years, at the most, after such time wherein the offence shall be committed, in case the party grieved shall not be then in prison; and if he shall be in prison, then within the space of two years after the decease of the person imprisoned, or his or her delivery out of prison, which shall first happen."

Prosecutions for offences, within what time to be made.

Sect. 18. "And, to the intent no person may avoid his trial at the assizes, or general gaol delivery, by procuring his removal before the assizes, at such time as he cannot be brought back to receive his trial there," it is enacted, "That, after the assizes proclaimed for that county where the prisoner is detained, no person shall be removed from the common gaol upon any habeas corpus, granted in pursuance of this act, but, upon any such habeas corpus, shall be brought before the judge of assize in open court, who is thereupon to do what to justice shall appertain."

After the assizes proclaimed, no prisoner to be removed, but before the judge of assize.

Sect. 19 provides, nevertheless, "That, after the assizes are ended, any person or persons detained may have his or her habeas corpus, according to the direction and intention of this act."

Sect. 20 enacts, "That if any information, suit, or action, shall be brought or exhibited against any person or persons for any offence committed or to be committed against the form of this law, it shall be lawful for such defendants to plead the general issue, that they are not guilty, or that they owe nothing, and to give such special matter in evidence to the jury that shall try the same, which matter being pleaded had been good and sufficient matter in law to have discharged the said defendant or defendants against the said information, suit, or action, and the said matter shall be then as available to him or them, to all intents and purposes, as if he or they had sufficiently pleaded, set forth, or alleged the same matter in bar or discharge of such information, suit, or action."

In suits for offences against this law, the defendants may plead the general issue, &c.

Sect. 21. "And, because many times persons charged with petty treason or felony, or as accessaries thereunto, are committed upon suspicion only, whereupon they are bailable, or not, according as the circumstances making out that suspicion are more or less weighty, which are best known to the justices of peace that committed the persons, and have the examinations before them, or to other justices of the peace in the county;" it is enacted,

Persons committed as accessaries before, to petty treason or felony, shall not be removed or bailed otherwise than before this act made.

"That where any person shall appear to be committed by any judge or justice of the peace, and charged as accessory before the fact to any petty treason or felony, or upon suspicion thereof, or with suspicion of petty treason or felony, which petty treason or felony shall be plainly and specially expressed in the warrant of commitment, that such person shall not be removed or bailed by virtue of this act, or in any other manner than they might have been before the making of this act."

The 56 Geo. III. c. 100, s. 1 enacts, "That where any person shall be confined or restrained of his or her liberty (otherwise than for some criminal or supposed criminal matter, and except persons imprisoned for debt or by process in any civil suit) within that part of Great Britain called England, dominion of Wales, or town of Berwick upon Tweed, or the isles of Jersey, Guernsey, or Man, it shall and may be lawful for any one of the barons of the Exchequer, of the degree of the coif, as well as for any one of the justices of one bench or the other; and where any person shall be so confined in Ireland, it shall and may be lawful for any one of the barons of the Exchequer, or of the

Sect. 2 enacts, "That if the person or persons to whom any writ of habeas corpus shall be directed according to the provision of this act, upon service of such writ, either by the actual delivery thereof to him, her, or them, or by leaving the same at the place where the party shall be confined or restrained, with any servant or agent of the person or persons so confining or restraining, shall wilfully neglect or refuse to make a return or pay obedience thereto, he, she, or they shall be deemed guilty of a contempt of the court, under the seal whereof such writ shall have issued; and it shall be lawful to and for the said justice or baron, before whom such writ shall be returnable, upon proof made by affidavit of wilful disobedience of the said writ, to issue a warrant under his hand and seal, for the apprehending and bringing before him, or before some other justice or baron of the same court, the person or persons so wilfully disobeying the said writ, in order to his, her, or their being bound to the King's Majesty, with two sufficient sureties, in such sum as in the warrant shall be expressed, with condition to appear in the court of which the said justice or baron is a judge, at a day in the ensuing term to be mentioned in the said warrant, to answer the matter of contempt with which he, she, or they are charged; and in case of neglect or refusal to become bound as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such justice or baron to commit such person or persons so neglecting or refusing to the jail or prison of the court of which such justice or baron shall be a judge, there to remain until he, she, or they shall have become bound as aforesaid, or shall be discharged by order of the Court in term time, or by order of one of the justices or barons of the Court in vacation; and the recognizance or recognizances to be taken thereupon, shall be returned and filed in the same Court, and shall continue in force until the matter of such contempt shall have been heard and determined, unless sooner ordered by the Court to be discharged; provided, that if such writ shall be awarded so late in the vacation by any one of the said justices or barons, that, in his opinion, obedience thereto cannot be conveniently paid during such vacation, the same shall and may, at his discretion, be made returnable in the Court of which the said justice or baron shall be a justice or baron, at a day certain in the next term; and the said Court shall and may proceed thereupon, and award process of contempt in case of disobedience thereto, in like manner as upon disobedience to any writ originally awarded by the said Court; provided also, that if such writ shall be awarded by the Court of King's Bench, or the Court of Common Pleas, or Court of Exchequer, in the said countries respectively, which last-mentioned Court shall have like power to award such writs as the respective Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas in each of the said countries now have in term, but so late that, in the judgment of the Court, obedience thereto cannot be conveniently paid during such term, the same shall and may, at the discretion of the said Court, be made returnable at a day certain in the then next vacation, before any justice or baron of the degree of the coif, or if in Ireland, before any justice or baron of the same Court, who shall and may proceed thereupon in such manner as by this act is directed concerning writs issuing in and made returnable during the vacation."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That the several provisions made in this act touching the making writs of habeas corpus, issuing in time of vacation, returnable into the said Courts, or for making such writs, awarded in term time, returnable in vacation, as the cases may respectively happen, and also for making wilful disobedience thereto a contempt of the Court, and for issuing warrants to apprehend and bring before the said justices or barons, or any of them, any person or persons wilfully disobeying any such writ, and, in case of neglect or refusal to become bound as aforesaid, for committing the person or persons so neglecting or refusing to jail as aforesaid, respecting the recognizances to be taken as aforesaid, and the proceeding or proceedings hereon, shall extend to all writs of habeas corpus awarded in pursuance of the said act passed in England in the thirty-first year of the reign of king Charles the Second, or of the said act passed in Ireland in the twenty-first and twenty-second years of his present Majesty, and hereinbefore recited, in as ample and beneficial a manner as if such writs, and the said cases arising hereon, had been hereinbefore specially named and provided for respectively."

The writ does not issue as a matter of course, but must be grounded on affidavit, upon which the Court will exercise their discretion, whether or not the writ shall issue. Hobhouse's case, 2 Chit. Rep. 207; 3 B. & A. 420, S. C.; see 1 Chit. Crim. Law, 123, 124. The application should be supported by better affidavits than the prisoner's. Cald. 246; 1 Leach, 255, S. C.

In the case of delay of prosecution, the Court will in general immediately discharge the prisoner on bail. R. v. Wyndham, 1 Stra. 4; and see the 6th section of the statute of Charles, ante, p. 1080; 1 Ventr. 346.

Ill health is not of itself a sufficient ground to induce the Court to interfere. 1 Stra. 4, 5; 1 Leach, C. L. 117; but see 1 Stra. 9.

If a corpus delicti appear on the depositions, (which the Court always look to, R. v. Horner, 1 Leach, C. C. 270), the Court will remand the prisoner, though the warrant of commitment be informal. R. v. Marks, 3 East, 2; R. v. Greenwood, 2 Stra. 1138; R. v. Acton, 2 Stra. 851; 1 B. & C. 2.

Where it is uncertain, both from the depositions and commitment, whether a treason or felony has been committed by the prisoner, if it appears that the defendant has been guilty of a great misdemeanor, the Court will require ample sureties. And. 64; Comb. 6.

If there be no warrant of commitment shewing the crime, bail will be invariably accepted; 2 Wils. 158; Salk. 347; and for this reason, among others, an offender should always be carried before a justice of the peace to be committed.

When a party is liable to be detained on a criminal charge, the Court will not inquire into the manner in which the caption was effected. R. v. Marks, 3 East, 157; Ex parte Krans, 1 B. & C. 258. In a late case, where a party, against whom a true bill for perjury had been found, and a warrant for her apprehension granted, was apprehended abroad, and brought here in custody, and committed to prison for want of bail, the Court refused to discharge her on habeas corpus, on the ground that she had been improperly apprehended in a foreign country. Ex parte Scott, 9 B. & C. 446.

A habeas will not be granted to bring a party before the Court, who has been committed by the House of Lords or Commons. Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 1.

And a prisoner confined in Newgate, for high treason in North America, who is only bailable before the King's Bench or under a special commission, cannot be admitted to bail under the habeas corpus act, by justices of gaol delivery. R. v. Platt, 1 Leach, 157; Forbes, 101; 2 Stra. 848.

And the Court will not grant the writ to bring up a prisoner under sentence of imprisonment for a misdemeanor to enable him to shew cause in person against a rule for a criminal information. R. v. Perkins, 3 B. & A. 579, n.

It is said that a person committed by rule of Court cannot have this writ. Bac. Ab. Hab. Corp. (B 4); Com. Dig. Hab. Corp. (C); 8 T. R. 324.

No habeas lies for an alien enemy. 2 W. Blac. 1324; 2 Burr. 765.

If a writ of habeas be granted on the ground that the party has been illegally committed by a magistrate, the judge will not make it a part of the rule for issuing the writ, that the party shall not bring an action against the magistrate. Ex parte Hill, 3 C. & P. 225.

How obtained, its form, &c.

How obtained, and its Form, &c.]—In term time, the writ may be obtained in the Courts of Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer; in vacation, from the Lord Chancellor, or one of the Judges. 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 2, ante, p. 1078.

The application for the writ must be in writing, attested and subscribed by two witnesses; and a copy of the warrant of commitment must be produced before the Court or judge, or an oath made that such copy was refused. 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 3, ante, p. 1078. Huntley v. Luscombe, 2 B. & P. 530.

We have already seen that the application must be supported by affidavit, ante, p. 1083.

In term time, the application is made by the prisoner's counsel; in vacation, by his attorney.

When the application is made to a judge at chambers, he grants his fiat, upon which the clerk in court makes out the habeas corpus, and delivers it to the prisoner's attorney.

As to the form of the writ itself, in general, see 1 Chit. Crim. Law, 125-6. It must not be directed in the disjunctive. R. v. Fowler, 1 Salk. 350. It should be directed to the officer in whose custody the prisoner actually is. Godb. 44; Bac. Ab. Hab. Corp. 66. It must be subscribed by the judge awarding it. R. v. Roddam, Cowp. 672.

Service of writ, and proceedings on.

What to be done
by gaoler, &c.

Service and Return &c. of Writ, and Proceedings on]—We have already seen the provisions of the 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 2, which require the party detaining the prisoner in custody after the writ of habeas has been served on the gaoler, &c., or left at the gaol or prison, (unless the commitment is for treason or felony, plainly and specially expressed in the warrant of commitment), upon payment or tender of the charges of bringing up and giving security for the charges of bringing back the prisoner, if he shall be remanded, (55 Geo. III. c. 50), and that he will not make any escape, to make return of the writ, and bring the prisoner before the lord chancellor, or lord keeper for the time being, or the judges or barons of the Court from whence the writ of habeas corpus issued, or the other magistrates before whom it was made returnable, and at the same time to certify the causes of the detainer, &c., within a certain time, under a heavy penalty for omission, ante, p. 1078.

Service on gaoler.

We have seen that the 5th section of the statute of Charles, (ante, p. 1079), imposes a penalty on officers not obeying writs of habeas corpus. The construction of this section is, that, if the governor of the gaol be present, there is then no deputy or under-keeper on whom a service of the demand can be made; but if the governor be not present, then the deputy may be served; and if the deputy have no deputy, then, in the absence of the deputy, service may be on the turnkey, or may be left at the gaol: for it is the duty of the governor to leave some person in his place. But if the gaoler be in the gaol, and accessible, the demand must be made on him; if he be not accessible, it may be on the deputy. And, at all events, the demand should be served in such a way that the person to whom it is delivered shall understand its nature; and where the principal is (as in this case he was) within the gaol, some pains should be taken that it should come to his hands. Huntley v. Luscombe, 2 B. & P. 530.

When the body is returned by the officer to whom the writ is directed, he is to certify the day and cause of the caption (a) and detainer, as in case of an excuse for not bringing the individual. Vaugh. 137; Bac. Abr. Hab. Corp. (B 9). At the same time, the magistrate, in obedience to a certiorari usually issued from the crown office with the habeas corpus, returns the depositions upon which the commitment was founded, in order that the Court may be furnished with the means of judging in what way they should dispose of the prisoner. 3 East, 157. But where the party is in custody under the sentence of a Court of competent jurisdiction to try his offence, it is sufficient to return that fact, without stating the particulars of the original charge against him; 1 East, 306; nor, if the commitment were made out by order of a Court of record, is it necessary to set it forth in its precise language, as must be done when it is merely given under the hand of an individual magistrate. 3 Salk. 92; 1 Chit. C. L. 127. The return will not be invalid for mere want of form, if it disclose a good cause of detainer. R. v. Bethel, 5 Mod. 19. The return should always shew a good cause of detainer, and, in some cases, the proof. R. v. Nash, 4 B. & A. 295; R. v. Deyel, Id. 243; R. v. Souden, Id. 294.

The return to writ.

A neglect to make the return may be prosecuted by attachment; R. v. Winton, 5 T. R. 89; or, if the return be false, by an action at the suit of the prisoner, or by indictment. Salk. 349; Bac. Abr. Hab. Corp. 6.

Neglect to return.

The truth of the return, in criminal cases, cannot be controverted. 2 Hawk. P. C. 113. It may in civil cases, as in an information in the Exchequer, for penalties for smuggling, &c. Ex parte Beeching, 6 D. & R. 209; 1 B. & C. 136, S. C.

Truth of return.

Upon the return, the prisoner's counsel may move to file it, and to have the prisoner called into Court and the return read, and, after which, the counsel may argue for the prisoner's discharge. The judge before whom the prisoner is brought is, within two days, to discharge him from imprisonment, on proper sureties for his appearance, if the cause be bailable, and if it be not, then he is to remand him.

Filing return, &c.

Moving to discharge.

It has been ruled, that the King's Bench may remand him to the same gaol from whence he came, and order him to be brought up from time to time, until they have determined to discharge or detain him; Bac. Abr. Hab. Corp. 13; or may, during a reasonable time, bail the prisoner de die in diem, until they have come to a decision. 5 Mod. 19; Bac. Abr. Hab. Corp. (B 13).

Remanding accused.

Where the Court think, upon hearing the affidavits on his behalf, that there is probable ground for his being discharged or bailed for a felony, if he be unable to defray the expense of being brought to Westminster for that purpose, the Court will grant a rule to shew cause why he should not be bailed by a magistrate in the country, with a certiorari to return the depositions before them. 1 B. & A. 209; 6 M. & S. 108.

Bailing by mag's. in country.

If the Court or judge determine that the party shall be released from custody, he must thereupon enter into a recognizance to appear on his trial; and the writ, the return, and the recognizance must be certified into the Court where the trial is to take place. 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 3, ante, p. 1078.

Recognizance, &c.

The number, sufficiency, and amount of bail in general, have been already considered ante, Bail, and the observations there will, for the most part, apply here. The rule is, where the offence is prima facie great, to require good bail; moderation, nevertheless, is to be observed, and such bail only is to be required as the party is able to procure; for, otherwise, the allowance of bail would be a mere colour for imprisoning the party on the charge: 2 Wils. 159; nor will the Court, at the instance of the prosecutor, increase the amount of the bail after they have once been taken. 2 Chit. Rep. 109. In bailing felonies, the Court of King's Bench invariably requires four sureties. R. v. Shaw, 6 D. & R. 154.

III. Habeas Corpus ad deliberandum et recipiendum, and Habeas Corpus cum Causa.

Habeas corpus ad deliberandum et recipiendum.

THE writ of habeas corpus ad deliberandum et recipiendum lies to remove a prisoner to take his trial in the county where the offence was committed. Bac. Abr. Hab. Corp. (A).

By this writ, a secretary of state may send a prisoner charged with having committed an offence in Ireland to that part of the kingdom to take his trial; or, if the crime was perpetrated in England, and he is taken in Ireland, may have him brought here by a similar process. 3 Esp. 174, where see form of warrant. When a defendant is in execution at the King's suit, he cannot be brought up by habeas corpus, to be charged with an indictment, without notice to the attorney-general. 2 Barnard. 114.

Habeas corpus cum causa.

The writ of habeas corpus cum causa may, in the Court of King's Bench, be issued by the bail of a prisoner who has been taken upon a criminal accusation, in order to render him in their own discharge. Tidd, Pract. 9th ed. 287.

Exoneretur on ball piece.

Upon the return of this writ, the Court will cause an exoneratus to be entered on the bail piece, and remand the defendant to his former custody.

But the Court of Common Pleas has no such jurisdiction. Bennett v. Kinnear, 3 Moore, 259; 1 Bing. 221, S. C.

9 Ann. c. 23.
Commissioners

Licensing and duty.

BY stat. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 1, the King may appoint five commissioners for regulating hackney coaches within the bills of mortality.

Which commissioners shall, under hand and seal, license hackney coaches within the cities of London and Westminster, and suburbs thereof, and other places within the bills of mortality, not exceeding one thousand, (and by stat. 42 Geo. III. c. 78, one hundred additional); and on every licence shall be reserved 5s. a-week, (and by stat. 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 27, s. 1, an additional duty of 5s. a-week), to be paid monthly.

By 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 3; 10 Ann. c. 19, s. 158; 12 Geo. I. c. 12, s. 15; they shall also license hackney chairs within the said liberties, not exceeding four hundred; reserving a rent of 10s. a year, to be paid quarterly.

Number of hackney coaches,
&c.

By 54 Geo. III. c. 147, s. 15, they may license one thousand one hundred hackney carriages, of which two hundred may be chariots, and the remainder coaches.

By 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 2, they may, with the consent of the lords of his Majesty's treasury, or any three of them, license two hundred hackney chariots, in addition to the number allowed by 54 Geo. III. c. 147, s. 15.

Cabriolets.

By 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 4, they may, with the consent and approbation, in writing, of the lords of his Majesty's treasury, or any three of them, license any number of carriages with two wheels, and drawn by one horse, as shall be specified in such approbation; the said chariots and carriages with two wheels to be subject to the same licences, orders, rules, regulations, penalties, forfeitures, &c., as hackney coaches are liable to, either by this or any other act relating thereto.

Same licence to serve for a coach or chariot.

By stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 125, s. 1, the party holding a licence may drive either a hackney coach or chariot under the same licence, provided he do not drive more than one carriage under the same licence at the same time.

Holder of licence

Sect. 2 enacts, "That if any holder of a licence already or in future to be duly granted by the commissioners of hackney coaches for the time being, or the major part of them, to drive a hackney coach or chariot, shall, from and after the passing of this act, use or drive, or cause to be used or driven for hire, under such licence, more than one carriage, (whether coach or chariot), at one and the same time, within the cities of London or Westminster, or the suburbs of the same respectively, or any of the parishes or places comprised within the weekly bills of mortality, or any other place or places within which, by any of the laws now in force, hackney coaches and chariots are to be driven, he or she shall, upon being thereof convicted, on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before the major part of the said commissioners, forfeit and pay, for every such offence, a penalty not exceeding 10*l.*, in the discretion of the major part of the said commissioners; one half of which forfeiture and penalty shall go to his Majesty, and the other half to the informer, to be levied and recovered as any penalty may be levied and recovered under any act of Parliament relating to hackney coaches; or otherwise it shall be lawful for the major part of the said commissioners to revoke the licence of the person so offending."

By stat. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 4, no person shall drive or let to hire any hackney coach, without licence, on pain of 5*l.*; nor shall carry any person, for hire, in a hackney chair, without licence, on pain of 40*s.*, in like manner (a).

And to subject a party to the penalties for using a hackney coach without a licence, within the 9 Anne, c. 23, s. 4, and 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 57, s. 3, he must profess to act as a hackney coachman; and where a stage coachman took up a passenger in the streets, he having booked his fare, and paid it to Kensington, and on arriving at Hyde Park corner, he got out of the coach, and did not proceed further in it, the stage coachman was held not liable. Cloud v. Turfery & Abbott, C. P. 2 Bing. 318; 9 Moore, 595 S. C. This was trespass for seizing and detaining a coach and two horses. Plea—general issue. At the trial a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the Court upon the following case:—The plaintiff was the owner of a stage coach lawfully licensed by the Commissioners of stamps to carry passengers between London and Hammersmith; and the defendant Turfery was a messenger to the Commissioners for licensing and regulating hackney coaches. On the 21st April, 1820, the driver of plaintiff's coach took up in St. Paul's Church Yard, from which place the coach sets out in London, to proceed towards Hammersmith, one Lindsay, who resided in Queen Street, May Fair, and who had previously, at the coach-office of the plaintiff, booked his place, and paid his fare for the whole distance to Kensington. When the coach arrived at Hyde Park Corner, Lindsay desired to be set down, and was set down accordingly. He had not previously made known to the driver of the coach his intention of proceeding no further than Hyde Park Corner on that day, but he had on former days been set down in like manner, always booking a place, and paying the full fare to Kensington. On the following day, the driver in like manner conveyed the same person, under precisely the same circumstances. The plaintiff's coachman, who so drove Lindsay, had been previously warned by the commissioners for regulating hackney coaches, that he was acting illegally in conveying Lindsay, as well as others, from place to place within the paved streets. On the 17th June, 1820, the defendant Turfery, under and by virtue of two warrants of distress, respectively under the hands and seals of the commissioners for licensing and regulating hackney coaches, and bearing date respectively the 16th of June, 1820, seized and levied as a distress for certain penalties under two convictions, a coach and two horses belonging to the plaintiff, and drove them to, and left them at, the stable-yard of the defendant Abbott, in Drury Lane, where they were detained by Abbott until the plaintiff, to repossess himself thereof, was obliged to pay to the defendants the amount of the two penalties claimed, viz. 10*l.*, together with 1*l.* 2*s.* as costs of the said warrants of distress. The defendants, under the general issue, gave in evidence two convictions precisely similar to each other, except that in the first the offence was laid on the 21st of April, 1820, and in the second it was laid on the 22nd of April, 1820. The following is a copy of the first of the convictions:—"Be it remembered, that, on the 12th day of May, in the first year of the reign of our sovereign lord George the Fourth, by the grace, &c., in Essex Street, in the parish of St. Clement's Danes, in the county of Middlesex, Sarah Anne Quaise, of Essex Street aforesaid, cometh in her own proper person before us, the major part of the commissioners nominated and appointed by his Majesty's commission under the Great Seal of Great Britain, for the licensing and regulating hackney coaches and chairs, and now here giveth us, the said commissioners, to understand, that one George Cloud, of Hammersmith, in the county of Middlesex, coach-master, heretofore, to wit, on the 21st day of April, in the year of our Lord, 1820, and in the first year of the reign of his said Majesty, the said George Cloud, not then and there being licensed by the commissioners aforesaid, or the major part of them, so to do, did drive and let to hire a certain coach, and divers, to wit, two coach horses, from St. Paul's Church Yard, in the parish of St. Faith, in the city of London, to Piccadilly, in the parish of St. George, Hanover Square, in the liberty of the city of Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, the first mentioned place, to wit, St. Paul's Church Yard, in the parish of St. Faith, then and there being within the bills of mortality, and within and upon the paved streets of London, and the said next mentioned place, to wit, Piccadilly, in the parish of St. George, Hanover Square, in the liberty of the city of Westminster, then and there being within the bills of mortality, and within and upon the paved streets of Westminster, contrary to the form of the statutes in such case made and provided; whereupon the said George Cloud being duly summoned to appear before us, the said commissioners, in Essex Street, in the county of Middlesex aforesaid, to make his defence against the said charge contained in the said information, appeared before us by one Richard Cloud, his agent in that behalf, on the day and year first above mentioned, and having heard the same, the said Richard Cloud, as such agent as aforesaid, is asked by us, the said commissioners, if he can say any thing for and on behalf of the said George Cloud, why the said George Cloud should not be convicted of the premises above charged upon him, in form aforesaid: who pleadeth and saith, that the said George Cloud is not guilty of the premises, and ought not to be convicted thereof, but he doth not shew to us why the said George Cloud should not be convicted of the offence in the said information above contained against him; and further, at the said time and place, (that is to say), at Essex Street aforesaid, one credible witness, to wit, John Gibbs, of the parish of Lambeth, in the county of Surry, yeoman, came before us, and in the presence of the said Richard Cloud, who appeared, as aforesaid, on behalf of the said George Cloud, the said John Gibbs, upon his oath on the Holy Gospel of God, to him then and there by us administered (we being duly authorized and empowered to administer the said oath), deposeth and saith, that a driver of the said coach, in the employ of the said George Cloud, on the said 21st day of April, in the year aforesaid, did drive to hire a certain coach and two coach horses, from St. Paul's Church Yard, in the parish of St. Faith aforesaid, in the city of London aforesaid, to Piccadilly, in the parish of St. George, Hanover Square, within the liberty of the city of Westminster aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, the same places then and there respectively, as aforesaid, being within or on the paved streets of London and Westminster, as aforesaid; and that the said John Gibbs then and there saw the driver of the said coach of the said George Cloud take up in the said coach, which he was then and there driving, at St. Paul's Church Yard aforesaid, in the parish of St. Faith aforesaid, in the city of London aforesaid, a certain person, whose name is as yet unknown; and that the said driver of the said coach of the said George Cloud then and there carried and conveyed the said person in the said coach, for hire, from St. Paul's Church Yard aforesaid, in the parish of St. Faith aforesaid, in the city of London aforesaid, to Piccadilly aforesaid, in the parish of St. George, Hanover Square, in the liberty of the city of Westminster aforesaid, in the said county; and upon hearing and duly examining the whole matters aforesaid, it manifestly appeareth to us, that the said George Cloud is not licensed by us, and that he is guilty of the premises above charged upon him in and by the information aforesaid; therefore the said George Cloud, on the said 12th day of May the first year &c. aforesaid, before the commissioners aforesaid, by the testimony of the said John Gibbs, a credible witness as aforesaid, according to the form of the statutes in such case made and provided, is convicted of the offence aforesaid, and hath forfeited the sum of 5*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain, to be distributed as the law directs. In witness whereof, we, the said commissioners, to this present record of conviction, have set our hands and seals, Essex Street aforesaid, in the county of Middlesex, the said 12th day of May, the said first year of the reign of our said lord the King that now is."—The question for the opinion of the Court is, "Whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover? If the Court should be of that opinion, the verdict was to stand; but if the Court should be of a contrary opinion, a nonsuit was to be entered." Counsel for plaintiff were stopped by the Court. Argument for the defendants.—The plaintiff has clearly been guilty of an offence under stat. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 4, and 1 Geo. I. c. 57, s. 1. In the first of those statutes, a monopoly was given to the licensed owners of hackney coaches within the cities of London and Westminster, upon the consideration of a certain rent, certain regulated fares, and various rules, by-laws, and penalties, to which they were subjected; it would, therefore, be a great injustice if they were exposed to the competition of other coaches. [Gaselee, —Before you are let in to argue the merits, you must support the conviction. The thing prohibited in 9 Ann. is the driving, or letting to hire, any hackney coach, without being duly licensed; but the conviction no where states that the plaintiff drove, or let to hire, a hackney coach]. Within the spirit of that act, for the necessary protection of hackney coach owners, any coach must be deemed a hackney coach, in which the driver conveys persons from street to street for hire, and this the driver appears to have done in the plaintiff's coach: indeed, he is alleged to have let to hire coach horses, which the act also prohibits; but by 1 Geo. I. he is liable to a penalty, if he drives for hire with a coach whatever, unless previously licensed by the hackney coach commissioners. [Burrough, J.—The information alleges that the driver of the plaintiff did drive to hire a certain coach, and conveyed a person in the coach for hire, instead of alleging, according to the words of the act, that he drove for hire with a coach]. It is clear, from the whole case, that the plaintiff knew that he was infringing the rights of the hackney coachmen; and, in an action like the present, the Court will decide on the merits of the case, and not on the technical language of the conviction. Stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 185, s. 11, 12, only allows the drivers of stages to take up passengers in the streets, for the places of their ultimate destination. Per Best, C. J.—If the conviction is not strictly regular, and our judgment is to go against the plaintiff, a man may be punished who is in law unconvicted of any offence. He may have done that which has rendered him liable to a conviction, but unless that conviction is legally and regularly obtained, execution must not ensue. Now, the conviction, to be good, must pursue not only the words, but the spirit of the act of Parliament. This has not been done in the present instance, either with reference to the statute of Anne, or that of Geo. I. The fact is, as it has been stated, that licensed hackney coachmen were allowed to claim a monopoly, in respect of certain rents which they paid to government for the same; and the statute of Anne was passed to prevent others, who were not thus licensed, from interfering with their business; clearly, however, the statute was not intended to apply to stage coaches, which, in driving along, might take up and put down their passengers in the streets. According to the words of the act, the party, to make himself liable, must profess to act as a hackney coachman, which, in this case, he did not profess, but, on the contrary, is stated to have made a contract perfectly legal, and which he was bound, if called on, to make. Under this contract he was conveying a passenger to Kensington, but, on the road, that passenger wished to alight, and I know of no law which gives the coachman the power of forcing him to go on. With respect to the statute of Geo. I. there is a fatal variance between the words of the act and the information, in which it is no where stated that the plaintiff drove for hire. I am therefore of opinion, that the conviction cannot be supported on either of these statutes, and that stat. 55 Geo. III. has no reference to the matter at all; the conviction is consequently bad, and the plaintiff is entitled to recover. Judgment for the plaintiff.

ster, or the suburbs thereof, or elsewhere within the bills of mortality, or within five miles of Temple Bar, without having a number fixed on the fore standard, shewing it to be licensed, he shall forfeit 5*l*. And on information given to the commissioners, they may summon the driver thereof, and, although no express hiring shall be proved, it shall be adjudged a driving for hire.

Sect. 8. No person shall drive any cart, car, dray, or other such like carriage within the limits aforesaid, or within the borough of Southwark, except the owner thereof shall have entered his name and place of abode with the said commissioners, and also caused his name, and the number of such carriage, to be put upon some conspicuous part thereof; and in case of neglect or refusal, every such owner or driver of such carriage, so residing and driving within the limits aforesaid, shall be liable to all the penalties and forfeitures created by any laws now in being relative to the owners or drivers of such like carriages.

But in R. v. Powell, 4 T. R. 572, it was determined that the owner of a cart, who does not reside within the bills of mortality, or within five miles of Temple Bar, need not enter his name and place of abode with the commissioners of hackney coaches, or have his name or any number upon the cart, though it be driven within those limits.

Stage coaches.

The 55 Geo. III. c. 185, s. 11 & 12, allow the drivers of stage coaches to take up passengers in the streets, for the places of their ultimate destination.

Using a hackney coach as a stage coach.

By stat. 12 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 2, no person who shall regularly use such hackney coach as a stage coach to and from any of the towns or places in the neighbourhood of London or Westminster, shall be obliged to carry any fare out of the ordinary course of his stage work or duty; provided that he do, by painting in legible characters on the door of such coach, or on a board to be affixed on such door, plainly denote and distinguish the same to be a stage coach to and from any such town or place.

Plying for hire when returning to town.

By stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 5, every hackney coachman discharged in the country, and plying for and picking up promiscuous passengers, thereby converting their hackney coaches into stages, shall, for every such offence, incur a penalty of not exceeding 3*l*., nor less than 20*s*.

No coach to ply for hire in New or Old Bond street (a).

By stat. 32 Geo. III. c. 62, s. 23, no person shall stand and ply for hire with any hackney coach, within either New or Old Bond Street, in the parish of St. George, Hanover Square; and if any person shall drive, stand with, and ply for hire with any such coach in either of the said streets, he shall, on conviction, on the oath of one witness, within seven days, either before the commissioners or one justice, forfeit not exceeding 40*s*. nor less than 10*s*. half to the informer, and half to the poor of the said parish; which, if not paid, such offender shall be committed to the house of correction to hard labour, not exceeding one month, nor less than seven days, unless such penalty be sooner paid.

Size of horses

By 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 4, no horse to be used with any hackney coach shall be under fourteen hands high.

Mark.

And by sect. 4, every coach and chair shall have a distinct mark on each side; and if any shall alter such mark, he shall forfeit 5*l*., half to the informer, and half to the King.

Regulation of numbering.

Stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 7, empowers the commissioners to regulate the number and mode of distinction to be adopted by each coach and chariot; and enacts that every owner who shall neglect to comply therewith, shall be subject to the revocation of his licence, or shall forfeit any sum not exceeding 10*l*., at the discretion of the commissioners; and that in case of non-payment the same may be levied by distress.

(a) Where a paving act authorized the commissioners to direct and regulate the hackney coach stands within their district, it was held they might remove it altogether, if it obstructed the public street. R. v. Rawlinson, 4 D. & R. M. C. 186.

HACKNEY COACHES, &c.

By stat. 11 Geo. III. c. 28, s. 2, the commissioners shall order the several persons who take out licences for hackney coaches, that they provide check rings or wire, to be placed in such convenient part of every such coach as the said commissioners shall seem meet; and every hackney coachman, lying for hire without such check string, or wire, shall forfeit 5s., to be recovered as other penalties by any law relating to hackney coaches.

Drivers to have check strings.

By stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 47, s. 4, the commissioners shall appoint persons to inspect licensed hackney coaches and the horses: such inspection to be made four times at least in each year, and also as often as the commissioners shall appoint; the report of the same as to their state and condition to be made to the commissioners. The commissioners may suspend the licence where the coach shall be found defective as to repair, safety, or cleanliness, or the horses unfit or insufficient, till the same be rectified.

Inspection.

Stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 150, s. 11, enacts, "That in case any driver of any hackney coach or chariot shall leave his coach or chariot at any theatre, or other place of public resort or entertainment unattended, whether he shall be hired or not, it shall and may be lawful for any inspector of hackney coaches, officer of police, constable, or other peace officer, watchman, or constable, to drive away such coach or chariot, and deposit the same at the nearest place of deposit; and the driver of such hackney coach shall be subject and liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, to be levied in case of non-payment, by distress upon the goods and chattels of the offender."

Leaving coach unattended.

By 48 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 6, no such (hackney) coachman shall be compellable to carry more than four adult persons inside, and a servant outside, at one time; and shall have 1*s.* above the regular fare for every additional adult person over that number; and if he shall drive into the country, and there wait, and return with any additional adult person, whom he shall agree to carry, and shall carry, and after waiting return with, he shall have 1*s.* for going, and 1*s.* for returning, above his regular fare.

sons to be carried

And stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 147, s. 14, after reciting stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 6, 'And whereas doubts have arisen as to what shall be termed an agreement to carry, and also as to the word adult in the said act;' enacts, "That, from and after the passing of this act, every hackney coachman may refuse to carry more than four adult or grown up persons (and not being children in arms or lap) in his coach, and a servant outside, at one and the same time, and shall not at any time be compellable to carry above that number of such persons; but if he shall agree to carry, or shall actually carry above that number of such persons in his coach at one and the same time, he shall be entitled to demand, and to receive, and be paid for every such additional person, of whatever age he or she may be (not being a child in arms or lap), whom he shall so agree to carry, or shall actually carry, 1*s.* over and above his regular fare, under the circumstances, and as allowed by the said act."

In coaches;

And stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 3, enacts, "That no owner or driver of any hackney chariot shall be compellable or compelled to carry more than two persons (not being children in arms or lap) in his chariot, and a servant on the outside at the same time; but every owner or driver of any hackney chariot who shall actually carry any greater number shall be entitled to demand, and to receive for every such additional person (not being a child in arms or lap) the sum of 1*s.* over and above his regular fare; and, if he shall carry any such additional person into the country, and bring the same or any other additional person back again, shall be entitled to demand and receive, over and above his regular fare, the sum of 1*s.* for going into the country, and the sum of 1*s.* for returning; any thing in any act or acts of Parliament relating to hackney coaches, to the contrary notwithstanding."

In chariots;

sect. 4, enacts, that no owner or driver of any two-wheeled carriage shall be compellable to carry more than two persons. Post, 1094.

carriages.

By stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 87, the former fares on hackney coaches are repealed; and by schedules (A), (B), other fares are to be taken in lieu thereof.

III. c. 47, and 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 47.

Stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 5, after repealing so much of stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 87, as relates to additional fares when hackney coaches are driven into the country, enacts, "That, from and after the passing of this act, such additional fares shall be, and the same are hereby repealed; and that from henceforth the several additional fares after mentioned shall be payable and paid; that is to say, in case any hackney coach or chariot shall be hired in any part of the cities of London and Westminster, or the suburbs thereof, the borough of Southwark, or any place adjoining thereto, where there is a regular continuation of carriageway pavement, or at any standing for hackney coaches or chariots beyond any such regular continuation of carriageway pavement, and discharged after the hour of seven in the evening, between the periods of Michaelmas Day and Lady Day, and after the hour of nine in the evening, between the periods of Lady Day and Michaelmas Day, at any place where there is not a regular continuation of carriageway pavement as aforesaid, there shall or may be demanded over and above the ordinary and established fare, the full rate or fare allowed by the said recited act, to the nearest extremity of continued carriageway pavement, or to any standing for hackney coaches or chariots beyond any such regular continuation of carriageway pavement, where such coach or chariot shall have been hired, at the option of the person discharging such coach or chariot; and in case any hackney coach or chariot shall be hired and driven into the country, and then discharged in the day-time, and not after the hours hereinbefore respectively mentioned, there shall or may be demanded, for the return thereof to the nearest extremity of continued carriageway pavement, or to any standing for hackney coaches or chariots beyond any such regular continuation of carriageway pavement, where such coach or chariot shall have been hired, at the option of the person discharging such coach or chariot, for each and every mile above the number of four miles, the additional rate or fare of 6*d.*: provided, nevertheless, no such allowance for return shall be made for any lesser distance than four miles, calculated as aforesaid."

By stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 47, s. 2, 3, when the average price of oats computed according to stat. 31 Geo. III. c. 30, shall exceed 25*s.* per quarter, the commissioners for licensing hackney coaches may allow additional fares to be taken, viz. 6*d.* on every 2*s.* fare; 1*s.* on every 4*s.* fare, and so in like manner, 6*d.* additional on every additional 2*s.*, provided the coach goes or is kept to the full amount of the fare; and such additional rates may be continued till thirty days after oats are reduced to 1*l.* 1*s.* per quarter.

Coachmen are not obliged to take luggage without receiving something additional to the fare. That something must be reasonable.

By stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 4, it is enacted, "That it shall be lawful for the commissioners for licensing and regulating hackney coaches, by and with the approbation and direction in writing of the lords commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them, and they are hereby authorized and empowered under their hands and seals to license such number of carriages with two wheels, and drawn by one horse, as shall be specified in any such approbation and direction as aforesaid; and the owners and drivers of such two-wheeled carriages shall be chargeable and charged with the like sum for licences as are now payable for licences for hackney coaches, and shall be entitled to demand, take and receive two thirds of the amount of the fares, rates, and benefits established by law for hackney coaches and chariots; and no owner or driver of any such two wheeled carriage shall be compellable to carry more than two persons; and all orders, rules, regulations, bye-laws, penalties, forfeitures, clauses, provisions, matters, and things, contained in any act or acts of Parliament relating to hackney coaches or chariots in the cities of London and Westminster, shall extend and apply to, and be put in force, in relation to all such licensed carriages, and the owners and drivers thereof, and to all persons using the same, in like manner in every respect, and as fully and effectually, as if the same were in this act severally and respectively re-enacted and repeated in relation to such carriages, and as if the said carriages had been included in the said acts."

And by stat. 7 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 13, a chairman may take for any distance not exceeding one mile, 12*d.*; for any distance above one mile, and not exceeding one mile and four furlongs, 1*s.* 6*d.*; for every further distance, not exceeding four furlongs, 6*d.*; and by the hour, 1*s.* 6*d.* for the first hour, and 6*d.* for every half hour after.

And by stats. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 16, 17; 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 57, s. 1, the commissioners may make bye-laws for the good government and regulation of licensed hackney coachmen, to bind all persons licensed, and the renters of such licences, and the drivers. The same to be approved by the lord chancellor, commissioners of the great seal, two chief justices, and chief baron, or three of them.

By 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 10, it is enacted, "That no agreement or engagement whatever, at any time or on any occasion made with the driver of any hackney coach or chariot, for the payment of more than his established fare, shall be binding on the person or persons making the same, but any such person or persons may, notwithstanding any such agreement or engagement, refuse, on discharging such coach or chariot, the payment of any sum beyond the established fare; and in case such person or persons shall actually pay to the driver of any hackney coach or chariot, whether in pursuance of any such agreement or engagement, or not, any sum exceeding his established fare, which shall have been demanded or required by such driver, the person or persons paying the same shall be entitled, on complaint against such driver, to recover the overplus paid; and such driver shall be subject and liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, to be levied in case of non-payment by distress upon the goods and chattels of the offender."

But by 57 Geo. III. c. 125, s. 3, it is enacted, "That it shall be lawful for any person to require any hackney coachman to drive for a stated sum of money a distance in the discretion of such hackney coachman; and in case such coachman shall exceed the distance to which such person was entitled to be driven for such stated sum of money, the coachman shall not be entitled to demand more than the sum for which he was so engaged to drive."

By stats. 7 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 12; 12 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 1, every licensed coachman plying for hire within the cities of London and Westminster, or the suburbs thereof, or elsewhere, within the bills of mortality, shall be obliged and compellable, on every day of the week, at seasonable times, to go to any place where within the distance of ten miles from either of the said cities.

By stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 7, if drivers be directed to wait at places of public resort, he shall receive of those so directing him a reasonable sum in and above the fare for driving thither, the sum so received to be accounted for when such coach shall be finally discharged.

By stat. 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 57, s. 2, if any hackney coachman shall refuse to go at, or exact more for his hire than according to the above act or bye-laws, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding 3*l.*, nor under 10*s.*

By stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 11, hackney coachmen exacting more than their fare, shall be liable to the penalties, and their fares shall be recoverable under former acts.

By stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 12, it is enacted, "That no driver who shall be hired for hire, shall refuse, on the pretext of having been out twelve hours, (although he may have been out that time), to go with any person or persons

And by stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 47, s. 5, every hackney coachman where coaches are standing, shall be compellable to go with any person when desired, and on refusal (unless he prove being hired,) shall be liable to the like penalties as persons refusing to carry for hire, by any law now in being.

By stat. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 44, if any person who shall drive a coach or carry a chair for hire, acting under a person licensed, shall be guilty of misbehaviour, by demanding more than his fare, or giving abusive language, or other rude behaviour, he shall, on conviction on oath, forfeit not exceeding 20s. to the poor; and if he shall not be able, or shall refuse to pay, he shall be committed to Bridewell or some other house of correction, to be kept to hard labour for seven days, and receive the public correction of the house before he be discharged.

And by stats. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 49; 7 Geo. And by 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 14, "Every driver of any hackney coach or chariot, or any chairman or waterman, who shall make use of any abusive or insulting language, or other rude behaviour, or who shall obstruct any inspector of hackney coaches, officer of police, constable, or other peace officer, watchman, or patrol, in the execution of his duty, and who shall, on complaint being made before any justice of the peace, or the commissioners of the hackney coaches, or the major part of them, be convicted of the same, shall be subject and liable to a penalty, at the discretion of such justice or justices, or commissioners as aforesaid, not in any case exceeding 10*l.*; and in default of the payment of such penalty so to be awarded, to be committed to prison for a period not in any case exceeding two months."

Sect. 9 enacts, "That every driver in whose coach or chariot any property whatever shall be left, by any person or persons hiring the same, and who shall not carry such property within four days after the same shall have been so left, in the state in which it was found, to the hackney coach office, and deposit the same with one of the clerks of the said office, shall be subject and liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*, at the discretion of the said commissioners, or the major part of them; and the clerk with whom such property is deposited is hereby required to give a receipt for the same, and to make an entry in a book to be kept at the said office, of the description thereof, the name and address of the driver bringing the same, and the day on which it is brought; and the property so entered shall be returned to the person or persons respectively, who shall prove to the satisfaction of the said commissioners, or the major part of them, that the same belonged to him, her, or them, such person or persons previously paying all expenses incurred, together with such reasonable sum to the driver who brought the same, as, with reference to the value of the property in question, the said commissioners shall award; provided, nevertheless, that if such property shall not be proved to belong to some person or persons within one year, the same having been advertised in such manner as the said commissioners may direct, such property shall be sold; and after deducting from the produce of the sale all the expenses incurred, the balance shall be paid to the driver who deposited the same."

By stat. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 22, 23, if any person shall refuse to pay, or shall deface any coach or chair, any justice may grant his warrant to bring him before him; and, on proof upon oath, may award satisfaction to the party, and, on refusal to pay, may bind him over to the next sessions, who may determine the same.

And by stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 6, after reciting, 'And whereas, by the laws (a) now in force, authority is given to justices of the peace to award satisfaction, in case of persons refusing or omitting to pay to coachmen or chairmen the money due for the hire of their coaches, or wilfully injuring such coaches or chairs, and to issue their warrants for bringing such persons before them, but no authority is given to enforce the payment of such satisfaction so awarded, and it is expedient that such authority should be given, it is enacted, "That if any person shall refuse or omit to pay the driver of any hackney coach or chariot, or any chairman, the money justly due to him for the hire of the coach or chariot or chair hired, or shall wilfully deface or in any manner injure the same, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace, upon complaint thereof, to grant a summons, or, if it shall appear to him necessary, a warrant, for bringing before him the offending party or parties, and, upon proof made upon oath, to award reasonable satisfaction to the party so complaining for his damage and costs, and also a reasonable compensation for the loss of time on his attendance in establishing such complaint, and, upon refusal to pay or make such satisfaction, to commit such person or persons to prison, there to remain for any time not exceeding one month, or until the amount of such satisfaction shall be paid and discharged."

And by stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 8, it is enacted, "That upon any complaint of the owner of any hackney coach or chariot licensed by the said commissioners against his or her driver, or of a driver against his master, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or the major part of them, and they are hereby empowered to inquire into the same, and to determine therein, and to award such compensation to be made as to them respectively shall seem proper; and to punish any such owner or driver, by inflicting any penalty not exceeding 10*l.*, and, in case of non-payment, the same may be levied by distress on his, her, or their goods or chattels."

Commissioners to hear and determine complaints between owners and drivers of hackney coaches.

Penalty.

And by stat. 10 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 6, every licensed person who shall neglect or refuse (being duly summoned for that purpose) to appear by himself or his renter, shall forfeit 10*s.*, to be recovered as the other penalties; and if such licensed person shall neglect or refuse to appear, together with his renter, upon the third summons, the complaint may be heard and determined in his absence.

And by stat. 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 27, s. 3, if any owner of a licensed hackney coach shall refuse or neglect to appear with his driver before the commissioners upon the third summons left at his usual place of abode, the said commissioners may revoke such licence, and license another person in his room.

By stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 13, "It shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners for the time being, or the major part of them, or any justice or justices of the peace, when it may appear to them necessary, upon any complaint being lodged before them against any owner or driver of any hackney coach or chariot, or against any waterman or assistant to hackney coachmen, or against any chairman, to issue their summons for the appearance before them, or their warrant for the apprehension of such owner, driver, waterman, or chairman, to be examined touching the said complaint, or to answer the same as the case may be."

Commissioners or justices may summon, on complaint, owners, drivers, assistants, or watermen, before them.

By stat. 7 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 15, in every case where any person for any offence mentioned in any law relating to the licensing and regulating of hackney coaches and chairs shall be liable to be committed to prison, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, or any three or more of them, either to commit such offender to prison, as by any former act, and for any time not exceeding one month, or to commit such offender to bridewell or other house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one month, and also to receive the correction of the house.

Imprisonment of offenders.

By stat. 10 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 5, in all cases where they may commit offenders to Bridewell or other house of correction as aforesaid, they may commit them immediately upon such offenders being convicted before them.

And by sect. 7, all the offences mentioned in this act, or in 7 Geo. III. c. 44, may be determined, and all the forfeitures recovered and levied, not only by the commissioners, but also by any justice, mayor, bailiff, or other magistrate, as by 9 Ann. c. 23, directed.

Under this 7th section of this act, justices, on conviction, may immediately commit the offender. Duck v. Addington, 4 T. R. 467.

By stat. 26 Geo. III. c. 72, s. 3, if any hackney coachman, or his renter, shall be in arrear for any rent made payable by his licence for any longer time than is expressed therein, the said commissioners may revoke such licence, and levy the money upon the goods of either the owner or renter, in like manner and form as by any law now in being with respect to the owner.

By stat. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 12, the rents and penalties to be levied by distress, by warrant of three commissioners; which distress shall be sold in ten days, returning the overplus, charges of the distress and of the warrant being first deducted, (if, on seven days' notice, they do not pay the fine without such warrant), and, in default of distress, to be imprisoned till paid; and, if any rent shall be unpaid for fourteen days, the commissioners may withdraw the licence.

And moreover, by stats. 9 Ann. c. 23, s. 17; 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 57, s. 7; 4 Geo. III. c. 36; 7 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 19; 10 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 7, the breach of the bye-laws and of these rules and orders may be punished by any justice of the peace, mayor, bailiff, or other magistrate, where the offence shall be committed, in like manner as by the commissioners.

By stat. 10 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 8, all penalties levied by any justice, mayor, bailiff, or other magistrate, shall by them be transmitted to the receiver-general of the duties on hackney coaches and chairs, and they shall also transmit a certificate thereof to the commissioners within ten days after levying such penalty, on pain of 10*l.*, half to the King and half to him that shall sue.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 15, all the penalties to be recovered under this or any former act relating to hackney coaches, shall be applied, one moiety thereof to his Majesty, and the other moiety to the informer.

Sect. 16. The penalties and provisions of former acts are continued in force.

By stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 8, Whereas, by the laws now in force, hackney coachmen are not obliged to go with persons desirous of hiring their coaches, provided they have been out twelve hours; and whereas they have been oftentimes improperly summoned for refusal; it is enacted, That every hackney coachman who shall in civil and explicit terms declare to any person desirous to engage his coach, either that he hath been at work twelve hours with his coach and horses, or that he is actually hired, and shall afterwards be summoned for refusal, and shall prove that he had been so at work, or so bonâ fide hired, and it shall not appear that he conducted himself improperly to the party summoning, he shall not be punished; but the commissioners for licensing hackney coaches, before whom such complaint shall be heard, shall require the person summoning to compensate the coachman for loss of time in attending the office, not exceeding 5*s.* nor less than 3*s.*, to be levied and recovered as any other penalty relating to hackney coaches.

Sects. 9 and 10 of 48 Geo. III. c. 87, relate to numbered stage coaches plying in the streets, and to the number of their booking houses.

There are several other regulations by stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 47, which are under the management of the commissioners for hackney coaches, but it is not deemed requisite to insert them.

In Slater v. Swann, 2 Str. 872, Raymond, C. J., said, if a hackney coach stand before a tradesman's door, and hinder customers, he may lawfully take hold of the horses, and lead them away, and is not bound to take his remedy for damages. See post, Nuisance, Vol. III.

Hard Labour, Punishment of.

3 Geo. IV. c. 114.
repealing 53 Geo. III.
c. 122.

Persons convicted of the offences herein mentioned, may be sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour.

BY the 3 Geo. IV. c. 114, intituled An Act to provide for the more effectual punishment of certain offences, by imprisonment with hard labour, after reciting, that, by 53 Geo. III. c. 162, it was enacted, 'That it should and might be lawful for any court to pass upon any person who should be lawfully convicted before such court of felony with benefit of clergy, or of any grand larceny, or of any petit larceny, the sentence of imprisonment to hard labour, either simply and alone, or in addition to any other sentence which such court might or should be authorized to pass upon any person lawfully convicted of any of the offences aforesaid, as to such court should seem fit; and such person should thereupon suffer such other sentence, and be moreover imprisoned and kept to hard labour, or be simply imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in such place and for such time as such court should think fit to direct, not exceeding the time for which such courts might then imprison for such offences: And whereas it is expedient that the provisions of the said act should be extended to certain aggravated misdemeanors, and offences below the degree of felony,' it is enacted, "That, from and after the passing of this act, whenever any person shall be convicted of any of the offences hereafter specified and set forth: that is to say,

" [Any assault with intent to commit felony (a).]

" Any attempt to commit felony.

" Any riot.

" Any misdemeanor for having received stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen.

" [Any assault upon a peace officer, or upon an officer of the customs or excise, or upon any other officer of the revenue, in the due discharge and execution of his or their respective duty or duties, or upon any person or persons acting in aid of any such officer or officers in the due discharge and execution of his or their respective duty or duties.]

" [Any assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages.]

" Being an utterer of counterfeit money, knowing the same to be counterfeit.

" Knowingly and designedly obtaining money, goods, wares, or merchandizes, bills, bonds, or other securities for money, by false pretences, with intent to cheat any person of the same.

“ Keeping a common gaming house, a common bawdy house, or a common ill governed and disorderly house.

“ Wilful and corrupt perjury, or of subornation of perjury.

“ Having entered any open or inclosed ground with intent there illegally to destroy, take, or kill game or rabbits, or with intent to aid, abet, and assist any person or persons illegally to destroy, take, or kill game or rabbits, and having been there found at night armed with any offensive weapon.

“ [In each and every of the above cases, and whenever any person shall be convicted of any or either of the aforesaid offences, it shall and may be lawful for the court before which any such offender shall be convicted, or which by law is authorized to pass sentence upon any such offender, to award and order (if such court shall think fit) sentence of imprisonment with hard labour, for any term not exceeding the term for which such court may now imprison for such offences, either in addition to or in lieu of any other punishment which may be inflicted on any such offenders by any law in force before the passing of this act; and every such offender shall thereupon suffer such sentence, in such place, and for such time as aforesaid, as such court shall think fit to direct.”]

This statute, so far as it relates to the assaults therein mentioned, and above noticed in brackets, is repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31; but its provisions are nearly re-enacted by the same act. See ante, Assault, Vol. I.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, relating to Larceny, s. 4, reciting ‘ With regard to the place and mode of imprisonment for all indictable offences punishable under this act,’ [see Larceny, Vol. III. p. 552] it is enacted, “ That where any person shall be convicted of any felony, or misdemeanor punishable under this act, for which imprisonment may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for the whole or any portion or portions of such imprisonment, or of such imprisonment with hard labour, as to the court in its discretion shall seem meet.”

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, relative to Malicious Injuries to Property, s. 27, it is enacted, “ That where any person shall be convicted of any indictable offence punishable under this act, [see Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 723], for which imprisonment may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for the whole or any portion or portions of such imprisonment, or of such imprisonment with hard labour, as to the court in its discretion shall seem meet.”

See also the various titles of offences throughout this work, as to when hard labour may be imposed in other cases than the above.

As to the mode of enforcing this punishment, and how it is to be regulated, &c. see title Gaols, Vol. II. pp. 1017, 1026, 1027.

Hawkers and Pedlars (a).

[7 Geo. III. c. 43; 48 Geo. III. c. 84; 50 Geo. III. c. 41; 52 Geo. III. c. 108; 6 Geo. IV. c. 80.]

Who are.

A HAWKER is an itinerant trader, who goes about from place to place, carrying with him, and selling, wares. By Dr. Johnson, a hawker is defined to be "one who sells his wares by proclaiming them in the street."

A pedlar is a hawker in small wares. By Dr. Johnson, he is defined to be "one who travels the country with small commodities."

Expediency of laws as to.

The trade carried on by persons keeping fixed establishments is, generally speaking, much more beneficial to the state than that of itinerant hawkers and pedlars. The character of the local trader is better known, and, therefore, there is greater security for the respectability of his dealings. He contributes also by the number of persons he employs, and the taxes he pays, much more than the itinerant trader, to promote the wealth and increase the prosperity of the country. Hence has arisen the expediency of framing laws which may operate as a restraint upon itinerant traders, may diminish their number, and, while they prevent any illegal practices, may, by obliging such persons to take out licences, and to submit to certain other regulations, be productive of revenue and profit. See 2 Chitty's Commercial Law, 163.

1. Duties, Licences, &c.

By stat. 50 Geo. III. c. 41, intituled An Act for placing the duties of hawkers and pedlars under the management of the commissioners of hackney coaches, sect. 1, after reciting, that Whereas it is expedient that the powers and provisions contained in any acts of Parliament relating to the duties upon hawkers and pedlars should be brought together into one act, and that the said duties should be placed under the management of the commissioners of hackney coaches, it is enacted, That, from and after the 1st day of August, 1810, an act passed in a Parliament holden in the ninth and tenth years of his late Majesty King William, intituled An Act for licensing hawkers and pedlars; for a further provision for the payment of the interest of the transport debt for the reducing of Ireland; and all acts made for continuing, altering, or regulating the duties thereby imposed, as far only as the said acts relate to such continuance, alteration, or regulation, and all powers, provisions, and clauses contained in any act or acts of Parliament relating to the collection of the same duties, shall be repealed, except such of the said powers, provisions, and clauses as may be necessary to be kept in force for the recovery of any arrears of the said duties hereby repealed, or any penalties incurred under any of the acts hereby repealed: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to revive any act or provision which had been repealed by any of the acts or provisions repealed by this act, and which were not in force at the time of passing this act; but the same shall continue repealed, notwithstanding any thing contained in this act.

50 Geo. 3, c. 41.
9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 27, and all acts relating to the duties thereby imposed, &c., repealed.

But, by sect. 31, All the powers, rules, penalties, and forfeitures, exemptions, and things whatsoever, which, by stat. 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, or by any other law now in force relating to the duties by that act granted, are provided, settled, or established (other than so far as the same is or are inconsistent with, or repugnant to, this act, and other than in such cases for which different provisions are prescribed by this act), shall be exercised, and put in execution for the managing, raising, levying, recovering, and paying the several duties hereby granted, as fully as if all the said powers, &c., were repeated in this present act.

Powers of recited act of 9 & 10 Will. 3, where applicable, extended to this act.

By sects. 3 and 8, The licensing is left to the commissioners appointed for the time being for licensing and regulating hackney coaches.

Who to grant licences.

Sect. 11. Persons already authorized out of London to grant licences are to continue to do so till their authority is annulled.

Sect. 4. The treasury may make allowances to the commissioners of hackney coaches, and their officers, for their services.

Allowances to commissioners.

And by sect. 2, All licences shall continue in force until the 1st of August next following the dates of such licences; and they are to be annual licences.

Licences to be annual.

Before the licence is granted it is necessary that the applicant should produce the certificate as required by sect. 12. See post, 1105.

Certificate for.

By sect. 10, the duties are to be paid at the time of receiving the licences.

Duty payable at time of granting.

By sect. 33, The duties are to be paid from time to time into the hands of the cashier, for the time being, of the duties on hawkers, pedlars, and petty chapmen, and paid into the Exchequer, and made part of the consolidated fund.

Duties to be paid to cashier, &c.

Sect. 6 enacts, "That, from and after the said first day of August, there shall be raised, answered, and paid to and for the use of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the rates and duties following, that is to say, by every hawker, pedlar, petty chapman, and every other trading person and persons going

III. Packages, &c. to be marked.

Packages of hawker to have the words 'Licensed hawker,' &c.

By 50 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 14, Every person to whom any such licence as aforesaid shall be granted, under or by virtue of this act, and who shall trade with or under colour of such licence, shall cause to be written, painted, or printed, in large legible Roman capitals, upon the most conspicuous part of every pack, box, bag, trunk, case, cart, or waggon, or other vehicle or conveyance in which he or she shall carry his or her goods, wares, and merchandize, and of every room and shop in which he or she shall so trade, and likewise upon every hand-bill or advertisement which he or she shall give out, distribute, or publish, the words 'licensed hawker,' together with the number, name, or other mark or marks of distinction so written or printed upon his or her licence as aforesaid; and that every such person in any respect making default herein, shall forfeit, for every offence, the sum of 10*l*.

Penalty.

Persons not licensed using such words.

Sect. 15 enacts, "That if at any time from and after the said 1st day of August, [1810], any person, other than to whom such licence shall have been so granted as aforesaid, shall write, paint, or print, or cause to be written, painted, or printed, or kept or continue written, painted, or printed, upon any pack, bag, box, trunk, case, cart, waggon, or other vehicle or conveyance, for any goods, wares, or merchandize, or in any room or shop in which he or she shall sell or expose to sale, or keep for sale, any goods, wares, or merchandize, the words 'licensed hawker,' or 'licensed pedlar,' or any other word or words to that effect; every person offending therein shall forfeit for each offence the sum of 10*l*."

Penalty.

IV. Exemptions from Taking out Licence.

Goods may be exposed to sale in public markets.

STAT. 50 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 5, enacts, "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to hinder any person or persons from selling or exposing to sale, any sorts of goods or merchandize, in any public mart, market, or fair, legally established within the kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, but such person or persons may do therein as they lawfully might have done before the making of this act; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Duty for licences.

It was formerly supposed, that, under the above proviso, or a similar one contained in the 29 Geo. III. c. 26, s. 17, that hawkers might have exposed their goods to sale on market days, in any part of a market town, as they might have done before the passing of any of the hawkers' acts. But in R. v. Redfearne, 4 T. R. 273, it was decided that no hawker could expose goods to sale in any part of a market town, but the public market place. See 1 Law Mag. 341.

Proviso for certain trades, &c.

Sect. 23 enacts, "That nothing in this act shall extend to prohibit any person or persons from selling any printed papers licensed by authority, or any fish, fruit, or victuals, nor to hinder the real worker or workers, or maker or makers of any goods, wares, or manufactures of Great Britain, or his, her, or their children, apprentices, or known agents or servants, usually residing with such real workers or makers only, from carrying abroad or exposing to sale, and selling by retail or otherwise, any of the said goods, wares, or manufactures, of his, her, or their own making, in any mart, market, or fair, and in every city, borough, town corporate, and market town, nor any tinkers, coopers, glaziers, plumbers, harness-menders, or other persons usually trading in mending kettles, tubs, household goods, or harness whatsoever, from going about and carrying with him or them proper materials for mending the same."

The manufactures of Scotland may be vended in England by wholesale, without a hawker's licence. Maxwell v. Mayor, 3 Burr. 1314; 1 Bla. Rep. 271, S. C.

Victuals—Barm or yeast is victuals within this exempting clause, and therefore, a person purchasing that article of brewers, and carrying the same from town to town, and selling the same, is not liable to the penalty imposed by that statute upon hawkers trading without a licence. R. v. Hodgkinson, 10 B. & C. 74 (a).

Victuals.

(a) R. v. Hodgkinson, 10 B. & C. 74. Upon an appeal against a conviction under the hawkers' and pedlars' act, the court of quarter sessions for the county of Derby confirmed it, subject to the opinion of this Court on the following case:—The defendant had been for some time past in the habit of purchasing barm or yeast of the brewers at Burton-upon-Trent, and afterwards carried the same about to the neighbouring towns and villages, and exposed such barm or yeast to sale, and sold it to such persons as applied to him for it, for the purpose of being used in the making of bread and beer. The defendant took a quantity of barm or yeast to the township of Litchurch, in the county of Derby, on the 14th day of November last, and there exposed the same to sale in his usual way, without licence as a hawker. The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether the barm or yeast so exposed to sale was to be considered as "victuals" within the 23rd section of the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, by which it is enacted, "That nothing in that act shall extend to prohibit any persons from selling any printed papers licensed by authority, or any fish, fruit, or victuals," &c. N. R. Clarke, and Fynes Clinton, in support of the order of sessions.—Yeast is not victuals within the meaning of that word in the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 23. It is used in the preparing of victuals, and operates chemically. [Bayley, J.—Is it not a material necessary for the making of good bread?] The same may be said of fire. The effect of the yeast is by producing fermentation to render the bread lighter, and improve its quality. It is manifest, from the words fish and fruit in the exempting clause, that the legislature meant to exempt such victuals only as were sold in a state fit to be eaten. [Lord Tenterden, J.—Then flour would not be within the exemption]. It is not victual within the meaning of the act. R. v. Waddington, 1 East, 143, will be relied upon by the other side. There, hops were considered to be a victual, but that case turned materially upon the words of the 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 14, which contained the words "any corn growing in the fields, or any other corn or grain," butter, cheese, fish, or other dead victuals whatsoever. Tea is an article of very general consumption, yet, in R. v. MacGill, 2 B. & C. 142, it was held, that a person exposing to sale and selling tea as a hawker without a licence, was liable to the penalty imposed by this act. Brodrick, contra.—Yeast is a victual within the meaning of that word in this act of Parliament. It comes from beer, and is used as an ingredient in bread. R. v. MacGill, 2 B. & C. 142, turned upon other statutes; the sale of tea by any hawker or pedlar having been prohibited by the 9 Geo. II. c. 35, s. 20, and the 10 Geo. I. c. 10, s. 14, having enacted that tea should not be sold except in entered places. In the 12 Edw. IV. c. 8, ale, beer, and wine are considered as victuals, and the dealers in such articles are called victuallers. In 4 Inst. 262, Lord Coke says, that, in the 18 Edw. II. malt had been adjudged to be no victual of itself; but, in R. v. Waddington, 1 East, 143, hops were held to be a victual. In the 55 Geo. III. c. 99, s. 2, yeast is recognized as an ingredient in the making of bread. It is as essential as salt, which is not used as food per se but for the cooking and preserving of victuals. It was adjudged, in the 44 & 45 Eliz., by the justices and barons of the Exchequer, that salt is a victual, and that the buying and selling thereof was within the statute 5 Edw. VI., and the reason assigned by Lord Coke is, that it was not only of necessity of itself for the food and health of man, but that it seasoneth and maketh wholesome beef, pork, &c., butter, cheese, and other viands. 3 Inst. 195. Lord Tenterden, C. J.—I think that the word victuals in the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 23, comprises every thing which constitutes an ingredient in the food of man, and all articles which mixed with others constitute food. Yeast or barm may not perhaps be necessarily used in the making of bread, but it generally is ers of goods.

Workers or Makers of Goods—A person buying books in sheets and making them up, and then going from London into the country and selling them, is within the act, and is not exempted from penalties as the maker of the goods. Moore v. Edwards, 2 Chitt. Rep. 213. Clarke moved to set aside a verdict obtained for the plaintiff in a qui tam action for penalties on the hawkers' and pedlars' act. The defendant bought books in sheets, and made them up, and carried them from London into the country, and sold them at places where he did not reside; and it was contended that he was a maker of the goods within the exception in the hawkers' and pedlars' act.—Abbott, C. J., "This case comes within the act of Parliament. A person going from London into the country is within the term 'travelling,' and the defendant is not within the exception, as a maker of the commodity." Rule refused.

It has also been decided at Nisi Prius, that this exemption as to the makers of goods, extends beyond mere handicraftsmen, and that it comprehends within it wholesale tradesmen vending their own manufactured goods by means of their known servants or agents usually residing with them. R. v. Thomas, Lancaster Sum. Ass. 1827, cor. Hullock, B., 1 Law Mag. 342.

Selling, &c., in any mart, city, or market.

In any Mart, &c., City, &c., and Market—A manufacturer is, by the above 23rd section, allowed to hawk the manufactured goods in those places only which are mentioned in it. R. v. Websdell, 2 B. & C. 136; 3 D. & R. 360, S. C., post, 1116, n. In that case the defendant had been convicted for hawking shoes at Cromer, without a licence. On appeal to the quarter sessions, it was proved, on behalf of the appellant, that he was a shoemaker, and that he was the real worker and maker of the shoes which he had exposed to sale; but as it appeared from the evidence, that Cromer was not a mart, &c. nor a city, borough, &c., the sessions were of opinion that the conviction was good, and the Court of King's Bench thought that they had decided right.

Agents or servants

Agents or Servants usually residing with such real Worker, &c.—The enactment, also, that nothing in the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, shall extend to hinder the real worker, or maker of any goods, &c., or his, her, or their children, apprentices, or known agents, or servants, usually residing with such real worker or maker, from carrying abroad, or exposing to sale, and selling by retail, or otherwise, any of the said goods, &c., of his, her, or their own making, in any mart, market, or fair, and in every city, borough, town corporate, and market town, applies to such agents or servants only as reside in the same house with the makers of the goods, as part of his family. *R. v. used, and I am therefore of opinion that it is within the exempting clause. Bayley, J.—I think, construing the word victuals liberally, we must understand it to comprise yeast. Littledale and Parke, Js., concurred. Conviction quashed.

(a) R. v. Mainwaring, 10 B. & C. 66. Upon appeal against six several convictions of the defendant under the hawkers' and pedlars' act, 50 Geo. III. c. 41, the sessions confirmed the convictions, subject to the opinion of this Court, on the following case:—Zachariah Boyle, on and before the 21st of October, 1828, was and still is a large china and earthenware manufacturer at Hanley in Staffordshire. Before the 21st of October, he consigned to Gainsborough, a market town, to his own order, a quantity of china and earthenware, of which the several articles mentioned in the conviction formed a part. The china and earthenware were conveyed by a carrier's boat from Hanley to Gainsborough, and Boyle was the real worker and maker of all of it, and it was manufactured by him at Hanley. The defendant Mainwaring was, on and before the 21st of October, and still is, a servant in the sole employ of Boyle. He resided with his wife and family at Hanley, in a separate dwelling-house, being his own, a freehold, within three hundred yards of the house and manufactory of Boyle, and never left that place except when employed elsewhere by his master. When at Hanley, he superintended and assisted at the manufactory, and was employed by Boyle to sell the before-mentioned china and earthenware at Gainsborough. His salary was a fixed yearly salary, and did not depend on the amount of any sale that he might effect, nor did he receive any commission or benefit, nor was he liable to any charges or loss whatever which might arise or be incurred in

III. c. 108, s. 1, "No person, being a wholesale trader in lace, in woollen, linen, silk, cotton, or mixed goods, or any of the goods, wares, or manufactures of Great Britain, and selling the same by wholesale, shall be deemed or taken to be a hawker, pedlar, or petty chapman within the intent and meaning of the [stat. 50 Geo. No wholesale trader deemed hawker, nor shall he or his servants be liathe sale, conveyance, or otherwise, of the said china and earthenware, but rendered a regular account of the same to his master, who bore all losses and expenses, and received all the proceeds and profits. The defendant took possession of the china and earthenware so consigned, upon its arrival at Gainsborough, and took a room at an inn there, and on the day mentioned in the conviction sold part thereof by public auction. The defendant had no hawker's licence, and had previously been selling at Nottingham and other places. The question for the opinion of this Court was, whether the defendant was protected from penalty under the twenty-third section of the act 50 Geo. III. c. 41, as the known agent or servant usually residing with the real worker or maker of the goods which he sold at Gainsborough.—

N. R. Clarke, and Fynes Clinton, in support of the order of sessions.—The defendant was not within the exception. The question is, whether the defendant was an agent or servant usually residing with the real worker or maker, within the 50 Geo. III. c. 41. By s. 23 it is enacted, that nothing in the act shall extend to prohibit any persons from selling any printed papers licensed by authority, or any fish, fruit, or victuals, nor to hinder the real worker or workers of any goods, or his or their children, apprentices, or known agents, or servants usually residing with such real workers, from carrying abroad, or exposing to sale and selling by retail, or otherwise, any of the said goods, &c. Assuming that the defendant in this case was the known agent for the real worker or maker, still he was not an agent usually residing with the real worker, for he resided in a dwelling-house of his own, distinct from that of his employer. In furtherance of the general intention of the act, (which was to protect tradesmen residing in towns and paying taxes), the exemption ought to be construed literally.—Denman, Hildyard, and Whitehurst, contra.—If the legislature had intended to confine the exemption to agents living under the same roof with their employers, they would have used more definite words to express that intention. Assuming that the object of the legislature in the enacting clause was to encourage the regular trader, the object in the exempting clause was to afford encouragement to the real manufacturer, and that clause ought to be construed liberally, to effect that object. In R. v. Turner, 4 B. & A. 510, the defendant did not reside with the maker of the goods. In the 22nd section, which enables hawkers to exercise any trade in the place where they are resident, the word resident applies to the place or town, and not the dwelling-house. That word, like the word inhabitant, may vary in its import according to the subject matter to which it applies. The word inhabitant either refers to a place where a man sleeps, 2 Inst. 702, or the place where he is mere occupier of land. Jeffrey's case, 5 Coke, 67. In the 52 Geo. III. c. 108, which amends the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, the words usually residing with are altogether omitted. That is a legislative declaration that they are immaterial.—Lord Tenterden, C. J.—The 23rd section exempts from the operation of the act "the real worker or maker of any goods, or his or their children, apprentices, or known agents or servants usually residing with such real workers." The word residing may undoubtedly vary in its import, according to the subject to which it is applied. The sense of that word, however, is explained in this section, by the words with which it is accompanied. The words "children or apprentices" apply to persons residing with their parents or masters, as part of their family, in the same house. That being so, I think we ought to understand the other words "agents or servants" to apply to such agents and servants as reside in the same house with their employers, as members of their family. Here the defendant was not a member of the maker's or manufacturer's family: he had a separate dwelling of his own. If we were to hold that the words imported only a residence in the same town, the consequence would be, that the exemption would apply to a case where a manufacturer and his agent lived on the western side of Temple Bar, but not to a case where one of them lived on the western and the other on the eastern side of Temple Bar.

Sect. 139. "It is and shall be lawful for one or more such justice or justices of the peace as aforesaid, on any information upon oath made before him or them against any person or persons, for hawking or selling, or exposing to sale any spirits, contrary to this act, to issue his or their warrant or warrants, under his or their respective hands and seals, to be directed to any constable or other ministerial officer of the peace, for the apprehending and bringing such offender or offenders before such justice or justices of the peace, in order to such offender or offenders being by such justice or justices dealt with according to law."

Sect. 140. 'And whereas, for want of a constable or other ministerial officer of the peace being at hand, to apprehend such offender or offenders, he, she, or they has or have often escaped unpunished,' it is further enacted, "That it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons whomsoever, to seize and detain any person or persons who shall hawk, or sell, or expose to sale, in manner aforesaid, any spirits, by whatsoever name, or names they are or may be called or distinguished, for such reasonable time as he, she, or they may give notice to the constable, headborough, tithingman, churchwarden, overseer of the poor, or some other peace or parish officer or officers, who are hereby required to carry such person so seized and detained before some one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county or place where such offence or offences shall be committed; which said justice of the peace is hereby required to proceed to the examination of such person so seized and brought before him for such offence, in the same manner as if such person so seized had been apprehended and brought before him by a constable or any other ministerial officer of the peace, under such warrant as aforesaid."

By stat. 7 Geo. HAWKING WITHOUT LI-CENCE, &c.

What an offence within act.

With respect to what is a hawking, and who are hawkers, within the act, and bound to take out a licence, see ante, 1104; as to who are exempt therefrom, see ante, 1106 to 1109.

A person exposing to sale and selling tea as a hawker, without a licence, is liable to the penalty, although, even with a licence, he would be liable to a penalty for selling tea in an unentered place. R. v. M'Gill, 2 B. & C. 142; 3 D. & R. 377, S. C. (a).

George M'Gill, was convicted under the hawkers' act, for travelling from house to house, and exposing to sale divers parcels of tea, without any licence, it was contended that the defendant ought to have been convicted under 12 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 6, which prohibits the selling of tea, except under certain regulations; but the Court were of a different opinion. They said, that 50 Geo. III. c. 41, was passed to protect domiciled tradesmen, the other statute, to assist the collection of duties; that the effect of the latter was not to destroy the prohibition contained in the former, but that the two provisions were consistent, and might stand together; that the first imposed a penalty upon persons trading at all, as hawkers, without a licence; the second imposed a penalty upon the sale of tea by hawkers, even with a licence; and, therefore, that a person who exposed tea to sale as a hawker, and had no licence, offended against both the above-mentioned provisions, and was liable for a penalty for each breach of the law. There is much obscurity in this part of the statute. The 17th and 20th sections are in terms the same as the 11th and 14th sections of the 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, and in both these acts the same difficulty occurs, as to the imposing a penalty of 10*l.* given by the one section, or of 40*l.* given by the other, for trading without a licence, &c. In practice, convictions are always for 10*l.* and in R. v. Websdell, it was decided, that a conviction in that penalty was proper. It is fair to suppose, that the sum in the 20th section should have been 10*l.*, and not 40*l.*, and that the latter sum was inserted by mistake.

It may also be mentioned, that, unless we suppose that the sum of 40*l.* has been inserted by mistake for 10*l.*, the statute is inconsistent with itself, as it enacts that the said sum of 40*l.* shall be recovered before a magistrate, whereas the 24th and 25th sections enact, that penalties above 20*l.* incurred under this act, shall be recovered in any court of record at Westminster, and penalties, below that sum, before a justice of the peace.

(a) R. v. M'Gill, 2 B. & C. 142; 3 D. & R. 377, S. C. The defendant was convicted under stat. 50 Geo. III. c. 41,

s. 17, for hawking tea without a licence. The conviction stated, that, on &c., at &c., the defendant was charged with being a hawker, &c., carrying to sell, and exposing to sale, without any licence so to do, certain goods, to wit, divers parcels of tea; and that he being such person, did, on the day and year aforesaid, at Worcester, carry to sell, and expose to sale, divers parcels of tea, and was then and there found trading as aforesaid, without any licence so to do. The conviction then stated the evidence; and that the justice did thereupon convict him of the same, and adjudge that he had forfeited 10*l.* Upon appeal, the justices at sessions confirmed the conviction, subject to the opinion of the Court on the following case: George M'Gill, as the agent of D. S. (which D. S. at the several times hereafter mentioned was a licensed tea-dealer), on the 17th of April, 1822, at Worcester, carried to sell several packages of tea, and then and there, at the house of one H. G., sold to him one of the said packages, containing a quarter of a pound weight of tea; and afterwards, on the same day, G. M'Gill, as such agent, carried to sell, and exposed to sale, at the house of one W. P., another package, containing also a quarter of a pound weight of tea, but did not then and there sell the same. At the several times when he, the said G. M'Gill, as such agent, so carried to sell, and exposed to sale, the said first-mentioned quarter of a pound of tea, neither he, nor D. S., his employer, had any hawker's licence, according to 50 Geo. III. c. 41. —Pearson, and O. Russell, in support of the order of sessions, cited R. v. Turner, 4 B. & A. 510 (ante, 1104), as a decisive authority, to shew that agents are liable. And they also argued that, if a party be charged with trading as a hawker without a licence, it is no answer to say, that, by the same act he offended against another statute also; for a man may by one act commit several misdemeanors. [Best, J.—If an unqualified person kill game without taking out a licence, he is liable to a penalty for so doing, although a licence would not protect him from the penalty imposed upon unqualified persons]. That argument is conclusive against the defendant.—Denman, and Winter, contra, contended that the defendant should have been convicted under the 12 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 6, and not under the hawkers' and pedlars' act, 50 Geo. III. c. 41.—Cur. adv. vult.—The judgment of the Court was, on a subsequent day during the sittings, pronounced by Bayley, J., as follows:—The question principally agitated in this case was, whether a person exposing tea to sale as a hawker, was liable to the penalty imposed by the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, upon persons trading as hawkers without a licence. There was also another point which might have been raised, and upon which the Court delivered an opinion in R. v. Websdell, viz. whether the penalty of 10*l.* was that which ought to have been imposed. The Court then thought 10*l.* the right penalty, and that opinion has been confirmed by a further consideration of the subject. As to the first point, it was argued, that inasmuch as one act of Parliament had made it illegal to sell tea in any but an entered place, and another had provided that no hawker should sell tea, that, therefore, a hawker was not liable to a penalty for exposing it to sale without a hawker's licence. If the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, had been the first act upon the subject, and no penalty had previously existed for trading as a hawker without a licence, there might, perhaps, have been some doubt, whether it extended to any cases in which a licence would not have legalized the sale; but looking at the whole series of enactments relating to hawkers and pedlars, and taking into consideration the time when they were first prevented from selling tea, it will be plain that they are still liable to a penalty for selling it as hawkers without a licence. The first enactment respecting them was the 8 & 9 Wm. III. c. 25*, which is nearly the same as the 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, and contains two clauses material as to the amount of the penalty to be imposed. The 17th section of the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, has this provision, "that if any such hawker shall trade as aforesaid, without, or contrary to, or otherwise than as shall be allowed by such licence, such person shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 10*l.*" Three terms are there introduced, "without," "contrary to," or "otherwise than as shall be allowed by," such licence; and it will hereafter appear, that those terms were advisedly introduced to apply to three descriptions of offences. Section 20 enacts, that any person may seize any such hawker found trading without a licence, or who, being found trading, shall refuse to produce a licence, and have him carried before a magistrate, who is thereby authorized to convict the person so charged, and by warrant under seal to cause the said sum of 40*l.* to be levied. Now, that section does not expressly impose any penalty; and the 17th section, to which it apparently refers, has a penalty of 10*l.*, and not 40*l.*: it is, therefore, fair to suppose, that the sum in the 20th section should have been 10*l.*, and not 40*l.*, and that the latter sum was inserted by mistake; and an examination of the earlier statutes on this subject will shew clearly that such was the fact. The 19th section imposes a penalty of 40*l.* upon any person trading with a borrowed licence, or one that does not contain his real name. The 8 & 9 Wm. III., and 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, had not any such clause; the 3rd section of the latter imposed a penalty of 12*l.* upon hawkers trading "without," or "contrary to," such licence as the 1st section requires them to take. The 5th section imposes a penalty of 50*l.* for travelling with a forged licence; and the 8th section authorizes the apprehension of hawkers travelling without a licence, contrary to the act, and directs that they shall be taken before a magistrate, who, if the offence be proved, shall convict them, and forthwith direct the said sum of 12*l.* to be levied by distress, &c. The said sum of 12*l.* there manifestly refers to the penalty imposed by the third section, that being the only sum of 12*l.* which had been before mentioned; and the expressions "without a licence," and "contrary to the act," in the 8th section, are applicable to the trading without or contrary to the licence mentioned in the 3rd section. The next act material to be considered on this point is the 25 Geo. III. c. 78; but in the mean time, some alteration was made in the law as to the sale of tea and cambrics. The 10 Geo. I. c. 10, s. 14, provided, that tea should not be sold except in an entered place. By that provision the right to sell it was made local; the 9 Geo. II. c. 35, s. 20, enacted, that it should not be sold by any hawker and pedlar. The object of the statutes before cited, more particularly applying to hawkers and pedlars, appears to have been to protect domiciled tradesmen; of the two latter, to assist the collection of duties. The effect of them is, not to destroy the former prohibition against trading as a hawker without a licence, but to add a cumulative penalty for hawking tea, even with a licence; for the two provisions are consistent, and may well stand together. The first imposes a penalty upon persons trading at all as hawkers without a licence; the second imposes a penalty upon the sale of tea by hawkers, even with a licence; and, therefore, a person who exposes tea to sale as a hawker, and has no licence, offends against both the above-mentioned provisions, and is liable to a penalty for each breach of the law. The 7 Geo. III. c. 43, s. 7, made cambrics found in the possession of any hawker or pedlar liable to forfeiture. Then came the 25 Geo. III. c. 78, as to hawkers and pedlars, the 4th section of which resembles the 3rd of the 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, but has this difference—the penalty was before confined to persons trading “without” or “contrary to” the licence; this enactment has the additional words “or otherwise than as shall be allowed by” such licence. That expression could only be applicable to those cases in which a licence would not legalise the trading. The 25 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 4, alters the penalty from 12*l.* to 10*l.*; and between the 4th section, which corresponds to the 3rd section of the 9 & 10 Wm. III., and the 7th section, which corresponds to the 8th section of the former act, introduces, in sect. 6, a provision, that persons trading with a borrowed licence shall be liable to a penalty of 10*l.* In the 7th section, which, as in the former act, refers to the first penalty of 10*l.*, the expression “*said sum of 10*l.” is retained. The 25 Geo. III. c. 78, was repealed by the 29 Geo. III. c. 26, which, however, contained most of the same provisions. Thus, the 11th and 14th sections of the latter correspond with the 4th and 7th of the former; the 13th section also of the latter corresponds with the 6th section of the former, except as to the amount of the penalty, which was raised from 10*l.* to 40*l.*; and this shews how the mistake in the 14th section arose. In the 25 Geo. III. c. 78, two penalties of 10*l.* had been imposed in different sections preceding that in which the justice is directed to cause the said sum of 10*l.* to be levied. In the 29 Geo. III. c. 26, one of those penalties was increased to 40*l.*; and it must have been erroneously supposed that the expression said sum referred to that penalty which was raised, and not to that for trading without, or contrary to, or otherwise than as allowed by, the licence, which still remained a 10*l.* penalty. These sections were exactly followed in the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, and in like manner the mistake crept into that act also. Upon the question, whether the defendant is liable to a penalty for selling tea, as a hawker, without a licence, we are of opinion that he is; and that the words, “otherwise than as allowed by the licence,” introduced into the modern acts relating to hawkers and pedlars, shews, that when hawkers were prevented from selling tea even with a licence, it was not intended to exempt them from the penalty before imposed upon the sale of any goods, wares, &c., without a licence. For these reasons, we think that the conviction was right.—Order of sessions confirmed.

(a) R. v. Websdell, 2 B. & C. 136; 3 D. & R. 360, S. C. This was a conviction under stat. 50 Geo. III. c. 41, for hawking shoes without a licence. The conviction set out an information, that the defendant, on &c., at Cromer, in the county of Norfolk, was a hawker and trading person, going to other men's houses, &c., and, being such person, did, on the day aforesaid, at Cromer, carry to sell, and expose to sale, divers goods, wares, &c., to wit, a quantity of shoes, and was then and there found trading without any licence so to do; whereupon he was summoned, &c., and the justice did convict him of the said offence, and adjudge that he had forfeited the sum of 10*l.* The sessions, upon an appeal, quashed the conviction, subject to the opinion of this Court, upon the following case:—It was fully proved, on behalf of the appellant, that he was a shoemaker, and that he was the real worker or maker of the said shoes, which he “carried to sell and exposed to sale:” but as it appeared from the evidence that Cromer was not a mart, market, or fair, nor a city, borough, town corporate, or market town, the Court were of opinion that the conviction was good, although the words “or elsewhere,” omitted in the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, are in the 9 & 10

IX. Hiring or Lending Licences.

HIRING
LICENCES.

By 50 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 19, it is enacted, "That in case any person shall let out, or hire or lend any licence to him or her granted as aforesaid, or

50 Geo. 3, c. 41.
Hiring or lending
licence.

Wm. III. c. 27. But it was objected, on behalf of the appellant, that the conviction was bad in point of form; first, because, in setting forth the offence, it was not stated that the shoes were not of the manufacture of the appellant; and, secondly, because the conviction was under sect. 20 of the 50 Geo. III. c. 41; and that, therefore, the penalty adjudged (if any) should have been 40*l.*, and not 10*l.* And on these grounds the conviction was quashed. After hearing Cooper in support of the order of sessions, and O. Russell, and E. Alderson contra,—Bailey, J., said—There is much obscurity in the 50 Geo. III. c. 41; nor is it found there for the first time. It has existed from the passing of the 29 Geo. III. c. 26. The 11th and 14th sections of that act are in terms the same as the 17th and 20th sections of the 50 Geo. III. c. 41; and in both these acts the same difficulty occurs, as to imposing a penalty of 10*l.* or 40*l.* It has been contended, that a person trading without a licence is liable to the penalty of 40*l.* imposed by the 20th sect., and is not within the 17th section, which imposes a penalty of 10*l.* If that were clear, the conviction in a penalty of 10*l.* would be bad; but the meaning of the act should be quite plain, to induce us to come to such a conclusion; for if there be a doubt, we should adopt that construction which will bear with the least hardship on the party convicted. In the 17th section there are three propositions:—"If any such hawker shall trade without, or contrary to, or otherwise than as shall be allowed by such licence, he shall forfeit 10*l.*" It does not say, such hawker "having obtained a licence," and trading, &c. There are not, then, any words confining the operation of that section to a person having obtained a licence; and the fair meaning of the words, "shall trade without such licence," appears to be, "shall trade without having obtained a licence." In R. v. Turner, this objection, if good, would have been decisive; yet it was never suggested, and in practice convictions are always for 10*l.* In the last edition of Burn's Justice a form is given in which the penalty is 10*l.*; and that is worthy of consideration, although it cannot be treated as an express authority. For these reasons, I think that the words in the 17th section,

"trading without such licence," are not confined to persons who have obtained a licence, and travel without it. If that be the right construction, then the only question is, whether the 23rd section exonerates the defendant from any penalty, or whether he is exempted by the proviso in the 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, sect. 9. If the question had turned upon the 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, he would have been within the exemption, for that authorizes the manufacturer of goods to sell them in market towns, &c. or elsewhere. That, however, is not an empowering but an exempting clause; and the 29 Geo. III. c. 26, which imposed a higher duty, contained the same prohibitory clause as the 9 & 10 Wm. III. That being general, would have entirely repealed the exemptions in the former act; but then a new proviso is introduced, differing essentially from that in 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, for the words, or elsewhere, are omitted. A similar proviso was introduced into the 50 Geo. III. c. 41; and it is manifest, that the words, or elsewhere, were omitted because the legislature thought them too large. I am therefore of opinion, that, as the prohibition in the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, is general, and the exempting clause confined to marts, markets, fairs, cities, boroughs, towns corporate, and market towns, the defendant was not justified in selling the articles in question in a place not coming within that enumeration.—Per Best, J.—The act in question is certainly very obscure, but I think that both points must be determined against the defendant. As to the first, viz. the right of a manufacturer to hawk his own wares: when the 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, was passed, the legislature intended that a manufacturer should be allowed to sell his own goods any where; but the same indulgence was not extended to them by the 50 Geo. III. c. 41. That limited their privileges to certain places. It has been said, that the 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27, is only repealed as to the duties; but sect. 31 of the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, shews that every provision of the former act, which would be inconsistent with the latter, was intended to be repealed. But that argument is unnecessary, for the 50 Geo. III. c. 41, imposes new duties; and a person not having the licence thereby required, cannot hawk at all, except in shall trade with or under colour of any licence granted unto any person whatsoever, or of any licence in which his or her own real name shall not be inserted as the name of the person to whom the same is granted, the person letting out to hire or lending any such licence, and the person so trading with or under colour of any licence granted to any other person, or any licence in which his or her own real name shall not be inserted, as the name of the person to whom the same is granted, shall each of them forfeit the sum of 40*l.*, to be recovered and applied as hereinafter mentioned; and in case any person shall be convicted or have judgment against him for lending his or her licence to any other person or persons contrary to this act, such his or her licence shall be from henceforth forfeited and void, and he or she shall be utterly incapable of having any licence again granted to him or her to trade as aforesaid; provided always, that nothing herein contained shall subject to the said penalty any servant travelling for a licensed master, with the licence of such master, and for his benefit, or any licensed master sending such servant to travel with such licence."

A hawker who gives his licence to be used by his servant employed to sell goods on his account is not liable to the penalty, as for letting to hire or lending his licence. Hodgson, q. t., v. Flower, 2 Campb. 290. This was an action of debt on stat. 29 Geo. III. c. 26, s. 13, to recover the penalty of 40*l.* from the defendant for letting out to hire and lending his licence to one B. W. The second count was for unlawfully lending the licence. It appeared that W. was the defendant's servant, and was in the habit of going about selling coals for his master, and received 4*s.* 6*d.* a chaldron upon the coals he sold. And it was held by Lord Ellenborough, C. J., that no forfeiture was incurred by the defendant, and that an action could not be maintained against a master for sending out a servant with a licence.— And he cited in point Chamberlain, q. t., v. Hill, 2 Campb. 292.

Forging or using

By 50 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 18, "If any person or persons whatsoever shall forge or counterfeit any licence or licences by this act directed to be granted, or travel with, or produce or shew any such forged or counterfeited licence or licences, for any of the purposes aforesaid, every such person shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 300*l.*, to be recovered and applied as hereinafter directed."

those places, and under those circumstances, particularly provided for by that act. As to the other point, it certainly appears difficult to reconcile the 17th and 20th sections of the act. But I think that the defendant was at all events guilty of an offence against the 17th section, and was therefore liable to be convicted in a penalty of 10*l.* Order of sessions quashed, and conviction confirmed.

XII. Penalties, Recovery and Application of—Non-attendance of Witnesses.

By 50 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 24, "All pecuniary penalties which shall be incurred under this act of a greater sum than 20*l.*, shall be recovered, together with costs of suit, in any of his Majesty's Courts of record at Westminster, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, wherein no essoign, protection, privilege, or wager of law, or more than one imparlance shall be allowed; and one moiety of every such penalty or forfeiture shall belong to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety thereof to the person or persons who shall inform or sue for the same."

Sect. 32 enacts, "That, if any person or persons shall be summoned as a witness or witnesses, to give evidence before any justice or justices of the peace, touching any of the matters relative to this act, or the [stat. 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 27], and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place to be for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for such neglect or refusal, to be allowed of by such justice or justices of the peace, or, appearing, shall refuse to be examined upon oath, and give evidence before such justice or justices of the peace, before whom the prosecution shall be depending, that then every such person shall forfeit, for every such offence, the sum of 10*l.*, to be recovered, levied, and paid, in such manner and by such means as are herein directed as to the other penalties."

me that a certuall licence now in force, subscribed by one or more of the commissioners for licensing and regulating hackney coaches, hawkers, and pedlars, was at a certain day now past granted to C. D., late of &c., [labourer], to travel and trade as a hawker, pedlar, and petty chapman, under or by virtue of a certain act of Parliament made and passed in the fiftieth year of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Third, intituled "An Act for placing the duties of hawkers and pedlars under the management of the commissioners of hackney coaches;" and that the said C. D. being the person to whom such licence aforesaid was granted as aforesaid, and also being a trading person going from town to town, [or, to other men's houses], and travelling on foot, [or, with a horse, or as the case is], in England, [or, Wales, or as the case is], carrying to sell, and exposing to sale, goods, wares, and merchandize, did, on &c., at &c., trade with and under colour of such licence, by hawking for sale goods, wares, and merchandize, to wit, [here describe the goods], and did then and there, to wit, at aforesaid, carry the said goods, wares, and merchandize in a pack, [or as the case is, see the words of the act, ante, 1106]; and that the said C. D. had not then and there caused to be written, painted, or printed in large legible Roman capitals, upon the most conspicuous part of the said pack, [or as the case may be, see the words of the act, ante, 1106], in which he carried his said goods, wares, and merchandize, the words "Licensed Hawker," together with the number, name, or other mark or marks of distinction written or printed upon his said licence as aforesaid; contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided. Whereby, and by force of the same statute, the said C. D. hath forfeited, for his said offence, the sum of ten pounds; and thereupon the said A. I., who informs as well for our said lord the now King as for himself in this behalf, prayeth judgment of me the said justice in the premises.

A. I.

Exhibited before me, the day and year first above named. J. P.

(No. 2).

Information against a person not licensed as a hawker, for having the words "licensed hawker," &c., on his pack, &c. (a).

Commencement as in the preceding form. State the offence thus:—That C. D., late of &c., [labourer], being other than any person to whom any licence, subscribed by one or more of the commissioners for licensing and regulating hackney coaches, hawkers, and pedlars, to travel and trade as a hawker, pedlar, and petty chapman, under or by virtue of a certain act of Parliament made and passed in the fiftieth year of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Third, intituled "An Act for placing the duties of hawkers and pedlars under the management of the commissioners of hackney coaches," had been granted under or by virtue of the said act, and being also a trading person going and travelling on foot, [or, with a horse, or as the case is], in England, [or, Wales, or as the case is], carrying to sell, and exposing to sale, goods, wares, and merchandize, to wit, [here describe the goods generally], did on &c., at &c., write, paint, and print, and cause to be written, painted, and printed, and kept and continued written, painted, and printed upon his pack, [or, as the case is, see the words of the act, ante, 1106], and in which said pack, [or, as the case is], the said C. D. then and there carried his said goods, wares, and merchandize as aforesaid, the words "Licensed Hawker," &c., [as the fact is]; contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided; whereby, &c. [Conclude as in form supra, (No. 1)].

(No. 3).

Information against a person for trading as a hawker without a licence (b).

Commencement as in form, ante, (No. 1). State the offence thus:—That C. D., late of &c., [labourer], to wit, on &c., at &c., then and there being a hawker and trading person going from town to town, [or, to other men's houses], and travelling on foot, [or, with a horse, or as the case is], in England, carrying to sell, and exposing to sale, goods as a hawker and trading person, did then and there, as a hawker and trading person going from town to town, [or, to other men's houses], sell, carry to sell, and expose to sale, certain goods, wares, and merchandizes, to wit, [here state the goods generally: there is no occasion to state the precise number or quality], without having obtained the licence, [or as the case is], in that behalf directed and required by the statute in that case made and provided, in such manner as therein is directed, contrary to the form of the said statute; whereby, &c. [Conclude as in form (No. 1), supra].

(a) See ante, 1106.

(b) See the provisions, ante, 1112.

(No. 4).

Commencement as in form (No. 1), ante, 1121. State the offence thus:—That C. D., late of &c., [labourer], on &c., being then a hawker, ["hawker, pedlar, petty chapman, or other trading person"], going from town to town, [or, to other men's houses], and travelling on foot, ["either on foot or with horse, horses, or otherwise"], in England, carrying to sale, and exposing to sale, divers goods, wares, and merchandizes, and a licence so to do being duly granted to him, according to the provisions of an act of Parliament made and passed in the fiftieth year of the reign of his late Majesty king George the Third, intituled "An Act for placing the duties of hawkers and pedlars under the management of the commissioners of hackney coaches," did, at &c., [here state the improper act of trading done by defendant]; contrary to the licence so granted to him as aforesaid, and otherwise than was allowed by the same; and contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. Whereby, &c. [Conclude as in form (No. 1), ante, 1121].

Information on like act against a hawker acting contrary to his licence (a) (b).
